Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Hassssless can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

♣ Lizardfolk Ftr 3: CR 4; Medium humanoid (reptilian); HD 2d8+2 + 3d10+3; hp 30; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 16, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +4; Grp +6; Atk Claw +6 melee (1d4+2) or +7 melee (1d10+3, greatclub) or +4 ranged (1d6+2, javelin); Full Atk +6 melee (1d4+1, 2 claws) and +4 melee (1d4+1, bite) or +7 melee (1d10+3, greatclub) or +4 ranged (1d6+2, javelin); SA —; SQ Hold breath; AL N; SV Fort +4, Ref +4, Will +1; Str 14, Dex 13, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Balance +4, Jump +14, Swim +14; Dodge, Mobility, Multiattack, Weapon Focus (great club).

Hold Breath: A lizardfolk can hold its breath for a number of rounds equal to four times its Constitution score before it risks drowning.

Skills: Because of their tails, lizardfolk have a +4 racial bonus on Jump, Swim, and Balance checks.

K72. LIZARDFOLK TRAP

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

Each door to this room is stuck, requiring a DC 15 Strength check to unlock.

As you enter the chamber, you hear a faint click high above, followed by a high-pitched wailing sound as javelins plummet all around you.

♣ Falling Javelin Trap: CR 3; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; 1d4 javelins attack each PC in the Room 2 rounds after the trap is triggered; +7 ranged (1d6, javelin); Search DC 18; Disable Device DC 18. Note: This trap is disabled by detaching the tension cable at each door and anchoring it to the immobile door frame.

The chamber beyond the trapped door features two other exits, both closed and similarly trapped, as is plainly visible from this side. High above you, many javelins hang from hooks rigged to the door traps, each slightly swaying due to a light breeze within the room.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The lizardfolk in Room K71 built this trap to dissuade intruders. If the PCs are accompanied by Sslore (Room K68), he deactivates the trap before the PCs pass through and resets it after they leave.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 3

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of javelins in the falling javelin trap and increase the attack bonus to +12. To decrease the challenge, target each PC with only 1 javelin.

K73. SCALES OF PERSEVERANCE

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

This chamber's walls and floor are composed of alternating black and red tiles. A large stone sits in the center of the room; balanced across it is a second, plank-shaped stone slab. A thick layer of dust covers every surface.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The plank-shaped stone is a balance scale and each tile may be lifted from the floor with a successful DC 14 Strength check. Each red tile weighs 3 lbs. and each black tile weighs 5 lbs. When the scale is perfectly balanced (or just perfectly horizontal), an electrical charge courses through the stone and anyone touching it.

The PCs might assume that the tiles must be stepped upon in a certain order, or that when balanced in a certain way, the scale reveals a hidden passage or truth. Both assumptions are wrong -- the Room was built as an charging station for the inevitables, nothing more.

♦ Scale Trap: CR 4; magical; touch trigger; always hits (shocking grasp, 5d6 electricity, 15th-level sorcerer); Search DC 26; Disable Device DC 26. Note: This trap is disabled simply by placing equal piles of cloth below each side of the stone plank to keep the scale slightly off-center.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: There is one secret within this Room -- if every red tile is placed on one side of the scale and every black tile is placed on the other side of the scale, the scale tips in favor of black. When its tip touches the ground while it bears this load, the stone upon which it rests swings open to reveal a gem of lightning.

EL: 4

Scaling: N/A

GEM OF LIGHTNING

This magic item is a fist-sized diamond valued at 1,000 gp on its own. When its magical properties are identified, its wielder gains the benefits of a resist elements (electrical) spell cast by a 15th-level sorcerer. Additionally, the gem allows the wielder to cast shocking grasp (1 charge), lightning bolt (3 charges) and chain lightning (8 charges), all as a 12th-level sorcerer. The gem contains 19 charges, cannot be recharged, and shatters when its final charge is used.

K74. GEMSECT LAIR

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

A long chamber opens up to the right, where a locked chest sits upon a low table. The light is dim here, but you catch a faint glimmer from between the cracks in the chest's aging wood.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The chest is locked, requiring a successful DC 35 Open Lock check to access. Within, the PCs find a pile of glittering gems of many different types, cuts, and sizes -- though only a few are real. The rest are a gemsect swarm (hp 24), a unique creature indigenous to this Region.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The gemsect swarm remains idle until the PCs touch any of the chest's contents. Then they shift into sudden motion, bursting forth from the chest to gather at the feet of the offending character. Their attitude immediately shifts to Hostile, as they view the character's act as a violation of their lair, and they continue to attack the offending PC and his allies, one at a time, until they are all dead or the swarm is reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ standard hit points (rounded down), at which point they flee through cracks in the dungeon floor, never to be seen again.

Treasure: The chest contains several true gems, 4 chunks of jade worth 100 gp each, 2 perfectly cut amber stones worth 250 gp each, and 1 black pearl worth 500 gp.

EL: 4

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 1 gemsect swarm to the chest. To decrease the challenge, allow the PCs a DC 30 Spot check to notice that something is wrong with the gems before anyone touches them.

GEMSECT SWARM

This creature appears to be a swarm of beetles whose shells look like beautiful gems. When the gemsects rest, they pull their legs and heads into their shells, completing the illusion.

A gemsect swarm operates like a summon swarm (beetles) spell cast by a 12th-level sorcerer. When idle, it looks like a pile of beautiful gems, gaining a +8 Hide skill bonus. When located within an actual pile of gems, the swarm benefits from total concealment, even when moving. Finally, after a gemsect swarm kills, or when it comes across a corpse, it can utterly obliterate all remains within 1 hour, leaving nothing behind to resurrect.

REGION L. THE DEEPS

However, Mahg'Gog is only a symptom of the true danger within the Region. Hidden beneath the waves, the ruptured wards and glyphs that once restrained the demons and devils of this Region function perversely. The magical glyphs — crushed under the weight of water — have bound the demonic energies of the dead prisoners, preventing the evil from dissipating. Without an outlet, this taint oozes into the lake creating a festering pool of evil, mutating everything it touches. The only means of cleansing the lake is to either destroy or repair the damaged wards (see Room L9), and destroying the unholy aberrations living there now, before their spawn take control of everything.

CORRUPTING TAINT

Hundreds of demons, devils, and other evil creatures died in the landslide that collapsed the prison. Their foul essences seeped into the lowest portion of the lakebed and slowly eroded the holy energies that once protected Regions K and L. Harmless creatures mutated into terrifying parodies of themselves — fish became locathah, turtles became dragon turtles, the dead became lacedons, and a simple fresh-water squid became the terrifying kraken Mahg'Gog.

The taint continues to affect those who linger here. Hours after entering the waters, visitors begin hearing demonic voices in their heads urging them to perform unspeakable acts. Every 24 hours spent in this Region requires the PCs to make a Will save (DC 10 + 1 per day spent within the Region) or be affected by the demonic suggestions. In addition, each failed save causes the PCs' alignment to shift (temporarily) from Good to Neutral, or Neutral to Evil. Evil PCs are not allowed saves and follow the suggestions to the letter, whatever they are (DM's discretion). Any time spent upon hallowed or consecrated ground or while under the effects of a protection from evil spell does not count for determining the amount of time between saves.

Lastly, PCs who fail the save gain one mutation from the chart below, typically accompanied by superficial changes to his appearance. Each mutation results in 1d3 points of Charisma damage that cannot be restored without a miracle or wish, except for those marked with a * which cause 1d4 points of Charisma damage and those marked with a  which cause 1d6 points. If gaining a mutation would reduce a PC's Charisma below 1, his Charisma becomes 1 and he can no longer gain mutations. Mutations can be gained any number of times, unless otherwise specified.

This Region is a single vast cavern above a large expanse of dark water where unknown dangers lurk. Dozens of cells and traps imprisoned powerful creatures in this region, warded against extraplanar contact, for uncounted years. Four centuries ago, a group of derro excavated the area above this Region so extensively that they caused a massive cave-in. Thousands of tons of rock collapsed, killing derro diggers, prisoners, and guardians alike. The disaster cracked open the bed of an enormous lake on the surface, flooding the area with millions of gallons of water.

With the prisoners crushed by the collapse, the celestials abandoned the Region, pulling back to Regions E and G. When the waters swallowed the dungeon, the prisoners' corpses tainted the lake. Their blood seeped into the lakebed and a trace of their demonic souls remained trapped within the lake, their foul essence slowly changing the aquatic victims of the landslide. 400 years later, the abyssal taint continues to warp everything it touches into hideous new shapes with malevolent intelligence.

The most powerful of these creatures is Mahg'Gog, a gargantuan kraken who established control over the other lake monsters, destroying everything that opposed him. Massive monsters such as water elementals and dragon turtles and small tribes of aquatic humanoids such as lacedons (aquatic ghouls), locathah, sahuagin, and scrags (aquatic trolls) all pay fealty to the kraken. Now the kraken yearns to expand its control to Region K to the west, destroying the merfolk and tritons who dwell in the tidal pools there.

RANDOM MUTATIONS

1d20	Mutation
1	Target creature gains +5 natural armor.
2	Target creature gains 1d4 Intelligence and loses 1d4 Wisdom.
3	Target creature gains 1d6 Strength and 1d6 Constitution. Target creature loses 1d6 Intelligence and 1d6 Wisdom.
4	Target creature gains 2d6 Strength and suffers 1d4 permanent negative levels.*
5	Target creature gains a random 1st-level spell that can be cast 1d4 times per day as [1d8]th-level caster.
6	Target creature gains Blindsight 60 ft.* This mutation can be gained only once.
7	Target creature gains damage reduction 5/magic.*
8	Target creature gains fast healing 2 and loses 1d6 Constitution. This mutation can be gained only once.
9	Target creature gains poisonous talons that deal damage based on HD and Size. See Monster Manual™ for details.
10	Target creature gains spell resistance 10+HD.*
11	Target creature gains the ability to detect magic at will.*
12	Target creature gains the aquatic trait and increases its swim speed by 10 ft.
13	Target creature gains the fiendish template as if 1 HD.* If this mutation is rolled again, increase it to 4 HD, 8 HD, and 12 HD respectively. This mutation can be gained only four times.
14	Target creature gains the timeless body ability of a 17th-level monk.
15	Target creature gains water breathing , but can no longer breathe air, suffering drowning out of water.
16	Target creature grows an additional limb and gains Multiattack. This mutation can be gained only twice.
17	Target creature grows wings and can fly, increasing its flying speed by 10 ft.
18	Target creature increases its base speed by 10 ft. and all other forms of movement (if any) by 5 ft.
19	Target creature increases its Size category by one and loses 1d4 Wisdom. This mutation can only be gained twice.
20	Twisted mutations wrack the target creature's body. If the target creature succeeds at a DC 30 Fortitude save, it gains 1d8 Con and one class level of sorcerer. If the save fails, the creature suffers 5d20 damage.

If the wards are restored, these effects cease in 4d4 months, but any mutations already earned are permanent.

ENCOUNTER CONDITIONS

Due to the circumstances of this Region, all the encounters suffer from the same global Encounter Conditions. Every Room is Cursed 5 and Submerged. In addition, Rooms below 100 ft. in depth suffer from Extreme Cold. Below 200 ft., the Fortitude save DC for Extreme Cold increases by +5. Below 300 ft., it increases by +10. Beyond that, the PCs are lucky to be alive.

LIGHTING AND DESCRIPTIONS

Much of the cavern is unlit, with only a few glimmers of light from a small island. All descriptions assume that the PCs bring their own source of light, though fire-based illumination such as torches and candles does not function underwater. None of the creatures are affected by the presence or lack of light.

Each section of this part of the dungeon states the average height of the ceiling and each encounter lists the depth at which the encounter occurs. While the PCs are in this Region, their depth must be tracked. Encounters listed at the depth of the PCs' current position occur as stated but encounters whose depth is either greater or less than the PCs' may attract their attention as well (Spot check, DC 15 +1 for every 20 ft. below the PCs or +1 for every 30 ft. above the PCs. Reduce the base DC of the Spot check by 5 if the encounter includes mention of lights or illumination). Despite this, it is likely that the PCs will miss some encounters within the enormous volume of the lake. Dungeon Masters should feel free to move encounters within a section to provide the PCs with the impression that the lake teems with adventure.

WATER DANGERS

Any character can wade in relatively calm water that isn't over his head; no check is required. Similarly, swimming in calm water only requires skill checks with a DC of 10. Trained swimmers (5+ ranks in Swim) may just take 10. (Remember, however, that armor or heavy gear makes any attempt at swimming more difficult. See the Swim skill description.)

Fast-moving water is much more dangerous. On a successful DC 15 Swim check or a DC 15 Strength check, it deals 1d3 points of nonlethal damage per round (1d6 points of lethal damage if flowing over rocks and cascades). On a failed check, the character must make another check that round to avoid going under.

Very deep water is not only generally pitch black, posing a navigational hazard, but also deals water pressure damage of 1d6 points per minute for every 100 ft. the character is below the surface. A successful Fortitude save (DC 15, +1 for each previous check) means the diver takes no damage in that minute. Very cold water deals 1d6 points of nonlethal damage from hypothermia per minute of exposure.

DROWNING

Any character can hold her breath for a number of rounds equal to twice her Constitution score. After this period of time, the character must make a DC 10 Constitution check every round in order to continue holding her breath. Each round, the DC increases by 1.

When the character finally fails her Constitution check, she begins to drown. In the first round, she falls unconscious (0 hp). In the following round, she drops to -1 hit points and is dying. In the third round, she drowns.

WEATHER PATTERNS

A weather pattern has developed within this large cavern, guided by the kraken's magic. A strong wind circulates clockwise around the lake at water level, causing erratic gusts of wind down the tunnels leading away from this Region. Thick banks of fog occasionally coalesce into small clouds which drift unseen in the calmer air high above the lake.

The hot water from the tidal pools of Region K flows northeast to collide with the waters influenced by the glacial temperatures in Region O to the north. The hot water cools, sinks to the bottom and flows to the east. This sets up a strong clockwise current that circulates around the entire lake before the water filters back west through the swamps in Region K.

A powerful riptide exists in the Region in the form of a water elemental. This water elemental is not from the plane of water, but instead a manifestation of the evil permeating the Region and the mixture of hot and cold water. This creates a blanket of fog over the entire lake that limits visibility to anywhere from 15 ft. to 30 ft. Lastly, a Random Encounter in the form of a powerful riptide can be found close to the center of the lake.

EXPLORING THE DEEPS

Many PCs are reluctant to enter a foreign environment, especially one as fraught with dangers as this lake, without a concrete goal or purpose. Since it is easy enough to circumnavigate the lake, here is a list of possible methods of convincing them to dive beneath the waves.

An Artifact. Few rewards entice adventurers like the lure of powerful magical items. Several locations provide information on the four pieces of an artifact (the watrazor) lying within the region awaiting reforging.

Challenge. Another useful lure is the possibility of powerful monsters and dangerous situations. Even more than loot, many PCs yearn to overcome enormous obstacles and triumph against terrible odds, so rumors or signs of the creatures who lurk below can draw PCs into the lake.

Mahg'Gog's Plan. The kraken plans to destroy the aquatic humanoids in neighboring region K and they are powerless to prevent it. Only the PCs can eliminate this threat. How they learn of it is entirely up to the DM, but clues can be planted throughout Regions H or K, perhaps in the form of a forward observer sahuagin, or magic radiating off the lake that no one has seen before.

Revenge. The kraken and dragon turtle are might well attack anyone passing through this Region, perhaps killing (or kidnapping) PCs or destroying valuable equipment before returning to their homes in the depths.

Rising Evil. The PCs discover the malign force infesting the lake's waters and mutating its inhabitants. Left unchallenged, the evil could grant the minions the ability to leave the water, subjugating everything surrounding this region. The PCs must find the source of this evil and destroy it.

Search and Rescue. The tritons in Region K have lost one of their scouts who ventured into the lake, or the elves from Region H worry that a sorcerer's water breathing spell expired several hours ago. Divination magic only reveals that the person still lives within the lake. Do the PCs answer the call for help?

Search for a Cure. The lake contains dozens of strange species, any one of which may be the missing ingredient for an elusive cure or the final component for an important spell. The PCs enter the waters to seek out the missing item.

Shrine of evil. Divine magic reveals that somewhere within the lake lies a shrine dedicated to an ancient evil, one that must not resurface. A priest or paladin is entrusted with the task of destroying the shrine (see Room L67).

Tracing the Currents. This relatively small lake possesses a strong current. Spellcasters may realize (Spellcraft check, DC 15) that this tide may serve as a form of ritualistic magic by continually forming a single shape along its length, similar to a three-dimensional glyph of warding. To discover the purpose of this magic, they must discover its shape by tracing the current from beginning to end, from surface to lakebed around the entire lake (See "Weather Patterns" for more details). Accidentally noticing it one morning after studying a spellbook is the perfect time for an epiphany of this magnitude.

Treasure. Most PCs love acquiring wealth, so rumors of the kraken's fabulous treasure trove hidden beneath the waves could entice them to explore.

L1 THROUGH L4. SAHUAGIN LAIR

While the waters here are fresh rather than salt, the sahuagin who were searching for the watrazor carried necklaces of adaptation and survived the plummet from the lake above during the cataclysm which brought this lake into being. The necklaces also protect them against the lake's taint. Their leader Sh'iga'torath's (Room L3) alchemical experiments have extended his and his assistants' lives unnaturally. This longevity has allowed Sh'iga'torath to pursue his quest for the watrazor. Years passed and they sought the artifact in the ruined lake, discovering that the celestials had split it into four pieces. They devoted their time to recovering two pieces while the aquatic creatures around them grew powerful. Eventually, the monsters struck against the sahuagin, destroying almost the entire tribe.

Now the remaining sahuagin eke out a meager existence within their lair, emerging only occasionally to pay tribute to the kraken. Over the years, the waters warped them. They no longer require their necklaces of adaptation to survive in the water, and all of them have the four-armed mutation. Their scales are now a black and green swirl, their fins blood red.

The sahuagin have established a lair in the northwestern part of the lake. It consists of several Rooms which remained intact during the earthquake, but were flooded with water and then slid to the lake bottom. The sahuagin carved a series of shallow rungs into the cavern wall from the entrance to their lair to the surface of the water (Spot check, DC 15 to find the rungs). These serve to speed movement for the sahuagins to their lair and ensure the current does not send them off-course.

The current here moves swimmers 20 ft. to the northeast every round, but anyone pulling themselves down the rungs moves twice the normal rate through the water and is not affected by the current. Composed of jagged rocks, the ceiling is 120 ft. above the surface of the water and shows signs of the earthquake that created this lake years ago.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every two hours the PCs spend within this section. If the PCs are in the waters surrounding the Sahuagin Lair, use the Random Encounter chart for the Northern Waters.

1d20	Encounter
1	A net containing dozens of fish carcasses drifts through the water. This is debris from the sahuagin's alchemy.
2	Thick spears thrust from the seabed and pierce three severed merrow-heads as a warning to intruders.
3	A school of fish flees from the approaching PCs.
4	A school of bottom feeders hides from the PCs, kicking up dirt. Fog 15.
5-14	Nothing
15-16	The sahuagin concealed a harpoon trap in the wall.
	♦ Harpoon Trap: CR 3, mechanical; location trigger; +12 atk, 1k8+3; Search DC 12, Disable Device DC 15.
17-18	Three sahuagin patrol the Section, looking for intruders.
19	Rubato (Room K7) arrives, carrying a net with a half dozen small creatures from the tidal pools for Sh'iga'torath's alchemical experiments.
20	Sh'iga'torath and two sahuagin (Room L3) debate the spread of acid through water. Sh'iga'torath carries twelve experimental alchemical acid bombs which inflict 2d8 damage rather than the normal 2d6.

L1. JELLIES

The depth of this encounter is 150 ft. to 350 ft. below the surface.

A group of faint lights slowly drifts towards you, undulating as they come closer. Long tentacles trail from dozens of roughly spherical bodies which shine from within with a pale pink light. One of the creatures lags behind the others and clutches something within its tentacles.

Initial Attitude: Neutral

Encounter: The jellyfish swarm (hp 100) passively waits for the currents to bring fish and other prey into its tentacles. The mindless jellyfish devour whatever falls within their grasp.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The jellyfish swarm simply floats with the currents, ignoring the PCs completely unless they approach within 5 ft. Anyone swimming within 5 ft. of a jellyfish must make a DC 15 Swim check to avoid touching one of the tentacles accidentally. Anyone hit by the jellyfish or otherwise touching one of their tentacles suffers an electrical shock as tentacles wrap around him and the swarm closes.

Treasure: Clutched in the tentacles of the lowest of the jellyfish is the body of a locathah. Its skeletal hands still grip a +1 bamboo longpearl which grants its wielder the effects of endure elements (pressure and cold). The longpearl is plated in glistening mother-of-pearl.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the jellyfish swarm actively hunts and pursues anyone approaching within 15 ft. To reduce the challenge, cut the jellyfish swarm in half.

☛ Jellyfish Swarm: CR 10; Diminutive ooze (swarm); HD 20d10; hp 100; Init +3; Spd swim 20 ft.; AC 17; touch 17; flat-footed 14; Base Atk +7; Grp —; Atk Swarm (1d4 plus 1d6 electrical plus poison); Full Atk Swarm (1d4 plus 1d6 electrical plus poison); Space/Reach 10 ft./0 ft.; SA Distraction, poison, shock; SQ Blindsight 30 ft., half damage from slashing and piercing, ooze, resistance to acid and electricity 12, swarm traits; AL N; SV Fort +3, Ref +6, Will -2; Str 1, Dex 17, Con 10, Int —, Wis 1, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —

Distraction (Ex): Any living creature that begins its turn with a jellyfish swarm in its space must succeed on a DC 16 Fortitude save or be nauseated for 1 round. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 16, initial and secondary damage 1d3 Dex. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Shock (Ex): The jellyfish swarm's attack also generates an electrical attack causing an extra 1d6 electrical damage, this electrical damage is increased to 3d6 against any creature that is denied its Dexterity bonus for any reason.

L2. SAHUAGIN'S ENTRY ROOM

The depth of this encounter is 500 ft. below the surface.

A narrow opening leads into an immense stone outcropping bulging from the cavern wall. Rough stone spikes jut out around the opening, but the tunnel itself is lined with white marble tiles. After 30 ft., the room opens up into a wide chamber tiled in marble, though all the tiles are skewed and cracked. An enormous mosaic of a snake-haired woman upon the eastern wall stares malevolently towards the entrance.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The tunnel is 10 ft. wide, but the spikes reduce the entry width to 4 ft., just large enough for the sahuagin to swim through it. The spikes and narrowness of the tunnel provides the creatures with some protection from the massive creatures that dwell within the lake. The entry Room holds a trap that alerts the sahuagin of danger. If anyone remains here 2 rounds, the medusa mosaic opens its mouth and shrieks with lethal effects.

THE WATRAZOR

A powerful weapon created centuries ago by a legendary sahuagin wizard to destroy the tritons, the watrazor was broken into four pieces when the lake fell into the dungeon. When intact, it consists of a 6 ft. haft topped by four blades extending out at a 45 degree angle. It can be wielded as a +5 aquaticbane icy burst wounding trident which always inflicts lethal damage to regenerating creatures and possesses all the powers of a trident of fish command. In addition, three times per day while underwater the wielder may cast control water, crushing hand, and dismissal as a 20th-level caster — the crushing hand is made of water rather than a magical force. Once per week while underwater, the wielder may cast imprisonment.

Currently, the weapon is broken into four pieces, a spear and three blades. Each one has some of the powers of the watrazor, glows with a red light when touched to one of the other items, and glows blue-green when within 60 ft. of the "next piece" in the chain. However, even after 400 years, the sahuagin leader Sh'iga'torath (Room L3) has been unable to make his way through the hazards of the lake. He holds one piece and knows about the blade in Room L43, but he dares not collect it until he knows the location of all four pieces.

Another blade lies in a stone chest in Room L61 and Mahg'Gog controls the final piece (Room L18). Should the PCs collect any of the pieces, the magnitude of the magic alerts the creatures in the lake.

If the PCs place two pieces of the watrazor together under water, the items fuse and a brilliant flash of light fills the waters around them. The new item possesses all of the magical abilities of the separate pieces and gains an additional +1 enhancement bonus.

In addition, once they have two or three pieces of the watrazor, Random Encounters occur twice as often. If they collect all four, Sh'iga'torath and Mahg'Gog both know they have it and come looking for them.

☛ Banshee Trap: CR 12; magical device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset (1 hour); spell effect (wail of the banshee, 17th-level sorcerer, Fort save, DC 23 negates); multiple targets (up to 17 creatures in a 20-ft. by 20-ft. area); Onset delay 2 rounds; Search DC 34; Disable Device 34.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, reduce the onset delay to 1 round and reduce the reset time to 15 minutes. To reduce the challenge, the mosaic softly moans the round before activating, providing the PCs with a 1 round warning.

L3. SH'IGA'TORATH'S WORK CHAMBER

The depth of this encounter is 500 ft. below the surface.

The center of this large room is open. A multitude of nets and ropes hang from the ceiling and the floor is covered in fish, clams, and other small aquatic animals. Many of the fish are iridescent, and the reflections off their scales shimmers across the entire room. Shadows continue to conceal the northwestern corner and the openings in this room. Three four-armed reptilian humanoids float before you, delicately slicing open the fish or plucking at items in the nets. With a snarl, the largest one twists his head towards you and bares wicked fangs.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Sh'iga'torath (hp 47) is the leader of a sahuagin tribe, while the other two sahuagin are his alchemy assistants (hp 20 each). Sh'iga'torath believes other humanoid races have no right to exist, but he is a canny fighter and knows that his followers cannot defeat every enemy. When the PCs arrive, Shig'atorath is working on an alchemical experiment. Rather than attacking intruders, he parleys with them. He knows the lake very well and trades information about his surroundings for minor magical trinkets or alchemical ingredients necessary for some of his experiments (such as the bat guano from Room L24). He also possesses several pearls and a six necklaces of adaptation which he can offer to the group, for a price.

Since the tritons and merfolk possess no defense against the creatures of Region L — such as the kraken or the dragon turtle — only the merrow's coral dam (Region K) prevents these monsters from reaching the tritons. Shig'atorath devised a method of eliminating the merrow quickly. He and his assistants spent months experimenting with the organic compounds before devising an alchemical substance that would dissolve coral quickly. He created a dozen powerful alchemical acid bombs by surrounding the acid with thin gold spheres.

Within the darkness of the northwest corner is a massive altar carved from a granite foundation stone dedicated the patron god of sahuagin. The altar is consecrated, but the last sahuagin priest died without passing on his knowledge. Nonetheless, Shig'atorath and the sahuagin regularly worship here.

A stone passage in the shadows beneath the altar leads out into the lake, but a locked portcullis blocks the way. Close examination reveals that each intersection of the bars is engraved with a single letter in Aquan. Simultaneously touching the letters of the word "strong" releases the lock, though it closes and locks again if released.

A DC 35 Open Lock check also opens the portcullis.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Shig'atorath avoids combat within his lair if possible. Should it become unavoidable, he launches himself at opponents wearing magical items that provide water breathing (such as a necklace of adaptation), ripping them away. Failing that, he attacks with his +2 spear, while lashing out with his bite and claws. The other two sahuagin are unarmed, but follow his lead. Each attacks a single target.

If the PCs use area effect spells in this Room, 1d3 alchemical acid bombs may break open. Shig'atorath and his assistants know their properties and that the necklaces of adaptation protect them. He remains close to the ruptured acid bombs, hoping to encourage foes to swim towards him through their acid.

Treasure: Shig'atorath and his assistants possess three modified necklaces of adaptation which surround them with whatever environment they find most comfortable, rather than just air. For the sahuagin, it surrounds them with warm salt water.

The necklaces of adaptation he offers the PCs are cursed and when donned dispel any water breathing effect on the user (as dispel magic, caster level 12th). PCs at this depth die almost immediately.

His spear is part of the watrazor and acts as a +2 silver spear of fish command. The floor of the chamber is covered with 2,000 gp worth of alchemical supplies and materials. There are 5 pearls worth 200 gp each upon the altar. Lastly, 10 alchemical acid bombs (see sidebar) are stored upon stone slabs within the Room.

L4. SAHUAGIN SLEEPING CHAMBER

The depth of this encounter is 500 ft. below the surface.

Dozens of jagged spikes and 5-ft. blades jut from the walls and ceiling. The only clear spot is upon the far wall where a pair of crossed long swords hang. The blades are elegantly simple but the hilts are elaborately engraved in the form of a dragon and a griffon. The spikes and blades are all stained a deep crimson including three longer spires extending 10 ft. from the ceiling towards the center of the room. Three four-armed sahuagin stretch in the middle of the room as if just awakening.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: While this Room now serves as the sleeping chamber for Sh'iga'torath (Room L3) and his sahuagins, it was once a deadly trap. The two swords are both magical, but anyone touching them or any of the spikes protruding from the walls causes the ceiling to descend to the floor, crushing everyone present. The trap has been damaged and no longer functions properly. It takes 4 full rounds for the ceiling to reach the floor, allowing victims sufficient time to escape unharmed. Further, the three longer spikes did not retract correctly and touching them no longer triggers the trap.

When fatigued, the sahuagins grab one of the three spikes and sleep in the center of this deadly trap. This keeps them alert and sharp. The three sahuagins (hp 32 each) are aware of the traps and layout of the Room.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If alerted by noise in the adjoining Room, the sahuagin are alert and immediately attack anyone entering the Room. If not alerted, the sahuagins are surprised for the first round of combat. If possible, the sahuagin push past the PCs, block the exit, and trigger the spike trap, containing PCs within the Room until the last moment.

• Spike Trap: CR 3, mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset, ceiling moves down (112d6, piercing), multiple targets (all targets in Room), never miss, onset delay (4 rounds); Search DC 15, Disable Device DC 15.

Treasure: The two crossed swords are both powerful magical items. The one with a dragon hilt is a +2 dragonbane longsword which provides its wielder an additional +3 enchantment bonus to Reflex saves. The other is a +3 short sword that casts feather fall automatically whenever the PC holding it falls more than 30 ft. Both blades are securely fastened to the wall, requiring a DC 30 Disable Device check, a DC 35 Open Lock check, or a DC 26 Strength check pry them free.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have Sh'iga'torath place two alchemical acid bombs near the entrance to the Room. When the trap triggers, it crushes these spheres and inflicts 2d6 acid damage on anyone within 5 ft. of the exit of the room. To decrease the challenge, reduce the DCs of the spike trap by -2.

• Sahuagin Killers [4-Armed], Ftr 3: CR 5; Medium monstrous humanoid (aquatic); HD 2d8+2+3d10+3; hp 32; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., swim 60 ft.; AC 16, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +5; Grp +7; Atk +8 melee (1d6+2, talon); Full Atk +8 melee (1d6+2, 4 talons) and +5 melee (1d4+1, bite); SA Blood frenzy, rake 1d4+1; SQ Blindsight 30 ft., darkvision 60 ft., freshwater sensitivity, light blindness, speak with sharks, water dependent; AL LE; SV Fort +6, Ref +5, Will +5; Str 14, Dex 13, Con 13, Int 14, Wis 13, Cha 9.

ALCHEMICAL ACID BOMBS

Sh'iga'torath devised an alchemical method of intensifying the acidic digestive fluids of some of the fish which inhabit the lake. The process creates an alchemical fluid which must be immediately contained within a golden sphere. Once a sphere is damaged, the acid leaks out into the water, inflicting 1d6 points of acid damage per round to anyone within a 5 ft. radius for 3 rounds. If broken open outside of water, the acid damage affects anyone splashed by the acid, inflicts 1d6 damage per round and lasts for 2d6 rounds or until washed off. The acid completely dissolves any coral within 5 ft. of the sphere within 5 rounds. Sh'iga'torath plans to use several of the spheres to form an fissure within the merrow's coral dam and then place more of the spheres within this fissure for maximum effect. If the kraken attacks the dam after it has been weakened, his tremendous strength rips it asunder.

L5 THROUGH L8. UNDERWATER BONES

Rough waves roil from the southwest to the northeast as a clammy fog clings to every surface above the cool water. A red haze beneath you resolves into a school of large-jawed crimson fish. The cavern's ceiling is shrouded in the darkness and a feeling of dread fills the air.

The ceiling is 100 ft. above the surface of the water while the lakebed averages 400 ft. below it. The warm and cold waters colliding to the north create the fog. The contrasting temperatures also forms the strong current which moves swimmers 20 ft. to the northeast every round.

While the earthquake entombed scores of demonic and devilish creatures beneath collapsing rock, several prisoners escaped their bonds during the chaos. This Section is the home of the dead and their remains. Several locations have powerful or unholy magic and all radiate the Encounter Condition of Desecration 5.

The negative energies turned the dead into lacedons, who in turn fed on more dead. The armies of lacedons have grown in size and shrunk again as internal wars break out among the self-hating beasts. Now, none of them look anything like their original form, but all are evil. Some were once elves from the island who were attacked or brought back from raids.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for Random Encounters once every two hours the PCs explore this section. If the PCs are thrashing in the water or have not bound their wounds to prevent blood from spreading through the water, check for Random Encounters every hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	Broken boat bobs on the surface of the water, set adrift by the elves and destroyed by some sea creature.
2	A school of fish flees from the approaching PCs.
3	A school of bottom feeders hides from the PCs, kicking up dirt. Fog 15.
4-12	Nothing.
13	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	♣ Collapsing Roof. Tiny seismic disturbances rock the area and break off an enormous stalactite from the ceiling, sending it crashing into the lake. The stalactite is 10 ft. in length and inflicts 8d6 damage on anyone it hits in the air or upon the surface of the water; a DC 15 Reflex save avoids this damage entirely. If the PCs are underwater, the stalactite inflicts only 4d6 damage (half lethal and half non-lethal), but the water retards the PCs' movements (Ref save, DC 20). 14-15 A bamboo cage drifting with the tides. It broke loose from room L35. ♣ Cage trap: CR 6; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); triggers when a sahuagin, human or large monster is present; no reset; multiple traps (one poison and one contagion); spell effect (poison, caster level 10th), spell effect (contagion, caster level 10th, demon fever); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30. 16 Small pod of three fiendish orcas (see Room L67). A massive tentacle sprouts from the back of each orca, giving it an additional attack each round. 17 Lacedon Hunting Party. 6 advanced locathah scouts from room L7. 18 Pair of dire bull sharks searching for prey. They attack upon sighting the PCs (see Room L31). 19 12 dire bats hang from the ceiling and swoop down to attack anyone moving above the surface of the water. The dire bats' sonar is so powerful that each group of three bats produces a sonic attack equivalent to a soundburst every round. 20 Koltran and three of his lacedon fighters (see Room L7) in search of prey.

L5. CURRENT EDDIES

The depth of this encounter is on the surface to 200 ft. below the surface.

Gleaming lights whirl about in a dizzying vortex within the water before you. Peering more closely, you see the swirling waters form the circular funnel of a whirlpool. A school of phosphorescent fish and another group of shadowy creatures struggle helplessly in the midst of the whirlpool as it pulls them into the twilight depths.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The hot and cold waters form a small whirlpool which draws anything caught within it further into the water. The whirlpool reaches all the way to the surface and affects any boats which approach too closely. In addition to the harmless fish, the whirlpool twists and turns a group of eleven lacedons (20 hp) to the lake's surface. They are led by Zarg (24 hp), and are returning from a scouting trip. The lacedons carried flasks of squid ink, but the whirlpool shattered the containers. The water disperses the ink in 2 rounds, providing the lacedons with total concealment until that time. The ink also provides the lacedons with a Spot check modifier of -5 to notice the PCs.

The whirlpool is 40 ft. in diameter and anyone who approaches within 30 ft. of it moves 10 ft. towards the whirlpool's center per round. Anyone who enters the whirlpool itself moves 30 ft. down per round until they reach a depth of 225 ft. below the surface. The whirlpool disperses 2d20 rounds after the PCs discover it.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The lacedons are in no danger from the whirlpool. To them it is an inconvenience, and Zarg planned to wait until it dispersed before continuing. The PCs' arrival changes his mind, and he orders his followers to swim down and away from the whirlpool. Once free of the whirlpool, the lacedons swarm up towards the PCs and attack. The lacedons force the PCs towards the whirlpool and pursue them into the depths. They concentrate on any non-elves among the PCs, attempting to paralyze as many victims as possible. Any lacedon reduced to fewer than 5 hp retreats from melee and drags a paralyzed victim deeper underwater where the pressure can finish him off.

Treasure: N/A

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the number of lacedons by 3. To decrease the challenge, the phosphorescent fish provide enough light that the PCs have no penalty for darkness at this encounter.

♣ Lacedon/Zarg: CR 1; Medium undead; HD 3d12; hp 24⁺; 20; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., swim 30 ft; AC 14, touch 12, flat-footed 12; Base Atk +1; Grp +2; Atk +3 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite); Full Atk +3 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite) and +0 melee (1d3 plus paralysis, 2 claws); SA Lacedon fever, paralysis; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits, +2 Turn resistance; AL CE; SV Fort +1, Ref +3, Will +5; Str 13, Dex 15, Con —, Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Balance +7, Climb +6, Hide +7, Jump +5, Move Silently +7, Spot +8; Multiattack, Weapon Focus (bite).

Lacedon Fever (Su): Disease—bite, Fortitude DC 12, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d3 Constitution and 1d3 Dexterity. The save DC is Charisma-based.

An afflicted humanoid who dies of lacedon fever rises as a lacedon at the next midnight. A humanoid who becomes a lacedon in this way retains none of the abilities it possessed in life. It is not under the control of any other lacedons, but it hungers for the flesh of the living and behaves like a normal lacedon in all respects.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a lacedon's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 12 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Elves have immunity to this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

L6. SKELETAL GRAVE

The depth of this encounter is 400 ft. below the surface.

A pile of skulls and bones looms from the dark water ahead of you. As you approach, you see that it bulges up from a sandy hillock in the lakebed. About a dozen humanoids drift slowly around the bones. The creatures' flesh is pale and bloated, as if slowly rotting upon their frames; their jagged claws sift through the sand.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The creatures around the tail are a group of eight lacedons (hp 20 each) unsuccessfully scavenging for items of value to offer as tribute to the kraken. Their leader, the lacedon Drisdén (hp 25), watches scornfully, alert for any signs of attack. The bones are the remains of hundreds of demons who failed to escape the earthquake and the ensuing torrent of water.

If the bones are taken from this place, they become inert.

Encounter Condition: [Concealment], Cover, Fearless, Unhallowed 2

Tactics: The bones are a source of great evil and power. Breaking them underfoot has a 5% chance of producing a random effect. The lacedons are aware of this power and break bones while the PCs are engaged.

1d20	Effect
1	Chain lightning (as a 13th-level caster), targeting everyone in the area.
2–6	Summon demon. A babau demon twists from the sand, rising to fight anything that moves.
7–11	Summon devil. A bone devil rises from the pile, targeting the nearest good creature. It is under the effect of rage .
12–15	Fireball (as a 9th-level caster), targeting everyone in the area. Anyone within 60 ft. (wearing metal armor) is also targeted with heat metal (5th-level) as the steam boils the PCs inside their armor.
18–19	Summon elemental. A water elemental rises from the lake floor, spinning and forming for 1d3 rounds before attacking everything in its path.
20	Earthquake (affecting water as if it were earth), targeting everyone in the area.

Once the PCs are within 30 ft., the lacedons rush forward while Drisdén hurls his harpoon at the most obviously clumsy PC. The other lacedons focus on well armored characters by flanking and using the "aid another" action. They fight to the death without regard for their own safety. If the PCs form a rigid formation, the creatures bullrush the smallest PCs. Drisdén uses his harpoon from a distance and then moves in to sneak attack anyone engaged in combat.

Two of the lacedons do not engage the PCs directly, but instead stir up the silt and sand. After 1d3+2 rounds, this creates a sandy fog that obscures vision, providing concealment. Once concealed, the lacedons swim to the bone pile seeking cover and breaking bones at will.

Treasure: Drisdén possesses a +1 seeking spear which ignores the effects of being underwater.

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two lacedons. To decrease the challenge, remove one lacedon.

▲ Drisden, Lacedon, Rog4: CR 1; Medium undead; HD 2d12+4d12; hp 33; Init +3; Spd 30 ft., swim 30 ft; AC 15, touch 13, flat-footed 12; Base Atk +4; Grp +5; Atk +6 melee (1d8+2/x3 plus disease, +1 seeking spear) or +5 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite) or +8 ranged (1d8+2/x3 plus disease, +1 seeking spear) or +7 ranged (1d6+1 plus disease, javelin); Full Atk +6 melee (1d8+2/x3 plus disease, +1 seeking spear) or +5 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite) and +3 melee (1d3 plus paralysis, 2 claws) or +8 ranged (1d8+2/x3 plus disease, +1 seeking spear) or +7 ranged (1d6+1 plus disease, javelin); Space/Reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA Diseased weapons, ghoul fever, sneak attack +2d6, paralysis; SQ darkvision 60 ft., evasion, uncanny dodge, undead traits, +2 Turn resistance; AL CE; SV Fort +1, Ref +7, Will +6; Str 13, Dex 17, Con —, Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Balance +13, Climb +9, Hide +11, Jump +11, Listen +7, Move Silently +11, Spot +11, Tumble +12; Multiattack, Point-Blank Shot, Precise Shot.

Diseased Weapons (Ex): Drisdén fondles and licks his spear and javelins when he is not otherwise occupied, so they carry lacedon fever as well, but in a less potent form (DC 10).

Evasion (Ex): Drisdén can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If he makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, he instead takes no damage. A helpless rogue does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Lacedon Fever (Su): Disease—bite, Fortitude DC 14, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d3 Constitution and 1d3 Dexterity. The save DC is Charisma-based.

An afflicted humanoid who dies of lacedon fever rises as a ghoul at the next midnight. A humanoid who becomes a lacedon in this way retains none of the abilities it possessed in life. It is not under the control of any other lacedon s, but it hungers for the flesh of the living and behaves like a normal lacedon in all respects.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a ghoul's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 14 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Elves have immunity to this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Sneak Attack: Drisdén's attack deals extra damage any time his target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when Drisdén flanks his target. This extra damage is 2d6. Should the rogue score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Drisdén can react to danger before her senses would normally allow him to do so. He retains his Dexterity bonus to AC even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Possession: +1 seeking spear, quiver of 4 javelins.

▲ Lacedon: CR 1; Medium undead; HD 3d12; hp 24*, 20; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., swim 30 ft; AC 14, touch 12, flat-footed 12; Base Atk +1; Grp +2; Atk +3 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite); Full Atk +3 melee (1d6+1 plus paralysis, bite) and +0 melee (1d3 plus paralysis, 2 claws); SA Lacedon fever, paralysis; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits, +2 Turn resistance; AL CE; SV Fort +1, Ref +3, Will +5; Str 13, Dex 15, Con —, Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 12.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a lacedon's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 12 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Elves have immunity to this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

L7. SKELETAL TOMB

The depth of this encounter is 400 ft. below the surface.

The lake bottom drops away to reveal an enormous pile of bones. A single spinal column rises out of the sand and arcs 60 ft. into the lake water before descending again. Hundreds of thousands of bones line the bottom of the lake: skulls, legs, ribs, wings and less identifiable body parts. Shadowy humanoid figures swim in the shadowy reaches between the piles of bones.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is more of the skeletal remains of demons killed in the earthquake. However, the difference between this Room and Room L6 is the difference between a lifeboat and a galleon. The spinal column is 15 ft. thick. The lake bottom is thick sand covering the bones of several hundred demons killed in the landslide.

The lacedons are loosely organized into five gangs of six to twelve and identified by their leaders' names. As new ones are created they join the weakest group until they prove their worth to the leaders of the other gangs. At present there are five gangs of lacedons, and two can be found here.

Kolirran's (hp 45) past is unknown, but he proved himself strong enough to join any gang he desired when he killed a dire shark with his own hands. Kolirran seized control of the weakest gang and trained them for months. Now he brutally rules the other gangs. Kolirran directly controls eleven lacedon warriors (hp 32 each) while Drisden (Room L6), Kischea (hp 27), Tyhris (Room L8), and Zarg (Room L5) lead the other gangs.

Drisden and his gang prefer treachery, but their lack of experience makes them the weakest of the gangs. Kischea and his ten lacedons (hp 20 each) are the largest gang, but they lack discipline. While not as numerous as Kischea's followers, Tyhris's followers were spell casters before their death and retain a small measure of those powers. Zarg's lacedons have no outstanding features, but do boast eleven members, making them the second strongest gang (see Room L5).

When the PCs arrive, Kolirran and Kischea are arguing about an attack upon the "music lovers." Kischea wants to send half the lacedons to the attack, despite Kolirran's objections that if even one remains behind, Mahg'Gog will certainly destroy every lacedon within the lake. They break off this discussion when they spot the PCs.

Encounter Condition: Concealment, Cover

Tactics: The lacedons stand guard together in pairs. If one spots trouble, the other swims to alert the gang. The lacedon who remains behind digs at the silt, creating a cloud that obscures vision in the area. Within 1d4+1 rounds, the cloud grows into a fog cloud that lasts until the lacedon stops digging, plus 2d6 minutes.

The other lacedons remain hidden within the bony structure, waiting for the PCs to approach. They have no problem leaving the other lacedon to die and prepare for the invaders. The lacedons are adept at swimming through the bone tomb and use the confined spaces to their advantage, gaining a +1 circumstance bonus to all attack and damage rolls and increasing their AC by +2.

If the PCs attack with ranged spells, the lacedons hold out for 1d4 rounds before emerging (en masse) to fight.

Kolirran orders Kischea's gang to launch a frontal assault upon the PCs with all his followers while his own followers study their opponents. Kolirran's gang attacks 1d3 rounds later, exploiting any weaknesses the PCs possess (gaining a +1 to their attack and damage rolls; this stacks with the bonus for fighting among the bones). Privately Kolirran despises his rival and avoids aiding him if possible. Kolirran's lacedons use the "aid another" action and flank the PCs, eliminating the most capable opponents first and administering coup de graces to paralyzed opponents.

18. SKULL AND BONES

The depth of this encounter is 400 ft. to 450 ft. below the surface.

The sandy lake bottom abruptly drops off, revealing a pile of grotesque skulls staring out from the underwater cliffside. Cavernous eye sockets stare back from empty domed skulls. Three jagged openings form cave-like homes, where the bones have obviously been used as building materials.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The pile of bones measures 60 ft. from side to side and top to bottom. The lacedon Tyhris (hp 25) and his eight mutated lacedon (hp 18 each) followers hunt and scavenge within the skull while one lacedon lurks in the shadows of an eye socket, alert for danger. Should he spot the PCs, he alerts the others, waiting in ambush.

Tyhris and his followers were all spell casters before their death and they retain a small measure of sorcerous power. They can cast cause fear, chill touch, and ray of enfeeblement, each twice per day at caster level 4th as spell-like abilities. If they act together, they can combine their powers to increase their caster level by 2 for each lacedon beyond the first.

Tyhris retains the abilities of a 5th-level sorcerer.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: When the PCs approach, the mutated lacedons remain in the shadows of the bones and use their spell-like abilities to weaken their opponents, starting with ray of enfeeblement and cause fear on round one and then casting mage armor thereafter (in preparation for melee). If the PCs do not notice them, they alternate between cause fear and ray of enfeeblement. Tyhris casts mage armor on his comrades every round until the PCs close.

Once the PCs close, the lacedons attack with their natural weapons and guard Tyhris who uses spectral hand to deliver chill touch to the strongest PCs.

They pitch their voices low and remain out of sight to deceive their opponents into thinking the skull itself is the source of these powers.

L9 THROUGH L18. NORTHERN WATERS

The northern waters are the home of the undisputed ruler of the lake, Mahg'Gog the kraken. This creature was once a small fresh-water squid who survived the earthquake and the flooding of the dungeon. In the waters near the Air-Filled Caverns it discovered the skull of Krukak, the most powerful demon imprisoned in this Region. Tons of falling rock and water had crushed Krukak and destroyed the rest of his body, but a spark of evil remained within the skull, and it possessed the inquisitive squid. The remainder of Krukak's essence and the squid struggled before merging into a single twisted creature. Calling itself Mahg'Gog, it possessed fiendish powers and intelligence far beyond the capacities of its body. For centuries, the creature absorbed the corruption and taint within the lake's waters, constantly growing, expanding its mind and body until it was capable of using its vast powers.

It began by attacking the monsters growing within the depths of the lake, binding them to its service and killing any who resisted. The kraken then demanded tribute from each creature as proof of their fealty. The first acts of tribute Mahg'Gog demanded were attacks against the sahuagin who dominated the lake, a series of attacks that destroyed the sahuagin's dominion.

Mahg'Gog controls the weather and waves of the entire lake, issues orders to his minions, and collects tribute from them. In fact, the kraken controls the very winds and waves of this Region. The clockwise current sinks strongly in this section of the lake, reaching depths of 850 ft. beneath the surface in spots as the sinking water washes debris away. The strong downward current also draws prey towards the kraken's lair.

Also lying within this section are the damaged wards responsible for the mutations and concentrated evil within the lake (see Room L9). The only true manner of resolving this is to repair the damaged wards and destroy the powerful creatures who dwell within the lake. None of the creatures living within the lake can accomplish this feat, but a minor artifact imprisoned within the dungeon has the necessary power. Only by reforging the watrazor can the PCs cleanse this bastion of evil.

On the surface, a thick fog bank covers this entire Section, obscuring vision beyond a few feet. Above the fog, the ceiling rises 100 ft. above the surface of the water. Water temperature varies wildly from 40 degrees to 60 degrees as different waters churn together. The current is towards the northeastern corner of the lake and moves anything within the water in that direction 15 ft. per round. Every round that a PC swims through this Section, there is a 10% chance that he blunders into an area where a strong downward current draws him down 15 ft. per round for 1d6 rounds.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every two hours, only in or on the water. Check for random encounters every hour if the PCs are thrashing in the water or have not bound their wounds to prevent blood from spreading through the water.

Whenever the PCs encounter anything in this Section, Mahg'Gog (Room L18) notes their presence. The kraken responds by using control weather to exacerbate the weather conditions within the lake. Patches of thick fog arise and then break up as the wind intensifies in force into to hurricane levels. Spray picked up by the winds drench anyone remaining above the surface of the lake and the possibility of downward currents or small whirlpools increases to 25%.

17-18	4 scrags wandering through the water (see L17).
19	8 advanced lacedons (see Room L7) delivering tribute to Mahg'Gog in room L18. Each lacedon carries 1d6 gp worth of precious metals dug from the lakebed.
20	The kraken Mahg'Gog constantly moves throughout this section, observing and examining his domain. (See Room L18)

L9. PROTECTIVE WARDS

The depth of this encounter is 750 ft. to 800 ft. below the surface.

Darkness presses around you as you struggle through the freezing waters far below the surface. The phosphorescent fish and other natural lighting of the waters far above are only a memory, and the water seems to be squeezing you in bands of ice and steel. A deeper shadow emerges up ahead and resolves into an enormous striated stone archway rising up from a bare stone lakebed. The tunnel measures 80 ft. tall and burrows 20 ft. through the stone before opening onto the lake on the other side. While the outside of the archway is covered in jagged edges and sharp corners, the inside is perfectly smooth and covered with hundreds of glyphs and sigils.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Opening to the north and south, the archway is composed of striated layers of granite and black coral. The tremendous energies that formed the archway smoothed the interior of the arch, but left the rough granite and jagged coral spires on the outer surface. The visible wards were once buried deeply beneath the cells and caverns of this Region, but the earthquake uncovered and damaged them. An area beneath the tunnel is affected by a permanent protection from evil.

A DC 25 Spellcraft check reveals the damaged wards are amplifying and containing the evil essence of every creature within the Region. This forms a sinkhole of taint which corrupts every living being present. The only way to end this danger is to repair or destroy the wards.

A ritual cleansing of the archway and then casting of the following spells (in order) within a 12-hour period repairs the wards: consecrate, dispel evil, glyph of warding, and imprisonment. While most of these require a high-level cleric to accomplish (they are also on a scroll in the kraken's lair), imprisonment is most likely beyond the capabilities of the PCs. Without imprisonment, only the power of a reformed the watrazor can restore this archway.

Alternately, the PCs can merely destroy the archway, which stops the taint, but also stops the wards from ever working again. If the PCs attack the archway, they still face a formidable challenge. Any attack upon the archway triggers a powerful trap which projects raw lawful energy against the attacker.

♦ Archway Trap: CR 12; magical device; automatic reset; spell trigger (true seeing); multiple targets (anyone attacking the archway); lawful energy (Atk +40 ranged, 24d6 damage); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.

⚔ Archway: Hardness 5/20; hp 800, Break DC 150.

* Because of the nature of the damaged archway, the hardness can range from 5 to 20 depending on where the PCs attack. Allow the PCs a DC 30 Craft (architecture and engineering check) to find a "soft" spot in the archway. For every 2 points over 30 the PCs succeed by reduce the hardness of the archway by 1. The hardness cannot be reduced below 5 in this manner (which would require a DC 60 check)

Once the PCs cleanse or attack the archway, a shiver passes through the entire lake. Mahg'Gog immediately senses their actions and swims to prevent them from finishing, arriving 2d6 rounds later. If he is already dead, every other powerful monster within the lake feels the change in the waters, and they quickly rush to this area to investigate. The first arrives 2d4 rounds later, with additional visitors every 1d4 rounds after that until the ritual is completed. These creatures include aquatic elves, dire sharks, the dragon turtle, tojanidas, and the greater water elemental. The arrival of these creatures leads to an epic battle while the PCs guard one another from danger.

If the PCs complete the ritual and restore the wards, a wave of pure energy washes through the lake and lifts the weight of evil from the entire Region. While the mutated creatures do not revert to their original forms, further mutations cease and the Region begins the long road to recovery.

If the PCs destroy the archway, a wave of dark evil washes through the lake. While further mutations cease, the creatures remaining are free to leave the dungeon. Teleport spells and spells which contact other planes now operate normally. This affects the ability to teleport in Regions H, K, and O as well.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, any creatures who arrive are familiar with the archway trap and push PCs against the trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the archway trap to 16d6.

L10. IN THE MIDDLE

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 600 ft. below the surface.

The water feels oily against your skin and strange iridescent rainbows dance in your light as you swim through the water. A sudden strong eddy twirls you in place for a moment and then fades away. As you get your bearings, you notice two huge forms approaching from opposite sides. Upstream you see the sleek streamlined form of an enormous shark with large teeth and a brilliant blue hide swimming towards you. Downstream a thick barrel-like torso surrounded by a massive nest of tentacles leaps towards you in rapid pulses.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The two massive creatures approaching are indifferent to the PCs but despise each other, squaring off for a fight. The two rivals, a fiendish giant squid (72 hp) and a dire bull shark (150 hp), were both harmless aquatic animals before the corrupting power of the lake changed them into killing machines. In this case, the PCs are merely in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: If left alone, the two creatures crash together and begin fighting. The PCs can simply move aside and let the melee take place. Or, if the PCs attack either of the creatures, they both retaliate against the intruders, considering the PCs a threat to their territory.

They do not fight well together either and occasionally get in each other's way. Every 2d4 rounds, have the shark or squid attack the other creature.

The dire bull shark focuses its attention upon strongest PC, intending to swallow him whole. The fiendish giant squid divides its attacks among the other PCs, focusing on spell casters or rogues where possible. Once it has successfully grappled a foe, the squid constricts it each round while attacking other PCs. Neither creature pursues fleeing PCs or those using distance weapons.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, both creatures possess a spell-like ability that manifests on the second round of combat. The shark targets anyone it swallowed with poison, caster level 6th, while the squid casts slow, caster level 6th, on anyone engaging it in melee combat. To decrease the challenge, on the third round of combat the squid attacks the shark with any free tentacles, and the shark turns its attention to the shark on the following round. Both ignore the PCs on subsequent rounds.

Skills and Feats: Listen +10, Spot +11, Swim +16; Alertness, Diehard, Endurance, Toughness (2).

Constrict (Ex): A giant squid deals 1d6+8 points of damage with a successful grapple check.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a giant squid must hit an opponent of any size with a tentacle attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict. A giant squid has a +4 racial bonus on grapple checks.

Ink Cloud (Ex): A giant squid can emit a cloud of jet-black ink 20 feet high by 20 feet wide by 20 feet long once per minute as a free action. The cloud provides total concealment, which the squid normally uses to escape a losing fight. All vision within the cloud is obscured.

Jet (Ex): A giant squid can jet backward once per round as a full-round action, at a speed of 320 feet. It must move in a straight line, but does not provoke attacks of opportunity while jetting.

Skills: A giant squid has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

✦ Dire Bull Shark: CR 9; Huge animal (aquatic); HD 18d8+66; hp 150; Init +2; Spd swim 60 ft.; AC 17; touch 10, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +13; Grp +27; Atk Bite +18 melee (2d8+9); Full Atk +18 melee (2d8+9); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA improved grab, swallow whole; SQ keen scent; AL (Always) N; SV Fort +14, Ref +13, Will +12; Str 23, Dex 15, Con 17, Int 1, Wis 12, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Listen +12, Spot +11, Swim +14; Improved Natural Attack (bite), Toughness (4), Weapon Focus (bite).

(A dire shark has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.)

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a dire shark must hit with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can try to swallow the foe in the following round.

Keen Scent (Ex): A dire shark can notice creatures by scent in a 180-foot radius and can detect blood in the water at a range of up to 1 mile.

Swallow Whole (Ex): A dire shark can try to swallow a grabbed opponent of up to one size smaller by making a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 2d6+6 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1d8+4 points of acid damage per round from the shark's digestive juices. A swallowed creature can cut its way out using a light slashing or piercing weapon by dealing 25 points of damage to the shark's digestive tract (AC 13). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out.

A Huge dire shark's gullet can hold 2 Large, 8 Medium or Small, 32 Tiny, 128 Diminutive, or 512 Fine or smaller opponents.

L11. BURNING PEARLS

The depth of this encounter is 300 ft. to 400 ft. below the surface.

A cluster of iridescent bubbles drift in the strong current ahead of you. As you swim closer, you realize the bubbles are actually enormous pearls, each measuring over a foot in diameter, floating in the water without support or attachment.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: There are eight spheres, but they are neither pearls nor bubbles. Instead, they are frozen accumulations of acid, a by-product of a malfunctioning trap buried within the lakebed. The acid freezes into a sphere in the cold depths of the lake and then drifts up towards the surface, slowly dissolving into the surrounding water. The spheres are not immediately dangerous, but anyone who subjects them to higher temperatures (due to fire spells or simply taking them higher in the lake) causes the spheres to dissolve faster. The acid released in this manner inflicts 1d6 damage per round to everything within 10 ft. of the sphere (3d6 damage to anything touching the sphere). Also, make sure to calculate damage to all applicable equipment and the effects of this damage. When a swimming PC's backpack is destroyed by acid, his gear falls into the depths.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

◆ Pearl Trap: CR 9; magical device; automatic reset; proximity trigger; the spheres slowly release acid (1d6 damage to everything within 10 ft. of the sphere when within water, 3d6 damage to anything touching the pearl); damage inflicted every round until removed from water or re-frozen; Search DC 25; Disable Device 35.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the spheres have already begun dissolving when the PCs find them and the acid inflicts damage on the round after the PCs come within 10 ft. of them. To decrease the challenge, the spheres dissolve slowly, inflicting damage every third round.

L12. KENDRAILLE TALLISORIN

The depth of this encounter is on the surface to 200 ft. below the surface.

A high-pitched nickering noise announces the arrival of a dozen sleek silver shapes, slipping through the lake's waters with ease. As they swim towards you, you note each vaguely fish-like creature is as large as a man and large fins protrude from their backs. A long-limbed elf clad only in a hide loincloth and a few pieces of jewelry sits astride the lead shape and stares towards you coldly.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The shapes are a school of twelve porpoises (hp 16 each) led by a mutated elven sorcerer. Kendraille Tallisorin (hp 40) was an elven sorcerer who lived for years in Region H until Mahg'Gog capsized his boat. Tallisorin survived the initial attack by polymorphing himself into a porpoise, but the lake's corrupting influence twisted his body and mind turning him into something resembling an aquatic elf.

Over the years he spent in the water, Tallisorin's limbs lengthened, his lungs atrophied, his neck grew gills, and his vocal cords expanded until he could converse in the language of the mutated fish he gathered around himself. Technically an aquatic elf now, he searches the waters of the lake for any magical items to add to his small collection and for surface dwellers to kill.

There is no logic to his behavior and no rhyme or reason to his actions. Kendraille Tallisorin is a shell of his previous self.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Tallisorin orders his porpoises to circle the PCs while he holds back and quietly casts detect magic using his metamagic rod to prevent the PCs from spotting the spell. On the next round, the porpoises charge towards the PCs but pull back before reaching them, while Tallisorin casts dispel magic on anyone under the effect of magical water breathing, repeating as necessary for multiple PCs. On subsequent rounds, Tallisorin attacks with magic missile, hold person and then shout, reserving his circlet of blasting until engaged in melee combat. His porpoises attack anyone swimming for the surface, charging opponents and slamming into them. If the PCs remain underwater, the porpoises attack on the second round. If the PCs offer to give him at least 3 magic items he can use, Tallisorin calls off his attack.

Treasure: Kendraille Tallisorin's lesser metamagic rod (silent), minor circlet of blasting, ring of protection +1, scarab golembane.

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, Tallisorin's porpoises continue to circle for three rounds before they attack while the sorcerer weakens the PCs with spells. To decrease the challenge, Tallisorin's mutations cost him his voice and he must cast all spells with his Silent Spell feat.

L13. KELP BEDS

The depth of this encounter is 650 ft. to 800 ft. below the surface.

A forest of green vegetation fills the waters beneath you. Some of the plants are thin, twisted strands clustered into four-foot-tall masses while others are fronds as wide as your arm. A dozen spheres several feet in diameter float above the plants, tethered to the ground by thick strands of seaweed. Barely visible among the masses of flora are broken chunks of pillars and masonry.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: While the pillars are simply rubble from the earthquake, the plants are far more than meet the eye. The evil essence within the lake mutated normal fresh water plant life into three deadly varieties.

The thin, twisted strands are actually two shambling mounds (hp 60 each). The wide fronds are four thick beds of assassin vines (hp 95 each). Lastly, the eight floating spheres tethered above the rest of the beds are mindless oozes filled with the taint that permeates the lake. The spheres burst if touched and infect anyone nearby.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (taint) 18°, Diseased (red ache) 22°

Tactics: The assassin vines and shambling mounds do not move until the PCs enter the seaweed itself at which point they slowly stalk them, using Hide to remain concealed. Once noticed, the assassin vines lurch forward using their entangle ability while the shambling mounds engage the PCs in melee. If possible, the shambling mounds bull rush the PCs, forcing them closer to the assassin vines. The assassin vines continue to use Hide until they reach melee when they engage the strongest characters.

Treasure: Hidden within the weeds are several items from former victims — a suit of +2 shark hide armor has been enchanted to provide no penalties to Swim checks; a +1 buckler provides its wielder with a +4 enhancement bonus to Swim checks; and a +3 spear which functions normally underwater.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, give the shambling mounds poisonous thorns—injury DC 14, initial/secondary 1d4 Con. To decrease the challenge, remove one shambling mound and remove one assassin vine.

✦ Assassin Vine: CR 5; Huge plant; HD 10d8+50; hp 95; Init -1; Spd 5 ft.; AC 16, touch 7, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +7; Grp +24; Atk +14 melee (1d8+14, slam); Full Atk +14 melee (1d8+14, slam); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft. (25 ft. with vine); SA Constrict 1d8+14, entangle, improved grab; SQ Blindsight 30 ft., camouflage, immunity to electricity, low-light vision, plant traits, resistance to cold 10 and fire 10; AL N; SV Fort +12, Ref +2, Will +4; Str 28, Dex 8, Con 20, Int —, Wis 13, Cha 9.

Constrict (Ex): An assassin vine deals 1d8+14 points of damage with a successful grapple check.

Entangle (Su): An assassin vine can animate plants within 30 ft. of itself as a free action (Ref DC 16 partial).

The effect lasts until the vine dies or decides to end it (also a free action). The save DC is Wisdom-based. The ability is otherwise similar to entangle (caster level 4th).

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, an assassin vine must hit with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict.

Blindsight (Ex): Assassin vines have no visual organs but can ascertain all foes within 30 ft. using sound, scent, and vibration.

Camouflage (Ex): Since an assassin vine looks like a normal plant when at rest, it takes a DC 20 Spot check to notice it before it attacks.

Anyone with ranks in Survival or Knowledge (nature) can use one of those skills instead of Spot to notice the plant. Dwarves can use stonemasonry to notice the subterranean version.

✦ Shambling Mound: CR 6; Large plant; HD 8d8+24; hp 60; Init +0; Spd 20 ft., swim 20 ft.; AC 20, touch 9, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +6; Grp +15; Atk +11 melee (2d6+5, slam); Full Atk +11 melee (2d6+5, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, constrict 2d6+7; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., immunity to electricity, low-light vision, plant traits, resistance to fire 10; AL N; SV Fort +9, Ref +2, Will +4; Str 21, Dex 10, Con 17, Int 7, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Hide +3*, Listen +8, Move Silently +8; Iron Will, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (slam).

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a shambler must hit with both slam attacks. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict.

Constrict (Ex): A shambler deals 2d6+7 points of damage with a successful grapple check.

Immunity to Electricity (Ex): Shamblers take no damage from electricity. Instead, any electricity attack used against a shambler temporarily grants it 1d4 points of Constitution. The shambler loses these points at the rate of 1 per hour.

Skills and Feats: Shamblers have a +4 racial bonus on Hide, Listen, and Move Silently checks. * They have a +12 racial bonus on Hide checks when in a swampy or forested area.

L14. KELP BEDS

The depth of this encounter is 650 ft. to 800 ft. below the surface.

Thick fronds of seaweed stretch up from far below. Each strand is roughly a handsbreadth wide and the dense growth blocks visibility beyond a few feet.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Seaweed beds fill this area and rise 150 ft. above the lake bed. Regardless of light source, the kelp beds reduce visibility to 5 ft. and movement by half. In addition, every round that a character moves through the kelp, he must make a DC 18 Swim check or become caught within the strands of kelp. Anyone caught can take a full round action to make a DC 22 Swim check or an DC 17 Escape Artist check to free himself. Failure stops the character from acting this round.

Three clusters of four aquatic carnivorous plants (hp 30 each) add further danger to the kelp bed. One cluster is in the northern edge of the kelp bed, another is in the center of the bed, the third is in the western portion and the last is at the eastern end. Any creatures encountered in the kelp beds are familiar with the properties of the kelp and the assassin vines.

Encounter Condition: Fear 16, Fearless, Fog 5

Tactics: The assassin vines wait until the PCs enter the kelp or pass within 10 ft. before seizing them. The vines use their constrict and entangle abilities to trap and kill their prey, mindlessly fighting until they are destroyed.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one assassin vine and increase the DC of the assassin vines' entangle ability, increasing by +3. To decrease the challenge, remove two assassin vines.

The effect lasts until the vine dies or decides to end it (also a free action). The save DC is Wisdom-based. The ability is otherwise similar to entangle (caster level 4th).

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, an assassin vine must hit with its slam attack.

It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

L15. WRECKAGE OF THE LANCER

The depth of this encounter varies.

A few yards below the surface of the water, a narrow plateau measuring thirty feet in diameter holds ancient timbers, twisted hunks of metal, and rotting planking while the plateau's sides drop sharply away. Approaching closer, you see a skeleton lying in repose with a battle axe held across his chest amidst the wreckage.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This encounter may occur at any depth from 0 ft. to 30 ft.

The plateau is a section of solid rock which did not collapse during the earthquake. Years ago, the kraken attacked a group of adventurers exploring the lake in a folding boat named the Lancer and hurled it onto this narrow platform where it shattered. The corpse of one of these adventurers, Bakron Kisdail, remained atop the rock and his ghost (hp 72) now haunts the site. Bakron was a lawful good fighter who devoted his life to defeating evil wizards, but centuries of the lake's corrupting influence twisted his spirit into a hateful creature that destroys any living being who approaches the plateau. His spirit is linked to his battle axe and remains close to it, rather than to his body.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: The ghost remains invisible and intangible until someone comes within 10 ft. of his remains and then it snatches up Silent Death to attack. He quickly closes with any obvious spell casters and uses the silence ability of his weapon to prevent their use of magic. A canny fighter while alive, Bakron chooses his targets carefully and focuses his attacks upon groups of rogues and spell casters, using Power Attack, attacks of opportunity, and Cleave to eliminate opponents quickly. He has mastered the use of painful blows to disrupt his opponent's concentration, and damage he inflicts is doubled for Concentration check purposes. Further, the DC for this round's Constitution checks for a person to hold his breath increases by the amount of damage Bakron inflicts.

Treasure: The weapon upon the skeleton's chest is Silent Death, a +2 ghost touch black iron battle axe which allows the wielder to cast silence, caster level 8th, 3/day, at will. The weapon serves as Bakron's link to the material world and he remains within 10 ft. of it at all times.

If the PCs rearrange the planking of the wreckage (Spellcraft check, DC 18), the engraved wood forms two spells of water breathing (one arcane and one divine, caster level 12th), as well as the boat's name, Lancer. Beneath the skeleton lies a journal, badly water damaged, in which the writer details his group's quest to find the kraken's treasure hoard and the Walmor, both said to lie within this lake. It may also hold other rumors concerning the lake at the DM's discretion.

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the ghost bound to his body rather than his weapon, allowing him to move up to 20 ft. from his skeleton. To decrease the challenge, prevent the PCs from being surprised.

▲ Bakron Kisdail, Ghost Ftr7: CR 9; Medium undead (incorporeal);

Corrupting Gaze (Su): A ghost can blast living beings with a glance, at a range of up to 30 feet. Creatures that meet the ghost's gaze must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 16) or take 2d10 points of damage and 1d4 points of Charisma damage.

Horrific Appearance (Su): Any living creature within 60 feet that views a ghost must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 16) or immediately take 1d4 points of Strength damage, 1d4 points of Dexterity damage, and 1d4 points of Constitution damage. A creature that successfully saves against this effect cannot be affected by the same ghost's horrific appearance for 24 hours.

Manifestation (Su): Every ghost has this ability. A ghost dwells on the Ethereal Plane and, as an ethereal creature, it cannot affect or be affected by anything in the material world. When a ghost manifests, it partly enters the Material Plane and becomes visible but incorporeal on the Material Plane. A manifested ghost can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, magic weapons, or spells, with a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. A manifested ghost can pass through solid objects at will, and its own attacks pass through armor. A manifested ghost always moves silently. A manifested ghost can strike with its touch attack or with a ghost touch weapon. A manifested ghost remains partially on the Ethereal Plane, where is it not incorporeal. A manifested ghost can be attacked by opponents on either the Material Plane or the Ethereal Plane. The ghost's incorporeality helps protect it from foes on the Material Plane, but not from foes on the Ethereal Plane.

A ghost has two home planes, the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane. It is not considered extraplanar when on either of these planes.

Painful Blows (Ex): Any damage Bakron inflicts is doubled for Concentration check purposes. Further, the DC for that round's Constitution checks for a person to hold his breath increases by the amount of damage Bakron inflicts.

Rejuvenation (Su): In most cases, it's difficult to destroy a ghost through simple combat: The "destroyed" spirit will often restore itself in 2d4 days. Even the most powerful spells are usually only temporary solutions. A ghost that would otherwise be destroyed returns to its old haunts with a successful level check (1d20 + ghost's HD) against DC 16. As a rule, the only way to get rid of a ghost for sure is to determine the reason for its existence and set right whatever prevents it from resting in peace. The exact means varies with each spirit and may require a good deal of research.

Skills: Ghosts have a +8 racial bonus on Hide, Listen, Search, and Spot checks.

Possessions: Silent death (+2 ghost touch black iron battle axe); 3/day—wielder may cast silence as a free action, caster level 8th.

L16. SCRAG LAIR

The depth of this encounter is 450 ft. to 750 ft. below the surface.

In the bitterly cold waters at the bottom of the lake, several depressions reveal the existence of caves beneath the surface. Although the current here strongly propels you away from the entrance, flashes of movement from within the cave attract your attention.

Peering within, you see a half dozen giants with rubbery skin gesturing wildly to each other. Their long flowing hair is entangled with seaweed and ropes. The room itself is a barren area of marble tiles and stone sarcophagi.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This area is the lair of a small tribe of scrag (aquatic trolls). These scrag settled on the uninhabited island of Madowlieoren (Room L55) centuries ago. The elves invaded, driving the scrag into the water where the creatures discovered they could breathe water. The creatures settled within the lake and remain to this day. Their current leader, Grotkhan (hp 107), and the five scrag (hp 63) present are examining a +2 distance net they stole from Madowlieoren. Grotkhan hoped to use the net himself, but cannot fathom how to refold it.

As the most powerful scrag, Grotkhan forces the others to bring him the lion's share of loot and beats them when they question his orders. The others obey him out of fear and he basks in their terror. The scrag possess few tools or treasures, preferring to live by their strength and brutality.

Even PCs who speak Giant have trouble understanding these beasts who speak a "damagal" dialect of their original tongue. A DC 20 Listen check is required to decipher the language and understand the concepts behind the words spoken, and only if the PC understands Giant.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The trolls swarm towards their foes, using the constricted space to their advantage. Grotkhan quickly pushes to the front and focuses his attacks on the strongest opponent available. They fight like maddened piranhas, biting, clawing, and constantly changing the focus of their attack.

Treasure: Concealed within one of the sarcophagi is a large black pearl (1 in. in diameter, worth 500 gp), and an iron flask — both of which Grotkhan intends as tribute to Mahg'Gog (Room L18). The +2 distance net lies unfolded upon the floor.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add three scrag that return from a hunting expedition 1d4 rounds after combat begins. They attack from behind, cutting off the PCs' escape route. To decrease the challenge, remove one scrag.

L17. SCRAG PATROL

The depth of this encounter is 400 ft. to 500 ft. below the surface.

A group of four giants moves effortlessly through the waters below you. A cloud of hair surrounds them, concealing their exact features, but their powerful physiques, large forms, and jagged claws are clearly visible.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: These four corrupt scrag (hp 67, 66, 65, 64) hunt for signs of intruders or large predators. They fear nothing and attack anything they can find, other than the kraken which they respect enough to avoid.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: The scrag are powerful fighters, confident in their own regenerative abilities. They do not fear death because they do not understand it. In combat, they fight without pause, barely acknowledging their own wounds. They split up and flank the PCs, focusing their attacks upon the weakest combatants, particularly rogues and wizards, certain that they can survive the attacks of more powerful combatants while they eliminate weaker adversaries.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the scrag's hit points by 5. To decrease the challenge, each scrag breaks off combat and retreats to their lair (room L17) when their hit points drop to a quarter or less.

Sicken Miasma (Su): Anyone within 5 ft. (except other scrag) must make a DC 19 Fort save or suffer a -1 circumstance penalty to all attack and skill rolls for 2d8 minutes. The save DC is Constitution-based.

L19. MAHG'GOG'S LAIR

The depth of this encounter varies.

The warmer waters from the southwest collide with the cooler waters here, forming a strong riptide with unpredictable downward currents. An entire school of fish glowing jade and turquoise disappear into the depths beneath you, their lights slowly dimming. Suddenly an enormous shadow passes across their lights, blotting them out completely. Something massive is moving through the waters, and it is approaching quickly.

Encounter: This encounter may occur at any depth, from 0 ft. to 800 ft.

The shadow that the PCs spotted is the half-fiend kraken Mahg'Gog (hp 350), the most dangerous creature within the lake. This beast possesses the brute strength and power of a kraken and the evil essence of a demon prince. Further, its half-fiendish nature provided more than increased intelligence.

Mahg'Gog possesses three pairs of wings which enable it to fly, although it usually keeps them folded tightly against its body. It regenerates severed limbs in 1d10+10 hours instead of days. Mahg'Gog is immortal and can survive indefinitely outside of water, should it ever choose to leave the lake.

Encounter Conditions: Cursed 10, Desecration 6, Fear 20, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 8

Tactics: Before engaging in combat, Mahg'Gog wards itself with unholy aura. Then, if the PCs are in a ship or swimming, the kraken rises to within 50 ft. of the surface and uses control water to form a large whirlpool under them, dividing them. If the PCs are flying above the surface of the lake, the kraken surfaces and uses horrid willing, then uses its tentacles to pluck them from the sky. It reveals its ability to fly only as a tactical surprise. Once they are in the water, Mahg'Gog attacks without warning or mercy, seizing as many PCs as possible, constricting them, and dragging them deeper into the water.

The kraken has two tentacles and six arms, allowing it to attack numerous characters simultaneously, but generally prefers to use its tentacles against the greatest threats and drag them into range of its arms and powerful maw. Then it uses three arms against each victim while its tentacles seek out a new target. Mahg'Gog continues attacking until it has taken 150 hit points of damage or lost both tentacles. It retreats behind its jet and ink cloud abilities, desperately clutching anyone it still has hold of.

If the PCs drive the kraken off, it immediately flees to Room L16 where it rouses the scrag, ordering them to occupy the PCs. Then it hunts down and dominates a giant squid (Room L28) or the sea serpent (Room L25) before returning to face the PCs again. The kraken allows the dominated creature to attack for two rounds, using spell-like abilities against the PCs before entering the combat itself. Mahg'Gog focuses its attention upon spellcasters and anyone else fighting from a distance against the dominated creature.

Treasure: Having cowed the other monsters within the lake, the kraken demands a tribute every three months. Though Mahg'Gog has little use for magic and even less for gold and gems, it revels in its dominance of the lesser beings of the lake.

A circular rocky reef, measuring 60 ft. in diameter, on the lakebed serves as Mahg'Gog's lair and treasure trove. The reef is both desecrated and unhallowed, to make it a more comfortable resting place for the half fiend. The unhallow spell maintains an invisibility purge spell to prevent foes from sneaking into its lair. An enormous pile of gold and other items covers much of the reef's floor. Corroded weapons, broken flasks, and other pieces of once-valuable detritus are mixed in with the chunks of gold and a handful of coins. The gold is mostly in chunks ranging in size from tiny pieces no more than an inch across to golden sheets measuring 8 ft. across. There is more than 6,000 gp here. Unfortunately for anyone who would want to take it, gold is extremely dense and difficult to haul to the surface.

Buried under the gold and corroded items are many more valuable treasures. Every PC who searches for 30 minutes and succeeds at a DC 25 Search check finds one item.

1	Black pearls (up to 9), worth 200 to 500 gp each.
2	Three chalcidies, mounted on a sheet of gold roughly 3 ft. square, worth 900 gp.
3-5	Mother of pearl (up to 100), worth 1d20 gp each.
6	Five red spinels mounted upon scraps of gold, worth 250 gp.
7	Star rubies (up to 4), worth 750 gp, 800 gp, 1,000 gp, and 1,500 gp each.
8	A silver cup with jade inlay, originally enchanted to reveal any poison placed within it by causing the jade to blacken. Long years underwater have permanently darkened the jade. It is worth 300 gp. It still radiates faint divination magic.
9	Lens of detection is buried beneath a pile of gold chunks and a DC 20 Disable Device check must be made to remove it from the pile without breaking it.
10	A bronze flask containing a potion of enlarge person . The potion has been here long enough that the taint of the surrounding water has seeped in, causing anyone who uses it to make an immediate check to resist the water's corruption.
11	Set of +2 silver chain mail armor sized for a halfling.
12	A longsword with a gold hilt, while it appears undamaged by its long period in the water, the exposure to the tainted water has changed it into a -2 cursed longsword . It radiates Strong conjuration.
13	A scroll case made of ivory which prevents water from leaking into it, even when opened underwater. Contains a divine scroll with consecrate , cure moderate wounds , hallow , glyph of warding (18th-level divine caster).
14	A carved crystal wand of invisibility (8 charges).
15	A tarnished silver ring set with a small emerald (450 gp). Its magic has been corrupted by the lake, turning it into a ring of clumsiness .
16-18	A strongbox filled with gold and silver coins.
19-20	A jagged blade without a hilt, one of the pieces of the watrazor , which can generate dismissal once per day, as a 15th-level caster. It glows when pointed towards the piece of the watrazor in Room L3.

Skills: A kraken has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

MANG'GOG'S PLAN

The kraken with the demon prince's memories dreams of escaping the dungeon which held him trapped for so many years, but the wards on this Region are still too powerful for him. However, given how much this section changed in the years since the earthquake, Mahg'Gog believes the wards must have collapsed elsewhere in the dungeon. He means to expand his territory until he discovers such a place and finally escapes this prison.

The first step in this plan is to seize control of the tidal pools which lie to the west in Section K. Mahg'Gog ordered his minions to prepare for an invasion and each handled the matter in their own personal style. Sh'iga'torath devised a method of eliminating the coral dam. The dragon turtle fastened a powerful magical item to its claw for the upcoming battles. Xiloscient created a series of magical traps to send into the tidal pools and weaken the defenders. The aboleth gathered additional slaves to protect it during the fight. The scraggs and lacedons simply ignored the warning, certain their followers' bloodthirsty natures needed no preparations.

TIMELINE OF THE ASSAULT

This schedule begins upon the day that the PCs arrive at Region K and details what events take place and when. Since the PCs might have already eliminated some or all of these beings before they act according to the schedule, or otherwise interfere with the course of these events, the DM is the sole arbiter of how PCs' actions affect this timetable. Regardless, Mahg'Gog invades Region K on the 8th day unless the PCs intervene.

Day 0: PCs arrive in Region K.

Day 3: The kraken uses control water to force Xiloscient's spheres over the merrow's dam and into the tidal pools.

Day 4: Sh'iga'torath completes his preparations and sends scouts to the merrow's coral dam.

Day 5: Sh'iga'torath and the sahuagin visit the dam and plant the first alchemical acid bombs, creating a deep fissure 4 ft. wide and 8 ft. deep in the dam's foundation.

Day 6: Sh'iga'torath plants the other alchemical acid bombs, but is caught by the merrow. Sh'iga'torath dies, but his devices destroy the merrow dam. Simultaneously, the kraken uses its control water ability to raise the water level in the Northern Swamp (see Region K) while the water elemental washes the soil, muck and mire into the deeper water. The result is a passage 30 ft. deep and 40 ft. wide from the Deeps to the Northern Tidal Pool (see Region K).

Day 7: Mahg'Gog attacks the dam, ripping it off its weakened foundations. The locathah, dragon turtle and kraken attack the merrow. Faced with extinction, the merrow agree to serve Mahg'Gog.

Day 8: The aboleth, dragon turtle, lacedons, merrow and scraggs rush through the channel and the new passageway to attack the tritons and merfolk. The aboleth is killed during the fighting, but the tritons, locathah, merrow and merfolk tribes are destroyed as well. The lillend is also killed, but the water naga escapes into the Deeps with a handful of people from each of the defeated races and goes into hiding. Lacedons and scraggs take over the southern and Northern Tidal Pools respectively while the larger predators return to the deeper waters.

L19 THROUGH L27. LOCATHAH LAIR

The current here is rising from the depths in the southeast towards the northwest where the waters filter through the swamps into Region K, but it is not strong enough to affect swimmers. The ceiling of the Section is 75 ft. above the lake's surface; the water temperature is cool.

In the southwestern portion of the lake lies a small cavern complex that survived the earthquake, but sank 150 ft. beneath the surface. It served as the home of a tribe of sahuagin for a time, but the foul taint of the lake slowly mutated the lake's fish into locathah, a race of aquatic humanoids, who drove the sahuagin from their home. While locathah are generally a neutral, nature-loving folk, the creatures created in this lake are far more vicious. They revel in destruction and respect only violence.

They are a primitive tribe of hunters and gatherers with almost no social structure. They do not even possess names or concepts of individual property. Each locathah is responsible for the tribe and all take part in the hunting, gathering, and craftwork regardless of sex, rank, or ability. Fights to the death over trivial matters are common. An aquatic elven cleric named Himo Xiloscient recently entered the caverns, defeating the locathah chieftain in combat. Stunned, the locathah bowed in submission to the intruder and now obey his every whim in fear of unholy punishment.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every two hours. The shorelines are largely devoid of creatures and caverns do not contain random encounters, so checks only have to be made when the PCs are in or on the water. If the PCs are thrashing in the water or have not bound their wounds to prevent blood from spreading through the water, check for random encounters every hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	An eddy whirls into existence around the PCs requiring a DC 20 Swim check. Anyone failing is caught in the current and drawn down 1d100 ft.
2-14	Nothing
15	A dire bull shark searches for prey.
16	Two merfolk who snuck through the Northern Swamp in Region K to deliver a message from Sissefiss (Room K40) to the locathah. The message offers a haven among the merfolk for any locathah desiring to escape Xiloscient.
17-18	Six locathah scouts patrol the Section.
19	Himo Xiloscient (Room L27) silently swims through the lair, searching for signs of rebellion or betrayal.
20	A cloud of concentrated taint washes over the PCs, requiring immediate DC 20 Will saves.

L19. ENTRY TO LOCATHAH LAIR

The depth of this encounter is 80 ft. to 120 ft. below the surface.

Water slowly flows past a plateau jutting from the cavern wall 100 ft. beneath the surface of the water. The sluggish current has smoothed the edges of the plateau for years. The rock surface is glassy, and a wide cave opening surrounded by dimly glowing yellow lights pierces the southeastern face next to the cavern wall. The interior of the cave remains hidden in shadows.

After entering the cave, you spot five nets strung across the length of the room drifting with the current and blocking your advance.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cave is the entry to the lair of a tribe of locathah. Normally a nomadic people, the locathah settled in this flooded cave complex for the safety it provides them from predators of the lake. The locathah mounted the phosphorescent glands of certain fish on the rocks surrounding the cave entrance to illuminate approaching predators, but the lights are on the outside lip of the entrance, so the light does not penetrate into the cave where nine locathah sentries (hp 22 each) are always on duty.

A series of seaweed nets are strung throughout the Room and attached to adamantium loops mounted around the periphery of the Room. The current pushes fish into the nets, but is too weak to affect humanoids. Anyone moving through this Room must make a Swimming check (DC 12) or become entangled (Strength check, DC 20 or Escape Artist check, DC 15 to free themselves).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The locathah are resting against the northwestern wall, out of sight behind the nets (Spot DC 28). At the first sign of intruders, they fire crossbows through the nets at the intruder. If the intruders keep advancing, they continue to fire and then retreat down the passageway to gather reinforcements once the intruders make it through the nets. By orders from Xiloscient and personal taste, the creatures never speak with intruders or negotiate.

Treasure: Two of the sentries are wearing pearl bracelets (worth 25 gp each). Two of the crossbows are +1 crossbows, their stocks inlaid with mother of pearl.

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add sea snake venom (Injury DC 16, Init/secondary damage 1d6 Str) to the locathah hunters' crossbow bolts. To decrease the challenge, have one to four locathah hunters sleeping, requiring 1d3 rounds (each) to awaken.

Skills and Feats: Craft (weaponsmithing) +6, Listen +8, Spot +6, Swim +10, Survival +5; Weapon Focus (longspear).

Rage (Ex): A locathah hunter can fly into a rage once per day. In a rage, a locathah hunter temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a -2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the locathah hunter's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 5 rounds. A locathah hunter may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the locathah hunter loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (-2 penalty to Strength, -2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A Locathah Hunter retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills: A locathah has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

Possessions: Longspear, dagger, light crossbow, bolts (20).

L20. MAIN HALL

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

A long passageway covered in granite tiles leads deeper into the plateau. The passage is only 8 ft. wide and tall, narrow enough to prevent most large creatures from entering here. Up ahead, it opens into a vast room whose walls are painted in a completely unexpected serene woodland scene, complete with a fox fleeing a group of horseback nobles. After a moment, you realize that the fox is completely out of scale, dwarfing many of the trees, and the nobles pursuing it are centaurs composed of metal and clockwork. Crude stone benches line the walls, both a few feet off the floor and halfway up the wall. A net hangs above the table and another finned warrior has lain down in it as if it were a hammock. Other fishmen warriors sit or swim through the room, arguing, waving spears lazily at each other, and wrestling. A beautiful mosaic of glistening rainbow-hued tiles upon the far wall depicts a fish-headed female smiling benevolently down upon the room.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the main hall where the warriors gather to hunt and celebrate, the social center of the tribe. Currently twelve locathah hunters (hp 22 each) are present, preparing to venture forth on a hunt and boasting of their mighty deeds. At first glance, the locathah seem light-hearted and jovial, but they are actually jockeying for standing within the tribe, brutally mocking each other at every opportunity. Several claim to have seen the kraken's vast trove of gold and treasure in the Northern Waters and can describe its location if questioned.

A narrow passage leads north from here, but dead ends after only a few yards. At the end of the passageway, a series of ten 1-in. wide holes in the rock lead to the lake. The current flows down the passage and out through the holes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The locathah hunters are armed with water crossbows and longspear. If alerted by the sentries in Room L19, they cock their crossbows and loose a volley of bolts as soon as the PCs appear. The hunters then rush towards the doorway with their longspear to prevent the PCs from entering the Room and keep opponents at a distance. Any locathah that is wounded goes into a rage, dispensing with its spears in favor of a dagger, then ducking beneath its companions' longspear to directly engage the PCs. If their numbers drop to 4 or less, all of the remaining locathah rage in a last ditch effort to drive off the intruders.

If the PCs enter the Room, two locathah haul down the net and use it to entangle foes while the rest use the tactics described above. They also drive the PCs in front of the door to Room L21 where six locathah reinforcements emerge 3 rounds later. The reinforcements drive forward with longspear, trapping the PCs between two hostile groups.

Treasure: The mosaic is constructed of mother-of-pearl and is worth 1000 gp, though if it must be taken apart, its value drops to 400 gp. Four of the locathah wear bracelets of pearls worth 25 gp.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the number of reinforcements to eight. To decrease the challenge, have the reinforcement arrive until round 8.

Rage (Ex): A locathah hunter can fly into a rage once per day.

In a rage, a locathah hunter temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the locathah hunter's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 5 rounds. A locathah hunter may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the locathah hunter loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Possessions: Longspear, dagger, light crossbow, bolts (20).

L21. TRAINING HALL

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

A half-dozen locathah warriors are drifting in the water, aiming crossbows at the far end of the room where several ancient ivory busts sit in niches. More niches line each wall, though only a handful of worn and broken busts remain. Six longspear are racked near the door.

Initial Attitude: Hostile.

Encounter: This Room serves as the locathah training hall. The warriors in Room L20 rejected these six locathah hunters (hp 22 each) due to poor marksmanship. As a result, they have been practicing with the crossbow diligently, trying to prove their mettle. When the PCs arrive, they are reloading as a seventh locathah clears the targets of used bolts.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If a fight breaks out, the locathah hunters fire their crossbows and wait for the intruders to close, hoping to wear them down with ranged attacks. Two of the hunters are more impetuous and draw their daggers, charging. They rage immediately, focusing their attacks upon slow targets while the others shoot at obvious spellcasters and anyone armed with a ranged weapon.

Treasure: The busts were once part of an energy ray trap, long since disintegrated. The locathah use them for target practice. The remaining busts are worth 20 gp each for their ivory, since the features have been blasted away. Three of the locathah wear pearl bracelets or necklaces worth 1d20 gp each.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add sea snake venom (Injury DC 16, Init/secondary damage 1d6 Str) to the locathah hunters' crossbow bolts. To decrease the challenge, have the locathah fire their crossbows before anyone enters the Room, thus they must reload before a fight begins.

Possessions: Dagger, light crossbow, bolts (20).

L22. BARRACKS

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

This long room is lined with dozens of narrow niches, each one lined with patches of thick green moss. More patches of the seamoss drift through the waters, as do the black-scaled humanoids slowly moving in the slight current caused by the door opening. Otherwise, the water is motionless. A spear floats near each of the sleeping humanoids.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is the barracks for the locathah tribe. Up to six locathah (hp 22 each) can be found sleeping here at any time, although there is a 25% chance that 1d6 are talking. When sleeping, they lay their heads upon the thick pads of green moss in the niches and allow their bodies to drift in the water since there is no appreciable current within this Room.

A crude altar is hidden beneath a covering of seamoss in the southeastern corner of the Room. The tribe worships the "Mother who bore them" and has carved a vaguely female figure into a massive chunk of stone. The stone was here when they made their home, jutting from the bedrock, its sculptor long dead. The locathah believe it some great sign, when in truth, the altar is a vertebra from a massive demon who died during the earthquake. The altar casts aid upon any evil being praying to the "Mother" and is the center of a permanent magic circle against good. The bone is also protected by alarm, which triggers if a good PC steps within 20 ft. of the sculpture. Allow the PCs a DC 40 Search check to notice the altar's foreign nature and (with a successful DC 26 Spellcraft check) its magical properties.

The locathah worship each morning, gaining aid for 24 hours.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 4, Echoes 5, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: The locathah are asleep and are allowed Listen checks to wake should fighting erupt or the alarm trigger. Once awake, they grab their longspear and charge to the attack. They do not fight as a unit at first, desperately trying to gain the initiative. After 1d4 rounds, the leader takes control of the unit, gaining a +4 to his Initiative check and regrouping the locathah into a single fighting unit. They do not move in such a way as to draw attacks of opportunity, but guide the combat as best as they can into a defensible wall.

Each also wears a dagger on his hip or in a belt.

Treasure: The only items present in the Room are small tools, seaweed rope and nets, and other simple items.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the locathah hunters awake and armed. To reduce the challenge of this encounter, remove the altar.

The increase in Constitution increases the locathah hunter's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 5 rounds. A locathah hunter may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the locathah hunter loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A Locathah Hunter retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. Skills: A locathah has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L23. STATUE TROUBLE

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

Two large bronze statues, their noble features partly obscured by verdigris, face each other across a debris-strewn room. The stone ceiling in the center of the room holds deep cracks and appears loose while an archway beyond the alcoves leads westward.

The statue in the northwest corner is a beautiful woman proudly wearing battle-scarred armor and aiming a drawn bow at the statue across the room. The hair on both sides of her head is shaved, but a thick mane descends behind her.

The statue in the northeast corner is an imperious man with deep scar on his left cheek, dressed in robes and clutching a tall staff engraved with jagged lines.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The statues each contain functioning ancient traps. If anyone passes between the statues, the woman fires a magical arrow while the man triggers a cone of cold that engulfs the area in front of him. A DC 25 Spot check reveals that both statues are canted lightly back and stare towards the ceiling above the opposing statue's head rather than at each other, and that a neat stack of stones sits before each statue.

A small pile of rocks in the southwest corner of the Room holds both unworked stones and chunks of masonry and tile. A DC 20 Profession (stone working) check or a DC 25 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check reveals that the ceiling is not in immediate danger of collapsing and the damage to it was probably done by exposure to cold and freezing.

Anyone making a DC 25 Knowledge (history) or Bardic Lore check identifies the two figures from an ancient tale of revenge and justice. The archer is Cardien, an ancient warrior who pursued the Master Wizard Vronlibar Mespatanius for decades and across two continents after he slaughtered her sister. She tracked him to his home and exacted her deadly revenge. She was renowned as a master archer who treasured nature and its products rather than civilization while he was a civilized villain infamous for his mastery of frost and ice magic. These are the first statues the PCs have ever seen of these two.

Checking the pile of stones reveals that those in front of Cardien are unworked while those in front of Mespatanius are worked masonry.

Note: If the DM allows this story into his campaign, he makes an inextricable link from Celestials to Humanity that cannot be ignored. No stories of the interior of the prison should have reached the surface, unless those stories brought with them a reality that these two species are linked... somehow.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Cold

Tactics: A magical arrow appears and fires from the bow of the Cardien statue if anyone steps in front of it. If the person places an unworked stone item in front of her statue, the trap does not trigger for ten full rounds.

♣ Cardien Trap: CR 5; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset, 1 hour; hidden trigger bypass (place an unworked item in front of the ground before the statue and the trap does not function for ten rounds); arrow (+25 attack, 4d6, treat the arrow as a +1 good-aligned weapon for overcoming damage reduction); Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 25.

Anyone who steps in front of the Mespatanius statue triggers a cone of cold spell centered on the area directly in front of it, though placing a piece of worked stone in front of the statue prevents the trap from triggering for five full rounds.

♣ Mespatanius Trap: CR 8; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset, 1 hour; hidden trigger bypass (place a piece of worked stone in front of the ground before the statue and the trap does not function for 5 full rounds); spell effect (cone of cold, 20th-level wizard, 15d6 damage, DC 20 Reflex save for half); Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 30.

Anyone who swims next to the ground avoids triggering the statues, which are now angled slightly up rather than directly ahead as originally designed.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the Mespatanius trap by +2 per die due to the frigid temperature of the water. To decrease the challenge, remove the Cardien trap.

L24. AMONG THE DEAD

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

The smell of decay assaults you as the door opens. Something died here and no one has cleared the room.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The dead body of a locathah lies in a corner of the Room, wrapped in seaweed. It has been decaying for months and no one has moved it. It is unclear why.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air

Tactics: The air here is foul and impossible to breathe. Just a few seconds in this Room is nauseating. Increase the save DC for holding one's breath by +5 while in this Room.

Treasure: If the PCs can bring themselves to search the body, they find a necklace of teeth (maybe a shark) on the body, which has decomposed considerably. The necklace is worth a great deal to the locathah, but only a few silver to anyone else. Searching the body requires a DC 20 Fortitude save, lest the PC become nauseated for 1d6 minutes.

EL: N/A

L25. CARCASS OF A SERPENT

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

The smell of rot hangs in the air, like a thick blanket. Death surrounds you at every turn.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The body of a massive sea serpent lies gutted on the floor of this Room. It is unlike anything the PCs have ever seen. Sadly, it has been butchered and few details can be made out.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 20%; Stagnant Air

Tactics: PCs examining the body find that it has been hacked from the outside. A DC 25 Survival check reveals knife wounds from the inside as well. Most of the meat has been cut away and the rest was left to rot. Why the locathah would do this is anyone's guess.

Treasure: N/A

L26. ANTECHAMBER

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

The marble tile corridor widens here to reveal four scarlet-hued locathah standing guard with long spears and crossbows. Black high-lights along their fins shift in the slight current, giving them a diabolic look. Light reflects off a bracelet of pearls upon the locathah leader's right wrist, but his left arm ends in a stump only a few inches below the shoulder. A rusty portcullis hangs open above the room's entrance.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four of Himo Xiloscient's bodyguards are on duty here. They prevent any approach, halting intruders and other locathah alike while one of them informs their leader of the guest. The bodyguards are completely loyal to Xiloscient and fear his wrath, so they fight to the death against intruders.

The locathah with the missing arm is Sha'ag, the leader of the bodyguards and once the chieftain of the tribe. A strong warrior with a compassionate heart and keen mind, he fought off an attack by a dire shark but lost his limb. The other locathah refused to accept a maimed leader, but the one who took his place fell to Xiloscient. Still bitter, the maimed locathah serves his new master, but secretly dreams of the deaths of his fellow locathah.

Tactics: If the PCs make any noise while passing the statues in Room L23, they alert the guards who attack from cover with crossbows as the PCs approach. Two of the bolts used are magical (one is enhanced with darkness and the other with silence) to hinder attackers. Sha'ag triggers a necklace enchanted to cast a prayer spell. All spells are caster level 7th. One combat is joined, they shout war cries to warn Xiloscient.

When the PCs close, the locathah focus their attacks on the strongest foe, trying to take down the intruders one by one. The locathah do not surrender, having been warned that the price of failure is death.

Treasure: Each of the locathah wears a bracelet of large pearls worth 150 gp. Two of the locathah possess magical bolts (one enhanced with darkness and the other with silence, caster level 7th). Sha'ag, the maimed locathah, possesses a shell necklace which can cast prayer, caster level 7th. All three items have only one charge.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the bodyguards trigger the portcullis (+15 attack, 5d6 damage, requires Strength check 20 to open) as the PCs enter the Room, intending to pin one PC against the floor while they focus on using their long spears against the other intruders. To decrease the challenge, the bodyguards enter their berserker rage at the first sign of the PCs and charge with their spears rather than attacking with crossbows from cover.

L27. HIMO XILOSCIENT'S ROOM

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

Xiloscient is paranoid and believes his locathah slaves plan to rise up and kill him. To slow them down, he placed a trap just within the door of his Room which casts mass inflict light wounds upon any non-elf entering the Room.

♦ Door Trap: CR 6; magical device; proximity activated; no reset; spell effect (mass inflict light wounds, 10th-level cleric, 1d8+10, Will save for half DC 19); targets any non-elf entering the room; Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31.

The walls of this room are decorated in eight striated layers of colorful mosaic. The darkest colors such as black and purple are near the floor while the yellows, reds, and oranges are closer to the ceiling. A thick pad of black moss covers the entire northern end of the room and a series of shelves divide each of the colors at the southern end of the room. The shelves hold weapons, fishing equipment, sharkskin hides and assorted rubble. At the southern end of the room, a dozen daggers pin a locathah corpse to a round granite table.

Seated on a multicolored throne across the room is an aquatic elf in stained leather armor. The wild-eyed elf's exposed skin is covered in black boils oozing corruption and green splotches, and he has filed his teeth into points. Two rotted but mobile sharks move to block your way to the corrupt elf.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The aquatic elf is Himo Xiloscient (hp 50), a former elven cleric exiled to the island of Madowlieloren. Several months ago, he went swimming alone on the eastern end of the island and the aboleth (Room L54) captured him. Assailed by doubts about why his god allowed him to be sent to Madowlieloren in the first place, Xiloscient fell prey to the aboleth's powers. Enslaved to its will, Xiloscient returned to the island and turned his powers against the very defenses he was responsible for maintaining. The lake's corruption slowly tainted him, so by the time he broke free of the aboleth's control, he realized that he had no interest in helping anyone or renewing his worship of the feeble elven gods.

Instead, Xiloscient worshiped the dark forces which fill the pool and used their powers to gain control of the locathah tribe. Hate-filled and furious, he now wields his powers for destruction and chaos, unleashing powerful magical traps into the water to destroy the unwary and tormenting the locathah who serve him.

The kraken Mahg'Gog (Room L18) ordered him to prepare the locathah to attack the merfolk and tritons living in Region K within a few weeks. While Xiloscient has no interest in serving the kraken, the thought of more killing and torture thrill him, and he plans to lead his slaves personally.

Encounter Condition: Spell Resistance 18, Unhallowed 5

Tactics: Xiloscient fights with the intensity of a lunatic. He uses his spells in preference to his mace, starting with hold person and sound burst, then using slay living on a stunned or helpless victim, cackling wildly. His latent guilt manifests in the fact that he avoids targeting elves until no other targets are available. His pair of zombie sharks (hp 42 each) intercept anyone trying to engage Xiloscient, buying him time to cast his spells (Note: mass inflict light wounds heals the zombie sharks).

When intruders arrive, he invites them in, luring them into his mass inflict light wounds trap. Should the PCs parley, Xiloscient pretends to consider whatever they are talking about, then casts another spell. The entire Room is under the effects of unhallow, that provides resist energy (some) to all evil creatures in this Room.

Xiloscient cast magical vestment (making his armor +2 for the duration) when he heard the PCs outside his Room; it remains in effect. If he has warning of enemies approaching, he casts bear's endurance, owl's cunning, shield of faith, aid, and protection from law in that order.

Treasure: Himo Xiloscient possesses a triple string bracelet of pearls (worth 350 gp), 15 pearls (worth 1d10 x 10 gp each), and many chunks of mother of pearl stored in a chest (200 pounds, 250 gold worth of mother of pearl inside) to be granted to locathah who deserve recognition or rewards.

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase Xiloscient's natural AC by +6. To decrease the challenge, have Xiloscient unable to attack elves or half-elves without succeeding at a DC 20 Will save.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Single Actions Only (Ex): Zombies have poor reflexes and can perform only a single move action or attack action each round. A zombie can move up to its speed and attack in the same round, but only if it attempts a charge.

L28 THROUGH L35. CENTRAL WATERS

The waters in the center of the lake are dominated by a permanent whirlpool, though a handful of predators make their home here and various hunting parties often pass through the area. The current constantly rotates clockwise throughout this section, growing stronger as the PCs approach the whirlpool. Anything caught within the whirlpool itself is dragged down into the depths which reach 600 ft. here. Unless otherwise stated, the current moves anything within the water clockwise around the edge of this section at 10 ft. per round.

A foul odor emanates from a whirlpool barely visible near the center of the lake, and the current visibly circles clockwise around it. Short choppy waters swirl in tiny eddies all around you and the water's temperature varies wildly as waters mix from a variety of depths.

With directional modifications to correct for the PCs' location, this description is valid for the surface of the waters surrounding the center of the lake and the Vortex (see Room L32) since similar phenomenon can be found equidistant from the center in every direction. The ceiling here is 85 ft. above the surface of the water.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A mass of eerie green lights bobbing through the water beneath the PCs. They remain at the edge of sight, never approaching closer.
2	A school of 20 squid, each only a foot long. The creatures flee the PCs.
3–13	Nothing.
14–15	An eddy sliding under around the PCs, forcing a Swim check (DC 20). Anyone failing is caught in the current and drawn down 1d100 ft.
16	A mutated seacat (see room L30) hunting alone through the waters. An electrical charge builds up every three rounds within the seacat's mouth. Those whom it bites are affected by a shocking grasp spell, caster level 6th.
17	Locathah Hunting Party. Six locathah scouts patrolling the area around their lair (see room L21).
18	A fiendish giant squid (see room L28) searching for a mate.
19	Pair of dire bull sharks searching for prey. They attack upon sighting the PCs (see room L31).
20	A flaming sphere, caster level 20th, that suddenly appears in the water before the PCs. The sphere moves towards the PCs for twelve rounds before dwindling away.

L28. GIANT SQUIDS

The depth of this encounter is 20 ft. to 400 ft. below the surface.

All outside light fades from view as inky water closes over your heads. The warm current pulls you roughly towards the northeast and a sudden chill fills the waters around you. Without further warning, the water around you is filled with dark tentacles.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A Survival check (DC 30, 20 for aquatic characters) or a DC 28 Spot check reveals the dark water is actually an ink cloud. Early detection prevents the PCs from being caught flat-footed. The ink is also toxic (Contact, Fortitude DC 17, Initial Damage 1 Dex, Secondary Damage 1d2 Dex) requiring an additional save every two minutes that a creature remains with the cloud.

Two fiendish giant squids (hp 72 each) ambush the PCs from the dark depths of the lake, emitting an inky cloud moments before moving in to attack. The squids used the ink to conceal their approach, attacking with surprise.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Fear 18

Tactics: The squid position themselves within 20 ft. of the PCs before attacking and then lash out with a full attack, using all ten tentacles against available targets. Anyone struck with a tentacle is targeted by an improved grab against each limb while the squid continues to attack additional targets. The squids concentrate their attacks on two PCs each and eliminate those two before engaging a third.

Once a PC is grappled, the squids grab each of that victim's limbs in a separate tentacle, allowing them to concentrate their attacks and finish off one PC quickly before moving on to the next one. Should the squids lose several tentacles or take 50% of their hit points, that squid retreats using its jet ability, maintaining its grip on one of its victims if possible and taking him to the bottom of the lake.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, give a +20 circumstance bonus to the Hide checks of the fiendish giant squids while they move through the ink cloud. To decrease the challenge, remove the improved grab ability from one of the fiendish giant squids.

◆ Fiendish Giant Squid: CR 11; Huge animal (aquatic, extraplanar); HD 12d8+18; hp 72; Init +3; Spd 80 ft.; AC 17, touch 11, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +9; Grp +29; Atk +15 melee (1d6+8, tentacle); Full Atk +15 melee (1d6+8, 10 tentacles) and +10 melee (2d8+4, bite); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft. (30 ft. with tentacle); SA constrict (1d6+8), improved grab, smite good; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., damage reduction 10/magic, jet, low-light vision, resistance to cold and fire 10, SR 17, toxic ink cloud; AL N; SV Fort +9, Ref +11, Will +5; Str 26, Dex 17, Con 13, Int 3, Wis 12, Cha 2.

Skills and Feats: Hide -5, Listen +10, Spot +11, Swim +16; Alertness, Diehard, Endurance, Toughness (2).

Constrict (Ex): A giant squid deals 1d6+8 points of damage with a successful grapple check.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a giant squid must hit an opponent of any size with a tentacle attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict. A giant squid has a +4 racial bonus on grapple checks.

Jet (Ex): A giant squid can jet backward once per round as a full-round action, at a speed of 320 feet. It must move in a straight line, but does not provoke attacks of opportunity while jetting.

Smite Good (Su): Once a day, make a normal melee attack to deal an extra 12 points of damage to a good target.

Toxic Ink Cloud (Ex): A giant squid can emit a cloud of jet-black ink 20 feet high by 20 feet wide by 20 feet long once per minute as a free action. The cloud provides total concealment, which the squid normally uses to escape a losing fight. All vision within the cloud is obscured, except for the fiendish squids own darkvision. The cloud is also toxic: Contact, Fortitude DC 17 Initial Damage 1 Dex, Secondary Damage 1d2 Dex. The save is Constitution based. The fiendish squids are immune to their own toxin.

Skills: A giant squid has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line. These dark colored fiendish giant squid receive a +10 bonus to their hide check in the depth of the water or in their own ink clouds.

L29. FIGHT OR FLIGHT

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

[If the trap activates:] From the roof of the cavern there is a sudden flicker of green light, like a small electrical discharge.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: There is nothing visible here unless the PCs are flying above the water. Even then, they must succeed at a DC 25 Spot check to notice a jade hemisphere 2 ft. in diameter protruding from the ceiling. This sphere was part of the warding set up around the dungeon to prevent the prisoners from escaping, but the ward was damaged during the earthquake.

The sphere casts greater dispelling and hold monster upon anyone or anything (including projectiles or spells) floating or moving above the lake's surface within 150 ft. of it. It produces both of these effects once per round, targeting the closest possible target.

Falling into the water causes little damage (1d6 damage for the first 40 ft., +1d6 for each additional 20 ft.). The current here has a slight undertow, pulling everything within the water towards the lake bottom at a rate of 5 ft. per round. Held characters begin to drown once they are underwater, but they receive a +2 circumstance bonus to break free from the hold monster effect while drowning.

◆ Greater Dispersing Trap: CR 10; magical device; proximity activated; automatic reset; multiple traps; spell effects (greater dispelling, 18th-level caster, and hold monster, 18th-level caster, DC 18 Will save to negate); targets anyone moving above the surface of the water; the greater dispelling also targets any projectiles or spells coming within 10 ft. of the sphere; Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 30.

Encounter Condition: Spell Resistance 20⁺

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the greater dispelling trap target creatures up to 50 ft. below the surface of the water. To decrease the challenge, remove the hold monster effect.

L30. FLOATING DEBRIS

The depth of this encounter is on the surface to 100 ft. below the surface.

The current is pulling you west, but a dark shadow appears to the east. As it rapidly draws closer, you see that it is a large chunk of debris. Jagged planking protrudes in every direction from a solid mass of lumber. Although exact details are hard to determine, it looks to be about eight feet across. Suddenly you realize it is on a collision course with you. As you move aside, the debris twists again and you see two creatures with the head and torso of a big cat and the tail of a fish launch themselves towards you from an opening in the debris.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The debris first appears at the edge of the PCs' vision, but they should not realize the danger until it is 30 ft. away. Since the current is only 10 ft. per round, they have plenty of time to move aside. Hiding within the debris are two sea cats (hp 51 each), aggressive hunters who attack the PCs on sight.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The sea cats leap into the water towards the PCs, attacking viciously and forcing the PCs into the path of the debris. They use bull rush attacks to drive the PCs back or position themselves between the PCs and the debris to lure them closer to its danger. Its wooden planks strike anyone within 10 ft. and in its movement path.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two sea cats. To decrease the challenge, reduce the starting hit points of the sea cats by –10 each.

♣ Sea Cat: CR 4; Large magical beast; HD 6d10+18; hp 51; Init +1; Spd 10 ft., swim 40 ft.; AC 18, touch 10, flat-footed 17; Base Atk +6; Grp +14; Atk +9 melee (1d6+4, claw); Full Atk +9 melee (1d6+4, 2 claws) and +4 melee (1d8+2, bite); SA Rend 2d6+6; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., hold breath, low-light vision, scent; AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +6, Will +5; Str 19, Dex 12, Con 17, Int 2, Wis 13, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Listen +8, Spot +7, Swim +12; Alertness, Endurance, Iron Will.

Hold Breath (Ex): A sea cat can hold its breath for a number of rounds equal to 6 × its Constitution score before it risks drowning.

Rend (Ex): A sea cat that hits with both claw attacks latches onto the opponent's body and tears the flesh. This automatically deals an extra 2d6+6 points of damage.

Skills: A sea cat has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L31. DIRE STRAITS

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 500 ft. below the surface.

A red sheen hangs in the water, obscuring vision beyond a few feet and producing a tingling sensation on your exposed skin, which soon begins to itch and then burn. Even through the crimson hue, you can make out two large shapes swimming through the sluggish current.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The red haze is a random manifestation of the energy in the lake. It exists in a 100 ft. radius sphere which remains motionless while the current moves the sharks and PCs around the vortex (Room L32). It is dangerous to everything but the two dire bull sharks (hp 150 each) swimming here.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 20°

Tactics: The two bull sharks fight together, focusing on the two lead PCs. If either one attacks successfully, it uses its improved grab ability to swallow its victim whole while the other bull shark attacks another PC. If the bull shark successfully swallows or loses its grip upon a PC, it attacks the same target as its partner. Should both bull sharks succeed in grappling the same PC, neither can swallow the PC whole. Instead, they begin a tug-of-war with the PC, inflicting an additional 2d8 damage in addition to their normal damage.

Anyone remaining within the red haze must make a poison save once every 10 rounds. The sharks are immune to its effects.

♣ Red Haze—Contact DC 14, initial damage 1d12 hp (acid), secondary damage 1d4 Con.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one dire bull shark (with hp 120). To decrease the challenge, reduce the bull sharks' hit points by –30.

♣ Dire Bull Shark: CR 9; Huge animal (aquatic); HD 18d8+66; hp 150; Init +2; Spd swim 60 ft.; AC 17, touch 10, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +13; Grp +27; Atk Bite +18 melee (2d8+9); Full Atk +18 melee (2d8+9); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, swallow whole; SQ Keen scent, resistance to acid 5; AL N; SV Fort +14, Ref +13, Will +12; Str 23, Dex 15, Con 17, Int 1, Wis 12, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Listen +12, Spot +11, Swim +14; Improved Natural Attack (bite), Toughness (4), Weapon Focus (bite).

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a dire shark must hit with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can try to swallow the foe in the following round.

Keen Scent (Ex): A dire shark can notice creatures by scent in a 180-foot radius and can detect blood in the water at a range of up to 1 mile.

Swallow Whole (Ex): A dire shark can try to swallow a grabbed opponent of up to one size smaller by making a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 2d6+6 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1d8+4 points of acid damage per round from the shark's digestive juices. A swallowed creature can cut its way out using a light slashing or piercing weapon by dealing 25 points of damage to the shark's digestive tract (AC 13). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out. A huge dire shark's gullet can hold 2 Large, 8 Medium or Small, 32 Tiny, 128 Diminutive, or 512 Fine or smaller opponents.

Skills: A dire shark has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L32. THE VORTEX

The depth of this encounter is on the surface to 500 ft. below the surface.

The current circles strongly in this area around an obvious whirlpool in the water. Waters swirls and churns around the depression as if it were drawn towards a drain. The water at the very center of the whirlpool froths angrily.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The current here is extremely strong and draws swimmers and vessels into its grasp. Every round, objects within 60 ft. of the vortex in the water are moved 20 ft. clockwise and 10 ft. closer to the center of the whirlpool. Moving against this current requires a Swim check (DC 25, +1 for each 10 ft. closer in to the center of the whirlpool).

The lake's contaminating effects extend to the very water within it. Years of unholy energy animated the water into a neutral evil greater water elemental (hp 199). Driven mad by its confinement in such a small water mass and the energies swirling within it, the water elemental creates a strong vortex within the center of the lake. It is for all intents and purposes a vile maelstrom of water, having lost all connection to the elemental plane of water.

The vortex lasts for ten rounds after the PCs approach within 100 ft. and then splits apart and disappears. The water elemental reforms the vortex after 10 minutes, creating an identical whirlpool for another 10 rounds. Until it reforms, the current is minimal, only moving characters 5 ft. per round around the focal point of the whirlpool.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The elemental simply ignores the PCs and their actions so long as they do not interact with it. However, if the PCs attack it or approach within 20 ft. of it, the enraged vortex strikes out at them.

Creatures within the vortex take 2d8 damage from buffering waves unless they make a DC 28 Reflex save, and must make another DC 28 Reflex save or become caught by the currents. The vortex inflicts an additional 2d8 damage per round on caught characters and drags them 60 ft. under the water each round until they succeed at a DC 28 Reflex save.

After its vortex has ended, the elemental moves through the water and attacks from below with its powerful slam attack, focusing upon those characters which have demonstrated an ability to hurt it. If the combat goes poorly and the elemental is reduced to 50% of its hit points, it retreats for ten minutes and then reform its vortex centered directly beneath the PCs, keeping them trapped and off balance within its powerful whirlpool.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the water elemental maintain the vortex form indefinitely. To decrease the challenge, reduce the period of time that it remains in its vortex form from 10 rounds to 1d10 rounds.

✦ Vortex, Greater Water Elemental: CR 9; Huge elemental (water); HD 21d8+105; hp 199; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., swim 120 ft.; AC 22, touch 13, flat-footed 17; Base Atk +15; Grp +31; Atk +21 melee (2d10+8, slam); Full Atk +21 melee (2d10+8, 2 slams); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA Drench, vortex, water mastery; SQ Damage reduction 10/—, darkvision 60 ft., elemental traits; AL NE; SV Fort +17, Ref +14, Will +9; Str 26, Dex 20, Con 21, Int 8, Wis 11, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Listen +14, Spot +14; Alertness, Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Bull Rush, Improved Sunder, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Power Attack.

Drench (Ex): The elemental's touch puts out torches, campfires, exposed lanterns, and other open flames of non-magical origin if these are of Large size or smaller. The creature can dispel magical fire it touches as dispel magic (caster level equals elemental's HD).

Vortex (Su): The elemental can transform itself into a whirlpool once every 10 minutes, provided it is underwater, and remain in that form for up to 1 round for every 2 HD it has. In vortex form, the elemental can move through the water or along the bottom at its swim speed. The vortex is 5 feet wide at the base, up to 30 ft. wide at the top, and 10 feet or more tall. The elemental controls the exact height, but it must be at least 10 ft. and up to 60 ft. for a greater elemental.

The elemental's movement while in vortex form does not provoke attacks of opportunity, even if the elemental enters the space another creature occupies. Another creature might be caught in the vortex if it touches or enters the vortex, or if the elemental moves into or through the creature's space.

Creatures one or more size categories smaller than the elemental might take damage when caught in the vortex (2d8 damage) and may be swept up by it. An affected creature must succeed on a Reflex save (DC 28) when it comes into contact with the vortex or take the indicated damage. It must also succeed on a second Reflex save or be picked up bodily and held suspended in the powerful currents, automatically taking damage each round. An affected creature is allowed a Reflex save each round to escape the vortex. The creature still takes damage, but can leave if the save is successful. The save DC is Strength-based.

Creatures trapped in the vortex cannot move except to go where the elemental carries them or to escape the whirlwind. Creatures caught in the whirlwind can otherwise act normally, but must make a Concentration check (DC 10 + spell level) to cast a spell. Creatures caught in the whirlwind take a –4 penalty to Dexterity and a –2 penalty on attack rolls. The elemental can have only as many creatures trapped inside the vortex at one time as will fit inside the vortex's volume.

The elemental can eject any carried creatures whenever it wishes, depositing them wherever the vortex happens to be. A summoned elemental always ejects trapped creatures before returning to its home plane. If the vortex's base touches the bottom, it creates a swirling cloud of debris. This cloud is centered on the elemental and has a diameter equal to half the vortex's height. The cloud obscures all vision, including darkvision, beyond 5 feet. Creatures 5 feet away have concealment, while those farther away have total concealment.

Those caught in the cloud must make a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) to cast a spell. An elemental in vortex form cannot make slam attacks and does not threaten the area around it.

Water Mastery (Ex): A water elemental gains a +1 bonus on attack and damage rolls if both it and its opponent are touching water. If the opponent or the elemental is touching the ground, the elemental takes a –4 penalty on attack and damage rolls. (These modifiers are not included in the statistics block.)

A water elemental can be a serious threat to a ship that crosses its path. An elemental can easily overturn small craft (5 feet of length per Hit Die of the elemental) and stop larger vessels (10 feet long per HD). Even large ships (20 feet long per HD) can be slowed to half speed.

Skills: A water elemental has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L33. BAMBOO STAND

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

A whistling echoes through the air. Bamboo poles thrust up from orange moss growing along the cavern wall. The moss adds a bitter, citric odor to the air. It grows on a shallow ledge that measures roughly 40 ft. by 60 ft. There is a second ledge 10 ft. below the surface of the water, paralleling the dry ledge.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The locathah harvest bamboo and pearls from this area for their weapons and traps. The bamboo poles range in size from an inch across to a handful of monster logs 2 ft. in diameter. If the PCs search the second shelf, they find it filled with hundreds of oysters, though a 5 ft. lip along the edge of the shelf keeps the oysters within the area and most creatures out.

Originally a poison, the orange moss has mutated. It now alters the respiratory system of anyone who ingests it, granting a positive and negative effect. A minute after eating it, the moss provides aquatic creatures with the ability to breathe air and provides surface dwellers with the ability to breathe water. The change is extremely painful and causes damage even if the creature can already breathe both air and water. Each dose lasts 2 hours and its effects are cumulative for up to 16 hours.

✦ Orange Moss—Ingested, DC 20 resists, initial damage 1d6, secondary damage 2 hours of water (or air) breathing.

Encounter Condition: Fear 15

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: There is enough orange moss here for over 200 doses, should the PCs take time to harvest it all. It takes 1 hour to collect 25 doses of orange moss.

Throughout the area 100 pearls are scattered in various niches. If the PCs spend 30 minutes searching, they find 1d12 pearls each. PCs with 5 or more ranks in Survival find 2d8 pearls. To determine their value roll 1d20 for each and consult the following table.

1d20	Treasure
1–4	Too small or ill-formed to have any value.
5–9	Small pearl, worth 1d6 gp.
10–13	Small pearl, worth 2d6 gp.
14–15	Medium pearl, worth 1d20 gp.
16	Small pearl, worth 1d10 gp, and mother of pearl, worth 1d10 gp.
17	Large pearl, worth 1d12 × 10 gp.
18	Medium pearl, worth 1d20 gp, and mother of pearl, worth 3d10 gp.
19	Mother of pearl, worth 1d20 × 10 gp.
20	Monster pearl*, worth 1d10 × 50 gp

* Only one monster pearl can be found. After this result is rolled, treat any further rolls of a 20 as a roll of 1–4.

L34. LOCATHAH HUNTING PARTY

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 400 ft. below the surface.

A thick cloud of fish meanders through the water beneath you. Dozens of bright orange and yellow round fish mingle with sleeker forms, but all seem touched with strange deformities. Without warning, the fish near the center of the school dart away. Several fish at the center thrash feebly before dying, pierced by bolts. The school shatters beneath you as fish flee in every direction. Eight red and black-scaled humanoids with thick webbed frills around their heads rise into view. The finned creatures are armed with long spears, and crossbows hang at their side.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: These two four-member locathah elite hunting parties (hp 28 each) were scouting and practicing their marksmanship, but are now boasting to each other of their successes. They do not spot the PCs unless the PCs have done something to attract their attention, so they swim up, gather the three fish they killed with their crossbows, and pursue the fleeing fish.

Encounter Condition: Cover

Tactics: If the PCs are spotted, the hunters decide they need more weapons practice and attack. The locathah hunters use their crossbows against lightly armored figures, then fall back and repeat the process, using what cover is available. If the PCs close, they fend them off with longspear.

Treasure: The locathah wear pearl necklaces, worth 25 gp each. Their masterwork long spears are inlaid with lustrous mother-of-pearl and worth 20 to 50 gp each.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the locathah elite hunters use poisoned crossbow bolts with sea snake venom — Injury DC 16, initial/secondary damage 1d6 Str. To reduce the challenge, remove two locathah elite hunters.

✖ Locathah Elite Hunter, Bar 3: CR 4; Medium humanoid (aquatic); HD 2d8 + 3d12; hp 28; Init +1; Spd 20 ft., swim 60 ft.; AC 15, touch 12, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +4; Grp +4; Atk +6 melee (1d8/x3, longspear) or +4 melee (1d4/19–20, dagger) or +5 ranged (1d8/19–20, light crossbow); Full Atk +6 melee (1d8/x3, longspear) or +4 melee (1d4/19–20, dagger) or +5 ranged (1d8/19–20, light crossbow); SA Rage; SQ Uncanny dodge; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +2, Will +2; Str 11, Dex 12, Con 11, Int 13, Wis 13, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Craft (any one) +7, Listen +9, Spot +6, Swim +12, Survival +6; Rapid Reload, Weapon Focus (longspear).

Rage (Ex): A locathah elite hunter can fly into a rage once per day. In a rage, a locathah elite hunter temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the locathah hunter's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 5 rounds. A locathah hunter may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the locathah elite hunter loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A locathah elite hunter retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills: A locathah has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

Possessions: Masterwork longspear, dagger, light crossbow, bolts (40).

L35. THE TRAPS

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

Drifting in the water is a sphere almost 10 ft. in diameter, constructed of hide stretched over a framework. Painted sigils cover the exterior of the sphere. You can make out three similar objects bobbing in the current within 30 ft. of the first one.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The sphere is shark hide over a bamboo frame filled with air and magically sealed. It possesses natural buoyancy and remains at this depth. The locathah (Room L22) under the orders of Xiloscient (Room L27) constructed these spheres, which he then enchanted. The resulting traps float in the water until triggered. Mahg'Gog demanded these tools for his invasion of Region K (see "Mahg'Gog's Plan," page 601).

A successful DC 25 Knowledge (arcane or religion) or DC 20 Spellcraft check reveals the sigils as dangerous.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

✖ Sphere Trap: CR 8; magic device; touch trigger; no reset; multiple traps (one inflict critical wounds and one mass inflict light wounds); spell effect (inflict critical wounds, caster level 10th, DC 17 Will save half damage, 4d8+10 damage); spell effect (mass inflict light wounds, caster level 10th, DC 19 Will save half damage, 1d8+10 damage); Search DC 19; Disable Device DC 30.

✖ Sphere Trap: CR 6; magic device; proximity trigger; anyone passing within 5 ft. triggers the spell; no reset; spell effect (slay living, caster level 10th, death, DC 17 Fort save to take only 3d6+10 damage); Search DC 19; Disable Device DC 29.

✖ Sphere Trap: CR 5; magic device; touch trigger; no reset; multiple traps (one bestow curse and one poison); spell effect (bestow curse [–4 to all attacks, saves and checks], caster level 10th, DC 17 Will save avoid) followed by spell effect (poison, caster level 10th, DC 18 Fort save avoid); Search DC 19; Disable Device DC 29.

✖ Sphere Trap: CR 4; magic device; touch trigger; only triggers when a sahuagin, human or large monster is present; no reset; multiple traps (one poison and one contagion); spell effect (poison, caster level 10th, DC 18 Fort save avoid), followed by spell effect (contagion, caster level 10th, demon fever, DC 17 Fort save avoid); Search DC 19; Disable Device DC 29.

The search DC and encounter level are low because Xiloscient has made no attempt to hide the presence and nature of these devices.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 5

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the Search DC of the sphere traps by 10 each. To decrease the challenge, separate the traps into four separate areas throughout the Region.

L36 THROUGH L44. AIR FILLED CAVERNS

A section of the dungeon cells and traps sank far below the surface during the earthquake, but its residual magic keeps it free of water. The aquatic creatures of the lake avoid this area, so it has lain largely undisturbed for years. While the prisoners died long ago, some of the traps created to keep them imprisoned still function.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every two hours the PCs explore these sections. If the PCs are in the waters surrounding the Air-Filled Caverns, use the Random Encounter chart for the Central Waters.

1d20	Encounter
1	The vivid mosaics surrounding the PCs move whenever they glance away.
2	Strange orbs of red and blue light drift from beneath the floor and dance through the air for several minutes before disappearing.
3-12	Nothing.
13	A minor electrical current charges a doorway, inflicting 1d6 upon anyone passing through it.
14	The ceiling in this passage is on the verge of collapse, and even the vibrations of someone walking beneath it causes a chunk of stone to fall. Collapsing ceiling: CR 3; mechanical device; proximity trigger; does not reset; multiple targets (anyone within the passage); 4d6 damage, Ref save DC 15 for half; Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 20.
15	Three medium vipers dwell in the cracks of this room. Their heads are massively deformed; these venomous creatures were once common fish.
16	A wraith, the barest remnant of a former prisoner, dwells within this room and attacks anyone who enters.
17	Stone hands emerge from the walls and attack the PCs. Stone hands trap: CR 3; magical device; proximity trigger (alarm); 2 stone hands; attack any creature within 5 ft; +12 melee attack (2d6 damage); Search DC 25; Disable Device DC 25.
18	The skeleton of a massive humanoid lies on the floor of this room, dozens of its ribs snapped. A foul odor still surrounds the bones. Anyone touching the corpse may contract a foul disease (demon flu, contact, DC 20, incubation 1 day, damage 1d6 Con).
19	A gray fog (demon fog, inhale poison, DC 25, Initial/Secondary 1d6 Wis) fills this room, seeping from a crack within the ground.
20	A strong earthquake rocks the foundations of this room for a minute. While there are no immediately visible effects, the vault door in room L44 cracks. Water begins seeping into the crack, and the door shatters in 1d20 minutes.

ROOM L36. ENTRYWAY

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

Far beneath the water's surface, a jagged opening in the southern side of an enormous rock outcropping reveals a marble-tiled hallway. The hallway is cocked to the right and faint green light leaks from between the tiles. Forty feet down the passageway is a large room, empty and featureless, but the light quivers and shimmers... oddly.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The last 10 ft. of the passageway is no longer at an angle. The odd light is the result of a magical barrier between the Room and the hallway. A DC 20 Spot check reveals the barrier's existence, but it does not impede movement through it. Detect magic reveals faint abjuration

Room L36 contains amberspore fumes, and the barrier was created to ensure the gas did not spread. The barrier also keeps water out of this portion of the ruins, so Rooms L36 through L44 are all filled with stale air rather than water. A similar barrier covers the doorway leading out of the north end of the Room.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air

Tactics: The entire Room is filled with amberspore fumes. These fumes inflict little damage, but cause the victim's voice to modulate in pitch, causing spells with verbal components some difficult to cast.

Amberspore Fumes Trap: CR 6; mechanical device; location trigger; automatic reset; multiple targets (anyone breathing within the room); poison (Inhaled, DC 20 resists, initial damage 1 Con/secondary damage 0 Con. If the victim fails either Fort save, his voice raises one octave and he gains +10% arcane spell failure. This effect lasts for 2 hours.); Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 34.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 6

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the Constitution damage of the amberspore fumes trap to 1d4 initial and secondary. To decrease the challenge, reduce the save DC of the amberspore fumes by 4.

ROOM L37. SCORPION ROOM

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

The walls, ceiling and floor of this room are covered in an intricate mosaic. The mosaic's faded shades of scarlet, azure, emerald, and topaz comprise hundreds of stylized scorpions, each scorpion the exact same shape, all curled next to one another with no space in between them. Each scorpion's eyes gleam black. An archway engraved with crows winging from the floor to the top on the northern wall leads to a passageway. Another room lies to the south through an archway carved with diamond shapes.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The entire mosaic upon the floor is an elaborate trap. Each of the scorpions is roughly three inches wide and six inches long. Anyone who steps upon the body, limbs or tail of a scorpion is fine, but anyone stepping upon the jade eyes triggers a spike that thrusts out of the floor into the foot of the victim. These spikes are poisoned and may cause the person to fall.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Someone walking carefully across the Room only has a 50% chance to encounter one of the spikes per round, 25% if they state they are avoiding the eyes. Walking carelessly increases this to a 85% chance of hitting a spike each round. Anyone pierced through the foot must make a Dexterity or Tumbling check (DC 10) or fall, which triggers another 1d6 spikes (1d4 if the character is Small).

Jade-Eyed Scorpion Trap: CR 4; mechanical; touch trigger; automatic reset; jade spikes (attack +13, 1d4 plus speed reduced by one half until treated [as caltrop]); poison (rock scorpion venom, DC 18 Fortitude resists, 1d6 Dex/1d6 Dex); Search DC 20; Disable Device DC 20.

Treasure: PCs succeeding at a DC 40 Search check find a small key wedged between two stones in the floor. Black, gray, and red the key is covered in rust and is almost imperceptible from the rest of the floor. An elf carried here and died many years ago. His body removed, the key fell between two stones and was lost. The key leads to the any of the locked watchtower doors in Region H (Room H12).

EL: 4

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the spikes' attack to +17. To make the encounter less difficult, reduce the DC of the Fort save to 15.

L39. JADE CELL

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

This room contains a dozen lengths of jade chain that still chain a strange eight-limbed skeleton to the walls. The skeleton lies in the middle of the room on a vast acid burn that scars the floor. Various places on the wall have also been pitted by acid.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This was once the prison of an ice devil with a strong vulnerability to jade. During the landslide that crushed these cells, the ice devil was crushed to death. Now only the devil's bones remain.

Encounter Condition: Cursed 8, Desecration 4, Fear 20, Haunted, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 5

Tactics: The tortured emotions of the ice devil haunt the Room. Just spending time here should make the PCs uneasy.

Treasure: There are twelve jade chains, each worth 300 gp. They are magically hardened as long as they are part of the prison (hardness 12, hit points 12, Break DC 30) and any attempt to break them triggers an alarm spell (audible version).

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

L39. EYEBALL TRAP

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

The long passageway ends at an archway; the air here is dry and warm. A relief of a spiral staircase is carved into the archway, and a long procession of cowed figures climb endlessly up each side of the carving. In the room, hundreds of small hemispheres carved in the likeness of jeweled eyes — blue, red, green, black, yellow, purple, and hazel — cover every surface. A humanoid skeleton lies face up just before the archway; four daggers protrude from its chest.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The skeleton is the mummified body of a long-dead lizard man, a scout for a dead tribe. When it reached the archway, it triggered a trap which caused a loud noise behind it. It turned in time for four blades launched from down the hallway to smash into its chest. Fortunately, for the PCs, the trap must be manually reset and it never was.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The eyes within the Room still hold danger. Anyone entering the Room immediately gains the attention of hundreds of jeweled eyes. The immediate effect is per eyebite and dispel magic, and several eyes (1d6 per person within the Room) emit rays of burning light at anyone present. The trap does not trigger against invisible beings.

• Eye Trap: CR 9; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset; hidden bypass (invisible); multiple targets (anyone present in the room); multiple traps; spell effect (eyebite, 15th level wizard, Fortitude save DC 20 to avoid) followed by spell effect (dispel magic, 10th level wizard) followed by 1d6 +8 ranged touch attacks (ray of burning light, 2d6 fire damage); Search DC 15, Disable Device DC 35.

Treasure: The daggers imbedded in the lizardman are rusted beyond usability and his equipment has long since rotted away. The Room contains over 5,000 jeweled orbs worth 1d4 × 50 gp each. One full minute and a DC 30 Disable Device check is required to remove each orb without destroying it, and every attempt to remove an eye triggers the trap. There is also a hidden compartment in each archway leading to the Room (Search check, DC 31). Pressing directly above the compartment opens it to reveal a ring of invisibility. Each compartment is protected by a glyph of warding set to trigger if touched by any non-good being.

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the number of rays to 2d6 per person. To decrease the challenge, reduce the eyebite to 12th level, save DC 19, remove the dispel magic effect and reduce the damage per ray to 1d4.

L40. CERULEAN CHAINS

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

This room is tiled entirely in swirled blue marble. A massive barbed iron chain lies in the center of the room, each link a foot long. A jagged rift in the eastern wall reveals a crude passageway leading away into the rock.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The chain links are barbed, designed to gouge into the flesh when the chain is wrapped around a prisoner. The demonic creature imprisoned here died during the earthquake and its body crumbled to dust. The earthquake also tore the rift in the wall; it leads to a dead-end tunnel.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: This Room's imprisoning magic still functions. Anyone who touches the chain Room triggers it to animate and attack. The chain lashes out like a snake and wraps around its victim, its barbed hooks piercing his flesh. While the chain imprisons a victim, it does not release him or attack anyone else. To escape, an Escape Artist check (DC 30) or a Strength check (DC 30) is required. The chain links drop to the floor after one minute if they did not capture anything or are presently empty.

• Cerulean Chain Trap: CR 4; magical device; touch trigger; automatic reset; +6 touch attack (2d6+6 damage per round unless the victims ceases struggling for two rounds); Search DC 15, Disable Device DC 25.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 4

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the chains trigger whenever anyone passes within 5 ft. of them and can attack multiple people. To decrease the challenge, reduce the check DCs to escape to 18.

L41. STAIRWAYS TO NOWHERE

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

Dozens of staircases fill the room ahead of you, twisting and turning about each other. However, many of the staircases seem to ignore gravity, rising to the right or left rather than into the air. Doors are scattered randomly and at random alignments, horizontally, vertically and diagonally. The chaos of this room completely defies logic and intuition.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The Room's appearance is a vast programmed image (caster level 20) that constantly bedazzles and confuses the eye. Entering triggers a powerful maze trap that creates the bewildering array of stairs and door visible from outside the Room. This Room's purpose was to confuse escaping prisoners while guards were summoned.

Note: Should the PCs open the vault door (see Room L44), the maze fills with water as well.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Maze trap: CR 10; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (maze, 20th level wizard); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, a phantasmal killer spell, caster level 10th, save DC 16, triggers on the third round anyone remains in the Room. To decrease the challenge, the maze does not activate once the vault door is opened (see Room L44).

L42. COLUMNS

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

Six columns, each 3 ft. in diameter and ending in a sharpened tip, now rest on their sides, scattered throughout the room. The room is tiled in white marble, but black pools surround two of the fallen columns. The room's ceiling is a forest of pointed columns, poised jaggedly above your heads.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room once held grave dangers, but now it has been defanged. The Room was trapped so that when anyone stepped within it, an enormous pointed column of rock would thrust down to impale the person. The column would then retract into the ceiling as the trap reset itself. The mechanisms were damaged during the earthquake, and now the remaining columns only descend a few feet or do not move at all.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

♣ Spear Trap: CR 0, mechanical device; location trigger (the area directly in front of the southern entrance); no reset (now); column (attack +20; 3d6 damage; descends only 3 ft.); Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 10.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

L43. GUARD ROOM

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

This room contains several odd-shaped chairs and a high table. Empty weapon racks upon the walls imply that soldiers were once stationed here. The table blocks a cupboard door in the wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This empty Room was indeed once a guard post. The guards remained near the cell containing one of the most dangerous prisoners in this area. After his death, the post was abandoned.

The table is bolted down on one leg and must be moved before the cupboard will open. Any living being who touches the cupboard triggers an obvious fireball trap. An equally obvious mechanical bypass to the trap exists — a button on the bottom of the table — but the bypass is actually a well-concealed trap. Pressing the button triggers a sunburst spell and causes the table to slam back against the wall, injuring anyone standing in front of the cupboard. The safest way to open the cupboard is to merely allow the fireball to trigger.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

♣ Fireball Trap: CR 3, magical device; touch trigger (opening the cupboard); automatic reset (10 rounds); spell effect (fireball, 6th level wizard, 6d6 fire); Search DC 20; Disable Device DC 20 (use the button beneath the table).

♣ Button Trap: CR 8, magical device; touch trigger (button beneath table); automatic reset (1 round); spell effect (sunburst, 15th level cleric, 6d6 plus blindness, Reflex save DC 22 for half damage and no blindness) followed by Atk +15 melee (2d6+3, table slam); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

Treasure: The blade is part of the shattered watrazor (see Room L3). It acts as a +2 silver spear; any damage inflicted by the spear cannot be regenerated, but can be healed normally. The blade glows when pointed towards the watrazor in the stone chest (Room L61).

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the DC of the Disable Device for the Button traps by 3. To decrease the challenge, the button trap is more obvious than the designers thought, reduced its Spot DC by 8 and the Disable Device DC by 3.

L44. VAULT DOOR

The depth of this encounter is 250 ft. below the surface.

An enormous circular steel door stands shut and sealed before you. Three thick crossbars and twelve sturdy locks remain in place. Stern looking runes are carved above the door. The massive hinges and other mechanisms show no trace of rust or decay.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The runes above the door proclaim, in Celestial: "The prison of Krukak, once prince of demons and scourge of the Abyss." This powerful creature was one of the most dangerous prisoners in this portion of the dungeon. Massive locks, crossbars, and an antimagic field prevented his escape. However, all these safeguards failed when an earthquake crushed his cell under tons of rocks.

Although he is no longer here, the door to Krukak's cell is still perilous. The twelve locks are each trapped and require an Open Lock check (DC 20), and the three crossbars each require a Strength check (DC 25). If the PCs then haul the door open (Strength check, DC 28), the seal breaks and the door slams open as the lake rushes in to fill the air-filled section. Anyone opening the door as it bursts open takes 8d6 damage as they are pounded into the wall and are stunned for 1d4 rounds: a Reflex save (DC 28) results in half damage and no stun.

Rooms L37 through Room L44 flood at a rate of one Room every three rounds, in the following order: L44, L42, L41, L43, L39, L40, L37, L38. Anyone present in these Rooms as they flood with water is battered for 2d6 damage each round unless they make a Strength check (DC 15) to hold onto something solid or a Swim check (DC 23) to ride out the water.

♣ Lock Trap: CR 5, mechanical device; touch trigger; mechanical reset; blade (+16, 2d6 damage and loss of 1d3 dexterity for fine motor activities until healed); Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 30.

Encounter Condition: Spell Resistance 50

Tactics: An antimagic field (caster level 18) fills the entire Room and encompasses the door as well.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the Rooms fill up at a rate of one per round. To decrease the challenge, increase the DC of the Open Locks check to DC 30, making it harder to open the vault door.

L45 THROUGH L59. MADOWLIELOREN

A small island thrusts out from beneath the waves in the eastern portion of the lake. This area once held an enormous cell imprisoning a massive demon several hundred feet in length, but while the substructure was strengthened to withstand the weight of the creature, its roof was unable to withstand the force of an earthquake. The Rooms collapsed, crushing the demon beneath tons of rock. A shallow shelf extends out from the island for 10 to 30 ft. before falling off steeply. To the west of the island, a plateau filled with an air-filled cave complex lies 250 ft. underwater (see Room L36), but in the other directions, the drop-off beyond the shelf falls straight to the lake bottom.

Several hundred years ago, elfen forces from Region H invaded the lake, hoping to defeat the evil sahuagin. During the invasion, amidst the growing corruption and evil of the lake itself, they discovered this small island. Growing there was a seedling of the great tree they revered. Despite the elfen losses in the war and their inability to eradicate the sahuagin, the elves sent a group of elfen outcasts to the island to care for the sapling. Since that time, additional groups of elves were exiled here. Some were outcasts, criminals, or malcontents, while others were merely unlucky. Regardless, all knew that the only way off the island was to serve for a full century, although none ever completed a full term. In fact, most of the elves failed to complete the crossing to the island before their boat was destroyed by one of the predators who dwell in the waters surrounding the island. Those who did reach the island lived meager lives, constantly patrolling for incursions from the foul hordes in the lake and erecting magical wards and protections to forestall the evil of the lake.

Things took a turn for the worse a few years ago when Himo Xiloscient, the island's highest ranking cleric, snuck away for a few hours of peace swimming off the eastern end of the island. An aboleth captured and enslaved Xiloscient, and sent him back to the island to destroy the wards, rip down the protections, and desecrate the holy places. Unable to resist, the priest obeyed and returned to his new master.

While these acts destroyed the elves' defenses against the lake's taint, this was not immediately clear. Physically nothing had changed and few had the sorcerous power to see the danger. The only elf capable of restoring the wards was the one who had destroyed them. The final straw came when a mining project unearthed a huge corrupted black diamond; it accelerated the taint's progress and the elves quickly lost their battle. Many lost their innocence and turned to evil; others lost their minds or will to live. Now the elves act erratically and even violently towards each other while their numbers dwindle.

If the PCs destroy the taint (see Room L9), the elves do not grow more corrupted, but too much time has passed for them to recover. Their only refuge lies in the grave.

The current around the island moves from the north to the south, moving more quickly on the western side of the island where the whirlpool in the center of the lake influences it. There the current moves objects to the south 10 ft. per round and to the west 5 ft. per round. On the eastern side where an upward current is dominant, the water only moves swimmers and objects 5 ft. per round to the south and upwards 5 ft. per round. The cavern roof here is only 50 to 60 ft. above the surface of the water.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every hour the PCs explore these sections.

1d20	Encounter
1	A high-pitched scream echoes across the island.
2	Three fat fish drag themselves across the island with tentacles that sprout from within their mouths. The creatures are mindless and ignore the heroes.
3–4	Twisted remains of several elves rest upon the ground. Each body contains malformed limbs, strange fur growths and other deformities.
5–11	Nothing.
12	An elf walks up to the PCs, points at them and begins cackling. The obviously deranged elf follows the PCs for 15 minutes.
13	Two knee-high bushes (see room L49) shaped into the forms of miniature bears stare towards each other. ♣ Bush Trap: CR 3; magical device; proximity trigger (alarm); 2 bear bushes; attack any creature within 5 ft; +14 melee attack (2d6 damage); attacks until the bush is destroyed (AC 12, hardness 0, hp 8); does not attack elves or half-elves; Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 15.
14	A dozen elfen skeletons roaming from Room L58 mindlessly attack the PCs.
15–16	3 elves (see Room L46) rush towards the PCs, screaming threats and waving weapons above their heads. The elves fight to the death against the vicious moss people they see.
17	3 dire bats (hp 30) swoop from high above the island and attack the PCs.
18	3 scraggs lurk in the waves near the island. Upon sight of the PCs, they lumber out and attack.
19	A young female elf (see Room L53) rushes screaming past the PCs while Galanolend (see Room L53) follows right behind. Before he can catch her, the female stumbles into one of the PCs and quickly hides behind him while Galanolend demands her return. He knows she is very ill and wants her to remain with companions at the Mushroom.
20	Nalathe Sionmodel and two companions (see room L59) search for any items of value left behind by the elves driven mad. She attacks any humans encountered.

L45. NORTHERN BEACH

This encounter occurs above the surface.

Faint light from the center of the island casts long shadows over the beach upon the northern end of this small island. White-capped waves crash against the beach. A series of 8-foot-tall walls divides the shore from the low terrain beyond it. Arrow slits are evenly spaced along the walls, but some are stuffed with red cloth and the tops of the battlements are wreathed with withered flowers. Strange footprints meander in and out of the surf, disappearing into the water.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The beach extends in a shallow shelf for 30 ft. into the water before dropping steeply. The footprints are long and clawed with extremely pronounced pads at the front of the foot and minor webbing between the toes. A Tracking check (DC 30) can identify that these are the footprints of a scrag, an aquatic troll. The scraggs came ashore a few hours ago in search of prey, but found nothing and returned to their lair in the waters north of here.

The elves of Madowlieloren built these walls to prevent aquatic creatures from reaching the island's interior. In their current indisposition, several of the elves decorated the wall to improve its appearance and then abandoned the defenses. An enchantment upon the walls causes them to glow brightly if touched (detect magic shows this as faint abjuration), an old method of summoning guards.

L46. STANDING STONES

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

Ten boulders, each 8 feet tall, thrust out of the ground here, one foot apart. The boulders form a line and act as a barrier. Green light from the south illuminates the southern face of the rocks, but they are devoid of markings or tool signs. The light does reveal a humanoid leg protruding from behind one of the stones. Low giggles and the sound of smashing rocks come from the far side of the standing stones. As you peer around the rock, you see a group of three elves giggling and hurling head-sized stones at a fourth elf. The female elf's throw is true, but the target nimbly dodges aside and the rock smashes into one of the boulders. Two more elves lie upon the ground with shattered limbs and skulls. All of the elves are dressed in tattered clothing and carry battered long swords in their hands.

Initial Attitude: Playfully hostile. The elves greet any outsiders with glee and then immediately hurl boulders at them.

Encounter: The three elves (hp 21 each) blame the fourth elf, a sorcerer (hp 12), for failing to protect them from the taint and are playfully attempting to kill the sorcerer with three enchanted boulders they discovered. Each boulder is a foot in diameter, weighs only a few pounds, and inflicts terrible damage when it strikes someone. The elves are unable to converse rationally and continue chattering cheerfully while they attack.

The ground around the stones is a thin layer of loose soil atop rock, without a blade of grass or moss in sight. The standing stones were part of the defensive fortifications of the island, but building even this much without the use of magic was a tremendous effort. Now the foundations for the standing stones have deteriorated. If the boulders strike any standing stone three times, that stone topples over. Characters standing behind a falling stone must make a Reflex save (DC 15) to avoid it, or take 6d6 damage.

Tactics: There are three boulders and the elves each grab one on their initiative (as a move-equivalent action, keeping their long swords in their off hands) and then hurl it at the sorcerer. If the PCs have a boulder, the elves attack with long swords to get it back. Upon spotting the PCs, the elf sorcerer points at them and shouts, "Get them!" From that point on, all of the elves throw stones at the PCs.

The entire combat should be run as a demented blood sport with the elves providing colorful, detached commentary. For example, if the boulder hits someone, the elves remark, "He really got behind it that time! Yes, he'll feel that tomorrow!"

Treasure: Each of the elves (including the dead ones) wears 1d3 pieces of jewelry worth 1d20 gp each. The only other treasures are the boulders, masonry fragments from an ancient trap. This portion of the trap bobbed to the surface recently and washed up on shore. The stones are head-sized and polished black marble, but weigh only a couple of pounds and float in water. Despite this, they retain their full mass when hurled. The stones count as exotic weapons and strike for 3d6 damage plus Strength modifier. There is a 10% chance after each attack that the boulder cracks in two and loses all magical effects.

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add an additional level of fighter to the elves. To decrease the challenge, the elves have a -3 circumstance penalty to their Spot checks.

L47. THE DOCKS

This encounter occurs above the surface.

A seamless pink granite jetty stretches out from the island towards the west. It measures 10 ft. wide, 60 ft. long, and at least a foot thick, and rests on thick columns of the same material. A small single-masted vessel, elegantly constructed of beautiful woods but listing badly, is tied up to the dock. 50 ft. to the south are the foundations of another granite jetty, its granite twisted and broken as if it had been ripped apart. A shattered bronze lantern still faintly glows at the foot of a stone wall 10 ft. south of the ruined dock.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: These docks were constructed from a portion of the dungeon which the elves raised from beneath the water. At one time, the elves fished and dove from the docks, but this ended when the kraken destroyed the southern dock and devoured over a dozen elves. The remains of the jetty lie upon the plateau far below along with the foundations for the remaining dock. In addition, since the elves fear the water and possess few nautical skills, their sole surviving ship is in terrible condition. Anyone examining it discovers that the sails and ropes are fouled, and there is a 5 ft. hole in its hull that has filled one hold with water. If untied from the jetty, the boat sinks. In all other regards, the ships are identical to the ones in Room L70. A continual flame spell upon the bronze lantern provides light.

L48. THE MINE OF CORRUPTION

This encounter occurs above the surface.

Mounds of rubble and soil surround a narrow cave piercing deeply into a hill. A faint lavender light illuminates the cave's interior. Two female elves before its entrance shout warnings and insults at the top of their lungs. A male elf stands to the side and stares straight up at the ceiling, his attention fixed on something you cannot see. The elves' tattered finery, decrepit leather armor and jewelry do not conceal their sores, scars, and boils.

If anyone enters the cave, read the following:

A strange lavender glow fills the interior of this small cave, 3 ft. across and 6 ft. deep. Although the walls appear to be layers of black obsidian and white bone, the source of the illumination is a single black gem almost three inches across nestled in the layers.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The two female elves (hp 24 each) believe they are surrounded by vicious demons intent on destroying them, and that the PCs are merely more of the same. They fight to the death against the PCs while shouting out insults based upon the hallucinations they are witnessing. For example, the elves may refer to the tentacles, bat wings, flaming skull, or six arms of their opponent, a normal human. The male elf (hp 18) believes he is watching a strange light show over the island, the product of the demonic attack upon a strange pillar hovering above the island, but he fights with his companions while occasionally glancing up at the hallucination.

The cave burrows into the compressed layers of bone and stone where rock crushed one of the demonic prisoners to death. Full of hatred and dark energy, the creature's heart coalesced into the black diamond the elven miners uncovered. Anyone exposed to the diamond's emanations becomes evil. The elves suspected the diamond's dangers, but could not destroy it in time.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The three elves focus their attacks upon a single PC for the first two rounds, then, believing they have defeated that foe, they all switch to a different new target for the rest of the fight. They constantly shout insults and advice to each other. All of their remarks convey the impression that the elves are winning a battle against tremendous odds, regardless of the reality of the situation. They continue to talk to each other even if one or more of them dies, and fight against empty space if the PCs walk away from the battle.

Trap: Black Diamond: CR 6; magical device; proximity trigger (always on, onset delay 20 minutes); multiple targets (anyone within 120 ft.); anyone within 120 ft. of the black diamond makes corruption checks twice as often (this power only functions while within this region of the dungeon) and all good-aligned characters with this area suffer a -1 profane penalty to all attacks, saves and checks; Search DC 30; Disable Device N/A. (Remove curse, dispel evil or similar spells may be able to destroy the black diamond.)

Treasure: The elves each carry 1d6 pieces of jewelry worth 2d6 gp each. The glowing black diamond in the wall (see Black Diamond Trap for more details) is worth 2,000 gp (detect magic reveals a strong transmutation [evil] aura).

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the elves use more unified tactics and an additional 3 elves with identical statistics appear at the end of round two. These additional elves were asleep behind one of the hills and rush to the aid of their companions. L49. THE SAPLING

This encounter occurs above the surface.

An oak sapling grows here, in the lee of a tall bluff. A dim green glow dances across its leaves and three small limbs. A pair of muscular elves in leather harnesses are sculpting the bushes surrounding the sapling into the shapes of exotic animals such as dragons and elephants. The elves are covered in dark patches of rough skin and their hair is the shade of oak leaves. They cut the bushes with precision and care, only taking tiny snips from each branch, although fresh blood weeps from their eyes and covers their cheeks. A marble path of glittering red, green, and blue tiles surrounds the garden of crushed rubble and bare stone.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This sapling from the great tree the elves tend in Region H is the entire reason this small colony exists. Once they discovered it, the elves of Region H exiled the inhabitants of this island to tend to the sapling. However, neither group realized that the sapling is not truly descended from the elven great tree. Instead, it grew from a tree that once served as a prison. The dungeon collapse crushed that tree, but one of its roots grew up through the rubble and sprouted. The faint glow that surrounds the sapling is part of the enchantment that sustains the tree by draining the life force from any living creature who approaches it.

The bushes are also offshoots of the tree prison. They do not glow, but they do animate when a non-elf steps near them.

These two elves (hp 30 each) built the marble path around the area to mark the boundaries of the effect and now, in hallucinogenic fogs, they are sculpting the bushes. Since elves originally created the tree prison centuries ago for the celestials, they are immune to the effects of the traps. However, the Region has corrupted both elves: their flesh has developed the texture of oak, providing them with natural armor +4, damage reduction 5/slashing and vulnerability to fire.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The elves ignore any intruders until they step within the marble path, at which time they attack with their guisarmes, using their weapons' reach to drive the intruders towards the tree or bushes. They use their weapons to trip people near the bush traps. The two elves keep close to each other so that they can guard the other, using Improved Trip and Combat Reflexes to make it dangerous to approach them.

Traps: There are two traps within this Room. While the light of the sapling drains the life from anyone who steps within the marble path, the bushes come alive and attack anyone within the same area. Both traps have no effect upon elves or half-elves.

♣ Tree Trap: CR 5; magical device; proximity trigger; always on; onset delay 2 rounds; multiple targets; anyone within the area of the marble tile path takes 2d6 damage per round, Will save DC 18 for half damage, while the tree gains an equivalent amount of hit points; this trap is disabled when the tree is destroyed (AC 12, hardness 6, hp 15); has no effect upon elves and half-elves; Search DC 25; Disable Device (see above).

♣ Bush Trap: CR 1; magical device; proximity trigger (alarm); 5 bushes (hippogriff, elephant, hydra, dragon, and minotaur) attack any creature within 5 ft.; +8 melee attack (2d6 damage); attacks until the bush is destroyed (AC 12, hardness 3, hp 8); does not attack elves or half-elves; Search DC 15; Disable Device DC 15.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, both traps affect elves normally except for those descended from the elves who originally planted the tree prison. This means that the elves who live here are immune to its effects, but other elves are affected normally. Further, reduce the onset time of the tree trap to 1 round. To decrease the challenge, the elves are hampered by the hallucinations during the fight and treat all opponents as if they possessed partial cover.

♣ Oak Elves, Ftr4; CR 4; Medium humanoid (elf); HD 4d10+4; hp 30; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 12, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +4; Grp +7; Atk +8 melee (2d4+6/×3, guisarme); Full Atk +8 melee (2d4+6/×3, guisarme); SA —; SQ DR 5/slashing, elven traits, vulnerability to fire; AL CN; SV Fort +5, Ref +3, Will +1; Str 16, Dex 14, Con 13, Int 8, Wis 10, Cha 7.

Skills and Feats: Craft (gardening) +6, Listen +2, Search +1, Spot +2; Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Improved Trip, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (guisarme), Weapon Specialization (guisarme).

Elf Traits: Immunity to sleep spells and effects, and a +2 racial saving throw bonus against enchantment spells or effects.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: Guisarme, dagger, leather harness (+1 AC).

L50. THE BLUFF

This encounter occurs above the surface.

A rocky bluff that rises above the small island is topped by thick stalagmites that give it the appearance of jagged fangs. A dim green light illuminates the western side of the bluff from below. The entire area on top of the bluff is devoid of life. There is a dark shadow nestled among the stalagmites.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The hill is 20 ft. above the rest of the island, enough height to provide anyone here with a view of the entire island spread out below them. Of course, anyone on the bluff is also visible to everyone on the island. The dark shadow is a cave entrance that leads 40 ft. down to a lightless cavern 50 ft. in diameter. The bottom 10 ft. of the cavern is filled with lake water which washed in through another cave opening in the eastern wall of the cavern. The cavern from the lake is visible from within the water. The bluff's eastern cliff-face is craggy and twisted, providing an easy climb (Climb check, DC 12).

Three scrag (hp 63 each) in the cavern have been torturing an elf they captured a few hours ago. Anyone on top of the bluff with a light source immediately gains the scrag's attention; they kill the elf and hide in the shadows of the cavern. If anyone enters the cavern, the scrag attack. Falling into the cavern inflicts 2d3 non-lethal damage. If the PCs do not enter the cavern, the scrag wait for 5 minutes and then pursue the PCs.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The scrag launch an attack as soon as one character reaches the cavern, attacking the first person in the water before moving on to the weakest party member. One scrag grapples the first opponent and drags him underwater while another attacks from behind, attempting to rend the victim. The scrag know that they continue regenerating and are safe from fire so long as they stay beneath the water, so they fight fearlessly to the death.

If the scrag follow the PCs out of the water, they bull rush from the top of the bluff, grab the weakest character, and run for the lake.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the scrag have a net they stole from the elves. One scrag climbs up to the top of the bluff as the PCs approach, entangles a PC with the net, and drags him into the cavern. To decrease the challenge, reduce the scrag's hit points by 5.

♣ Scrag (aquatic trolls): CR 5; Large giant (aquatic); HD 6d8+36; hp 63; Init +2; Spd 20 ft., swim 40 ft.; AC 16, touch 11, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +4; Grp +14; Atk +9 melee (1d6+6, claw); Full Atk +9 melee (1d6+6, 2 claws) and +4 melee (1d6+3, bite); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rend 2d6+9; SQ Darkvision 90 ft., low-light vision, regeneration 5, scent; AL CE; SV Fort +11, Ref +4, Will +3; Str 23, Dex 14, Con 23, Int 6, Wis 9, Cha 6.

Skills and Feats: Listen +5, Spot +6; Alertness, Iron Will, Track.

Rend (Ex): If a scrag hits with both claw attacks, it latches onto the opponent's body and tears the flesh. This attack automatically deals an additional 2d6+9 points of damage.

Regeneration (Ex): Fire and acid deal normal damage to a scrag. If a scrag loses a limb or body part, the lost portion regrows in 3d6 minutes. The creature can reattach the severed member instantly by holding it to the stump. Scrag regenerate only if mostly immersed in water.

L51. TRAINING FIELD

This encounter occurs above the surface.

Jagged rocks surround a cleared area littered with long swords, daggers, bows, and arrows. Bales of seaweed at the northern end of the clearing show numerous arrow holes and slash marks. The entire area is covered in footprints, but few of them look recent. Several dark glass globes a foot across surmount the poles that surround the area.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This was once a training field, but the elves used it infrequently after Xiloscient disappeared. Many elves no longer saw a reason to carry weapons, for their fate was certain, and simply abandoned their weapons here. There are six long swords, seven daggers, four longbows, and several dozen arrows scattered around the clearing, all in poor repair. The longbows have no strings and have clearly been neglected for months. Recent footprints simply cross this area without stopping.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: One of the swords is a +1 long sword, and one of the daggers is a cold iron dagger. The rest of the weapons are ill cared for and worth 20% of their normal value. Any time any of the weapons is used, including the magical one, it breaks on a roll of a natural 1 or 2. If a weapon is cleaned and oiled (Craft [weaponsmith, or bowyer for the longbows] check, DC 15) it breaks only on a natural 1. The bladed weapons would need to be re-tempered in a forge to remove the break chance entirely, while the bows will always remain fragile. The glass globes contain the remains of phosphorescent fish. They once provided light, but needed to be recharged weekly and have been neglected for months.

corrupting influence, the wizard who lived here destroyed all of his spell books. He did not notice that his companion hid two scrolls in the empty scabbard upon the wall (see Treasure).

The bonfire to the south of the village was set by elves who returned to the village after the attack. It contained the remains of texts, tapestries, tools, weapons and other treasures, as well as elven bones. The survivors decided to burn their prized possessions as an offering to the gods, and destroyed everything of value they found. Four of them even chose to leap into the flames rather than endure the Region's madness. A few pages of a journal somehow escaped the flames, and detail a wizard's conjectures that the corrupting influence of the lake was due to a rift in the lakebed where demonic powers seeped into the water. The wizard believed the process too malevolent to be random, and theorized that the spirit of a dead prisoner inhabited one of the lake's creatures, and therefore if that creature could be eliminated, the lake's corrupting influence would cease.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Characters moving about within the huts might cut themselves on the shards of glass and bamboo.

L53. THE MUSHROOM

This encounter occurs above the surface.

An enormous mushroom of sickly gray with large red splotches sways slightly in the faint breeze. The mushroom is 10 ft. high and 15 ft. in diameter, though the underside of the cap is only 3 ft. off the ground, and its trunk is 10 ft. across. Eight elves huddle beside the mushroom, clutching weapons and staring crazily. Beneath the elves' tattered mail or leather armor you can see boils, cracked skin oozing blood, and harsh spikes. Four of the elves hold flaming long swords while the others carry bows.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: These elves gathered to determine the cause of the corruption that swept their community, but fell prey to it themselves. Like their bodies, their minds are warped and they believe dozens of invisible creatures are buzzing near their ears and causing the insanity. Despite the weakened appearance of their flesh, the lake's corruption actually increased their natural armor class by 3 and deadened them to pain, providing DR 1/—.

Iast Galanolend (hp 37) and three elven guards holding swords (hp 21 each) strain to hear the imaginary creatures in order to strike at them. The four elven sorcerers (hp 10 each) carrying bows await the arrival of the creatures' master. Iast has retained enough sanity to realize that the elves stand a better chance of surviving if they stick together, but can find no means of preserving their minds. Iast was the commander of the last expedition to the island, and knows that Jolinaar is responsible for both the death of an elven guard and his own exile. In fact, Iast suspects Jolinaar means to betray the elves, but he could not pass this information along to anyone trustworthy before he was exiled here.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The elves divide into two groups. The four armed with long swords rush forward while the remaining four use their spells and bows to attack anyone not engaged with the others. The elves only have 6 arrows each; when they run out of ammunition, they drop the bows and lurch forward with daggers. Each elf selects an individual and concentrates their attacks upon that person without regard for those around them or other targets.

L52. ELVEN HUTS

This encounter occurs above the surface.

The ruins of twelve small stone huts lie scattered about a gravel clearing only a few yards from the water's edge. Waves wash among the foundations and remnants of a thick wall stone wall.

Fire pits and tripods of spears lie randomly between the huts. Charred areas show the outline of collapsed buildings. Thick patches of mold and fungus have had time to grow on the ruins, though footprints show someone has visited more recently. Each of the stone huts has a dark glass globe mounted above the door, both inside and out, most now shattered.

Glancing inside one of the huts, you see shards of shattered bamboo, as well as larger fragments which were plainly cots, chairs, and other furniture. Everything has been destroyed: soiled clothing, frayed ropes, a variety of broken tools, and the burnt remains of a handful of books.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is where the elves lived for years after they settled the island. The kraken attacked the village a year ago by swimming up close to shore, and with its long tentacles out toppling the buildings. The terrified elves fled into the island's interior.

The huts still hold ropes, nets, long swords, longbows, tools, and fishing gear, but all the abandoned equipment is of poor quality. While there is no longer any record of the name within the village, it was called Madowlieloren ("Wretched Place"). The glass globes contained phosphorescent fish and provided illumination for the village, but their light has failed.

A pile of ashes and burnt leather covers sits in the center of the northernmost hut. Someone tended the fire with the ash-stained long sword beside it and the sword's scabbard hangs upon the wall. Convinced that arcane power made him vulnerable to the Region's

L54. THE ABOLETH'S LAIR

The depth of this encounter is 10 ft. to 300 ft. below the surface.

A steep bluff upon an island thrusts out of the water to the west. A slow moving current passes over sharp rocks just under the lake surface. The water is cool and refreshing, but light does not penetrate the inky depths.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The waters to the east of the island contain one of the most dangerous predators within the lake, a powerful aboleth (hp 98). It was simply a large frog before the lake warped its nature. This creature is responsible for the plight of the elves upon the island. After enslaving Himo Xiloscient, it forced the elven cleric to disable the protection the elves had spent years creating and open a passage to the black diamond. The elves fell prey to the lake's corruption.

The aboleth ambushes the sea life swept south along the cavern wall by the current. It stores its treasure in a shallow cave on the lake bottom: chunks of a Room sheathed in gold that shattered during the earthquake and scattered across the lakebed. The aboleth collects them and gives them to Mahg'Gog as tribute. In exchange, the kraken has granted the aboleth complete control over the water east of the island. Currently ten elves (hp 15 each) wearing tattered leather armor are sorting through the gold within the cave. The lake's corruption caused the elves to create nauseating filth around themselves (the elves and aboleth are immune to this effect). The aboleth has enslaved these unfortunate elves as well as a dire bull shark who guards the northern end of the channel.

Any swimmers or ships which pass through the channel attract the aboleth's interest. The aboleth despises air-breathing creatures and immediately attacks them, though it allows the scraggs to move unmolested through its area.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Before any encounter, the aboleth casts mage armor upon itself and, if it has time, shield immediately before joining battle. It prefers to use its psionic abilities to lure the PCs into its waters and then swims among them so its mucus cloud and slime infects the PCs, a process that ensures that they must remain in the water. The aboleth orders its enslaved dire bull shark to attack at the same time, focusing its attacks on any obvious spell casters and distracting the PCs. The aboleth uses its enslave ability upon the most powerful fighter and retreats, leaving the shark to fend for itself. The aboleth allows several rounds to pass so the PCs lower their guard, and then orders the fighter to attack his companions. The creature returns two rounds later with its elven slaves and attacks those not yet affected by its slime. The elves use aid another maneuvers and flanking to assist the aboleth, sometime taking foolish risks to do so. The aboleth continues using hit and run tactics until its opponents are killed or flee. If reduced to 20 hp or fewer, it retreats to its lair, leaving its slaves to cover its retreat.

Treasure: 50 chunks of twisted and torn gold sheathing, raw value 900 gold pieces. Buried in the pile is a wand of magic missiles (9th level, 14 charges).

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, one of the elven slaves uses the wand of magic missiles from the treasure trove. To decrease the challenge, remove the dire bull shark.

Aboleth: CR 10; Huge aberration (aquatic); HD 8d8+40+3d4+15; hp 98; Init +1; Spd 10 ft., swim 60 ft.; AC 16, touch 9, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +7; Grp +23; Atk +13 melee (1d6+8 plus slime, tentacle); Full Atk +13 melee (1d6+8 plus slime, 4 tentacles); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Enslave, psionics, slime; SQ Aquatic subtype, darkvision 60 ft., mucus cloud; AL LE; SV Fort +8, Ref +4, Will +14; Str 26, Dex 12, Con 20, Int 15, Wis 17, Cha 18.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +19, Knowledge (nature) +13, Knowledge (arcane) +5, Listen +16, Spellcraft +8, Spot +16, Swim +8; Ability Focus (enslave), Alertness, Combat Casting, Iron Will.

Enslave (Su): Three times per day, an aboleth can attempt to enslave any one living creature within 30 ft. The target must succeed on a DC 20 Will save or be affected as though by a dominate person spell (caster level 16th). An enslaved creature obeys the aboleth's telepathic commands until freed by remove curse, and can attempt a new Will save every 24 hours to break free. The control is also broken if the aboleth dies or travels more than 1 mile from its slave. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Psionics (Sp): At will—hypnotic pattern (DC 16), illusory wall (DC 18), mirage arcana (DC 19), persistent image (DC 19), programmed image (DC 20), project image (DC 21), veil (DC 20). Effective caster level 16th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Slime (Ex): A blow from an aboleth's tentacle can cause a terrible affliction. A creature hit by a tentacle must succeed on a DC 19 Fortitude save or begin to transform over the next 1d4+1 minutes, the skin gradually becoming a clear, slimy membrane. An afflicted creature must remain moistened with cool, fresh water or take 1d12 points of damage every 10 minutes. The slime reduces the creature's natural armor bonus by 1 (but never to less than 0). The save DC is Constitution-based.

A remove disease spell cast before the transformation is complete will restore an afflicted creature to normal. Afterward, however, only a heal or mass heal spell can reverse the affliction.

Mucus Cloud (Ex): An aboleth underwater surrounds itself with a viscous cloud of mucus roughly 1 foot thick. Any creature coming into contact with and inhaling this substance must succeed on a DC 19 Fortitude save or lose the ability to breathe air for the next 3 hours. An affected creature suffocates in 2d6 minutes if removed from the water. Renewed contact with the mucus cloud and failing another Fortitude save continues the effect for another 3 hours. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/ 6, Save DC 14 + Spell Level): 0—detect magic, disrupt undead, light, mage hand, resistance; 1st—mage armor, magic missile, shield.

Skills and Feats: An aboleth has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

Enslaved Dire Bull Shark: CR 9; Huge animal (aquatic); HD 18d8+66; hp 150; Init +2; Spd swim 60 ft.; AC 17, touch 10, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +13; Grp +27; Atk Bite +18 melee (2d8+9); Full Atk +18 melee (2d8+9); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA improved grab, swallow whole; SQ keenscent; AL (Always) N; SV Fort +14, Ref +13, Will +12; Str 23, Dex 15, Con 17, Int 1, Wis 12, Cha 10.

(A dire shark has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.)

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a dire shark must hit with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can try to swallow the foe in the following round.

Keen Scent (Ex): A dire shark can notice creatures by scent in a 180-foot radius and can detect blood in the water at a range of up to 1 mile.

Swallow Whole (Ex): A dire shark can try to swallow a grabbed opponent of up to one size smaller by making a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 2d6+6 points of bludgeoning damage plus 1d8+4 points of acid damage per round from the shark's digestive juices. A swallowed creature can cut its way out using a light slashing or piercing weapon by dealing 25 points of damage to the shark's digestive tract (AC 13). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out. A Huge dire shark's gullet can hold 2 Large, 8 Medium or Small, 32 Tiny, 128 Diminutive, or 512 Fine or smaller opponents.

Elf Traits: Immunity to sleep spells and effects, and a +2 racial saving throw bonus against enchantment spells or effects.

Filth (Su): The elves are surrounded by a cloud of corrupt filth and waste, anyone (except another enslaved elf or the aboleth) who comes within 10' must make a Fortitude save (DC 11) or be sickened as long as they remain within the area and for 1d4+1 rounds thereafter. The save is Constitution-based.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: Spear, tattered leather armor (+1 AC).

L55. FISHING SPOT

This encounter occurs above the surface.

A short cliff overlooks the waves pounding the rocks below. The cliff's layered rocks fade from a deep navy blue near the water's surface to a light sky blue near the top. The five pale elves dancing upon the rocks are clearly visible. The soaking wet elves are covered in bruises and sores, with only a few scraps of clothing about their waists.

Initial Attitude: Friendly

Encounter: These 5 elves (hp 21 each) intended to find a means of crossing the water to return to Region H, but recent experiences destroyed their sanity. Now they cannot keep a thought in their head for more than a minute, so they dance and sing about the lake's riches despite the dangers around them.

These elves have little interest in outsiders, but do warn that some of the other elves are under the effect of some sort of spell. The elves continue celebrating, including singing all dialogue rather than speaking, and performing one off-key song after another for 10 rounds after the PCs arrive. At that point, one of the elves screams in agony and shouts that the rocks are burning his feet. The hallucination quickly spreads to the other elves and they all leap into the water to escape the pain. When they emerge moments later, they believe the PCs attacked them and retaliate.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If combat ensues, the elves grapple the PCs among the rocks and drag them into the deep water between the rocks. If the PCs are using distance weapons or are clearly superior, the elves retreat into the waves and forget to swim back until it is too late. The elves have no possessions.

Treasure: N/A

L56. SOUTHERN BEACH

This encounter occurs above the surface.

The waves beat lazily against a rocky beach littered with small boulders. The water drops off steeply only a few yards from shore, so the waves do not crest until they pile up among the rocks. There are few signs of life here beyond a few pockets of lichen. Further down the beach, three horse-sized crustaceans are squatting over a shallow pool, silently squabbling over several large fish and snapping at each other with their claws.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The current on the southern end of the island is far less turbulent than elsewhere and generally washes things out to sea rather than onto the island. Anything submerged within the water moves 5 ft. to the south at the end of the round. Once a day, the tide washes sea life and debris into several shallow pools where the three chuuls (hp 93 each) live. The chuuls sift through the pools and snatch up anything interesting. They do not leave the southern beach for long and rarely venture far from the pools.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The chuuls quickly shamle forward and each engage one of the PCs, focusing on slower PCs first. They attack with their claws and constricting abilities on the first and second rounds before transferring characters to their tentacles. If one succeeds in paralyzing an opponent while another has not succeeded in grappling a PC, the second chuul attacks the other chuul and attempts to seize the victim from him. A PC caught between two chuuls take normal damage from both.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the chuuls' hp by 10; they also wait to attack each other until the PCs are all defeated. To decrease the challenge, the chuuls have inflicted 15 hit points of damage to each other in their squabbling.

✦ Chuul: CR 7; Large aberration (aquatic); HD 11d8+44; hp 93; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; swim 20 ft.; AC 22, touch 12, flat-footed 19; Base Atk +8; Grp +17; Atk +12 melee (2d6+5, claw); Full Atk +12 melee (2d6+5, 2 claws); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA Constrict 3d6+5, improved grab, paralytic tentacles; SQ Amphibious, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to poison; AL CE; SV Fort +7, Ref +6, Will +9; Str 20, Dex 16, Con 18, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 5.

Skills and Feats: Hide +13, Listen +11, Spot +11, Swim +13; Alertness, Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Improved Initiative.

Constrict (Ex): On a successful grapple check, a chuul deals 3d6+5 points of damage.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a chuul must hit with a claw attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict or on its next turn transfer a grabbed opponent to its tentacles.

Paralytic Tentacles (Ex): A chuul can transfer grabbed victims from a claw to its tentacles as a move action. The tentacles grapple with the same strength as the claw but deal no damage. However, they exude a paralytic secretion. Anyone held in the tentacles must succeed on a DC 19 Fortitude save each round on the chuul's turn or be paralyzed for 6 rounds. The save DC is Constitution-based. While held in the tentacles, paralyzed or not, a victim automatically takes 1d8+2 points of damage each round from the creature's mandibles.

Amphibious (Ex): Although chuuls are aquatic, they can survive indefinitely on land.

Skills and Feats: A chuul has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L57. WRECKAGE

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

Tumbled wreckage and smashed planks lie on the rocky beach. Scraps of canvas and snapped ropes drift upon the rolling waves. Six-foot walls separate the beach from the interior of the island, but numerous breaches show where the defenses failed, many of them bearing burn marks.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A Profession (sailor) check (DC 15) identify this flotsam as the remains of a small ship, probably elven in origin, which was destroyed when a creature smashed into it from below and ripped a large hole in the hull. The wreckage contains a few nets and fishing lines, but nothing else of value. If the ship had a name or insignia, it did not wash up on the beach.

A Profession: Craft (stoneworking) check (DC 15) identifies the breaches in the wall were caused by magical fire. An enchantment upon the wall still remains. Anyone touching the wall is targeted by both a hold person spell, caster level 5th, and a color spray spell, caster level 5th. The color spray was intended to alert the guards, not eliminate intruders.

Encounter Condition: N/A

ROOM L58. ELVEN GRAVES

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

A dozen dead elves afflicted with boils, sores, scales, feathers, or strange deformities lie scattered across the rocky ground. All appear to have died violently. The bodies lie across a score of graves dug into the gravel.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When the madness caused by the lake's corruption overcame the elves of Madowlieloren, the corpses were buried here, across the island, in the hopes that they would not infect the unaffected elves. This failed to eliminate the true danger, the evil energies all around them. If the PCs closely examine the bodies, they discover that the injuries include sword slashes, arrow holes, crushed limbs, and the distended features of drowning victims.

This spot has served as a burial ground and preparation area for the elves of the island for years, but with the death or disappearance of the elven clerics, the area has fallen into disrepair.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: There are half a dozen long swords, daggers, and longbows buried in one grave by an elf who thought he was laying his people's troubles to rest, but nothing magical is present. Blank grave markers of bamboo lie scattered around the area, in addition to one half-inscribed one that states, "We pledged to guard the mighty oak's young until the waters turned against..."

L59. GROTTO

This encounter occurs on the surface.

Waves wash through a narrow inlet into a 20 ft. wide pool surrounded by stalagmites and beautiful crystalline stones. Faintly glowing moss covers the bottom of the pool and many of the stalagmites, illuminating the dazzling colors and facets of the crystals.

If the PCs did not notice the warning strings, read the following.

You hear the gentle chiming of crystal on crystal.

If the PCs did notice, read the following.

A net of finely woven filaments cover the bottom of the inlet, leading to several sets of crystal chimes. A white sand beach leads deeper into the grotto, but a set of woven bamboo screens shield the recesses of the grotto from prying eyes.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: The inlet is only 6 ft. wide while most of the stalagmites surrounding the grotto are 15 ft. tall and spaced only a few feet apart. While a Medium humanoid can fit through the spaces with ease, the chuul, scraggs, and other Large predators cannot get into the pool. The elves within know of the dangers outside and are alert for trouble. Unlike the rest of the island, a hallow spell still protects this grotto. Using fine filaments made from fish gut, the elves have set up a web along the floor tied to crystal chimes to warn of intruders.

• Chime trap: CR 1; mechanical; touch trigger; automatic reset; rings chimes; Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 16.

The five elves (hp 16 each) here formed a tight clique of friends under the control of Nalathe Sionmodel (hp 29). She desired only to escape the island, a goal the other Madowlieoren elves would not countenance. Nalathe knows that she was exiled to this island because she insisted on returning to the surface rather than caring for the great tree. When she was sent here, she intended to simply abandon her post and find a path to the surface. However, the dragon turtle destroyed her boat halfway to the island and only she survived, by flying to the island. Now she considers the path to the surface too dangerous. While she worked on improving her magical abilities to gain access to the teleport spell, she gathered a group of like-minded elves. They left the village (Room L52) for this grotto and ordered the other elves to stay away. The other elves thought the rebels would come to their senses in time and left them alone.

Nalathe is wary of intruders, for her experiences with outsiders have not been good. However, she hopes that they can provide her with information that will help her escape. She offers to provide the PCs with information about the island in exchange for their help. Anyone who refuses her is met with scorn and threats about how they "will not survive without this information."

Encounter Condition: Hallow (which provides a bless effect on any follower of the Elven gods, which applies to the Clique Sorcerers but not to Nalathe herself. It bolsters any celestial creature the elves summon.)

Tactics: As soon as she hears the chimes, Nalathe casts mage armor on herself. Two of her followers cast mage armor first upon themselves and then on other elves until everyone is protected. The other three sorcerers cast summon monster spells to both distract their opponents and to use the summoned creatures (they are fond of summoning celestial porpoises) to keep enemies at bay. Nalathe prefers to bargain from a position of strength.

Should open combat erupt, the elves use the bamboo screens for cover (the screens themselves can be attacked; each has AC 8, Hardness 3 and 5 hp). Hidden under the white sands are sharpened bamboo spikes, which Nalathe and her clique know how to avoid. These patches of bamboo spikes act as caltrops. A Spot check (DC 14) shows the paths through the sands that they elves take.

Nalathe first casts slow on her enemies before letting loose a barrage of lightning bolts. Half of the clique sorcerers use offensive spells to directly harm their enemies, while the other half summon additional monsters.

Treasure: Nalathe possesses an arcane spell book. As a sorcerer, she cannot use the spell book, but the magical techniques and theories help her in her magical studies. The book contains animate rope, burning hands, feather fall, knock, rope trick, fly, greater magic weapon, water breathing, dimensional door, polymorph, telekinesis, stone shape and control water.

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the elves have already cast mage armor upon themselves before the PCs arrive, and the hallow spell provides an aid effect giving each elf +8 temporary hp. To decrease the challenge, the elves are so busy swimming that they have a -2 circumstance penalty to their Listen and Spot checks to notice the PCs.

L60 THROUGH L70. SOUTHERN WATERS

While the southern waters of the lake do not have the schools of fish that distinguish the northern or central waters, several dangerous predators make their homes here. The current moves creatures in the water 10 ft. per round to the west and 5 ft. per round down. This downward draft tends to move the surface-dwelling fish into the deeper waters where the predators lurk. Light from the tunnels to the south leaks out across the waves, providing some illumination in the top 50 ft. of the southern waters. The lakebed is 400 ft. below the surface of the water.

The current here moves sedately from northeast to southwest. Few strong waves or signs of danger exist, but a lingering pain fills your joints and throbs within your skull. A few feeble lights are visible on an island to the north, and bright light emanates from tunnels along the beach to the south. The ceiling here is far lower than in other areas of the lake, averaging only 40 ft. above the surface of the lake, but the water's depths are a mystery.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for random encounters once every two hours the PCs explore these sections. The shorelines are largely devoid of creatures, so checks need to be made only when the PCs are in or on the water. If the PCs are thrashing in the water or have not bound their wounds to prevent blood from spreading through the water, check for random encounters every hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A large school of white fish with enormous heads and tiny bodies sluggishly swims through the water towards the PCs. Their large eyes are devoid of pupil or iris. These blind fish move about randomly and swarm around the PCs for several minutes.
2	Flotsam bobs in the current.
3	Scarlet and gold coral reach up in a profusion of spires and twisted shapes. Sleek fish dart among them.
4-11	Nothing
12-13	Locathah hunting party. 6 locathah scouts patrol the area (see Room L21).
14	A dine bull shark (see Room L31) with a brightly glowing yellow eye chases a school of fish before sighting the PCs. Once per round, the creature can project a ray of enfeeblement as an 8th level caster as a free action.
15-16	A fiendish orca (see Room L67) lurks here. Years of mutations altered the creature's flesh into translucence, providing the effects of an invisibility spell to normal sight and darkvision without the penalties normally encountered underwater.
17	A mutated tojanida (see Room L68) prowls the water. The tojanida's blood is acidic, and if it is wounded it inflicts 2d6 damage on anyone within 10 ft. of it.
18-19	A patrol of 3 scorps from Room L16 slowly circles the lake.
20	A dragon turtle (see Room L66) lunges from the depths below the PCs and attacks.

L60. MANIPANILUA CATCHICHOTUM

The depth of this encounter is 50 ft. to 300 ft. below the surface.

A thin elf with a green tinge to his features gracefully swims through the water, his long green hair drifting behind him. His garb consists of only a belt pouch with a dagger and a loincloth, but he is carrying a short harpoon in each hand, and they are connected by a long chain. His legs propel him quickly through the water on a course that takes him a few feet from you.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Manipanilua Catchichotum (hp 69) was once the captain of the guard of Madowlieoren (Room L52). When he realized the protection spells on the island had failed, he spent weeks searching for Himo Xiloscient (Room L27) in the tainted waters of the lake, hoping the elven priest could restore them. Manipanilua finally found the priest, but could not rescue him, barely escaping from the aboleth (Room L54). By then, the long days in the lake's waters had begun their work. Manipanilua discovered that he could breathe foul waters of the lake as if it were air and that his hands and feet had grown webs and talons. Blaming these deformities upon the priest, Manipanilua vowed to destroy Xiloscient and abandoned the isle of Madowlieoren.

When Xiloscient broke free of the aboleth, Manipanilua hunted him through the waters of the lake. Only the dark god's favor allowed the cleric to escape Manipanilua's wrath. Unwilling to face the fierce aquatic elf again, Xiloscient attacked a locathah tribe and murdered its chieftain, seizing control of the tribe. However, the priest's new minions have not cooled the fury in Manipanilua's heart. He has killed several locathah and felt no remorse; in fact, he enjoyed taking the life of another intelligent being. Still, he cannot reach Xiloscient by killing minions.

Currently, he is searching for one of the tojanida who prowl the southern waters. He plans to pierce the thin hide beneath the creature's forelegs with his double-spears, so he can direct the tojanida's motions with pressure on the chain. He intends to force the creature into the locathah's lair, slip past in the confusion and destroy his hated rival.

Up until now, Manipanilua has had few dealings with the kraken Mahg'Gog (Room L18). The kraken demands tribute and the aquatic elf pays it, searching the lakebed for artifacts or the precious metals that the kraken desires. So long as the elf obeys the kraken's demands, Mahg'Gog leaves him alone.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Manipanilua attacks without warning, hurling one spear at the least armored opponent. On the following round, he charges his victim and stabs him with the other spear. If his attack exceeds the AC of the target by 6 or more, the spear remains imbedded in the PCs armor or skin. He speaks the command word and lets the magically weighted spear drag his victim under at a rate of 40 ft. per round.

Having disarmed himself, Manipanilua attacks the PCs with his poisonous talons, concentrating on weakly armored foes and pointing out that their companion is sinking into the depths of the lake.

If the PCs speak to him, he pretends to reconsider his actions and apologizes for his actions. Then he provides them with flawed information that leads them into the most dangerous Rooms of the lake (such as the lair of the dragon turtle or the whirlpool in the center of the lake).

Treasure: Manipanilua carries a +2 silver double-spear enchanted to increase in weight up to 300 lbs. (once per day) when the command word ("brakth") is uttered. The two spears are connected by 10-ft. chains. These weapons were forged by Skaatakanata (Room L62) and radiate strong evil and strong transmutation magic.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, Manipanilua has already found a tojanida and tamed it when he meets the PCs. He directs the creature into the PCs' midst and then releases it so he can attack with his spears. To decrease the challenge, Manipanilua is suffering from a serious injury which reduces his swimming speed to 20 ft. and reduces his hit points by 10.

Skills and Feats: Hide +1, Listen +2, Search +3, Spot +2; Exotic Weapon Proficiency (double spear), Improved Critical (double spear), Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Two-Weapon Fighting, Weapon Focus (double spear), Weapon Specialization (double spear).

Elf Traits: Immunity to sleep spells and effects, and a +2 racial saving throw bonus against enchantment spells or effects.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Manipilua can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

Rage (Ex): Manipilua can fly into a rage two times per day. In a rage, Manipilua temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases Manipilua's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) Manipilua's fit of rage lasts for 6 rounds. A barbarian may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the Manipilua loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Manipilua retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: Masterwork studded (sharkskin) leather armor, +2 silver doublespear.

Treasure: This piece of the watrazor is buried under thousands of pounds of rock. The PCs are welcome to dig it up if they like. The missing piece of the watrazor is a toothed blade, snapped off cleanly, about a foot long. If a hilt is fashioned for it, it acts as a +2 short sword that allows the wielder to cast control water and grasping hand once per day (as a 15th-level caster). The blade glows when within 60 ft. of another piece of the watrazor (Rooms L3, L18, or L43).

EL: N/A

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, require the PCs to make an alliance with the tritons in Region K and have them use bardic music to blast the stone away with sonic vibrations. The PCs must do a great service for both the tritons and lillend and convince them to work together. To decrease the challenge, allow the PCs to get the piece of the watrazor with one casting of move earth.

L62. CHAINED REACTIONS

This encounter occurs on or above the surface.

The ceiling is barely 40 ft. above the water here, but an outcropping on the ceiling casts a vast shadow so you cannot make out what lies above you. Beneath you, a school of large fish slowly swims north with the current, each fish marked with a dizzying array of purple and green spots along its entire length. The school darts aside to flee, forming a vast cloud of purple and green dots dashing through the water.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A dangerous creature lives here, but it is only encountered if the PCs are traveling above the surface of the water. Centuries ago, a powerful devil lord ordered Skaatakanata (hp 72), a minor kytan devil, to rescue Bakaranan, another devil imprisoned here. Skaatakanata was poorly equipped for the task, but the devil lord was less interested in success than in boasting that he had sent a minion to accomplish the task. Centuries later, the kytan finally infiltrated the prison where Bakaranan was imprisoned, but he arrived too late (see Room K64). Skaatakanata is trapped here, unable to get past the ice devil Ketochrensus (in Room O42).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Skaatakanata is a vile creature. Living alone, his actions have become more deranged. He delights in torture and, upon finding the PCs, intends to take his time in killing them.

When the PCs arrive, Skaatakanata hangs from chains dangling from the ceiling. He lies in wait wrapped in a shroud of chains, holding onto irregularities in the rockface. He plans to wait until one of the PCs passes within 20 ft. and then drop from the ceiling, landing on the PC and lashing out with all four barbed chains. He fights recklessly, forcing opponents to struggle under the waterline with him. The kytan sinks 50 ft. per round, pulling the PC down with him. He continues to fight while within the water, undeterred by the limited motion underwater. Requiring neither air nor light to defeat his foes, Skaatakanata takes the PCs all the way down to the lakebed 400 ft. beneath the surface of the water, where he has more chains imbedded in the rock.

He can control and command these 30 ft. chains at will. If Skaatakanata survives the battle, he takes the wounded PC back to the surface for weeks of torture.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one chain devil adept serving Skaatakanata. The adept scouts prey and lures it back here for Skaatakanata to kill. To decrease the challenge, remove two fighter levels from Skaatakanata.

L61. THE STONES REMAIN

The depth of this encounter is 350 ft. to 400 ft. below the surface.

A mass of rubble covered in seaweed juts from the sandy bottom of the lake. The area is devoid of fish and the current seems to have died away.

If the PCs have a piece of the watrazor from Rooms L3, L18, or L43, read the following.

Inexplicably, the spear glows with a pale green and blue light, shimmering in the water.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When the lake fell through the ceiling, the watrazor was smashed, and this piece was buried under piles of stone. Millions of pounds of force drove the rocks so deep that digging them up could take weeks, if not months. Move earth would require three or four castings to displace all of the rocks, and such activity would certainly attract visitors.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Half the reason the watrazor hasn't been collected into one piece is because of situations like this. How the PCs get it out is ultimately up to the DM, but it shouldn't be easy. Perhaps the PCs enlist the aid of another creature, or — in service of the kraken — show him exactly where it is. They could come back here after finding the scroll of move earth in Room N206 to complete this quest later.

Dancing Chains (Su): A chain devil's most awesome attack is its ability to control up to four chains within 20 feet as a standard action, making the chains dance or move as it wishes. In addition, a chain devil can increase these chains' length by up to 15 feet and cause them to sprout razor-edged barbs. These chains attack as effectively as the devil itself. If a chain is in another creature's possession, the creature can attempt a DC 17 Will save to break the chain devil's power over that chain. If the save is successful, the kytan cannot attempt to control that particular chain again for 24 hours or until the chain leaves the creature's possession. The save DC is Charisma-based. A chain devil can climb chains it controls at its normal speed without making Climb checks.

Regeneration (Ex): Chain devils take normal damage from silvered weapons, good-aligned weapons, and spells or effects with the good descriptor. A chain devil that loses a piece of its body regrows it in 2d6×10 minutes.

Holding the severed member against the stump enables it to reattach instantly.

Unnerving Gaze (Su): Range 30 ft., Will DC 17 negates. A chain devil can make its face resemble one of an opponent's departed loved ones or bitter enemies. Those who fail their saves take a –2 penalty on attack rolls for 1d3 rounds. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Skills: Chain devils have a +8 racial bonus on Craft checks involving metalwork.

Possessions: Chains, cloak of displacement (minor).

L63. WATERSPOUT

The depth of this encounter is from the surface to 40 ft. below the surface.

A tall waterfall spills from the ceiling into the lake 60 ft. below. The crashing sound of falling water and spray fills the air while strong currents swirl beneath the surface. As you approach closer, you realize a narrow spout of water at the center of the waterfall actually rushes up from the lake to the ceiling.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: There is no opening in the ceiling. One of the ancient traps remained in place after the collapse. A permanent reverse gravity spell affects an area 10 ft. by 10 ft. by 100 ft., stretching from 40 ft. beneath the surface to the ceiling. The water in this region falls upward and splashes onto the stone ceiling where it sprays outward and falls in a ring 20 ft. in diameter around the spell's area, giving the appearance of a normal waterfall.

Anything swimming within 50 ft. of the waterspout moves 10 ft. per round towards the spell's area of effect and, if caught within the area of effect, falls upward onto the stalactites on the ceiling. Once reaching the ceiling, victims must make a DC 20 Reflex save or become trapped against the stalactites as the water falling up pummels them (2d6 damage per round). Even if the victims successfully make their save, they are 60 ft. above the surface of the water and fall back towards the base of the water spout. The fall causes little damage (2d6), but the victim is thrust 20 ft. beneath the surface 1d10 ft. away from the reverse gravity area. Anyone may push off the ceiling to make a Jump check; the result is the distance in feet from the base of the waterspout that they land.

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, a pod of three fiendish orcas lurk in the water around the base of the water spout and prey on those caught in it. Their swim speed is easily sufficient to avoid the waterspout. To decrease the challenge, remove the stalactites in the ceiling.

L64. CORAL BEDS

The depth of this encounter is 350 ft. to 400 ft. below the surface.

Massive red coral beds stretch for hundreds of feet in all directions, and dozens of fish swarm over them playfully. Every few seconds, huge bursts of air bubbles billow from the lights glimmering atop the coral beds and dance towards the surface.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: Among the other harmless fish clustered atop the coral beds are six female mutated orcas (hp 88 each). When threatened, they expel pheromones into the water that cause other creatures to become nauseated and panicked. PCs in the area must succeed at DC 18 Will save to resist becoming panicked and a DC 16 Fortitude save to resist becoming nauseated.

Encounter Conditions: Extreme Cold, [Fear 18]

Tactics: When the PCs approach within 30 ft. of the coral, the orcas swim in a large circle, expelling pheromones. PCs that are panicked are ignored, while the most resolute are attacked en masse. These mutated orcas fight to the death.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two orcas. To decrease the challenge, reduce the orcas' AC by 2.

▲ Mutated Orca: CR 6; Huge animal; HD 9d8+48; hp 88; Init +2; Spd Swim 50 ft.; AC 16, touch 10, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +6; Grp +22; Atk +12 melee (2d6+12, bite); Full Atk +12 melee (2d6+12, bite); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Blindsight 120 ft., hold breath, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +15*, Ref +8, Will +5; Str 27, Dex 15, Con 21, Int 2, Wis 14, Cha 6.

Skills and Feats: Listen +14*, Spot +14*, Swim +16; Alertness, Endurance, Run, Toughness.

Blindsight (Ex): Whales can "see" by emitting high-frequency sounds, inaudible to most other creatures, that allow them to locate objects and creatures within 120 feet. A silence spell negates this and forces the whale to rely on its vision, which is approximately as good as a human's.

Hold Breath (Ex): A whale can hold its breath for a number of rounds equal to 8 × its Constitution score before it risks drowning.

Pheromones (Su): A mutated orca can expel a toxic pheromone that only they are immune to. Contact, Fortitude DC 16, initial and secondary damage nauseated. Contact, Willpower DC 18, initial and secondary damage panicked. The save DCs are Constitution-based.

Skills: A whale has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line. *A whale has a +4 racial bonus on Spot and Listen checks. These bonuses are lost if its blindsight is negated.

* Mutated orca gain a +4 racial bonus to Fortitude saves.

L65. SAFE HOUSE

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. below the surface.

A huge mass of lily pads awash with tiny lights drifts along the underwater currents.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A pocket of air magically surrounds the lily pads. So long as the PCs rest on the lily pads, they can breathe air and relax. In addition, they are completely invisible to anyone beyond 60 ft., making it difficult for anyone to notice the PCs.

Encounter Condition: Safe

Tactics: There is a 25% chance of a Random Encounter when the lily pad is first discovered (someone else is resting here).

Treasure: This lily pad is actually a modified permanent secure shelter that was created by an aquatic elf who later met Mahg'Gog.

EL: N/A

L66. DRAGON TURTLE

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 300 ft. below the surface.

Far below the surface, something massive moves through the water. An enormous shell covered in jagged spines lurches into view, propelled by massive flippers. A 10-ft. head turns towards you, a massive maw gapes open, and the water reverberates with a shriek of anger. A vivid red crack crosses the creature's shell diagonally.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The dragon turtle (hp 138) is one of the most dangerous predators in the lake. Semi-intelligent and solitary, it spends its time questing for a black pearl it believes to be a source of great power and the key to its ancestry. But, years turned to centuries and now it swims the lake instinctly, having forgotten its true calling. Frustration has replaced a higher purpose, keeping it in a constant stage of anger, so it lashes out at anything within range of its deadly breath weapon or talons.

Despite its complete disregard for treasure or trinkets that look nothing like enormous black pearls, it gathers tribute to present to the kraken Mahg'Gog (Room L18). Of all the creatures within the lake, the dragon turtle fears only Mahg'Gog. Years ago, the two fought and the kraken cracked the dragon turtle's shell, almost killing it. To avoid such painful repercussions, every so often the dragon turtle brings shiny trinkets and gems — whatever it can find — to Mahg'Gog.

If the PCs communicate with the dragon turtle in Aquan, it angrily reveals its quest for a black pearl.

Encounter Conditions: N/A

Tactics: The dragon turtle attacks first with its steam breath weapon, catching as many PCs as possible in its cloud. Then it dives into their midst and lashes out with its jaws and claws upon the strongest opponents, hoping to defeat the greatest threats so it can pursue lesser opponents at its leisure, preferably with its breath weapon. If any small opponents are present, it grabs them with a claw and inflicts automatic damage each round.

If it successfully grabs a PC with its teeth, it uses its breath weapon, which bestows a –6 circumstance penalty on the PC's Reflex save. The turtle fights ferociously. If it suffers 30 points of damage or more, it becomes enraged and gains a +2 to attack and damage for the duration of the fight, but suffers a –2 to its AC.

Treasure: 400 ft. beneath the surface of the water is the dragon turtle's lair. After killing any opponents, it returns here to deposit any treasure it seized. There are broken chunks of precious metals including silver, gold, platinum, brass, and electrum gathered from across the lakebed. Some pieces were obviously armor or weapons that were ripped asunder when the dragon turtle attacked the bearers. The total value of the various chunks of precious metals is 3,200 gp.

In addition, several unique items remain intact. First, there is a silver masterwork longsword, unblemished by years underwater, and imbedded with 5 tiger eye turquoises. While the sword is worth only 100 gp, a DC 20 History check or an DC 25 Appraise check reveals that it comes from an ancient culture and collectors may pay up to 1,000 gp for it. There are also four cream-colored pearls (100 gp each) amid the precious metals. Another unique piece is a squat golden idol of a frog-like creature wearing a sapphire pendant. While the idol is worth 500 gp, the pendant was not originally part of the piece and is worth 1,750 gp. The last unique piece is a blade obviously broken off a larger piece, one of the pieces of the watnazor (see Room L3). If the jagged end is wrapped in leather or other bindings, the blade can be wielded as a +2 short sword which casts control water or grasping hand as a 15th-level caster, once per day.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the dragon turtle target ships or swimming PCs within 250 ft. of this area, hunting them down rather than waiting for their approach. To decrease the challenge, have the dragon turtle reserve its breath weapon for the first PC who damages it.

▼ Dragon Turtle: CR 9; Huge dragon (aquatic); HD 12d12+60; hp 138; Init +0; Spd 20 ft., swim 30 ft.; AC 25, touch 8, flat-footed 23; Base Atk +12; Crp +28; Atk +18 melee (4d6+8, bite); Full Atk +18 melee (4d6+8, bite) and +13 melee (2d8+4, 2 claws); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon, snatch, capsize; SA Darkvision 60 ft., immunity to fire, sleep, and paralysis, low-light vision, scent; AL NE; SV Fort +13, Ref +8, Will +9; Abilities: Str 27, Dex 10, Con 21, Int 12, Wis 13, Cha 12.

Capsize (Ex): A submerged dragon turtle that surfaces under a boat or ship less than 20 feet long capsizes the vessel 95% of the time. It has a 50% chance to capsize a vessel from 20 to 60 feet long and a 20% chance to capsize one over 60 feet long.

Skills: A dragon turtle has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered.

It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

* Dragon turtles have a +8 racial bonus on Hide checks when submerged.

L67. SHRINE TO EVIL

The depth of this encounter is 420 ft. below the surface.

Far below the lake's surface, the water is dark with mire. The lake bottom is only a few yards beneath you. The temperature steadily rises as you approach a red pulsing glow filtering through a crack on top of a large mound, but the water around it is too filthy to see it clearly. Three large forms circle the area at the edge of the light, remaining within the shadows.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: A crack measuring 2 ft. wide by 6 ft. long in the surface of the mound exudes blackened ichor, releasing sufficient heat to counteract the extreme cold of this depth. The three creatures are fiendish orcas (hp 101, 99, 98) attracted by the heat and twisted by foul magic. Each orca possesses blood red eyes, a cracked hide, and vicious fangs. They slowly circle at the edge of the light.

The mound is the corpse of a devil killed during the cave-in which solidified into stone and fell to the bottom of the lake. Skaatakanata (Room L62) found it and inscribed the true name of his devil lord upon it, hoping to attract the attention of his dread master. After a long wait, he left the corpse behind, never realizing the corpse was a powerful source of evil in the Region. Allow the PCs a DC 35 Spellcraft check or DC 28 Religion check to realize the true nature of the shrine.

The dread master, hearing Skatakanta's pleas for aid, used the shrine to extend his dominion, resulting in unholy energy filling the area. connection to the unholy plane is broken if the stone mound is destroyed (break DC 35, hardness 8, hp 90) or a consecration spell (accompanied by a DC 20 Concentration check) cleanses the area.

Encounter Conditions: Ambush, Desecration 10, [Extreme Cold], Negative Energy, Unhallowed 10

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Two of the orcas attack anything approaching the shrine while the third swims behind the PCs and bull rushes through them. The creatures direct their attacks to the weakest PCs, trying to drive them away from the shrine and disrupt any attacks upon the mound.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, make the soot poisonous and inflict 2d6 damage on anyone within 30 ft. of the crack who fails a DC 18 Fortitude save (the fiendish orcas are immune). To decrease the challenge, remove one fiendish orca.

❖ Fiendish Orca: CR 7; Huge animal (augmented animal, extraplanar); HD 9d8+57; hp 101, 99, 98; Init +2; Spd Swim 50 ft.; AC 16, touch 10, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +6; Crp +22; Atk +12 melee (2d6+12, bite); Full Atk +12 melee (2d6+12, bite); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Smite good; SQ Blindsight 120 ft., damage reduction 5/magic, darkvision 60 ft., hold breath, low-light vision, resistance to cold and fire 10, spell resistance 14; AL N; SV Fort +11, Ref +8, Will +5; Str 27, Dex 15, Con 23, Int 2, Wis 14, Cha 6.

Hold Breath (Ex): A whale can hold its breath for a number of rounds equal to 8 × its Constitution score before it risks drowning.

Smite Good (Su): Once per day a fiendish rat can make a normal melee attack to deal 9 extra points of damage against a good foe.

Skills: A whale has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line. * A whale has a +4 racial bonus on Spot and Listen checks. These bonuses are lost if its blindsight is negated.

L68. TOJANIDAS

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 200 ft. below the surface.

A pair of strange creatures slowly swim through the slow-moving current. At first glance they appear to be some sort of turtle, but their strange claws, paddles, and fins do not resemble any turtle you have ever seen. The larger of the two creatures, close to nine feet long, gestures towards the other one and calls an elaborate series of long low moans and whines. The smaller creature answers excitedly as it snatches a fish out of the water with one of its claws and brings it towards its tiny head. While the rest of the creature is blue-green in color, the claw might well be metallic. The creatures are heading straight towards you.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: These two tojanidas (hp 55, 45) are excellent fighters and swimmers, but have no interest in fighting the PCs. The creatures, mutated from sea tortoises, are simply hunting for a new lair. They generally remain in the shallow areas of the southern waters, avoiding predators.

Encounter Condition: [Extreme Cold], Flooded

Tactics: If the PCs attack, the tojanidas defend themselves. The larger one attacks the strongest fighter and draws him into the depths where pressure and cold weaken opponents. The smaller one preys on the weakest members while remaining at its current depth, forcing the PCs to split their forces.

The creatures' moans travel through the water, and they communicate with each other during the fight even while out of sight. If either creature is reduced to 50% hit points or less, it swims to a deeper portion of the lake, releasing its ink cloud in the hopes of escaping the PCs. If the smaller one dies, the larger becomes enraged, per the spell rage.

Treasure: The smaller tojanida's left claw is covered in fine silver scales, a harmless birthmark which causes it to appear metallic. The claw is worth 25 gp, maybe more to a collector.

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one tojanida and make the tojanidas' claws enchanted with permanent variations of magic fang (+3 keen claw). To decrease the challenge, reduce the tojanidas' AC by 2.

❖ Adult Tojanida: CR 5; Medium outsider (extraplanar, water); HD 7d8+14; hp 55, 45; Init +1; Spd 10 ft., swim 90 ft.; AC 23, touch 11, flat-footed 22; Base Atk +7; Crp +10; Atk +10 melee (2d8+3, bite); Full Atk +10 melee (2d8+3, bite) and +5 melee (1d6+1, 2 claws); SA Improved grab, ink cloud; SQ All-around vision, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to acid and cold, electricity 10 and fire 10; AL N; SV Fort +7, Ref +6, Will +6; Str 16, Dex 13, Con 15, Int 10, Wis 12, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Diplomacy +1, Escape Artist +11, Hide +11, Knowledge (the planes) +6, Listen +11, Search +14, Sense Motive +11, Spot +15, Survival +1 (+3 other planes and following tracks), Swim +11, Use Rope +1 (+3 with bindings); Blind-Fight, Dodge, Power Attack.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a tojanida must hit with a bite or claw attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. Underwater, a tojanida can tow a grabbed victim of its own size or smaller at its swim speed (but it cannot run). A favorite tactic is to grab a single opponent, then withdraw, hauling the opponent away from its allies.

Ink Cloud (Ex): A tojanida can emit a spherical cloud of jet-black ink with a radius of 30 ft. once per minute as a free action. The effect is otherwise similar to fog cloud cast by a 7th-level spellcaster. Out of water, the ink emerges in a stream up to 30 ft. long, which a tojanida can squirt into an opponent's eyes. The affected creature must succeed on a DC 15 Reflex save or be blinded for 1 round. The save DCs are Constitution based.

All-Around Vision (Ex): The multiple apertures in a tojanida's shell allow it to look in any direction, bestowing a +4 racial bonus on Spot and Search checks. Opponents gain no flanking bonuses when attacking a tojanida.

Skills: A tojanida has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

L69. ROCKY SPIRE

This encounter happens on or above the surface.

A single rocky spire juts out of the water, reaching ten feet above the surface before shearing off smoothly. A series of carvings upon the outer edges of the spire spiral down below the surface, but the top of the spire is entirely flat.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The carvings are praises of the fish-headed diety Eadro and calls for all aquatic worshipers. Both merfolk and locathah lived here once, but split over religious differences and resettled other portions of the dungeon (see Rooms K36 and L19). The locathah believe Eadro is female, while the merfolk consider the god to be male.

Encounter Conditions: Flooded

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Anyone who investigates the base of the spire finds a series of rough alcoves, carved into the spire itself and a handful of mundane tools, combs, daggers and clothing. The items are difficult to find (DC 25 Spot check or DC 20 Search check) since the Rooms are filled with green moss.

If the PCs spend an hour searching the spire and succeed at a DC 30 Search check, allow them to find one minor magic item or three minor potions. After searching, roll for a Random Encounter.

EL: N/A

L70. THE FISH TIME FORGOT

The depth of this encounter is 100 ft. to 300 ft. below the surface.

Stout scarlet fish lazily drift through the water while a small shark darts from side to side above them. They barely respond as the shark dives through their midst towards a smaller fish. As you watch, the shark suddenly turns and races towards the surface and a snake-like head appears below it. Four flippers drive its massive body forward as its head turns towards you.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The creature chasing the shark is an elasmosaurus (hp 118), an aquatic dinosaur which aggressively protects its territory against intruders. The scarlet fish are highly poisonous (ingest, DC 16 Fortitude save negates, 1 Con damage, initial and secondary) and avoided by predators. The school is large enough for the PCs to easily catch one, but the fish cannot fight or harm the PCs. The shark (hp 16) is still predatory and returns 1d4 rounds later if there is blood in the water.

Encounter Conditions: N/A

Tactics: The elasmosaurus bites the smallest opponent first and makes a full attack on the second round. After that, it backs away from the first opponent and attacks another available PC, allowing the first foe to flee. It is uninterested in killing its victims, simply wishing to drive them from its territory. If the PCs do not get the hint, it fights as maim and then, finally, kill.

Treasure: Centuries of bottom feeding mean the elasmosaurus's gullet has accreted many indigestible items. There are 2d6 mundane items 1d3 minor magic items, and one medium magic item inside the dinosaur, plus 200 gp in various coins.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, give the elasmosaurus a poisonous bite (injury, DC 12 Fort save, 1 Con damage, initial and secondary) and replace the Medium shark with a Large shark. To decrease the challenge, the elasmosaurus ignores the PCs for 1d6 rounds as it chases the shark, and the shark does not return for 2d6 rounds if there is blood in the water.

✦ Elasmosaurus: CR 7; Huge animal; HD 10d8+66; hp 118; Init +2; Spd 20 ft., swim 50 ft.; AC 13, touch 10, flat-footed 11; Base Atk +7; Grp +23; Atk +13 melee (2d8+12, bite); Full Atk +13 melee (2d8+12, bite); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Low-light vision, scent; AL N; SV Fort +15, Ref +9, Will +4; Str 26, Dex 14, Con 22, Int 2, Wis 13, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Hide —4*, Listen +4, Spot +9, Swim +16; Dodge, Great Fortitude, Toughness (2).

Skills: * An elasmosaurus has a +8 racial bonus on Hide checks in water.

✦ Shark, Medium: CR 1; Medium animal (aquatic); HD 3d8+3; hp 16; Init +2; Spd Swim 60 ft.; AC 15, touch 12, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +2; Grp +3; Atk +4 melee (1d6+1, bite); Full Atk +4 melee (1d6+1, bite); SA —; SQ Blindsight, keen scent; AL N; SV Fort +4, Ref +5, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 15, Con 13, Int 1, Wis 12, Cha 2.

Skills and Feats: Listen +6, Spot +6, Swim +9; Alertness, Weapon Finesse.

Blindsight (Ex): A shark can locate creatures underwater within a 30-foot radius. This ability works only when the shark is underwater.

Keen Scent (Ex): A shark can notice creatures by scent in a 180-foot radius and detect blood in the water at ranges of up to a mile.

Skills: A shark has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

REGION M. DARKNESS AND LIGHT

THE CHASM...

Unlike any other Region in the dungeon, this area is a completely unobstructed plain. The ceiling here is so high it vanishes. This illusion leads visitors to believe they have found their way out of the dungeon. This illusion rarely lasts, as explorers realize the climate in the Chasm does not match that of the world outside.

Even so, travelers consider this plain a welcome refuge. They are relieved by its open atmosphere and the apparent lack of inhabitants — a place where they can rest peacefully. This is revealed all too soon as a mere illusion, for the Chasm is most dangerous.

When the celestials descended, they gutted the mountain completely. In the process of mining, massive slabs of stone were cut loose, falling to the wide plains below and shattering its surface. A portion of the plane survived, but was thrust up slightly by the impact and covered by a shower of dust. The rest of the area was reduced to rubble. Between the two sections the rock was gouged deep, for it is here the falling slabs hit hardest.

Shards of that rock pierced the far wall of the vast chamber and lava flowed forth, as if the mountain were bleeding. The lava flowed down into the gorge, filling it enough to become a formidable river of gold lava cutting the chamber in half — the intact valley to one side and the rubble to the other.

M1 THROUGH M6. THE GREAT LAVA RIVER

Lava flowed into the chasm, washing away the dirt left from the force of the initial impact, but detritus remained, caught in spots where the river current slowed. Two such places formed: an island to the southeast of the Shadowsink and the Ebon Rush (Room M4), the other at the southern edge of the boiling river (Room M6), where the lava disappears through a cave mouth inches above the riverbed.

The lava flow is filled with magma and steam mephits. Similar to the other Regions of the dungeon where the mighty fire river burns, these fiends rarely venture from the security of their homes. Swarms of mephits attack PCs and wrestle them into the stream. Refer to the Introduction (page 14) for special rules concerning the mephits and falling into lava flow.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	Rubble falls from the ledge leading to the great valley on the northeastern bank of the lava flow and echoes into this racing river gorge.
2–12	Nothing
13–14	A mob of angry magma and steam mephits climb out of the lava flow to attack the PCs. They fight until one third of their numbers have fallen before retreating to the safety of the burning river.
15–16	Two elder air elementals patrol this area. As soon as they spot the PCs, they become mighty whirlwinds and hurl themselves at them.
17–18	Five adult arrowhawks fly over the fiery lava, swooping to attack anything crossing their paths. They use their electricity rays as soon as they are within range of the PCs and fight until two of them remain.
19	Stone debris falls from the ledge of the northern bank, potentially harming everyone caught in the wake.
	♦ Falling Debris: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; Atk +24 melee (15d6); multiple targets (can strike all PCs in four adjacent squares); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 34.
20	A pair of xorns glide through the rock and surprise the PCs.

M1. FIREMOUTH

The Firemouth can be found one mile to the extreme northwest of the map, where the wall of the great Chasm begins. It is the source of the lava flow coursing through the dungeon.

A hole yawns from the rock face at the northern most end of the river. From this aperture pours golden lava. The hole — 10 ft. higher than the burning lava below — is roughly 3 ft. across and irregular in shape.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is the mouth of the lava river. Burning lava pours from the Firemouth with tremendous force. In addition to taking damage from the liquid, anyone standing directly in front of the stream must make a DC 24 Strength check or be knocked off his feet. A PC failing this check also falls into the lava flow below.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Heat

Tactics: PCs may crawl into the hole and enter the Firemouth, but they first need to succeed a DC 28 Climb check to reach the opening. They can escalate from either side of the stream, but risk getting knocked off their feet if they climb under the burning lava flow.

Once inside the Firemouth, PCs need to protect themselves from the pouring lava, lest they get burned. Inside, PCs discover that the hole widens rapidly after a few feet, forming a cave roughly 20 ft. in diameter. The floor of this cave is covered with 3 ft. of burning lava, which wells up out of the rocky ground in the way water bubbles up from a well.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M2. THE SHADOWSINK

The lava flow narrows, as both banks of the boiling stream come closer together and then swirls in and around this central point, dipping down the rest of the river as if darkness itself were pulling everything into its great maw.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The Shadowsink is a whirlpool formed by the narrowing lava river and stretches from bank to bank. Because of the dark swirls amid the lava, it is easy to see the Shadowsink as a dark spiral in the center of the river. Though this would be a good place to cross the lava flow (as it is narrower in this location), the current is extremely strong.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: PCs caught in the Shadowsink must succeed at a DC 35 Swim check to avoid being caught by the whirlpool. PCs failing this check move towards the center of the Shadowsink 1 round later. They must attempt another DC 35 Swim check each round they remain at the center of the whirlpool or be swallowed by the current. Once under the lava, PCs may drown. In addition to this, PCs suffer damage for being in the lava each round (see page 14). Fortunately, no mephits haunt the Shadowsink.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M3. THE EBON RUSH

The lava flow narrows and the speed increases. This time the lava does not twist into a whirlpool, but flows along the channel. The only difference is its force which increases dramatically. The lava becomes choppy.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This portion of the lava flow is filled with rapids and the current is twice as strong here. PCs may cross the Ebon Rush with a successful DC 30 Swim check. Failing this check indicates they are caught by the strong current and risk drowning. PCs also take damage from the burning lava, as indicated on page 14.

A group of powerful magma and steam mephits (hp 24 each) inhabit this Room, attacking anything that crosses their paths.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Extreme Heat

Tactics: The mephits dwelling in the Ebon Rush shapechange into lava as soon as they notice the PCs. They wait until the PCs enter the stream to attack, making their presence known by returning to their true shape. Because they are accustomed to navigating in the rapid lava flow, these mephits deal double damage when fighting in melee in the burning river, as they lash out faster and harder.

If the PCs do not cross the Ebon Rush, the mephits come out of the lava stream 1d4 rounds after the PCs turn their backs to them. They use their breath weapons and spell-like abilities to strike the PCs at a distance. Each mephit retreats to the safety of the lava bed as soon as it is wounded.

Treasure: N/A

EL: Varies

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, give the mephits a +4 circumstance bonus to their first Initiative check and assume each fights until destroyed. To decrease the challenge, have the mephits leave after the PCs have suffered 25% of their total hit points in damage.

✦ Magma Mephit: CR 3; Small outsider (fire, extraplanar); HD 3d8; hp 24; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. (average); AC 16, touch 12, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +3; Grp -1; Atk +4 melee (1d3 plus 1d4 fire, claw); Full Atk +4 melee (1d3 plus 1d4 fire, 2 claws); SA Breath weapon, spell-like abilities, summon mephit; SQ Damage reduction 5/magic, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 2, immunity to fire, vulnerability to cold; AL N; SV Fort +3, Ref +4, Will +3; Str 10, Dex 13, Con 10, Int 6, Wis 11, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +8, Escape Artist +7, Hide +11, Listen +6, Diplomacy +4, Disguise +2 (+4 acting), Move Silently +7, Spot +6, Use Rope +1 (+3 with bindings); Dodge, Improved Initiative.

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-foot cone of magma, damage 1d4 fire, Reflex DC 12 half. Living creatures that fail their saves are tormented by burned skin and seared eyes unless they have immunity to fire or are otherwise protected. This effect imposes a -4 penalty to AC and a -2 penalty on attack rolls for 3 rounds. The save DC is Constitution-based and includes a +1 racial bonus.

Spell-Like Abilities: Once per hour, a magma mephit can use shapechange to take the form of a pool of lava 3 feet in diameter and 6 inches deep. The mephit's damage reduction improves to 20/magic when in this form. The mephit can't attack while in lava form but can use other spell-like abilities. It can move at a speed of 10 feet, but it can't run. In this form the mephit can pass through small holes or narrow openings, even mere cracks. The pool's touch ignites flammable materials such as paper, straw, or dry wood.

Once per day a magma mephit can use pyrotechnics (DC 14). It can use itself as the fire source without harm. Caster level 6th. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Fast Healing (Ex): A magma mephit heals only if it is touching magma, lava, or a flame at least as large as a torch.

✦ Steam Mephit: CR 3; Small outsider (extraplanar, fire); HD 3d8; hp 24; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. (average); AC 16, touch 12, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +3; Grp -1; Atk +4 melee (1d3 plus 1d4 fire, claw); Full Atk +4 melee (1d3 plus 1d4 fire, 2 claws); SA Breath weapon, spell-like abilities, summon mephit; SQ Damage reduction 5/magic, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 2, immunity to fire, vulnerability to cold; AL N; SV Fort +3, Ref +4, Will +3; Str 10, Dex 13, Con 10, Int 6, Wis 11, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +8, Escape Artist +7, Hide +11, Listen +6, Diplomacy +4, Disguise +2 (+4 acting), Move Silently +7, Spot +6, Use Rope +1 (+3 with bindings); Dodge, Improved Initiative.

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-foot cone of steam, damage 1d4 fire, Reflex DC 12 half. Living creatures that fail their saves are tormented by burned skin and seared eyes unless they have immunity to fire or are otherwise protected. This effect imposes a -4 penalty to AC and a -2 penalty on attack rolls for 3 rounds. The save DC is Constitution-based and includes a +1 racial bonus.

Spell-Like Abilities: Once per hour a steam mephit can surround itself with a plume of vapor, duplicating the effect of a blur spell (caster level 3rd). Once per day it can create a rainstorm of boiling water that affects a 20-ft.-square area. Living creatures caught in the storm take 2d6 points of fire damage (Reflex DC 14 half; caster level 6th). This ability is the equivalent of a 2nd-level spell. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Fast Healing (Ex): A steam mephit heals only if it is touching boiling water or is in a hot, humid area.

M4. REFUSE ISLE

This misshapen island emerges at the river's halfway point, making it a sensible resting spot. The island is composed of dirt and stone, sloping down to the lava flow on every side. Upon it, however, is a huge mass of tangled vegetation.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The drow call this place Refuse Isle because they use the island as a waste site and use magic to bring garbage to the island. There is no visible trash on the surface since the island's inhabitants, two huge shambling mounds (hp 215, 196), devour it at regular intervals.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: When they sense movement — be it the dumping of refuse or the steps of creatures — the shambling mounds move to attack. They attempt to grab anything coming their direction, feeding directly upon the creatures they kill.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, impose a —4 penalty to all Reflex saves and skill checks made upon the island as the PCs move through the thick vegetation (i.e. the shambling mounds). To decrease the challenge, remove one of the shambling mounds.

✦ Shambling Mound: CR 10; Huge plant; HD 24d8+120; hp 215, 196; Init —1; Spd 20 ft., swim 20 ft.; AC 26, touch 7, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +18; Grp +37; Atk +25 melee (2d8+9, slam); Full Atk +25 melee (2d8+9, 2 slams); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA constrict (2d8+13), improved grab; SQ darkvision 60 ft., immunity to electricity, low-light vision, plant traits, resistance to fire 10; AL N; SV Fort +21, Ref +7, Will +10; Str 29, Dex 8, Con 21, Int 7, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Hide +4, Listen +12, Move Silently +12; Great Fortitude, Improved Natural Armor (x5), Iron Will, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (slam).

Constrict (Ex): A shambler deals 2d8+13 points of damage with a successful grapple check.

Immunity to Electricity (Ex): Shamblers take no damage from electricity. Instead, any electricity attack used against a shambler temporarily grants it 1d4 points of Constitution. The shambler loses these points at the rate of 1 per hour.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a shambler must hit with both slam attacks. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict.

Skills: Shamblers have a +4 racial bonus on Hide, Listen, and Move Silently checks. They have a +12 racial bonus on Hide checks when in a swampy or forested area.

M5. THE ETERNAL BEACON

In the midst of the lava flow, where the river widens, burns a flame. The golden red fire stands 20 ft. high. Fumes emanate from the great fire, shrouding the area in darkness.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The pyre in the middle of the lava stream is fueled with Earthblood, a thick oily liquid exuding from the river depths. Earthblood darkens the lava flow that circles the flame. It also burns for extended periods of time. Because it is toxic, the dark fumes emanating from the Eternal Beacon are deadly. Unlike the Earthblood found in Room M22, the substance cannot be collected as it ignites the moment it comes in contact with the hot lava.

The dark fumes released by the great pyre blanket both banks of the lava flow. PCs moving through the black cloud must succeed at a DC 32 Fortitude save or take 6d10 points of damage and 2d6 points of Constitution damage. A minute later, they must succeed at a DC 32 Fortitude save or suffer 1 Constitution drain. Damage to Constitution score naturally recovers at a rate of 1 per day, but the Constitution drain is permanent. PCs succeeding the initial save still take 3d10 points of damage from the toxic fumes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, raise the Fortitude save DC by +5. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damaged dealt by the fumes to 1d6 Constitution with no risk of permanent drain.

M6. STATIC ISLAND

A long but narrow island of blackened rock lays in the middle of the lava flow. This rock formation is rugged. Lightning flickers upon its surface.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A colony of twenty-six shocker lizards (hp 26 each) lives on this island. Trapped here for centuries uncounted, these creatures attack any trespassers on sight. They use the broken rock shards and scorched boulders from the isle's surface to hide from view.

Encounter Condition: Hazardous Footing 16, Poor Footing 4

Tactics: The shocker lizards attack anyone setting foot on their island. As soon as anyone approaches, they hide behind the myriad of rocks forming the uneven ground. The island's geography gives the lizards a +5 circumstance bonus to any Hide check. It also provides them cover (+4 circumstance bonus to AC) for as long as they remain behind the various rocks.

During the first rounds of combat, the lizards attempt to drive the PCs away. They combine their resources, using their lethal shock ability as a warning to trespassers. If the PCs remain on the island for more than 3 rounds, or if they retaliate against the magical beasts, the lizards attack in force, ferociously swarming the PCs.

In melee, the shocker lizards surround their prey and use their lethal shock to render their victims unconscious. The shocker lizards attack in unison, flanking their victims and inflicting electricity damage every round.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add fifteen shocker lizards. To decrease the challenge, assume the lizards have no proper place to hide or take cover.

✦ Shocker Lizard: CR 3; Small magical beast; HD 4d10+4; hp 26; Init +6; Spd 40 ft., climb 20 ft., swim 20 ft.; AC 16, touch 13, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +4; Grp +0; Atk +5 melee (1d4, bite); Full Atk +5 melee (1d4, bite); Space/Reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA lethal shock, stunning shock; SQ darkvision 60 ft., electricity sense, immunity to electricity, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +5, Ref +6, Will +2; Str 10, Dex 15, Con 13, Int 2, Wis 12, Cha 6.

Skills and Feats: Climb +11, Hide +11, Jump +8, Listen +4, Spot +5, Swim +10; Ability Focus (stunning shock), Improved Initiative.

Electricity Sense (Ex): Shocker lizards automatically detect any electrical discharges within 100 ft.

Lethal Shock (Su): Whenever two or more shocker lizards are within 20 ft. of each other, they can work together to create a lethal shock. This effect has a radius of 20 ft., centered on any one contributing lizard. The shock deals 2d8 points of electricity damage for each lizard contributing to it, to a maximum of 12d8. A Reflex save (DC 10 + number of lizards contributing) reduces the damage by half.

Stunning Shock (Su): Once per round, a shocker lizard can deliver an electrical shock to a single opponent within 5 ft. This attack deals 2d8 points of nonlethal damage to living opponents (Reflex DC 15 half). The save DC is Constitution-based.

Skills: Shocker lizards have a +4 racial bonus on Hide checks due to their coloration. Shocker lizards have a +2 racial bonus on Listen and Spot checks. Shocker lizards use their Dexterity modifier instead of their Strength modifier for Climb and Jump checks. A shocker lizard has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened. A shocker lizard has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

M7 THROUGH M13. THE VALLEY OF THE DEMON WIND

The rocks that shattered this Region struck in a jagged line from the northwest down to the southeast, and its point of impact became the Chasm. Over time, a great mountain formed, but the broken jumble of rock to the southeast collapsed, creating a deep valley between two massive rock slabs.

An unbroken stretch of black stone, scoured clean by the winds whipping the Region, dominates the northern portion of the Chasm. Another great mound stands to the southeast of this Black Mountain. In between those two formations lies the Valley of the Demon Wind (Room M10) — a source of dread for all who have ever been here.

The wind that rips through this enclave is possessed of tormented anger toward all living things. This wind is a crazed air elemental named Aphnitern, a being of such awesome power it was at one time considered the likes of a god. Aphnitern ruled over the other air elementals, but since the angels trapped him and his followers in the dungeon, he gradually lost his mind.

For the most part, Aphnitern's former minions avoid him and he is content to scour the valley (Room M10), which he rarely leaves. The former great air elemental king attacks any sentient creature crossing his path — even other air elementals are not immune.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A strong gust of wind crosses the PCs' path, extinguishing all exposed flames.
2–12	Nothing
13–14	A swarm of five greater air elementals storms the PCs. These fiends defend their home and fight until destroyed. Ignore this result if rolled in Room M10.
15–16	A huge elder air elemental patrols this area. The creature, in whirlwind form, charges the PCs. It fights until losing three quarters of its total hit points, at which point it disappears into the air.
17–18	Two large 21 HD xorns emerge from the rocky soil to surprise the PCs. These ferocious creatures fight to the death.
19	The PCs stumble upon a naturally formed trap: A 10-ft.-by-10-ft. hole in the scraggy ground covered with rock debris. ♦ Natural Pit Trap: CR 13; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; DC 32 Reflex save avoids; 160 ft. deep (16d6, fall); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 28.
20	A pair of typical rocs swoops down upon the PCs. Each attempts to snatch a victim before flying off to a hidden lair high in the Black Mountain (Room M9).

M7. THE EMBANKMENT

On the far side of the boiling lava, the ground rises up into a steep embankment. There is no shoreline. Instead, it is raw rock, sharp-edged as if a crude axe chipped away at it. This sloping wall rises more than eighty feet above the river, blocking any view of the valley beyond. The rock here is granite. It flows out of the river as if a wave had washed up and then frozen in place.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: In many places the top of the Embankment is still narrow and sharp, but in other spots time and wind have worn the edges away. The easiest way into the valley, which stands 80 ft. above the shore of the boiling river, is over the Embankment. Although it is steep, slick, and sharp, it can be escalated with a series of successful DC 16 Climb checks.

PCs succeeding at a DC 22 Spot check find the remains of a corpse (Room M7) at the foot of the high Black Mountain (Room M9). The bones are human, but the skeleton is broken and lies scattered upon the rocky ground. A DC 15 Intelligence or Heal check reveals the human either fell or was thrown off the cliff.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: A successful DC 18 Search check made near the corpse reveals a rusty masterwork short sword, a fiery ruby broken in two (each half worth 250 gp), as well as a silver ring. The ring lays upon one of the skeleton's bony fingers. It is simply wrought and tarnished. If cleaned, the PCs find the following inscription written in Common: "To my beloved husband and king, Arnulf." A successful DC 32 Knowledge (history) check reveals Arnulf was a king of old, who according to legend, ruled over a vast kingdom that history barely remembers. Most modern historians doubt this king and his kingdom ever existed, and those interested in Arnulf's history would pay upwards of 10,000 gp for his ring (which is otherwise worth a mere 100 gp).

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M8. ROC'S NEST

This large cave lies half a mile up into the Black Mountain. A successful DC 36 Spot check is required to notice the mouth of the cavern, which appears as a shadowy hole in the black rock of the mountain. PCs can reach the roc's nest by moving up the mountain for several hundred feet and then escalating a steep cliff wall for the last 200 ft. of the journey (requiring three DC 25 Climb checks — one at 25 ft., one at 100 ft. and one at 175 ft.).

High upon the cliff's face is an ominous grotto. Inside, the cavern opens into a grotto and a floor strewn with rubble and crushed bone. A bird sits atop a pile of debris stacked at the northernmost end of the cave and croaks. The creature's pure white feathers set up a sharp contrast to the shadowy cave.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A mighty roc (hp 418) dwells here. This creature considers the entire Black Mountain its territory. It does not tolerate strangers and attacks invading PCs on sight.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the roc notices the PCs approach (with an appropriate Listen check), it flies out and attacks the intruders. It rushes down upon the PCs, targeting those climbing the cliff wall first (while they are flat-footed). Its preferred tactic is to snatch prey, fly west towards Room M7, and drop its victim to the ground, several hundred feet below.

Though it prefers to attack from the air, the roc defends its cave ferociously. If the PCs surprise it or block off the only exit out of its lair, it lashes out at them with talons and beak. If the PCs deal more than 200 points of damage to the roc, it charges them in an attempt to fly out of its cave. When it does, it moves out of range of the PCs' attack and observes them from a distance, waiting for the right moment to strike again.

Treasure: PCs succeeding at a DC 22 Search check inside the roc's nest find the following items scattered among the bone debris and stone rubble: broken glass vials and beakers, pieces of torn and rotten clothing, the iron head of a morningstar (with no handle), two rusty spearheads, a heavily damaged large steel shield, a well preserved leather vest, and a polished silvery battle axe. The axe is a +3 frost battleaxe of mighty cleaving with a peculiar design engraved upon the handle. The insignia represents the face of a large-tusked boar. The vest, a +2 leather armor of cold resistance, has the same design carved on the chest.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one roc and give the creatures a +4 circumstance bonus to all Listen and Spot checks. To decrease the challenge, reduce the roc's HD to 24.

✦ Roc: CR 10; Gargantuan animal; HD 32d8+224; hp 418; Init +2; Spd 20 ft., fly 80 ft. Skills and Feats: Hide -3, Listen +17, Spot +21; Alertness, Flyby Attack, Improved Natural Armor, Improved Natural Attack (talon), Improved Natural Attack (bite), Iron Will, Multiattack, Power Attack, Snatch, Weapon Focus (talon), Wingover

Skills: Rocs have a +4 racial bonus on Spot checks.

M9. THE BLACK MOUNTAIN

A towering mountain of volcanic rock dominates the northeastern portion of this region. The grade is so steep and the peak so high, that it is impossible to see the top from the valley.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The Black Mountain, a mass of dark volcanic rock, rises up into the cavernous heights of the Region. PCs scaling the mountain for 5 miles can attempt a DC 35 Survival check when they reach the ceiling of the Chasm. Succeeding this check indicates they found a narrow cave that leads out of the dungeon. Though most of the Black Mountain can be climbed, three walls of sheer volcanic rock must be scaled in order to reach the summit. Each of these walls is 300 ft. high and requires DC 28 Climb checks to scale.

A pair of rocs (hp 314, 302) lives in the Black Mountain. Their nest can be found with a successful DC 40 Spot check at the top of one of the spires found on the great mount. The rocs patrol the skies above their home. If the PCs use a light source, they automatically spot them. If the PCs make any kind of noise other than speaking, allow the rocs the appropriate Listen checks to notice them.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The rocs are ferocious opponents. They remain high above, circling the PCs, staying out of their weapons' range. If the PCs spot them and attempt to harm them, the rocs attack. If the PCs do not notice them, the rocs wait until they are scaling one of the sheer walls (so they are flat-footed) to strike. They prefer to hit with their talons and bite, but if they lose more than 100 hp they attempt to snatch a PC before retreating. If reduced to 100 hp or less, they fly away.

In combat, the rocs utter sharp cries. Allow the mighty roc in Room M8 a DC 25 Listen check to notice the ruckus. If it does, it comes out of its lair and joins the fray 2d6 rounds thereafter.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one roc. To decrease the challenge, reduce the rocs' HD to 18.

✦ Roc: CR 9; Gargantuan animal; HD 26d8+182; hp 314, 302; Init +6; Spd 20 ft., fly 80 ft. (average); AC 17, touch 8, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +19; Grp +43; Atk +27 melee (2d6+12, talon); Full Atk +27 melee (2d6+12, 2 talons) and +25 melee (2d8+6, bite); Space/Reach 20 ft./15 ft.; SA —; SQ low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +18, Ref +13, Will +9; Str 34, Dex 15, Con 24, Int 2, Wis 13, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Hide -3, Listen +14, Spot +18; Alertness, Dodge, Flyby Attack, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Multiattack, Power Attack, Snatch, Wingover.

Skills: Rocs have a +4 racial bonus on Spot checks.

M10. THE WINDY VALLEY

The cliffs towering on either side of the wide valley cast ominous shadows. To the northwest is a tall mountain of black volcanic glass, and an 80 ft. cliff dominating the southeast. There is a deathly wind in the valley and it creates an ominous environment.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This valley is the home of Aphniter (hp 413), a crazed air elemental. He lives nowhere in particular. A creature of pure air, the evil elemental king scoffed at races caught in physical form. To protect the world from its machinations, the celestials transported Aphniter and his followers to this plain, where they were imprisoned for all eternity.

Aphniter has no desire to rule but delights in destroying anything he encounters. Since he became a prisoner, Aphniter gradually lost his mind. Now completely mad, even the air elementals that once served him faithfully live in fear of their former king.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Aphniter's awareness is acute and he knows everything that goes on in the valley. As soon as the PCs enter his home, he is instantly made aware of them. Because he wants to kill all who violate his territory, he waits for the PCs to move deeper into the valley before surprising them with a violent charge.

In combat, Aphniter is cruel. He charges the lead PC and hits him with his slam attacks, concentrating his fury upon him until he dies. Once engaged in melee, nothing can lure the elemental king from his intended prey. However, a spell (or a combination of spells) causing him at least 50 hp of damage instantly turns his attention to the spellcaster. He then focuses his attacks on him.

If dropped to 150 hp or less, Aphniter turns into a great whirlwind, catches as many PCs as he can, and moves on. He drops all PCs caught in the whirlwind as soon as they cause him any further harm and retreats to higher ground along the base of the Black Mountain. There, he continues to study the PCs and attacks them again if they continue their march into his valley.

Treasure: Aphniter does not keep treasure, and most of what his victims dropped in the valley was washed away by the wind. Still, PCs succeeding at a DC 38 Search check find a tiny diamond caught between two smooth rocks at the foot of the Black Mountain. The diamond is worth 5,000 gp.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four elder air elementals. To decrease the challenge, reduce Aphniter's HD to 36.

✦ Aphniter, Elder Air Elemental: CR 17; Huge elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 48d8+192; hp 413; Init +15; Spd 100 ft. (perfect); AC 32, touch 19, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +36; Grp +50; Atk +45 melee (4d6+6/19-20, slam); Full Atk +45 melee (4d6+6/19-20, 2 slams); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA air mastery, whirlwind; SQ darkvision 60 ft., DR 10/—, elemental traits; AL NE; SV Fort +20, Ref +36, Will +18; Str 22, Dex 33, Con 18, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 13.

Skills and Feats: Listen +50, Spot +50; Alertness, Blind Fight, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Flyby Attack, Great Cleave, Improved Critical (slam), Improved Initiative, Improved Natural Armor (x5), Improved Natural Attack (slam), Iron Will, Mobility, Power Attack, Spring Attack, Weapon Finesse.

Air Mastery (Ex): Airborne creatures take a -1 penalty on attack and damage rolls against an air elemental.

Whirlwind (Su): The elemental can transform itself into a whirlwind once every 10 minutes and remain in that form for up to 1 round for every 2 HD it has. In this form, the elemental can move through the air or along a surface at its fly speed.

The whirlwind is 5 ft. wide at the base, up to 30 feet wide at the top, and up to 60 ft. tall, but it must be at least 10 ft.

The elemental's movement while in whirlwind form does not provoke attacks of opportunity, even if the elemental enters the space another creature occupies. Another creature might be caught in the whirlwind if it touches or enters the whirlwind, or if the elemental moves into or through the creature's space.

Creatures one or more size categories smaller than the elemental might take damage when caught in the whirlwind (2d8) and may be lifted into the air. An affected creature must succeed on a Reflex save when it comes into contact with the whirlwind or take the indicated damage. It must also succeed on a second Reflex save or be picked up bodily and held suspended in the powerful winds, automatically taking the indicated damage each round. A creature that can fly is allowed a Reflex save each round to escape the whirlwind. The creature still takes damage but can leave if the save is successful. There is a DC 40 for saves against the whirlwind's effects. The save DC is Strength-based.

Creatures trapped in the whirlwind cannot move except to go where the elemental carries them or to escape the whirlwind. Creatures caught in the whirlwind can otherwise act normally, but must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) to cast a spell. Creatures caught in the whirlwind take a -4 penalty to Dexterity and a -2 penalty on attack rolls. The elemental can have only as many creatures trapped inside the whirlwind at one time as will fit inside the whirlwind's volume.

The elemental can eject any carried creatures whenever it wishes, depositing them wherever the whirlwind happens to be. A summoned elemental always ejects trapped creatures before returning to its home plane. If the whirlwind's base touches the ground, it creates a swirling cloud of debris. This cloud is centered on the elemental and has a diameter equal to half the whirlwind's height. The cloud obscures all vision, including darkvision, beyond 5 feet. Creatures 5 feet away have concealment, while those farther away have total concealment.

Those caught in the cloud must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) to cast a spell.

An elemental in whirlwind form cannot make slam attacks and does not threaten the area around it.

IM11. THE DARK CROWN

A mass of rock, as dark as the tall mountain to northwest, stands at 80 ft. The top of the cliff looks like a crown of purple rock fragments with uneven spires. On the southernmost point of the hill, the cliff rises further. The steep rise there is 70 ft. higher than the cliff's ground.

The top of the Dark Crown is uneven. Piles of perfectly round stone boulders lay behind each of the spires forming a fortress around the cliff's edge. In the center is a flat rock. The top of this rock is carved with the runes signifying a wide circle with an oak leaf.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Scaling the 80 ft. cliff wall requires two DC 20 Climb checks, as the walls on all sides of the Dark Crown are filled with small crevices and nooks, perfect to get a handhold or foothold.

Most of the black cliff is the home turf of Norkor, a mighty cloud giant cleric (hp 218). Norkor, however, shares the Dark Crown with a group of arrowhawks. These creatures circle the tallest spire of the cliff, which the giant calls the Spearhead (Room M12). Though the giant and the arrowhawks keep to themselves, both groups warn the other of any danger.

If the PCs approach the Dark Crown from the south, the arrowhawks (in Room M12) instantly spots them and quacks, alerting the giant of their presence. If the PCs approach from any other side, allow the vigilant giant the appropriate Listen or Spot check to notice them.

If Norkor notices the PCs before they climb up the cliff, the suspicious giant, who feels isolated in this eerie valley, moves behind one of the natural spires to take cover. From there, he shovels boulders at the PCs. He does not target them directly, however, but rather throws the rocks as a warning. He also orders them not to approach any closer.

If the PCs parley with Norkor and change his Initial Attitude from Unfriendly to Friendly or Helpful, the giant invites them to his lair. Norkor is interested in finding a way out of the Chasm and is willing to trade goods with the PCs. In exchange, he is willing to reveal everything he knows about the inhabitants of the Chasm, heal the PCs, or trade his wand of mirror image. Though his information is not perfectly accurate, he knows approximately where each creature or group in the Section lives. Norkor also fears the Demon Wind (Room M10), which is responsible for the death of his brother (see Room M24), and for this reason warns the PCs not to cross the deadly valley.

If the PCs question Norkor, the giant reveals he already searched the Chasm for a path that would lead to the surface. Centuries ago, he even climbed to the summit of the Black Mountain, where he discovered the stony ceiling of the Chasm. Because of the powerful Demon Wind (Room M10) and the mighty roc (Room M8), Norkor dares not leave his lair. He does not know about the recent rift at the top of the Black Mountain, and thus continues to believe there is no way out of this place.

Norkor is a cleric of an ancient deity of healing. The stone slab serves as his altar and the runic symbol imprinted upon it is that of his god.

If the PCs attack Norkor or move toward his home uninvited, the giant attacks.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: For as long as he can manage it, Norkor remains behind the cover of one of the many spires along the cliff's edge, throwing boulders at the most heavily armored PCs first. When forced into melee, he wields his huge masterwork morningstar. He targets the weakest opponents first to finish them off quickly.

If Norkor loses more than half of his total hit points, he uses his spell-like abilities to create a mist and attempts to escape by levitating as far away from the PCs as possible. Before he does, however, he casts a number of defensive and curative spells upon himself, hoping his god's blessing will help him defeat the intruders.

If battle ensues, the arrowhawks circling the Spearhead (Room M12) descend to investigate. They remain 50 ft. above ground, flying in a great circle around the combatants. Though they quack, they do not intervene unless the PCs attack them first.

Treasure: Norkor keeps his most precious possessions at the base of one of the tall spires surrounding the cliff's edge. PCs succeeding at a DC 25 Search check notice a massive boulder that seems out of place at the bottom of the spire. A DC 28 Strength check is required to move the rock, revealing a small alcove in which the following items are hidden: an ancient and rusty masterwork longsword with elvish designs imprinted upon the pommel, a leather pouch containing 6 bloodstones (worth 50 gp each), a crushed and worthless bone crown, a broken comb made of ivory (still worth 10 gp), and a wand of mirror image (with 11 charges remaining).

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 cleric levels to Norkor and make the arrowhawks (Room M12) join the fray. To decrease the challenge, ignore Norkor's ranger levels.

M12. THE SPEARHEAD

With the exception of the Black Mountain to the northwest, this needle-like tower is the tallest landmark around.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Six elder arrowhawks (hp 112 each) use this tall, tapering spire as their lair. Though they never set foot upon the tower, they stack whatever treasure they find there. The arrowhawks are content to live in the Spearhead, constantly surveying the Dark Crown and the lower plain to the south. They fear neither the giant (Room M11) nor the air elementals (Room M13) dwelling close to their lair, and for the most part keep to themselves.

The arrowhawks are vigilant and look out over the valley. They are especially interested in what goes on at the Elemental Caves (Room M13). The arrowhawks are less combative than the other creatures of the Chasm. They enjoy their solitude. On rare occasions, they take a vile pleasure in scaring land-bound creatures by zooming playfully in over the tops of their heads, but they only attack when threatened.

PCs can climb the Spearhead (with three successive DC 24 Climb checks), which rises up 70 ft. from Room M11 or 150 ft. from the plain below. Doing so, however, angers the arrowhawks, which attack anyone threatening their lair.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The arrowhawks remain at a distance of 50 ft. from the PCs at all times, flying further away when they need to regroup or if they are heavily wounded. They use their speed and agility to dodge their foes' attack, avoiding melee at all cost. They strike with their electricity rays as soon as the PCs are within 50 ft., hoping to incapacitate them. If the PCs reach the top of the spire (where they keep their treasure), the arrowhawks close in to bite their foes and fight until destroyed. If, on the other hand, the PCs retreat, the arrowhawks do not pursue them. Instead, they croak loudly to signal victory.

Treasure: PCs reaching the top of the Spearhead discover a platform 5 ft. in diameter. Upon it is a coil of strong elven silk rope, a ring of invisibility, a small ruby (worth 200 gp), and a +3 dart.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of arrowhawks present. To decrease the challenge, reduce the arrowhawks to 3.

✦ Elder Arrowhawk: CR 8; Large outsider (air, extraplanar); HD 15d8+45; hp 112; Init +5; Spd Fly 60 ft.; AC 22, touch 14, flat-footed 17; Base Atk +15; Grp +25; Atk +19 ranged touch (2d8 electrical, electricity ray) or +21 melee (1d8+3, bite); Full Atk +19 ranged touch (2d8 electrical, electricity ray) or +21 melee (1d8+3, bite); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA electricity ray; SQ darkvision 60 ft., immunity to acid, electricity, and poison, resistance to cold 10 and fire 10; AL N; SV Fort +12, Ref +14, Will +10; Str 22, Dex 21, Con 16, Int 10, Wis 13, Cha 13.

Electricity Ray (Su): An arrowhawk can fire this ray once per round, with a range of 50 feet.

M13. ELEMENTAL CAVES

The granite wall rises up 100 ft. Unlike most of the cliffs, there are no spires here. The wall is smooth, but several small caves open at various locations along the spotless surface.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: There are six small cave mouths carved into the upper cliffs. These natural formations open into wider grottos, and each is the home of a powerful air elemental (hp 178 each). These creatures were once loyal followers of the elemental king (Room M10) who lost its mind long ago. They are now content to dwell in their private caves and enjoy tormenting any creature journeying close to their lair.

Each of the caves is large enough to house one huge air elemental in its true form, but the mouth of each grotto is no wider than 5 ft. in diameter. Because of this, the elementals move in and out of their respective lairs in whirlwind form.

Scaling the wall requires two of DC 28 Climb checks (one at 30 ft and another at 80 ft.). The caves are at least 30 ft. apart from one another, and none is less than 50 ft. from the ground. The elementals automatically notice the presence of PCs climbing the wall of their cliff. If the PCs simply move close to the cliff's edge, allow the air elementals the appropriate Listen or Spot check to notice them.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Once the air elementals spot the PCs, they come out of their lair (in whirlwind form) and charge them. They grab the PCs, lifting them into the air before slamming them against a wall or dropping them onto the rocks below.

If they have the upper hand, the elementals toy with the PCs at their leisure. After a few combat rounds, they let their victims believe they have escaped their wrath by breaking off their attack. A round or two later, they strike again. The elementals continue to fight until all the PCs are either dead or they are killed themselves.

Treasure: The elementals attack anyone who passes through their territory, carefully collecting the bounty of their kill. Their belongings are strewn about the floor of their caves. The first grotto holds 150 gp worth of gems and coins. The second has a large alien gem of an unusual deep green shade (worth 500 gp). A suit of +1 dwarven chain mail can be found in the third cave, along with worthless pieces of glass. The fourth cave contains a worthless suit of leather armor with the bones of its former owner, as well as a large masterwork steel shield. In the fifth cave is a total of 80 gp worth of semi-precious gemstones and a golden necklace (worth 120 gp). The last cave holds no treasure.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, make each elemental an elder 24 HD specimen and give them an automatic surprise round. To decrease the challenge, cut their numbers in half.

✦ Air Elemental: CR 9; Huge elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 21d8+84; hp 178; Init +14; Spd 100 ft. (perfect); AC 26, touch 18, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +15; Grp +28; Atk +23 melee (2d8+5, slam); Full Atk+23 melee (2d8+5, 2 slams); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA air mastery, whirlwind; SQ darkvision 60 ft., DR 10/—, elemental traits; AL NE; SV Fort +11, Ref +22, Will +9; Str 20, Dex 31, Con 18, Int 8, Wis 11, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Listen +14, Spot +14; Alertness, Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes, Flyby Attack, Improved Initiative[®], Iron Will, Mobility, Power Attack, Spring Attack, Weapon Finesse[®].

Air Mastery (Ex): Airborne creatures take a –1 penalty on attack and damage rolls against an air elemental.

Whirlwind (Su): The elemental can transform itself into a whirlwind once every 10 minutes and remain in that form for up to 1 round for every 2 HD it has. In this form, the elemental can move through the air or along a surface at its fly speed.

The whirlwind is 5 ft. wide at the base, up to 30 feet wide at the top, and up to 60 ft. tall, but it must be at least 10 feet.

The elemental's movement while in whirlwind form does not provoke attacks of opportunity, even if the elemental enters the space another creature occupies. Another creature might be caught in the whirlwind if it touches or enters the whirlwind, or if the elemental moves into or through the creature's space.

Creatures one or more size categories smaller than the elemental might take damage when caught in the whirlwind (2d8) and may be lifted into the air. An affected creature must succeed on a Reflex save when it comes into contact with the whirlwind or take the indicated damage. It must also succeed on a second Reflex save or be picked up bodily and held suspended in the powerful winds, automatically taking the indicated damage each round. A creature that can fly is allowed a Reflex save each round to escape the whirlwind. The creature still takes damage but can leave if the save is successful. There is a DC 25 for saves against the whirlwind's effects.

The save DC is Strength-based.

Creatures trapped in the whirlwind cannot move except to go where the elemental carries them or to escape the whirlwind. Creatures caught in the whirlwind can otherwise act normally, but must succeed on a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) to cast a spell. Creatures caught in the whirlwind take a –4 penalty to Dexterity and a –2 penalty on attack rolls. The elemental can have only as many creatures trapped inside the whirlwind at one time as will fit inside the whirlwind's volume.

The elemental can eject any carried creatures whenever it wishes, depositing them wherever the whirlwind happens to be. A summoned elemental always ejects trapped creatures before returning to its home plane.

If the whirlwind's base touches the ground, it creates a swirling cloud of debris. This cloud is centered on the elemental and has a diameter equal to half the whirlwind's height. The cloud obscures all vision, including darkvision, beyond 5 ft. Creatures 5 ft. away have concealment, while those farther away have total concealment.

M14 THROUGH M16. LEDGE

Along the northeastern bank of the lava flow, the ground rises to a steep ledge. The raw rock formation of this cliff separates the boiling river (Rooms M1 through M6) from the valley that makes up the majority of the Chasm, 80 ft. above.

Successful DC 18 Climb checks are required to scale the high ledge, as most of it is made out of uneven rock providing handholds and footholds. Though few creatures inhabit the ledge, several inhabitants of the Region can be encountered here.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	The PCs spot a flock of large birds flying high above. The creatures move west toward the Black Mountain (Room M9) before disappearing in the distance.
2–12	Nothing
13–14	Eight typical belkers in smoke form journeyed to this area. They attack all corporeal creatures on sight.
15–16	A flight of four elder arrowhawks spots the PCs. They swoop down upon them, fighting until half of them are killed before retreating to the safety of the open air.
17–18	A swarm of shocker lizards patrols the ledge. They use their stunning shock ability to warn the PCs away. If the PCs retaliate, they combine their efforts and trigger their lethal shock to kill them.
19	The PCs (moving within a specific 20-ft. by 20-ft. area) stumble upon a trap. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✦ Double Delayed Blast Fireball Trap: CR 12; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (delayed blast fireball, 18th level wizard, two balls of fire each dealing 18d6 fire, DC 22 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.
20	The PCs encounter a stone golem, which lies upon the stony ground as if sleeping. The creature becomes animated as soon as the PCs move within 20 ft. of it and fights until destroyed.

M14. LOW PLATFORM

A platform stands 10 ft. lower than the ridge on either side, as if someone had sliced away the top; it is flat and easily accessible from the top of the ridge. There is a ring near the center of the platform. Closer examination reveals it to be a circular scorch mark with gray ash in it. Rocks nearby have identical burns on one side.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This isolated platform is a perfect location for a campsite, and was obviously used as such recently. The platform stands 70 ft. above the bank of the lava flow below, but only 10 ft. underneath the great valley to the northeast. Though climbing the 70 ft. from the shore requires two DC 22 Climb checks, as well as a DC 35 Spot check to notice the small platform. The place can be easily spotted, with a DC 18 Spot check, and accessible, with a DC 15 Climb check, from the high valley.

Encounter Condition: Safe

Tactics: The platform provides shelter and is perfect for a campsite. PCs camping there are hidden from all creatures except the airborne. (ignore all results from the Random Encounters of non flying creatures). The PCs also get a view of the lava flow and both its banks, and benefit from a +10 circumstance bonus to all Spot checks made to notice creatures approaching from this direction. Because of the natural rock formation, they also benefit from cover for as long as they remain on the platform, unless they are attacked from higher ground.

Treasure: In the ashes is a metal disc that requires a DC 35 Search check to find. The disc is blackened but can be cleaned up. It turns out to be a bronze medallion. One side bears the symbol of the dwarven travel god, while the other holds runes written in Dwarf. The runes are a prayer. Any non-dwarf who wears this medallion gains the ability to speak and understand Dwarf (verbal only) and gains a +2 insight bonus to Diplomacy and Sense Motive checks made against dwarves. A dwarf who wears the medallion gains a +4 insight bonus to all Climb, Survival, and Swim checks as well as a +2 enhancement bonus to his Charisma score. This ancient medallion is worth 1,500 gp to anyone, but upwards of 15,000 gp to dwarves who recognizes its properties.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M15. WATCHTOWER RUINS

Near the center of the region, upon the ridge west of the great lava flow, lie the remains of a building. Rotting wooden beams and cracked stone blocks still form a wide square upon the ground; four 5-foot high walls still stand. Large gaps appear in the walls and debris surrounds the structure, suggesting it was once a much taller building.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The rubble was a watchtower used by the drow over a century ago. It was a six-story high building made of stone at its base with wooden beams at the junctures. The drow, with their usual thoroughness, enchanted both wood and stone, which is why some pieces of the tower remain intact.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Though this tower has long been abandoned, most of the wood could be used to light a fire. Investigating the debris is otherwise a complete waste of time, as there is nothing left of value here.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M16. LANDSLIDE

A pile of rubble dominates this area under which is a thin brown strip fluttering from a sharp jag where the ridge begins. It is a leather lace, the type used to tie boots. One end is clearly frayed, but has been dipped in wax to keep it intact. The other disappears under the rubble.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The piece of leather flutters dangerously close to the edge of the ledge, and the rubble under which it hangs is unstable. The rubble forms an uneven rocky floor, 50 ft. in diameter. In order to reach the brown leather lace, PCs need to walk 20 ft. over the rubble, and thus move close to the ledge. Two rounds after anyone steps upon the precarious formation, a deadly natural trap is activated. The device catches anyone standing upon the rubble or in any adjacent 5 ft. square.

◆ Natural Landslide Trap: CR 13; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; onset delay (2 rounds); multiple targets; DC 35 Reflex save avoids; 80 ft. fall (8d6, fall); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 38.

In addition to falling upon the bank of the lava flow (and taking damage as noted above), PCs caught in the landslide must succeed at a DC 30 Reflex save to avoid tumbling down the boiling lava. Succeeding this check means the PC broke his fall on the riverbank and did not tumble into the deadly river.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, assume PCs take damage from sharp rock spikes as they tumble down. To decrease the challenge, reduce the trap's Search DC to 37 and ignore the risk of falling into the boiling lava.

M17. THOUGH M22. DEATH CANYON

A deep canyon cuts through the plain of dust and stone. The canyon is 150 ft. deep at its lowest point, which opens in two smaller branches to the west as well as a long, straight line to the east. The scraggy rock of the canyon's wall is uneven and cuts at a low angle. PCs climbing up or down the canyon must succeed at DC 18 Climb checks.

Moving along the edge of the canyon, PCs can spot the different Rooms surrounding it. The deep caves (Rooms M19, M20, and M21) are noticed with a different DC 28 Spot check. From above the canyon, a thin black wisp of smoke rises from one of the western branches (Room M17) and PCs succeeding at a DC 18 Spot check automatically notice the unnatural cloud. There seems to be nothing unusual about the easternmost part of the canyon, but a closer inspection (from inside the canyon) reveals the wonders of Room M22.

Several creatures inhabit this Section: two clutches of belkers and a flock of achaierais call this place home. They evil creatures are hostile to anyone who is not of their kind, and the two groups frequently fight with each other.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A thunderous sound is heard in the distance. Though similar to thunder, it is the ruckus of rock crashing against rock.
2-12	Nothing
13-14	A group of seven belkers roams the area, charging anything in sight. These fiends use their smoke forms to harm living creatures and do not retreat until at least half of their numbers are incapacitated.
15-16	An elder air elemental flies over this Section in search of prey to torment. It attacks the PCs as soon as it spots them.
17-18	Four advanced 12 HD achaierais are patrolling the grounds around their lair (Rooms M17 and M18). They charge intruders on sight, releasing their poisonous black cloud as soon as they are within range.
19	This portion of the canyon is not as solid as it looks. The wall threatens to cave-in at anytime, potentially trapping the PCs under a great mass of rubble.
	◆ Natural Cave-In: CR 13; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; DC 28 Reflex save half damage (16d6, crush); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.
	This encounter can only happen when the PCs are inside the confines of the canyon; ignore this result if the PCs are skirting the edge of the canyon.
20	A powerful nalfeshnee demon recently emerged from the lava river. It now roams the Region in search of preys to capture and torment. Unless the PCs agree to give the fiend at least 10,000 gp of treasure, it attacks them.

M17. PIERCED CANYON

The base of the walls of this part of the canyon are pierced with caves visible mainly because of the billowing black smoke escaping from the openings.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A flock of eight achaierai (hp 39 each) dwells here. The creatures live within the caves, which are barely big enough to house their bodies. A DC 18 Knowledge (dungeoneering) or Profession (mason) check reveals these caves are unnatural, carved with crude instruments. In fact, the achaierai used their claws and beaks to build these simple dwellings.

The achaierai are protective of their lair and receive a +4 circumstance bonus to Listen and Spot checks to notice approaching PCs, whether they come from within the canyon's ground or descend from above. The creatures release black smoke, which is their way of marking territory. As they remain behind the cover of the black mist and inside their caves, they benefit from a +8 circumstance bonus to any Hide check.

The eight caves are roughly 15 ft. in diameter, and each is within 20 ft. from one another. They dominate the southwestern branch of the canyon.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The achaierai prefer to remain in their caves, hidden behind the smoke, until the PCs investigate. Once someone moves within 10 ft. from the caves, the achaierai use their black cloud attack, then leap over their prey in unison. They strike with their claws and snap with their beaks while the intruders are completely disoriented. They fight to the death and pursue retreating PCs.

If combat ensues, allow the elder achaierai in Room M18 a DC 15 Listen check. If this creature hears the ruckus of the battle, it comes to aid the members of its flock 1d4+1 rounds later.

Treasure: The caves of the achaierai are littered with items. PCs searching the lairs automatically find a total of 212 sp, 348 cp, and assorted gems (worth a total of 60 gp). A successful DC 22 Search check also reveals two arcane scrolls (fireball and web).

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 3 to 6 HD to each achaierai. To decrease the challenge, remove three of them.

♣ Achaierai: CR 5; Large outsider (evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 6d8+12; hp 39; Init +1; Spd 50 ft.; AC 20, touch 10, flat-footed 19; Base Atk +6; Grp +14; Atk +9 melee (2d6+4, claw); Full Atk +9 melee (2d6+4, 2 claws) and +4 melee (4d6+2, bite); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Black cloud; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., spell resistance 19; AL LE; SV Fort +7, Ref +6, Will +7; Str 19, Dex 13, Con 14, Int 11, Wis 14, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Balance +10, Climb +13, Diplomacy +5, Hide +6, Jump +21, Listen +11, Move Silently +10, Sense Motive +11, Spot +11; Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack

Black Cloud (Ex): Up to three times per day an achaierai can release a choking, toxic black cloud.

Those other than achaierai within 10 ft. instantly take 2d6 points of damage. They must also succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or be affected for 3 hours as though by an insanity spell (caster level 16th). The save DC is Constitution-based.

M18. LONE ACHAIERAI

The northern branch of the canyon dead ends. Between rock formations is a huge creature with a colorful plumage. The bird-like thing stands on powerful reptilian legs and appears out of place in this hostile realm.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This is the lair of the most powerful member of the achaierai flock (hp 118). The ancient and cunning specimen leads its people (which dwell in Room M17). It is proud and, unlike most of its flock, refuses to hide. In fact, the achaierai leader makes it a point to remain in plain sight, ready to face any challenger brave enough to face it.

PCs get a +5 circumstance bonus to any Spot check made to notice the achaierai leader, as the creature stands upon a large boulder at the far end of the northern branch of the canyon. The creature is also alert, aware of the danger posed by the other inhabitants in the Chasm. If the PCs notice the creature from the canyon's edge (above), they get a round of surprise. Otherwise, the achaierai leader has a chance to see them. As soon as it notices the PCs, it readies itself for battle but waits for them to make the first move.

If the PCs parley with the achaierai in Infernal (the only language it understands) and change its Initial Attitude from Unfriendly to Neutral or better, the outsider is willing to trade information on the Region with them. The achaierai leader is interested in amassing gold and gems, and tries to convince the PCs to trade such goods for any information might have. If a bargain is made, the achaierai leader promises that its flock will pose no threat to the PCs as long as they agree not enter Room M17. It keeps its part of the bargain as long as the PCs do not betray it, or its flock.

If the PCs threaten or attack the achaierai leader, combat automatically ensues. The achaierai leader views combat as an honorable way of testing its strengths and capabilities, and it is eager to take on the PCs.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: In battle, the achaierai leader lashes out with its forelegs and snaps with its powerful beak, targeting the spellcasters first. It releases choking black smoke, but concentrates all its attack on a single target until it is either dead or incapacitated. It also utters quacking cries to alert the members of its flock (Room M17) as soon as it takes any sort of damage. The achaierai in Room M17 come to its aid 1d4+1 rounds thereafter.

Treasure: The achaierai leader keeps its most precious possessions under a boulder in the scraggy valley. A successful DC 27 Search check reveals that this large stone can be pulled away (with a successful DC 18 Strength check), revealing a small, naturally formed alcove. Within this alcove are 84 pp, 351 gp, a gold ring (worth 90 gp), and a silver goblet perfectly formed into the shape of a dragon's head (worth 75 gp).

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a second advanced achaierai and ignore the PCs' +5 circumstance bonus to Spot check. To decrease the challenge, make the achaierai leader a 14 110 specimen and give the PCs an automatic surprise round.

♣ Achaierai: CR 11; Huge outsider (evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 18d8+72; hp 153; Init +4; Spd 50 ft.; AC 22, touch 8, flat-footed 22; Base Atk +18; Grp +34; Atk +24 melee (4d6+8/19-20, claw); Full Atk +24 melee (4d6+8/19-20, 2 claws) and bite +19 melee (4d8+4); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Black cloud; SQ darkvision 60 ft., spell resistance 19; AL LE; SV Fort +15, Ref +11, Will +13; Str 27, Dex 11, Con 18, Int 11, Wis 14, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Balance +21, Climb +29, Diplomacy +17, Hide +1, Jump +37, Listen +23, Move Silently +22, Sense Motive +23, Spot +23; Dodge, Improved Critical (claw), Improved Initiative, Improved Natural Armor, Improved Natural Attack (claw), Mobility, Spring Attack.

Black Cloud (Ex): Up to three times per day an achaierai can release a choking, toxic black cloud. Those other than achaierai within 10 feet instantly take 2d6 points of damage. They must also succeed on a DC 23 Fort save or be affected for 3 hours as though by an insanity spell (caster level 16th).

The save DC is Constitution based.

M19. BELKERS' GROTTO

PCs need to succeed at a DC 28 Spot check to notice the entrance of this natural cave.

The smooth stone of the valley floor becomes sharper and scraggier near the canyon. Rock formations crown the ledge of the depression, forming an uneven circle some 50 to 70 ft. around the canyon. A careful examination of the area reveals the mouth of a hole, which opens into the ground. The natural grotto is hard to spot because its opening is surrounded by boulders.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The grotto is a hole descending 200 ft. below the earth. The long corridor is large and uneven, winding and narrow. PCs scaling it find a multitude of solid protrusions and indentations to help them in their endeavor. Four DC 20 Climb checks (50 ft. apart) are enough to make it all the way to the bottom of the chasm.

The long natural hallway opens into a vast cave, roughly 100 ft. in diameter. This is the home of four advanced belkers (hp 61, 57, 54, 50). These creatures seldom leave their lair, but attack intruders on sight.

As the PCs climb down into the gorge leading to the underground cave, allow the belkers the appropriate Listen and Spot checks to notice them. If they do, they turn into smoke form and wait for them to set foot in their cave. If the PCs are stealthy and the belkers fail to notice them, the creatures are in their true form at various locations throughout the cave (each roughly 30 feet from the shaft leading to the underground lair) and PCs get an automatic round of surprise.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Once the belkers are aware of the PCs inside their home, two of them turn in to smoke form and use their smoke claw ability to suffocate the intruders. The others attack the PCs already caught in the smoke. In their true form, they flank the PCs and use their mighty wings, claws, and bite attacks to finish them off. These creatures fight to the death.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of belkers and give them a +5 circumstance bonus to any check made to notice the PCs. To decrease the challenge, remove one belker and give the PCs an automatic round of surprise.

✦ Belker: CR 7; Large elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 10d8+10; hp 55; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. Skills and Feats: Listen +9, Move Silently +11, Spot +9; Alertness, Dodge, Multiattack, Weapon Finesse.

Smoke Claws (Ex): A belker in smoke form (see below) can engulf opponents by moving on top of them. It fills the air around one Medium or smaller opponent without provoking an attack of opportunity. The target must succeed on a DC 16 Fortitude save or inhale part of the creature. The save DC is Constitution-based. Smoke inside the victim solidifies into a claw and begins to rip at the surrounding organs, dealing 3d4 points of damage per round. An affected creature can attempt another Fortitude save each subsequent round to cough out the semi-vaporous menace.

Smoke Form (Su): Most of the time a belker is more or less solid, but at will it can assume smoke form. It can switch forms once per round as a free action and can spend up to 20 rounds per day in smoke form. A belker in smoke form can fly at a speed of 50 ft. (perfect). The ability is otherwise similar to a gaseous form spell (caster level 7th).

Skills: Belkers have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

M20. BICKERING BELKERS

A puff of dark gray smoke lingers on the northern edge of the canyon, around what a mound of rocks. From the distance, the smoke moves at an unearthly pace, as if swirling upon itself.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Three huge belkers (hp 121, 110, 103) in smoke form are fighting over an open hole in the ground. The mouth of this wide gorge is 20 ft. in diameter and leads to a 50 ft. wide underground cave. Though this cavern is empty, it is the lair of the three belkers. These creatures are fighting over which of them should have the right to keep the lair to itself. Since none of the belkers want to leave the grotto, fighting broke off among them. PCs within 200 ft. of the belkers can hear their moaning.

The belkers' fighting does not harm them. The creatures bicker in smoke form generating a puff of dark cloud above the grotto they call home. The battle for their lair broke off ten days ago, and takes all the attention of the three belkers. They suffer a -8 penalty to any check made to notice approaching PCs.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the belkers notice the PCs approaching them, they stop bickering and remain in smoke form. They wait until the PCs are within range before charging them with their smoke claw ability. The following round, two of them take their true form to attack the PCs, flanking the spellcasters and concentrating their attacks on them first.

Treasure: Inside the belkers' cave is a collection of worthless colored glass and semiprecious stones (worth a total of 50 gp).

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one belker and ignore any penalties to notice the PCs. To decrease the challenge, remove one belker and impose a -4 penalty to all their Initiative checks.

✦ Belker: CR 9; Huge elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 20d8+60; hp 150; Init +8; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. The target must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or inhale part of the creature. The save DC is Constitution-based. Smoke inside the victim solidifies into a claw and begins to rip at the surrounding organs, dealing 3d4 points of damage per round. The ability is otherwise similar to a gaseous form spell (caster level 7th).

Skills: Belkers have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

M21. ABANDONED GORGE

This narrow gorge is difficult to notice, requiring a DC 28 Spot check.

A hole opens into the ground amidst jagged rocks covering the ground of this area. The grotto is roughly 5 feet in diameter. A closer look reveals it is the mouth of a 30 feet deep vertical tunnel.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A successful DC 22 Climb check allows the PCs to climb down the 30 ft. high gorge, which opens into a natural grotto. This cavern is empty, its stony floor and walls covered with a layer of dust.

A successful DC 30 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) or DC 22 Knowledge (dungeoneering) check reveals the ceiling of the cave threatens to cave in. As soon as more than two PCs set foot upon the grotto's floor, each must tread carefully by making a DC 32 Reflex save. Anyone failing this check sends the ceiling collapsing upon all within. Fortunately for the PCs, this cave-in does not block the only access out of the cave.

✦ Natural Cave-In: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; DC 24 Reflex save half damage (20d6, crush); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 38.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the natural cave in to 26d6 and increase the time it takes to clear the debris to 2 hours. To decrease the challenge, reduce the Search and Disable Device DCs by -5.

M22. EARTHBLOOD FALL

The easternmost branch of the canyon leads to a 60 foot wall smeared with an oily liquid. The substance is a deep color with speckles of red mixed in. It drips down from a hole in the wall, some 30 feet above the canyon's floor. The substance descends so slowly that it seems frozen into place. At the base of the wall is a pool of this same oily stuff.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Earthblood, a liquid pouring out of the earth is a sludge-like substance. It is metallic. Earthblood is the essence of the mountain, and a constant reminder of the pain it endured when the celestials carved it into this prison complex. The mountain's pain was concentrated into this liquid form. Earthblood harms those who touch it and the substance cannot be refined. Every round a PC's skin is exposed to Earthblood, he suffers 1d6 points of fire damage and 1 point of temporary Constitution damage. In addition, he must succeed at a DC 15 Fortitude save or cry out in pain.

Because Earthblood is the blood of the living mountain, all rock-based creatures are drawn to it by smell. Creatures that eat rock and stone, like the xorn, hunger for Earthblood. They become enraged by anyone carrying Earthblood, and attack automatically upon encountering them.

Two powerful xorns (hp 191, 177) hide beneath the ground near the pool of Earthblood. They remain hidden until the PCs are within range, at which point they emerge to surprise them.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs discover the xorns buried in the ground, they get one surprise round. Once they make their presence known, the xorns attack the beefiest PCs, retreating if they take more than 100 hp of damage.

Treasure: Earthblood ignites at the touch of a flame but burns slowly — a single torch dipped in Earthblood can burn for 1d4+1 full days. There is enough Earthblood in this Room to fill several flasks.

If five or more torches of Earthblood are lit at the same time, or if a greater fire is fueled using this substance, the stuff becomes toxic. The dark fumes released by Earthblood then create a 30-ft. radius black cloud. Anyone caught within this cloud must succeed at a DC 32 Fortitude save or take 6d10 points of damage as well as 3d6 points of temporary Constitution damage. A minute later, they must succeed at a DC 32 Fortitude save or suffer 1 Constitution drain. Damage to Constitution score naturally recovers at a rate of 1 per day, but the Constitution drain is permanent. PCs succeeding the initial save still take 3d10 points of damage from the toxic fumes.

Igniting the Earthblood source in this Room produces the effect noted above. The substance continues to burn for 3d6 months, constantly releasing a deadly cloud. Burning the source also prevents PCs from taking Earthblood.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two advanced xorns. To decrease the challenge, remove one of them and assume the other does not automatically surprise the PCs.

✦ Xorn: CR 9; Large outsider (earth, extraplanar); HD 21d8+87; hp 191, 177; Init +0; Spd 20 ft., burrow 20 ft.; AC 26, touch 9, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +21; Crp +29; Atk +27 melee (8d6+7, bite); Full Atk +27 melee (8d6+7, bite) and +25 (1d6+3, 3 claws); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ All-around vision, DR 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., earth glide, immunity to cold and fire, resistance to electricity 10, tremorsense 60 ft.; AL N; SV Fort +16, Ref +12, Will +12; Str 25, Dex 10, Con 19, Int 10, Wis 11, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Hide +20, Intimidate +24, Knowledge (dungeoneering) +24, Listen +24, Move Silently +24, Search +26, Spot +24, Survival +24 (+26 following tracks or underground); Awesome Blow, Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Bull Rush, Improved Natural Armor, Improved Natural Attack (bite), Multiattack, Power Attack, Toughness.

All-Around Vision (Ex): A xorn's symmetrically placed eyes allow it to look in any direction, providing a +4 racial bonus on Spot and Search checks. A xorn can't be flanked.

Earth Glide (Ex): A xorn can glide through stone, dirt, or almost any other sort of earth except metal as easily as a fish swims through water. Its burrowing leaves behind no tunnel or hole, nor does it create any ripple or other signs of its presence. A move earth spell cast on an area containing a burrowing xorn flings the xorn back 30 feet, stunning the creature for 1 round unless it succeeds on a DC 15 Fortitude save.

M23 THROUGH M25. THE OPEN PLAIN

North of the canyon lies a plain, running several miles north before merging with the base of the Black Mountain (Room M9). North of the wide canyon that dominates the central plain (Rooms M17 through M22) is a gully roughly 50 ft. deep (Room M25). The rocky formations surrounding it resemble those of the scraggy stone around the greater canyon.

Though most of the open plain is uninhabited, a few creatures still dwell here.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	The PCs spot the reflection of an object lying on the ground. When they approach, they discover the worthless remains of a broken vial.
2–12	Nothing
13–14	A patrol of three elder air elementals storms this area. They attack all creatures they come in contact with and fight until two of them are destroyed.
15–16	A flock of nine arrowhawks swoop down upon the PCs, sending waves of electricity rays before charging with their beaks and talons. Each arrowhawk fights until it loses two-thirds of its total hit points before retreating to the safety of the air.
17–18	Twelve advanced 6 HD shocker lizards spot the PCs. They remain at a safe distance from them, using their stunning shock ability to warn them off. If the PCs attack or threaten them, the lizards charge using their lethal shock ability to incapacitate them.
19	The PCs stumble upon a trap. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✦ Greater Glyph of Warding: CR 14; magical device; no reset; spell effect (greater glyph of warding [blast], 18th-level cleric, 18d8 acid, DC 21 Reflex save half damage); multiple targets (all targets within 5 ft.); Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31. This trap combines the effect of two greater glyph of warding (blast) trap triggered simultaneously.
20	A colossal scorpion found its way here. It tails the PCs until they either spot it or stop to make camp, at which point it strikes. This hunter fights to the death.

M23. FLATLANDS

North of the canyon and the cliff is a crown-shaped stone plain. There are no peaks or inclinations cutting through this valley, and the plain goes until it meets the Black Mountain further north.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The northwestern stretch of the valley is open. The Flatlands have no plateaus or crevices aside from the ditch in Room M25. Though the ground is not even, rising ever slightly as one travels north, its dusty surface is smooth, as though strong winds had polished it for centuries.

This area is claimed by a group of nine belkers (hp 38 each). These creatures are too weak to challenge their kin dwelling in Rooms M19 and M20, so they wander the Flatlands to ensure they remain theirs, attacking anything crossing their path.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The belkers strike from above, swooping down in smoke form and engulfing their victims with their smoke claws. Once a belker weakens a victim, it returns to solid form and attacks with its claws and bite. These creatures are desperate to keep this territory and fight to the death. If the PCs retreat to another area, they do not pursue, preferring instead to stay behind and guard their territory.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge, raise the HD of each belker to 10. To decrease the challenge, cut their numbers in half.

▼ Belker: CR 6; Large elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 7d8+7; hp 38; Init +5; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. Smoke Claws (Ex): A belker in smoke form (see below) can engulf opponents by moving on top of them. It fills the air around one Medium or smaller opponent without provoking an attack of opportunity. The target must succeed on a DC 14 Fortitude save or inhale part of the creature. The save DC is Constitution-based. Smoke inside the victim solidifies into a claw and begins to rip at the surrounding organs, dealing 3d4 points of damage per round. An affected creature can attempt another Fortitude save each subsequent round to cough out the semivaporous menace.

Smoke Form (Su): Most of the time a belker is more or less solid, but at will it can assume smoke form. It can switch forms once per round as a free action and can spend up to 20 rounds per day in smoke form. A belker in smoke form can fly at a speed of 50 feet (perfect).

The ability is otherwise similar to a gaseous form spell (caster level 7th).

Skills: Belkers have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

M24. OLD BONES

Bones are scattered around the dusty grounds of the plain. Closer examination reveals these remains once formed the skeleton of a giant.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The remains are from a cloud giant who perished here centuries ago. The giant was Norkor's brother (see Room M11), who was killed by the mighty demon wind that now haunts Room M10. Though Norkor's sorrow at the loss of his brother has faded with the passing years, he remembers his brother fondly. If the PCs are respectful of the giant's bones and bring the remains to Norkor (in Room M11), the giant's attitude automatically shifts two ranks towards Helpful.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: A DC 25 Search check reveals a platinum ring with a deep green emerald (3,000 gp), stuck upon one of the giant's bony fingers. A DC 22 Strength check is required to pry it loose.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M25. THE HOLLOW

To the northeast of the plain is a 50 ft. deep ditch. Like the great canyon to the south, this hole is surrounded with jagged rocks.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: A huge xorn (hp 263) uses this naturally formed ditch as its nest. It sleeps surrounded by stone and is for the most part content to remain within the confines of its lair.

Like most creatures of its kind, the xorn likes to dive in and out of the ground. If it notices the PCs approach its lair, it hides at the bottom of the ditch, where it remains until the PCs either go away or enter its lair. If the PCs climb down his hole (DC 16 Climb check), it surfaces to drive them away.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: This elder xorn is not antagonistic, but defends its lair with all its might. It attacks PCs wearing metal armor first, maneuvering to drive them away rather than moving in for a kill. It takes no interest in the PCs unless they violate its lair or carry a great quantity of metal or stone on them (at least 500 lbs). The creature never leaves its hole, preferring instead to fight defensively.

If reduced to 75 hp or less, the xorn use its earth glide ability to retreat into the ground and moves to Room M24. It remains hidden in the soil under the giant's remains until it deems it safe to return to its lair.

Treasure: A successful DC 18 Search check made in the Hollow uncovers a dark blue hat of disguise, a masterwork club is surprisingly good condition, and three bone-tipped masterwork arrows.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, change the xorn's Initial Attitude to Hostile and make it attack the PCs relentlessly. To decrease the challenge, reduce its HD to 24.

EL: 16

...AND THE BARROWS

The second half of this Region is dominated by a group of twisted driders known as the Spider Kings, who have constructed a small but impressive city that binds volcanic rock with web and spell to create a vile fortress. Within the Barrows, the driders' rule is absolute and resistance is met with brutal force. The driders brook no dissension amongst their peers or their drow slaves, relying upon spells and magical servants to enforce their malignant will. Even so rebellion brews. The drow plot against their masters, hiding away stolen poison and blades, and looking forward to the day they can seize control of the Region.

Society within the Barrows is a study in terror. The Spider Kings scheme against one another for domination over their kingdom and their powerful sorcerer's circle. This infighting produced a caste system with the drider sorcerers at the pinnacle, their artisans next in line, and warriors filling the lowest ranks. Though far from influential, the warriors are cruel, as almost a quarter of their ranks are filled with creatures that survived the sorcerers' arcane experiments. These mutations are amongst the most twisted of the creatures found in the Barrows.

THE BARROWS

The Barrows of the Spider Kings are not fitted exclusively for the two-legged slaves. In addition to the Region's floor paths, the driders maintain avenues along the walls and ceilings, leading to restricted areas. After years of using these alternate avenues exclusively, the power-mad driders have reached a foolish conclusion — that the two-legged slaves walking the floor paths are literally beneath their notice. The DM is encouraged to include this drider proclivity in his Room, travel, and random encounter descriptions, providing clever PCs with a way to secretly maneuver through this Region. When the PCs intentionally exploit this weakness, they gain a +2 circumstance bonus with all Hide and Move Silently checks to avoid the driders' notice.

As in the Halls of Flesh to the south (see Region I), little consideration is given to lighting the Barrows. The only natural light emanates from the wardstones littering the Barrow's corridors, warning slaves away from Rooms where they are forbidden to go.

The Barrows' walls are made from volcanic soil held together by the Spider Kings' webbing. Though their construction seems fragile, it is quite sturdy, possessing the same strength specifications as stone. This has earned it the name "silkstone".

When needed, as a move equivalent action, any Spider King or invisible stalker controlled by the Spider Kings may use a substance known as silk solvent to dissolve the webbing binding a 10-ft. stretch of wall together (for more information about this substance, see Room M64). Throughout the PCs' visit to this Region, the Spider Kings and their minions use this ability to turn the terrain against intruders, setting up ambushes and hiding when wounded.

The Spider Kings' drow slaves suffer greatly as experimental fodder, repair crews within the Region's most dangerous tunnels, and bloodsport warriors in the driders' garish entertainments. Fortunately for any party visiting or taken prisoner here, the drow believe that any enemy of their enemy is a tool, and resourceful PCs may find temporary allies within the slave ranks. The slaves are greater allies than they may at first appear — unbeknownst to their masters, they have unlocked several eastern rooms, which they use as a base of for their rebellion. The PCs may do the same should they attempt to undermine the driders' command of the Barrows.

Further, the DM can use the drow as a conduit to reveal the Spider Kings' history, which is well known dark elf lore. Nearly 200 years ago, the drow ruled over a drider slave class. When the drider rose up against their masters but failed to seize power, they fled underground, taking over 30 captured drow with them. The driders fled before the might of drow vengeance, but even more so, they fled the dishonor that stained their relationship with their merciless goddess.

For years, the driders stumbled through underground caverns searching for a new home. Many died on the journey and others went mad. Their only guiding force was their leader, Byalahiir, who took charge of the situation, providing the redemptive drive his people needed to keep moving. Eventually, he delivered them to new greatness...

DRIDER KEYS

Many doors and cases within this Region are secured with magical locks of Spider King design. These locks require the use of a drider key, an onyx statue resembling a miniature drider. To use a drider key, a PC simply places it over a drider lock, at which point the figurine animates to perform the arcane tasks required to open the lock.

Anyone stealing one or more of these keys is in for a rude surprise, however, as their magic allows any drider sorcerer to sense them within 300 ft. Further, when a drider key is used, it emits a concentrated poison to which all driders — but not all drow — are immune. With a successful dispel check (DC 25), the PCs may suppress the poison and tracking abilities of 1 key, but this renders the key useless for opening drider locks as well.

WARDSTONES

Throughout this Region are a number of wardstones, each a piece of volcanic amber containing a clutch of spider eggs. The Spider Kings fabricated these devices and built them into the walls here to defend against invasion or slave revolt. Each is enchanted with variations of the alarm, arcane eye, and see invisibility spells, all as cast by a 12th-level sorcerer.

Further, each wardstone is attuned to the drider keys, ignoring any PC carrying a drider key within its range, as well as any PCs standing or walking adjacent to a key bearer. When anyone approaches within 30 ft. of a wardstone without a drider key, the wardstone emits a high-pitched audible shriek per the standard alarm spell rules, and sends a telepathic "ping" out to a distance of 100 ft. Any drider sorcerer within that range may concentrate to see through the wardstone's arcane eye, acting accordingly.

Finally, when a wardstone is activated, an invisible stalker (hp 52) forms from the primal Air in Room M57, the wardstone nexus. Each invisible stalker created in this fashion moves as directly as possible to the location of the alert, warning driders it encounters along the way about the intrusion.

Each functional wardstone casts a dim blue-black light out to a distance of 10 ft., marginally illuminating its surroundings.

One fateful morning, an earthquake rocked the mountain within which the driders were living, cracking open a giant slab of limestone. Exploring this crevasse, the driders discovered an untapped subterranean territory free of significant opposition, a dungeon prison where all the jailers and prisoners were dead or fleeing the devastating aftershocks. Seizing the opportunity, Byalahiir settled his people within the remaining halls and ordered their drow slaves to tunnel out and secure additional space for the new colony — what would eventually become Region I.

Byalahiir recognized that the drow would eventually outnumber his people, and so he set the driders' philosophers upon the task of creating more of their kind. Chief among these thinkers was the dangerous genius Mahir, a drider specializing in arcane experiments forbidden by their goddess but necessary to propagating the drider species. Mahir's research required drow test subjects drawn from the driders' growing slave population. The process was slow but kept the drow in check, giving them another reason to fear their former slaves.

Eventually, Mahir stole the idea of using the flesh of lesser species as components in a series of bold new experiments. Soon after, he produced the dungeon's first aberration. While the pitiful beast survived less than a season, it was an important step toward the drider's ultimate survival.

Years passed, and Byalahiir's enthusiasm waned. Leading the fledgling drider society became a chore and he asked Mahir to choose three driders of sufficient intellect to aid him as a ruling class of Spider Kings. Byalahiir would still oversee Mahir's work, but the researcher would largely be left to work without impediment.

This was the worst thing Byalahiir could have done.

Secretly, Mahir wanted more than survival — he wanted an army he could lead back to the driders' homeland and use to crush the drow forever. Since the failed coup, this desperate need for revenge had chipped away at Mahir's sanity, until all that remained was desire for revenge — and the tools to realize it.

Decades passed, and Mahir grew more isolated. His laboratory of four driders grew to a dozen and the number of drow he required as test subjects grew from one a season to one a week. Mahir's most gifted apprentice, Elotor, noticed his master's growing obsession but refused to confront him until a failed experiment using a stolen bronze dragon egg destroyed their lab and forced the drider colony to abandon Region I.

Byalahiir executed Mahir for his criminal obsession and led his people here, to Region M, where they have made a new start, hoping to rebuild what Mahir destroyed, and find a way to save themselves from extinction. Now, over a hundred year later, the cursed driders are running out of time. Beasts are encroaching from the south and Elotor's experiments are reaching a zenith. Unless these final avenues of research are successful, the driders may be doomed.

Note: There is a 75% chance that drow items rot to nothing when exposed to sunlight (natural or otherwise). The DM is free to ignore this as he likes.

M26 THROUGH M35. THE SHARP END

As the forefront of the Barrows' security, these passages house the living and recreation areas of most of the Spider Kings' drider guards. These guards are powerful and utterly ruthless, favoring tactics that exploit the natural terrain and allow them to attack from distant, hidden roosts. Fortunately for the party, the drider guards also suffer from arrogance, all too often relying exclusively on the wardstones to alert them that intruders have penetrated their domain.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	The sounds of a drider scuttling along the walls and ceiling echoes through the halls.
2	Screams of anguish fill the halls. Somewhere a drow is being tortured... or worse.
3	A desiccated drow corpse is embedded in the wall.

4–13	Nothing
14	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	◆ Camouflaged Pit Trap: CR 6; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; DC 20 Reflex save avoids; 70 ft. deep (7d6, fall); multiple targets (first target in each of two adjacent 5-ft. squares); Search DC 25; Disable Device DC 25.
15	One drider guard and one invisible stalker patrol the halls. The guard sends the invisible stalker to summon 1d6 drider reinforcements, which return in 1d4 rounds. These creatures retreat if more than 1/3 their number are killed (rounded down).
16	A patrol of 2 drow slave guards (Ftr 4, hp 32 each) encounters the PCs. Unless attacked immediately, the patrol gives the PCs an opportunity to run before sending one of their number to fetch help from the driders. If fetched, 1d2 driders (hp 45 each) respond in 1d4 rounds. If provoked, the drow fight to the death out of fear, while the driders retreat if more than 1/3 their number are killed (rounded down).
17	A patrol of 2 driders (hp 45 each) comes upon the PCs. Drugged during a failed slave attack, the driders assume the PCs to be escaped drow slaves, and drive them toward the slave pit (Room M38). Not possessing their full faculties, these driders fight to the death.
18	A patrol of 4 driders (hp 45 each) comes upon the PCs. They wish to take the credit for capturing the PCs alive and do not call for reinforcements. They retreat if 2 or more of their number are killed.
19	Ari, a pathetic drow slave (Rog 4, hp 30, see Room M30), encounters the PCs while running an errand for his masters. Unless attacked, Ari assumes the PCs can help with the slave rebellion and directs the party toward the broken wardstone in Room M34. Ari refuses to accompany the PCs out of fear that his masters will ultimately defeat them.
20	Loruen, the drider torture master (hp 65, see Room M35), hunts for an escaped slave. He is assisted by a detachment of 6 drider guards (45 hp each). The creatures attempt to subdue the PCs and take them to the torture chamber (Room M35) for interrogation.

M26. WARDSTONE FORK

This corridor rises into darkness, forking left and right. The spar of rock dividing the passage seems odd, though a cursory examination reveals nothing.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This seemingly harmless fork in the corridor is well guarded, both by the driders and drow to the south in Region I, and by an enormous wardstone hidden within the near-black volcanic rock that divides the corridor. Unlike most other wardstones, this gigantic specimen creates two invisible stalkers.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The invisible stalkers arrive from Room M57 in 3d6 rounds, at which point they move into flanking positions around any non-slave not carrying a drider key. Free to move in three dimensions, the stalkers attack from above as well. The stalkers continue to gang up on intruders one by one until all are subdued, then guard them until 2 drider guards arrive to deal with them 1d10 minutes later. If the PCs flee, the stalkers pursue, using their Improved Tracking ability to keep on their prey and shrieking loudly to alert nearby guards.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the invisible stalkers' flight rates, reducing the time until their arrival to 5 rounds. To reduce the challenge, remove 1 invisible stalker.

M27. RALLY POINT

This roughly egg-shaped chamber is lined with web-hardened volcanic earth. Its floor is thick with discarded webbing that crackles under your feet and a stale musk permeates the air. The chamber opens into a passage forking to the west and into a winding tunnel to the southeast.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room is a rallying point for the drider guards (hp 45 each) stationed in the guard hall (Room M28). The webbing on the floor remains from a substance used by the driders to reinforce the chamber's walls, which has dried in places and threatens to come apart without constant attention. The PCs notice this problem with a successful Spot check (DC 16), and if they ask, learn that it is likely quite flammable as well.

PCs with darkvision or low-light vision and a light source may make a DC 30 Spot check to notice a section of the northeast wall some 30 ft. from the floor where the webbing darkens. Moving to this location requires a successful Climb check (DC 22), and allows the PCs to make a DC 28 Search check to find a secret door that rips away from the wall with a sickening crack. Beyond is a low crawlspace that dips down over 20 ft. to the guard hall (Room M28).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs linger in this Room for more than 1 minute (10 rounds), a pair of drider guards enters the chamber through the secret door. These guards are ambitious and seek to rise in the ranks to become favored by the sorcerers, and do not call for help. Instead, when they notice the PCs, they climb to positions above the PCs and use their ranged weapons to attack them from above. If the driders subdue one or more PCs, they deliver them to the slave pit (Room M38), where they demand recognition for their accomplishment.

Treasure: N/AEL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 1 drider guard. To decrease the challenge, reduce all skill check DCs within this Room by 4.

Drider Guard: CR 7; Large aberration; HD 6d8+18; hp 45; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., climb 15 ft.; AC 21, touch 11, flat-footed 19; Base Atk +4; Grp +10; Atk +7 melee (2d6+4/x3, longspear) or +7 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite) or +5 ranged (2d8/19–20, heavy crossbow); Full Atk +7 melee (2d6+4/x3, longspear) and +2 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite) or +5 ranged (2d8/19–20, heavy crossbow); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA poison, spell-like abilities, spells; SQ darkvision 60 ft., SR 17; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +8; Str 16, Dex 15, Con 16, Int 15, Wis 16, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Climb +14, Concentration +9, Hide +10, Listen +9, Move Silently +12, Spot +9; Combat Casting, Point Blank Shot, Weapon Focus (bite).

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 16, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Strength. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights (DC 13) clairsentience and clairvoyance, darkness, detect good, detect law, detect magic, dispel magic, faerie fire, levitate, suggestion (DC 16). Caster level 6th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Typical Sorcerer Spells Known (6/7/6/4, base save DC 13 + spell level): 0—daze, detect magic, ghost sound, magic hand, ray offirst, read magic, resistance; 1st—alarm, magic missile, ray off enfeeblement, shield; 2nd—invisibility, web; 3rd—haste/slow.

These driders cast spells as 6th-level sorcerers.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: Masterwork chain shirt, longspear, dagger, heavy crossbow, bolt (13).

M28. GUARD HALL

Multiple passages lead away from this sparse chamber — or at least, it looks sparsely occupied at first. Silky pouches are cemented into the walls at heights ranging from a few feet to nearly 60 ft. above the floor, and looking up, you find wide silk hammocks hanging from the ceiling. The hammocks sway perversely under the weight of... something crawling upon them.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The guard hall is the central rallying point for drider guards, and the point from which guards are dispatched to deal with intrusions. Aside from the quarters of the Spider Kings themselves, this Room is one of the most lethal locations within the Barrows. At any time, four driders (hp 45 each) are present here.

While the drider guards are alert, they aren't expecting trouble, and spend their time slumbering within the silk hammocks until needed. When invisible stalkers move through this Room, they fly up beneath the hammocks and bump one or more driders awake to assist them. Likewise, any contact awakens 1 drider, who crawls out over the hammock's edge to check the cause of the disturbance. Should any drider notice the PCs, it awakens the others and attacks.

While sleeping, the driders are assumed to take 10 with all Listen checks. If the PCs attempt to sneak through this Room, they must succeed with a Move Silently check (DC 19) in order to pass without notice. With failure, 1 drider rouses and crawls out over the hammock's edge to check the cause of the disturbance. Should any drider notice the PCs, it awakens the others and attacks.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs attract the driders' attention, they're in for a tough fight. The driders attack using their superior mobility to harass and incapacitate the party. PCs within 10 ft. of a wall are attacked with jabbing longspear attacks, while those who move to the center of the Room are attacked from 10 ft. above by levitating driders.

The driders break into two 2-creature groups, each targeting a single PC. As the driders are worn down, their numbers reduced, they reform new 2-creature groups, utilizing the same tactics until only 1 remains, at which point it attempts to retreat through the northeastern tunnel to its commander's chambers (Room M59).

Finally, if the combat continues for longer than 30 seconds (5 rounds), the Spider King Noh hears the sound of combat and dispatches his personal guards (Room M58), which arrive 3 rounds later.

Treasure: Moving up to the silk hammocks requires a successful Climb check (DC 24). Unfortunately, all movement is reduced to 1/4 standard (rounded down) within them. Several bodies of long-dead drow elves are lodged within the hammocks, each of which may be cut out in 30 seconds. After 10 minutes of cutting bodies out of the hammocks, the PCs discover the body of a drow with 3 sp in a small leather pouch and another with a pearl choker (necklace of strangulation), that looks to be worth 200 gp.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, reduce the time it takes for Noh's guards to arrive to 6 rounds (3 rounds before he hears the sounds of combat and 3 rounds to move to this Room). To decrease the challenge, the Spider King Noh does not hear any sound of combat short of a fireball-like explosion.

✦ Driders Guard: CR 7; Large aberration; HD 6d8+18; hp 45; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., climb 15 ft.; AC 17, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +4; Grp +10; Atk +7 melee (2d6+4/x3, longspear) or +7 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite) or +5 ranged (2d8/19–20, heavy crossbow); Full Atk +7 melee (2d6+4/x3, spear) and +2 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite) or +5 ranged (2d8/19–20, heavy crossbow); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA poison, spell-like abilities, spells; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., spell resistance 17; AL CE; SV Fort +5, Ref +4, Will +8; Str 16, Dex 15, Con 16, Int 15, Wis 16, Cha 16.

These driders cast spells as 6th-level sorcerer.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: Large heavy crossbows, box of 15 bolts, masterwork large longspear, large dagger.

M29. WARDSTONE

The twisting, narrow passage widens and increases in height to accommodate a carved, three-sided stone column rising 15 ft. through the floor. The column surfaces are covered with runes that waver, as if alive, and though you're sure it's just the stress of your journey, you're sure the stone is... whimpering.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Years ago, an adventuring party fumbled blindly into this Region, activating the wardstone in Room M26. The group was waylaid by invisible stalkers and drider guards in Room M27 and all but one of them was captured. The last survivor went into hiding and tried to rescue his fellow party members, but couldn't find them at the slave pits (Room M38) or any of the other common drider areas. Eventually, he tracked his lost friends to the torture chamber (Room M35), where the captives had been brutally interrogated for several days. Though it was obvious they were badly injured, the survivor assumed his missing allies were still alive.

He was wrong. After the driders' interrogation yielded no new information about the intruders, the captives were transferred to Noh's forge (Room M59), where they were torn apart while still alive — both for the Spider King's amusement and to generate new parts for the driders' flesh golem servants. Unfortunately, the lone survivor witnessed the deaths of the last two of his allies firsthand, and the experience drove him quite insane.

The survivor revealed his position and attacked Noh and her minions, but was beaten back. He fled through the Region, narrowly escaping death in several Rooms, until he ended up here, with only a forcegate scroll at his disposal. As a last, unthinking resort, he cast the spell upon himself, creating a force wall between him and the drider guards approaching from all directions.

Soon, however, the spell faded, and the survivor lost count of the driders waiting patiently to shred him limb from limb. Accepting his fate with a heavy heart, he drew his blade and gutted himself, spilling his life blood over the wardstone moments before the driders descended upon him.

Today, the survivor's spirit lingers within the Room, transformed into an vengeful allip trapped in never ending hopelessness. The allip cannot bring itself to leave this Room, and is wracked with guilt over the deaths of its mortal friends. Most of the time, the allip hides within the wardstone, which gives the obelisk its strange surface texture (the runes are merely written spell components inscribed when the driders created the artifact).

Encounter Condition: Distracting noises 2, haunted

Tactics: Unfortunately for the PCs, the allip mistakes all outsiders (i.e. non-dungeon residents) as its mortal friends, and attempts in vain to embrace them. Should the PCs (logically) attempt to flee the Room, the allip does everything in its power to prevent them from doing so. After a round of futile physical actions, it lashes out, using its Wisdom drain ability until it reduces the party to gibbering idiots or drives them from the Room. All the while, the allip babbles incoherently about "lost friends," apologizing for everything.

Should the PCs not possess a drider key and linger in the Room for 6 rounds, the invisible stalker the wardstone creates in Room M57 arrives. Free to move in three dimensions, the stalker attacks from all directions. If the PCs flee, the stalker pursues using its Improved Tracking ability to keep on their prey and shrieking loudly to alert nearby guards.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the wardstone create one additional invisible stalker. To decrease the challenge, remove the allip.

✦ Allip: CR 3; Medium undead (incorporeal); HD 4d12; hp 26; Init +5; Spd Fly 30 ft. (perfect); AC 15, touch 15, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +2; Grp —; Atk Incorporeal touch +3 melee (1d4 Wisdom drain); Full Atk (same); Space/Reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA Babble, madness, wisdom drain; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., incorporeal traits, +2 turn resistance, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +1, Ref +4, Will +4; Str —, Dex 12, Con —, Int 11, Wis 11, Cha 18.

Skills and Feats: Hide +8, Intimidate +7, Listen +7, Search +4, Spot +7, Survival +0 (+2 following tracks); Improved Initiative, Lightning Reflexes.

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 feet of the allip must succeed on a DC 16 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

✦ Invisible Stalker: CR 7; Large elemental (air, extraplanar); HD 8d8+16; hp 52; Init +8; Spd 30 ft., fly 30 ft. (perfect); AC 17, touch 13, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +6; Grp +14; Atk Slam +10 melee (2d6+4, slam); Full Atk +10 melee (2d6+4, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ darkvision 60 ft., elemental traits, improved tracking, natural invisibility; AL N; SV Fort +4, Ref +10, Will +4; Str 18, Dex 19, Con 14, Int 14, Wis 15, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Listen +13, Move Silently +15, Search +13, Spot +13, Survival +2 (+4 following tracks); Combat Reflexes, Improved Initiative, Weapon Focus (slam).

Improved Tracking (Ex): An invisible stalker is a consummate tracker and makes Spot checks instead of the usual Survival checks to trace a creature's passage.

Natural Invisibility (Su): This ability is constant, allowing a stalker to remain invisible even when attacking.

This ability is inherent and not subject to the invisibility purge spell.

M30. BLOODLETTING CHAMBER

The huge room before you is a travesty. Slung upside down upon stone bars are the corpses of dozens of creatures and human adventurers. All are slit open, drained of blood. Something has bled these victims dry — and fed from their slow deaths. As you shake off the chill that accompanies this grisly picture, footsteps approach from the shadows to your right...

Initial Attitude: Hostile, friendly

Encounter: This Room was once part of the dungeon in Region 1, and (largely) retains its original dimensions, though its purpose has shifted since the driders took over. Once an aviary for a flock of celestial avorals, the 100 ft.-tall chamber has been converted into a disgusting feeding zone for the most insatiable of the Spider Kings' minions. The perches upon which the avorals once slept are now used to string up captured adventurers and creatures, hanging them upside down so the driders can bleed them as an entertaining delicacy.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant air

Tactics: One of the drider artisans, an obese stonemason named Treak (hp 66), slumbers in a self-engorged haze in the corner to the PCs' left. He is sick to his stomach, having just consumed most of the blood volume from a captured centaur, and ignores all noises in the Room except combat (though the DM is encouraged to make it seem like he might wake at any moment once the PCs discover his presence). If awakened, Treak attacks immediately, but in his sad condition, he is considered to be staggered and suffers a –2 circumstance penalty with all attack rolls and skill checks.

The approaching footsteps are those of Ari (hp 30), a bone-thin torture slave favored by many of the drider artisans. Ari is frail and slight, but sound of mind, and knows much about the Region. He can point the PCs in the direction of the broken wardstone (Room M34), and more importantly, if his attitude is improved to helpful, he can tell the party how to disable all the wardstones (see Room M57). Ari will not accompany the party through the Region, however, in case they suffer the same fate as all who have come before them, nor will he fight for or against the PCs unless he absolutely must (e.g. to keep in good standing with any conscious driders within line of sight, or to save his own skin).

Both Treak and Ari have grown accustomed to the stench within the Room, and are immune to its stagnant air encounter condition.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a standard drider guard who helped Treak finish the centaur. Though suffering from the same conditions, the guard is awakened by any noise louder than casual conversation. To decrease the challenge, have Treak sleep through anything that happens in the Room, no matter how loud.

▲ Treak, Drider Exp 6: CR 7; Large aberration; HD 6d8+12+6d6+12; hp 66; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; Climb 15 ft.; AC 18, touch 12, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +8; Grp +13; Atk +8 melee (1d6+1, tool) or +9 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite); Full Atk +9 melee (1d4+1 plus poison, bite) and +3 melee (1d6, tool); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA poison, spell-like abilities, spells; SQ darkvision 60 ft., SR 17; AL NE; SV Fort +5, Ref +5, Will +8; Str 13, Dex 16, Con 15, Int 17, Wis 16, Cha 16.

Poisons (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 18, initial and secondary damage 1d6 Strength. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights (DC 13), clairaudience and clairvoyance, darkness, detect good, detect law, detect magic, dispel magic, faerie fire, levitate, suggestion (DC 16). Caster level 6th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Typical Sorcerer Spells Known (6/7/6/4, base save DC 13 + spell level): 0—daze, detect magic, mage hand, prestigation, ray of frost, read magic, resistance; 1st—mage armor, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, silent image; 2nd—see invisibility, web; 3rd—hold person.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: Lots of craftsman's gear, scrolls, pens, ink.

▲ Ari, Drow Rog 4: CR 5; Medium humanoid (drow elf); HD 4d6+6; hp 30; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 19, touch 14, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +3; Grp +4; Atk +5 melee (1d8+1/19-20, masterwork longsword) or +7 ranged (1d6/x3, short bow); Full Atk +5 melee (1d8+1/19-20, masterwork longsword) or +7 ranged (1d6/x3, short bow); SA Sneak attack +2d6, spell-like abilities; SQ Darkvision 120', eleven traits, evasion, light blindness, SR 15, uncanny dodge; AL NE; SV Fort +2, Ref +8, Will +1; Str 12, Dex 19, Con 12, Int 14, Wis 11, Cha 13.

Skills and Feats: Balance +13, Bluff +2, Climb +8, Hide +11, Disable Device +9, Jump +8, Listen +9, Move Silently +11, Open Lock +5, Search +11, Spot +9, Tumble +13; Dodge, Improved Initiative.

Evasion (Ex): Ari can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If she makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, she instead takes no damage. A helpless rogue does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Sneak Attack: Ari's attack deals extra damage any time her target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when Ari flanks her target. This extra damage is 2d6. Should the rogue score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Ari can react to danger before her senses would normally allow her to do so. She retains her Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if she is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, she still loses her Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster level 4th.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: +1 studded leather of fire resistance, buckler, masterwork longsword, dagger (2), short bow, arrow (13)

M31. CHIMNEY

The south wall of the bloodletting room collapsed — or been dug out. A tunnel leads into the darkness, reeking with the stench of death...

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Long ago, during the initial earthquake, a ranger of some repute fell into the earth. He became trapped just above the dungeon, suffocating beneath the collapsing earth.

Eventually, carrier crawlers tunneled to his remains and fed upon his corpse, leaving this fragile tunnel behind. The driders sent a drow slave in to investigate shortly after they took over this Region, but he became wedged in the tunnel and died. The driders have not explored the tunnel further since.

The tunnel proceeds for 15 ft. into the wall at an irregular southeast angle before opening into a vertical chimney that rises 50 ft. from the dungeon floor. The drow slave's corpse is 20 ft. up, and the ranger is found at the chimney's highest point, 50 ft. up.

Within the tunnel and chimney, all movement is reduced to 1/2 standard (rounded up). No skill check is required to traverse the tunnel, but ascending within the chimney requires a successful Climb check (DC 20) per round of movement.

The tunnel and chimney are both highly unstable and any PC must make a successful Reflex save (DC 22) at the end of each round during which he moves through them or performs any action that requires him to wriggle around inside. This DC rises to 30 if any PC within the chimney failed his Climb check during the current round. With failure, the tunnel collapses, pinning and inflicting 4d6 damage to each PC within either the tunnel or the chimney. Due to the tight confines, no PCs may make Reflex saves to reduce this damage. Following a collapse, the standard cave-in and collapse rules apply to any PCs who remain trapped within the tunnel or chimney.

The drow slave's corpse must be pulled out of the chimney and tunnel before anyone may pass its location and approach the dead ranger. In addition to any Climb checks required to return to the dungeon floor level, this also requires the PC moving the body to make a successful Dexterity check (DC 20) during each round. Failure with this check has the same result as failing a Climb check under the same circumstances.

Encounter Condition: Poor footing 10, stagnant air

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The drow slave carries (literally) nothing. The ranger, however, possessed several items when he died. If a PC searches his body without moving it, he may recover a coin purse containing 17 gp and 4 sp, and a small canvass upon which the ranger completed a majestic landscape worth 2,000 gp on the open market. Removing the ranger's body allows the PCs to recover 10 standard torches, a small leather box containing flint and steel, a wooden holy symbol dedicated to the nature god Obad-Hai, and 4 broken spell storing arrows +1. The arrows are useless on their own, but a successful Craft (weaponsmith) check (DC 18) recovers the arrowheads, which may later be mounted upon new shafts. Failure with this Craft check destroys what little magic remains in the arrowheads, however. The ranger carried more equipment and magic items, including many potions, but all were crushed or snapped apart when he fell into the earth.

EL: 6

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the Climb and Reflex save DCs by 2 each. To decrease the challenge, decrease the Climb and Reflex save DCs by 2 each.

M32. THE HALL OF FURY

Heat rises through this grand hallway, drawing beads of sweat out of the depths of your body. The environment cools off toward the far end of an intersecting southern corridor, leading you to believe that the source of the heat is a massive stone door set into the northern wall. A near-deafening roar floods into the area from behind the northern door.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The Hall of Fury's rather pretentious name belies its true purpose — simple waste disposal for the Barrows. Slaves bring wheelbarrows full of corpses and discarded items to this Room, unceremoniously dumping them into a lava vent behind the northern door. Occasionally, the drow rebels ask a friendly slave with access to dispose of bodies and other evidence of their dissension.

The vent comprises the full rear 5 ft. of the chamber beyond the northern door, and though no saves or skill checks are required to merely stand at its edge and avoid falling in, a PC may be bull rushed or otherwise forced in. If this occurs, the victim falls 20 ft. into a lava pool, suffering 8d6 fire damage. Further, the PC must make a successful DC 20 Climb check to remove himself from the molten rock, and two successful DC 18 Climb checks to ascend the vent before he can return to this Room.

For every minute the PCs spend in this room, there is a 10% chance that a group of four drow slaves (hp 3 each) enter with a load of waste. They are accompanied by one drow guard (hp 32) — a "favored" drow in whom the droids place minor responsibility and beat less often. The drow enter the Room through either the east or west door, per the DM's discretion, and the guard remains at the door until the slaves are done delivering their cargo.

The slaves spend as little time here as possible. They work steadily to unload their barrows into the lava vent, the quicker to get into cooler areas. One among them clearly shirks, and the others soon toss him into the vent along with the garbage. Miraculously, he survives, climbing back to the Room 10 minutes later. If the PCs remain, he is willing to help them by describing or leading them to any area occupied or open to slaves, though he is too weak to fight. Also, he only agrees to help the PCs if they agree to take him with them when they leave this Region.

Encounter Condition: Echoes 8, extreme heat

Tactics: If the guard notices the PCs, he moves to attack, ordering the slaves into the vent room and telling them to shut the door until he comes for them. The slaves don't question their masters and flee into the northern chamber as the guard uses darkness to create a battlefield to his liking.

During the combat, the guard remains within the darkness field and fights defensively until the PCs either suffer the effects of the heat or score 2 or more hits inflicting a total of 10 or more points of damage. In either case, the guard then lays into the PCs, using only the most rudimentary melee tactics. If the guard loses more than 1/2 his hit points (rounded down), he flees toward the nearest guard post (Room M54).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one drow guard and have the guards attempt to bull rush the PCs into the vent room whenever possible. To decrease the challenge, remove the drow guard and have the slaves come in alone.

M33. FUNGUS GARDEN

The rich smell of plowed earth clashes with the smell of decay in this chamber. Shapes spring from mounds bobbing in an invisible breeze.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Contrary to what the PCs might assume, this fungus garden does not feed the drow and their drider masters, but provides the Spider Kings with components for their alchemical research. The garden requires little supervision, and conceals a horrifying secret — the breeding mounds contain paralyzed drow slaves within whom the fungus takes root.

This particular breed of fungus derives sustenance from living creatures, taking up residence in their skin and muscle. When the raw fungus is ingested, it operates like a paralytic poison. Shortly thereafter, small knobs appear under the immobile PC's skin, growing like tumors and spreading their roots throughout surrounding tissue. Soon, the knobs break through the skin and rise upon white stalks. Throughout this painful process, the fungus produces minute waste that incidentally provides the host with just enough nutrients to keep it alive — for a time. Eventually, the host dies and the fungus follows shortly.

This fungus is not a natural growth, but an alchemical reproduction of several exotic spell components the driders intentionally bred into one plant. Its ecology is fragile, and requires precise conditions to survive, but it supports many of the Spider Kings' efforts within the dungeon. All efforts to transplant the fungus elsewhere fail, however.

When the driders grow displeased with a drow slave and can't find a better use for him, they offer him the raw fungus as a "reward for his service to the Spider Kings". They shower the slave with compliments and respect just long enough for the poison to take effect, then bury him here, providing a bed for their fungus garden. They pin the victims' noses closed and strap on narrow air pipes to keep the slaves alive, but otherwise provide them with no comfort whatsoever. Unfortunately for the victims, they remain conscious throughout the entire process, and though they can't move, are aware of the roots and knobs slowly spreading within their torso, neck, and limbs.

Currently, ten drow bodies are buried here, but there is room for many more. Should the PCs become captured, the Spider Kings may either trick or force them to ingest the poison and bury them here, alongside the miserable, withering slaves.

Any PC who enters this Room may make a Spot check (DC 20) to notice an air pipe or partially surfaced drow body part. Otherwise, the truth under the beds may be discovered simply by sweeping away the three to five inches of dirt covering any of the bodies.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Identifying the fungus as a spell component requires a successful Alchemy or Spellcraft check (DC 18). For each minute the PCs spend working the beds, they may harvest 1 oz. of useful material, which may be refined as a spell component with a successful Alchemy or Spellcraft check (DC 25). Each ounce of refined fungus replaces 1 use of vegetable spell components for 1 spell of the PC's choice, decided when the PC makes the Alchemy or Spellcraft check to refine it.

EL: 4

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 standard drider guards and 4 drow slaves. To decrease the challenge, reduce the DCs of all saves made to resist the poison by 2.

♣ Skinroot Fungus Poison — Ingested, Fortitude save DC 25, initial damage paralyzation/secondary damage special. Note: When a PC fails the Fortitude save to resist this poison's secondary damage, he suffers 1d2 temporary Con and 1d2 temporary Cha damage, plus an additional 1 temporary Con and 1 temporary Cha damage per week thereafter, until he is the target of a successful Heal check (DC 25). While suffering from this poison's secondary damage, the PC's skin becomes a breeding ground for raw skinroot fungus, the patches of which grow and become more pronounced as the PC slowly dies.

M34. BROKEN WARDSTONE

The northern end of this burrow forks slightly, one path leading into a noisy chamber further to the north, and another path leading into another dim chamber not unlike this one to the south. Central within the fork stands a ceiling-high pillar of roughly carved stone, its dull surface covered in worn runes. The floor and walls of this chamber are pitted as if a great combat once erupted here.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Unknown to the driders, the wardstone in this Room no longer functions, its link to the Column of Chains broken by time and combat damage. It still maintains its magical aura of strong abjuration, but is incapable of sensing intruders or summoning invisible stalkers.

M35. TORTURE CHAMBER

The center of this earthen chamber is a chamber of horrors, decorated with blackened iron chains dangling from the ceiling and unidentifiable flesh parts piled in corners. Beneath this layer of gore stands a hellish complement of torture. A powerful cloud of stinking copper clings to everything. Hanging upon each wall are multi-colored hides bearing a symbol you don't recognize. The symbol appears to have been seared into the flesh — while blood still pumped through its thin surface veins.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This demented workshop is operated by the Spider Kings' torture master, a twisted creature that calls itself Loruen (hp 65), which translates as 'Blood Vision' in Undercommon. Loruen does not quite have the standing of the true Spider Kings, but plays an important role in their grand designs — his explorations of the limits of mental and physical endurance have yielded subtle yet profound results as somatic components in the driders' ritual attempts to create new members of their species.

Loruen loves his work, rarely leaving his torture chamber. When not engaged in a prolonged 'session', he spends his time developing ever more inventive devices and potions to inflict upon his future 'guests'. If the PCs are captured, the Spider Kings may deliver them here in the hope that Loruen can either interrogate them about other intruders or use them in the next ritual attempt to create another drider.

Under these circumstances, Loruen is extremely dangerous, alternately using charm person and cause fear to "tenderize" a subject's mind before casting ray of enfeeblement and indulging with his physical instruments. When a subject is close to breaking, he uses suggestion to push him over the edge. Loruen marks his most prized successes with a symbol of his own device — the PC the PCs spot when entering this Room. Though this symbol has no special properties, Loruen thinks it looks good hanging on his wall.

In the unlikely event that a subject resists Loruen's standard procedure, he resorts to trickery, leaving the chamber in frustration and casting alter self to make him appear like a member of the subject's race come to rescue him. He feigns not being able to release the subject, however, and while searching for the keys, casts daze, detect thoughts, and hypnotism to learn or achieve what he wants.

Encounter Condition: Fear 15, poor footing 5, stagnant air

Tactics: Loruen is not a front line fighter and knows it. He relies exclusively upon spells to defend himself and flees through the most open route under cover of darkness if forced into combat (though he possesses a natural poison attack and the true strike spell, he doesn't think to use them).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 6

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one drow guard per PC present. To decrease the challenge, assume Loruen does not have access to his 3rd-level spells, having used them earlier today.

M36 THROUGH M42. THE SPIDER'S SHADOW

To the uninitiated, these chambers could be the epitome of terrible efficiency. Shackled drow slaves toil beneath the whips of their "better" brothers and sisters, those favored drow elevated to guard status for betraying errant slaves to the vicious drider overlords. Every day, drow vanish into the western tunnels. Here, hope dies beneath the whip.

Yet a rebel movement blossoms.

To ensure their secrecy, the drow rebels let few in on their plans. The average slave knows nothing about a resistance. Most slaves are beyond salvation, and recognizing this, the rebels protect their secrets to the grave. Secrets are kept even amongst the rebels. Few know of their greatest secrets — their makeshift infirmary (Room M39) and the rooms behind the lavafall in Room M43.

This distrust operates against the PCs as they explore this Section. Assuming any intruders are doomed to incite the driders' wrath, the slaves in this Section wish nothing to do with the PCs. All skill checks made to improve these slaves' dispositions consequently suffer a –6 circumstance penalty. The slaves respond well to proof of kind PCs' convictions, however, and this penalty is reduced to –2 for any slaves who directly witness the party attacking the driders or drow guards. Should the PCs manage to gain the slaves' trust, they gain allies. Slaves who are friendly with the PCs provide them with all information at their disposal, provide distractions to confuse the driders and the traitor-drow, and stand guard when the PCs are performing actions critical to the cause. Helpful drow will even fight alongside the PCs, though only when they are sure that they will either go free as a direct result of the current combat or to save the PCs' lives or rescue them from the Spider Kings or their most powerful minions (such as Loruen).

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

3	The sound of rushing water is heard through a crack in a nearby wall.
4–13	Nothing
14	The PCs stumble upon a trap set by the drow to harry the driders.
	◆ Camouflaged Pit Trap (40 ft. deep): CR 2; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; no attack roll necessary (4d6); Reflex save (DC 20) avoids; Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 20). Note: This trap is disabled by finding the floor panel release and hammering it into place.
15	A patrol of 4 drow guards (Ftr 4, hp 32 each) encounters the PCs. Unless attacked immediately, the patrol gives the PCs an opportunity to run before sending one of their number to fetch help from the driders. If fetched , 1d4 driders (hp 45 each) respond in 1d4 rounds. If provoked, the drow fight to the death out of fear, while the driders retreat if more than ½ their number are killed (rounded down).
16	A patrol of 6 drow slaves (hp 3 each) quietly drags the body of a recently killed drider to the lava vent in Room M32. If they notice the PCs, they drop the drider's limbs and run in panic for the secret infirmary (Room M39).
17	One drider guard (hp 45) and one invisible stalker (hp 52) discover the PCs. The guard sends the invisible stalker to summon 1d6 drider reinforcements (hp 45 each), which return with the stalker in 1d4 rounds. These creatures retreat if more than ½ their number are killed (rounded down).
18	A patrol of 2 driders (hp 45 each) comes upon the PCs. Drugged during a failed slave attack, the driders assume the PCs to be escaped drow slaves, and drive them toward the slave pit (Room M38). Not possessing their full faculties, these driders fight to the death.
19	Wicieth, an aranea courier dominated by the Spider Kings (Rog 6, hp 40), comes upon the PCs during a trip to Region I (for more information, see Room M62). Unless the PCs notice the creature, it hides from sight until they pass. If attacked, it flees to Room M61, where it warns the Spider King Faieth about the intruders.
20	The Spider King Faieth (Sor 9, hp 80), comes upon the PCs during a visit to the slave pits. Surprisingly, the drider doesn't attack unless accosted, nor does he warn the other Spider Kings of the PCs' presence.

M36. SANCTUARY (ENTRANCE)

Burrowed out of the volcanic soil and reinforced with silky webbing, this passage looks almost pearlescent. The downward slope is gradual for the first 5 ft., but quickly steepens. It ends after 15 ft., the tunnel clogged wall-to-wall, floor-to-ceiling with impenetrable webbing.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Years ago, a group of celestials descended upon this Region, armed with firsthand knowledge of the Spider Kings' evil. They sought to shatter the driders' stranglehold over the drow slaves and erase the overlords' corruption from the once-noble prison structure, and though the battle was fierce and the celestials greatly weakened the Spider Kings ranks, evil triumphant.

As an example to all, the Spider Kings strung the lone surviving celestial between two poles in the slave pits and ordered the drow guards to use him for target practice. Throughout the ordeal, the celestial never spoke — at least not visibly — but in the end, with his dying breath, he quietly told a nearby slave two things. One, that the drow would one day be free, and two, that the branch leading east from the southern tunnel — this Room — would forever remain the drow's sanctuary.

Since that day, this tunnel and Room M39 have been concealed with a thick barrier of what appear to be spider webs. In fact, this substance is a magical construct that arachnids of all types find repulsive. In their arrogance, the driders assume that the tunnel is repulsive to all creatures, and they're right — except in the case of the drow, who find these surroundings pleasant. Further, while all other creatures find the webbing an obstacle, drow can sweep it aside.

Now, the drow use these Rooms as a hiding place, and more importantly, to heal from the dire wounds inflicted by the Spider Kings and their guards. Though the drow are still far from ready to take on their terrible masters, they can finally have a place where they can rest.

The drow avoid visiting this Room unless it's necessary, as they don't want to arouse the driders' suspicions. Those who are grievously injured, however, are smuggled here during hours when the guard shifts are light, and those who are sentenced to or left for dead are smuggled here permanently. A small number of survivors now dwell here full-time, leading the rebel movement throughout the Region.

Encounter Condition: [Fear 20], [Stagnant Air]

Tactics: Any non-drow PC who enters this tunnel is targeted with the Fear 20 and Stagnant Air Encounter Conditions. Additionally, when the PC takes any move action herein (including his bonus 5-ft. step), he must make a Balance check (DC 20) or become stuck in the webs. Thereafter, in order for the PC to take any move action (including his bonus 5-ft. step), he must make a Strength check (DC 20 + 1 per point by which he failed his Balance check). Finally, during each round while the PC is stuck in the webbing, he suffers the effects of subdual poison.

If a PC is knocked unconscious by the subdual poison, the webs seemingly "absorb" him (in truth, they suck him through and slowly move his inert body to the lip of Room M39, then drop him at the feet of the drow rebels therein. All of these effects persist until the PC leaves the tunnel.

Drow PCs are unaffected by these effects, and in fact may clear the tunnel with a full move action by making a successful Concentration check (DC 15). The DM should not tell a drow PC about his immunities nor his ability to clear the tunnel, however, unless the player declares that he is entering the tunnel or trying to will the webs aside, respectively.

♣ Subdual Poison — Contact, Fortitude save DC 25, initial/secondary damage 1d4 subdual damage. Note: A PC must make additional Fortitude saves to resist this poison's secondary damage during the third and each subsequent round during which he remains in contact with the source of the poison.

M37. WARDSTONE

Within a tall cavern at the southern edge of the slave pits stands a 15-ft. tall, three-sided stone column covered with deeply carved runes. The slaves give this location a wide berth, eyeing it warily whenever they approach.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This obelisk is a standard wardstone, planted here to keep the slaves from escaping to the south. All slaves are made to understand how the wardstone works when they arrive in the pits, and any who activate it are left to the invisible stalker it creates.

Fortunately, the rebel drow have managed to steal a handful of drider keys, allowing them to bypass this defensive perimeter when the guards aren't looking (which is often, given how confident they are that the perimeter is secure). These keys are included in the appropriate stat blocks throughout this Section's descriptions.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Should the PCs not possess a drider key and linger in the Room for 6 rounds, the invisible stalker the wardstone creates in Room M57 arrives. Free to move in three dimensions, the stalker attacks from all directions. If the PCs flee, the stalker pursues, using its Improved Tracking ability to keep on their prey and shrieking loudly to alert nearby guards.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the wardstone create one additional invisible stalker. To decrease the challenge, the invisible stalker's creation is delayed by a magical "glitch" and arrives after 10 rounds instead of 6.

M38. SLAVE PIT

The drider and drow guards automatically notice the PCs unless they declare they're hiding. Given the chamber's size and the small number of guards present, however, the PCs gain a +4 circumstance bonus with all Hide checks made herein until one or more guards alert the others.

This massive cavern is flooded with the steady amber glow of a wide lava flow to the north and the temperature here is barely tolerable for most of you. Dozens of shackled dark elves labor upon the wide plain before you under the watchful collective eye of several man-spider and dark elf overlords stationed on surrounding ledges. The elves are in dire shape.

Initial Attitude: Hostile, unfriendly

Encounter: Fifty drow slaves (hp 3 each) mine rock to be used to create silkstone in Room M64, and building structures much like those in that location as a new citadel for their immediate overlord, the Spider King Faieth (Room M61). The project will not be complete for many months yet, and Faieth is beginning to suspect that it may never come to fruition, given the increased number of slaves required for Elotor's desperate research. Consequently, Faieth's driders are working the slaves much more aggressively. Forced to fulfill the Spider Kings' private agendas, the slave population is rapidly dying off, leading the rebels to believe that if the drow are ever to be free, they must strike soon.

There is a 10% chance that a slave is part of the rebel movement. Rebels whose attitude toward the PCs are improved to Friendly or better may reveal one or more secrets about this Section, such as the infirmary (Room M39) or the base beyond the lavafall in Room M43.

The six drow guards (hp 32 each) and three driders (hp 45 each) stand watch over the slaves making sure they accomplish their task. They are ever-vigilant of "rebel" activity.

Encounter Condition: Hazardous Footing 15

Tactics: The driders are supremely confident in their ability to repel intruders — after their drow underlings have softened them up. They calmly observe the situation until the last drow guard falls, then send a slave to summon Faieth from her lair (Room M61) and stride in to engage the party. Until reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ hit points (rounded down), each drider fights in the open, making full attacks with its poison and melee weapons. Thereafter, the driders levitate to higher ground — structures within the chamber or ledges at its edge — and pick away at the PCs with their missile weapons until Faieth arrives. Fearing their lord's response, the driders do not flee unless forced, and true to this fear, Faieth's minions cut down any drow who runs before moving to engage the PCs.

Faieth arrives in 1d6+4 rounds, with all the driders and drow guards from Rooms M60 through M63 in tow.

Skills and Feats: Craft (any one) +4, Listen +1, Search +2, Spot +1, Survival +1; Endurance.

Elf Traits: Immunity to sleep spells and effects, and a +2 racial saving throw bonus against enchantment spells or effects.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster level 1st.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

M39. SANCTUARY (INFIRMARY)

The chamber is surrounded with the same pearlescent webbing that graces the outside corridor. Beyond the sticky barrier, the corridor's floor drops away, into a wide irregular cavern, the contents of which move one not to horror, but to pity. Hammocks wrought of pale silk support as many as half a dozen sleeping dark elves, each suffering from a horrific deformity. An attractive female of their species — who is herself seemingly free of the mutations — tends to the poor elves.

Initial Attitude: Hostile or Unfriendly

Encounter: This place is blessed and shielded from droider view by the last of a band of celestials who attempted to wrest control of this Region from the Spider Kings (see Room M36). The drow have converted it into a makeshift infirmary, using the Room's healing properties to restore those grievously wounded. Umressintra (hp 50), a former drow slave beaten nearly to death and destined for the lava vent in Room M32, acts as this infirmary's permanent caretaker. Unlike many of her kind, Umressintra is a genuinely caring person and she has become one of the rebel movement's de facto leaders in recent months. She never leaves the infirmary and the long-term exposure to this Room's effects have gifted her with another talent — the ability to heal with a touch. Umressintra keeps this gift to herself, concealing its use during her examinations and revealing it only to the most trusted rebels. All fear that if the Spider Kings were to find out about Umressintra and her power, they would abandon everything to hunt her down and destroy her.

Given her sheltered and dangerous life, Umressintra doesn't trust anyone unless they are accompanied and endorsed by a drow rebel, or the PC carries some kind of identification from Lorath, the drow captain in Region 1 (Room 1103). Even then, her Initial Attitude is Unfriendly and must be improved through persuasion (i.e. Diplomacy).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Umressintra is ill-equipped for battle, and none of the patients here can stand, let alone fight, but two drow rebels (hp 43 each) are posted here at all times. These guardians hide in nooks crafted from the webbing above the Room's entrance, and sneak into positions from which they can surprise intruders if needed. The rebels attempt to subdue the PCs unless and until they are reduced to 0 hit points (rounded down), at which point they attack to kill.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, one of Umressintra's patients goes berserk, attacking everyone in the room even the other patients. The creature shares statistics with the drow rebels, but possesses 2 additional fighter levels and 17 additional hit points. To decrease the challenge, remove 1 drow rebel guard.

▲ Umressintra, Drow Exp 8: CR 8; Medium humanoid (drow elf); HD 8d6+16; hp 50; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 12, touch 11, flat-footed 11; Base Atk +6; Grp +5; Atk +7 melee (1d4+1/19–20 plus poison, masterwork dagger); Full Atk +7/+2 melee (1d4+1/19–20 plus poison, masterwork dagger); SA Spell-like abilities; SQ Darkvision 120 ft., elfen traits, lay on hands, light blindness, SR 19; AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +4, Will +7; Str 10, Dex 15, Con 14, Int 12, Wis 12, Cha 19.

Skills and Feats: Craft (alchemy) +7, Heal +15, Knowledge (nature) +12, Listen +8, Search +8, Spot +8, Survival +12; Dodge, Mobility; Skill Focus (heal).

Lay on Hands (Su): Each day Umressintra can heal a total number of hit points of damage equal to her level × her Charisma bonus (82 total). Umressintra may choose to divide her healing among multiple recipients, and she doesn't have to use it all at once. Using lay on hands is a standard action.

Poison (Ex): An opponent hit by a drow's poisoned weapon must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude save or fall unconscious. After 1 minute, the subject must succeed on another DC 13 Fortitude save or remain unconscious for 2d4 hours.

M40. SHACKLES OF LIGHT

Within a shallow alcove, a waterfall trickles down from the ceiling, disappearing through eroded cracks in the floor. Bloodstains surround the cracks in the ceiling, as if buckets of blood were splashed upon them without rhyme or reason.

Unless all of the PCs are good-aligned, read the following.

Before your eyes, the thin veil of water brightens until it becomes reflective, mirroring your party. Seconds later, the water splits into thick tentacles that spring out to wrap around your limbs!

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: During an earthquake past, a magic gem — one of the celestials' original prison defenses — became lodged in a crack several feet above this Room. Water from a nearby spring runs over the gem, and whenever any non-good PC or creature enters this Room, the gem activates, imbuing the water with positive entangling force. The water forms glowing tentacles that attempt to grapple all non-good PCs, and unless a celestial command word is spoken, the tentacles drag the victims back to the gem, which consumes their life force. Unfortunately, since the gem is wedged within a 2-in. wide crack, this means that the tentacles merely bash the PCs against the Room's ceiling until they're pulped.

✦ Force Tentacle Trap: CR 8; magical; alignment trigger; automatic reset; +15 melee (special — see note); Search DC 2; Disable Device N/A; Note: Characters of non-good alignment within 40 ft. of the celestial gem are grappled by tentacles (Str 22). During each round, a grappled PC is bashed against the Room's ceiling, suffering 1d8+6 damage.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: If the PCs spend 1 hour digging with axes or other suitable implements, they can pull out the gem, which is worth 8,000 gp on the open market (though only to PCs of good alignment).

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, decrease the trap's Reflex save DC and Str by 2 each. To decrease the challenge, increase the trap's bashing damage to 1d10+6 per round.

M41. CHAOS HUNTS

The groaning continues as you move to the west, where fissures criss-cross the walls, ceiling, and floor. A spear lies on the floor here, glimmering through the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Three chaos beasts (hp 66, 54, 49) rest in the fissures here, hoping to lash out at any driders foolish enough to patrol the Room. It consumed the last two patrols to enter, one of whom dropped the spear laying on the ground (the rest of their equipment fell deep into the earth through the fissures and cannot be recovered).

Encounter Condition: Concealment (total), Cover, Echoes 2, Poor Footing 5

Tactics: The chaos beasts wait for at least one PC to move into the Room before attacking. As the PC(s) approach the spear, the creatures opens their many eyes — which are clearly visible in fissures in all directions (even up and down) — then lashes out with clawed tentacle-like pods, trying to inflict as much damage as possible as quickly as possible.

The chaos beasts don't leave their hiding place, and therefore gains the benefits of cover throughout the combat. Far from suicidal, the chaos beasts do not leave their hiding places until they are sure that all opposition is dead or gone. Then they crawl out into the Room and consume any bodies that remain.

Treasure: The item on the ground is a +2 longspear.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one chaos beast and have them catch the PCs flat-footed. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Chaos Beast: CR 7; Medium outsider (chaotic, extraplanar); HD 8d8+8; hp 66, 54, 49; Init +5; Spd 20 ft.; AC 16, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +8; Grp +10; Atk +10 melee (1d3+2 plus corporeal instability, claw); Full Atk +10 melee (1d3+2 plus corporeal instability, 2 claws); SA Corporeal instability; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., immunity to critical hits and transformation, spell resistance 15; AL CN; SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +6; Str 14, Dex 13, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Escape Artist +12, Hide +12, Jump +9, Listen +11, Search +11, Spot +11, Survival +0 (+2 following tracks), Tumble +14, Use Rope +1 (+3 with bindings); Dodge, Improved Initiative, Mobility.

Corporeal Instability (Su): A blow from a chaos beast against a living creature can cause a terrible transformation. The creature must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or become a spongy, amorphous mass. Unless the victim manages to control the effect (see below), its shape melts, flows, writhes, and boils. The save DC is Constitution-based.

An affected creature is unable to hold or use any item. Clothing, armor, rings, and helmets become useless. Large items worn or carried — armor, backpacks, even shirts — hamper more than help, reducing the victim's Dexterity score by 4. Soft or misshapen feet and legs reduce speed to 10 feet or one-quarter normal, whichever is less. Searing pain courses along the nerves, so strong that the victim cannot act coherently. The victim cannot cast spells or use magic items, and it attacks blindly.

unable to distinguish friend from foe (–4 penalty on attack rolls and a 50% miss chance, regardless of the attack roll).

Each round the victim spends in an amorphous state causes 1 point of Wisdom drain from mental shock. If the victim's Wisdom score falls to 0, it becomes a chaos beast.

A victim can regain its own shape by taking a standard action to attempt a DC 15 Charisma check (this check DC does not vary for a chaos beast with different Hit Dice or ability scores). A success reestablishes the creature's normal form for 1 minute. On a failure, the victim can still repeat this check each round until successful.

Corporeal instability is not a disease or a curse and so is hard to remove. A shapechange or stoneskin spell does not cure an afflicted creature but fixes its form for the duration of the spell. A restoration, heal, or greater restoration spell removes the affliction (a separate restoration is necessary to restore any drained points of Wisdom).

Immunity to Transformation (Ex): No mortal magic can permanently affect or fix a chaos beast's form. Effects such as polymorphing or petrification force the creature into a new shape, but at the start of its next turn it immediately returns to its mutable form as a free action.

M42. GROANING PASSAGE

This narrow, twisting flue appears to be made of hardened lava, sharp edges of black rock. It gently climbs upward, then dips abruptly, leveling off to the south. The passage is unstable, your every step eliciting a deep groan from the earth below.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Contrary to their senses, the PCs find no danger in this Room. The passage is merely a spooky by-product of the dungeon's perpetually turbulent state.

M43 THROUGH M53. THE DROW ENCLAVE

At the eastern edge of the Spider Kings' domain lies an enclave of drow rebels hidden in a clutch of dungeon rooms. The rebels have discovered many of the celestials' original prison defenses and use them to keep driders and spies at bay. Behind these defenses, the rebel leaders — including a former drow adventurer named Develdar — seek a way to overthrow the insane Spider Kings.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for Random Encounters each hour the PCs explore this Section.

1d20	Encounter
1–2	Steam hisses forth from a crack in a nearby wall, and a low vibration is felt through every wall.
3	Voices are heard nearby, but fade too quickly to be located. With a successful Listen check (DC 20), the PCs make out the name "Dveldar" in the conversation.
4–13	Nothing
14	The PCs stumble upon a trap set by the drow to harry the driders.

♦ Fusillade of Greenblood Oil Darts: CR 7; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; +18 ranged (1d4+1, poison). Search (DC 25); Disable Device: (DC 25); Note: Targets all PCs within a 10-ft. × 10-ft. area. This trap is disabled by carefully removing all the poison darts (which the PCs may keep and use if they like).

♦ Greenblood oil poison — injected; Fortitude save (DC 13) resists; initial damage 1 Con/secondary damage 1d2 Con.

15 The cataclysm finally takes its toll upon this part of the dungeon, sending a 10-ft. × 10-ft. section of the floor into a lava river flowing 20 ft. below.

♦ Pit Trap (40 ft.): CR 10; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; no attack roll necessary (20d6); Reflex save (DC 20 avoids); Search (DC 20); Disable Device: N/A; Note: Targets all PCs within a 10-ft. × 10-ft. area.

16 A patrol of 4 drow rebels (Ftr 6, hp 43 each) encounters the PCs. They attempt to subdue the PCs as quickly as possible and take them to Room M50 to be interrogated by Develdar. If 3 or more of the rebels are killed, they flee to the nearest rebel outpost where guards are typically stationed.

17 The rebel guards in Room M44 use the scrying lens in that chamber to observe the area through which the PCs move. They use the lens' communication ability to alert the rebels in Rooms M47, M49, and M51 and to coordinate a sneak attack at the first available opportunity.

18 An invisible stalker (hp 52) moves quietly through the halls. This creature is loyal to the Spider Kings and doesn't seek to fight the PCs, but rather surveils the rebel headquarters and tries to deliver the information to its masters. Unless the PCs intervene, the rebel headquarters is attacked and destroyed by 10 droider guards (hp 45) in 1d4 hours.

19 Wicieth, an aranea courier dominated by the Spider Kings (Rog 6, hp 40), comes upon the PCs during a secret trip to meet the rebels (for more information, see Room M62). Unless the PCs notice the creature, it hides from sight until they pass. If attacked, it flees to the nearest rebel outpost where guards are typically stationed and warns the rebel sentries about the intruders.

20 The rebel leader Develdar (Rog 5/Ftr 5, hp 82) and 2 drow rebels (Ftr 6, hp 43 each) come upon the PCs. The drow leader tries to explain his peoples' cause, then asks the PCs if they're willing to help. Though he appears sincere, a successful Sense Motive check (DC 28) reveals deception. Develdar plans to capture the PCs and use them to lure the driders into an ambush.

M43. GUARD POST

A curtain of lava completely blocks all entrances into this Room, flowing through corridor-wide channels in the ceiling and floor, unless halted using the controls in Room M44. This curtain is not illusory, but a redirection of a local lava river established by the celestials to contain an incredibly powerful frost giant barbarian. If any PC walks through the lava curtain, he suffers 20d6 damage.

This roughly square room opens into two corridors to the north, south, and east. Reinforced flutes surround the floor on all four sides, charred by intense heat.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: In addition to the lava curtains, this area is under constant observation using a scrying lens located in Room M44 (unless the lens is redirected to observe an incursion elsewhere, or the PCs have already visited that location).

Encounter Condition: Extreme heat

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 standard rebel guards. To decrease the challenge, make the lava flow sporadic and allow each PC a Reflex save (DC 20) to move through each curtain without suffering damage.

M44. SENTRY PLATFORM

This Room is positioned 15 ft. above the dungeon floor and overlooks the empty area between here and Rooms M43 and M47 through an open glassless window. The Room is reached via a ladder and locked trapdoor that requires a DC 25 Open Lock check to unlock.

This small chamber overlooks an intersection to the west and a constant lava flow blocking the corridor further west of that. It contains a crude desk before an open glassless window, behind which stands an iron pole built into the floor. A green gem the size of a dinner plate rests atop the pole, seemingly capable of spinning vertically in its mounting. Two dark-skinned elves turn away from the desk when you enter, screaming questions at you.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: The rebel guards scream "Who are you? How did you get in here?" in Drow. They draw weapons unless the PCs are accompanied and endorsed by a trusted drow rebel or immediately display identification from Lorath (Room I103). Even then, their initial attitude begins at unfriendly and must be improved through persuasion, as standard.

This sentry post was once a celestial roost from which guards observed this part of the prison and controlled the lava curtains shielding Room M43. The gem is a scrying lens that operates like a permanent clairvoyance spell limited to viewing locations within this Section. Using the lens simply requires a PC to look into the lens, think of the location to be observed, and speak the Drow words, "ai shok" ("show me"). When used, the gem gives off a magical energy that showers to the floor like sparkling green glitter and is visible anywhere within direct line of sight.

Up to three times per day, the lens may also be used to cast either acid arrow or whispering wind as a 9th-level sorcerer. These spells may only target Rooms and PCs in this section and are activated using the Drow words "hazoc" ("burn," for acid arrow) or "nazil" ("tell," for whispering wind).

The lens possesses a hardness of 2, 15 hit points, and a Break DC of 15. If shattered, it may no longer be used, nor may it be repaired.

Finally, if the PCs ask to inspect the Room for secret doors, loose stones, or the like, they may make a Search check (DC 20) to find a hidden nook behind a secret false stone panel in the northern wall. This nook contains five levers, the first four toggling the lava curtains in Room M43 and the fifth toggling all four curtains.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Without proper identification, endorsement, or persuasion, the guards attack. One defends the other, fighting defensively until the second guard can use the lens to alert the guards in Rooms M47, M49, and M51 about the intruders. Then both guards fight defensively until the other rebels arrive and all can gang up on the PCs. At that point, the rebels resort to the simplest mob tactics, trying to overwhelm the PCs with numbers and flanking attacks rather than strategy.

Treasure: The lens is a well-cut jade stone. Dislodging it from the pole requires a successful Strength check (DC 12), but this eliminates all of the stone's special properties. It may still be sold at open market, however, yielding 150 gp.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 1 drow rebel. To decrease the challenge, remove 1 drow rebel.

☛ Drow Elite Rebel, Ftr 6: CR 7; Medium humanoid (drow elf); HD 6d10+6; hp 43; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 13, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +6; Grp +7; Atk +11 melee (1d4+3/19-20 plus poison, masterwork dagger) or +9/+4 ranged (1d4+1/19-20, thrown dagger); Full Atk +11/+6 melee (1d4+3/19-20 plus poison, masterwork dagger) or +9 melee (1d4+3/19-20 plus poison, masterwork dagger) and +7 melee (1d6/18-20, rapier) or +9 ranged (1d4+1/19-20, thrown dagger); SA Spell-like abilities; SQ Darkvision 120', elven traits, light blindness, SR 16; AL NG; SV Fort +6, Ref +5, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 16, Con 12, Int 12, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Poison (Ex): An opponent hit by a drow's poisoned weapon must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude save or fall unconscious. After 1 minute, the subject must succeed on another DC 13 Fortitude save or remain unconscious for 2d4 hours.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster level 6th.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: +1 fire resistance leather armor, masterwork dagger, rapier, 2 daggers.

M45. THE LIGHT OF HALCYON

The doors leading into this corridor were once locked but have been broken open. A white glow is visible around each door's edges.

This long corridor is bathed in cool light, revealing gorgeous mosaics of an army of celestials erecting a grand fortress in an open pit in a primal land. Shackled armies march toward the incomplete fortress, their heads hanging.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: As an original entrance to the personal quarters of Halcyon, a high-ranking celestial warden (see Room M48), this corridor was once protected with many enchantments, but only three survive today. First and second, the entire Room benefits from permanent light and protection from evil spells as cast by a 10th-level sorcerer. Third, the Room benefits from a persistent healing energy (see Encounter Conditions).

This may seem like the perfect place for the PCs to ambush or fight back pursuing drow rebels, but the rebels are familiar with the Room's effects and avoid it unless they must enter to protect their leaders or their cause.

Encounter Condition: Positive Energy

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

M46. VISIONS OF SIN

Reinforced doors lead out of this roughly square chamber to the north, south, and west. The room is unfurnished and unremarkable except for a simple wooden table and a dozen low-backed chairs. Warmth bathes you from beyond the western door, and moments after you enter, the eastern wall starts to glow, emitting images of an adventuring party — your adventuring party — fighting through monstrous hordes in a deep dungeon.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The celestial Halcyon originally used this Room for interrogating the demon prisoners. The east wall displays the past sins of the highest-level non-celestial PC or creature in the Room, beginning with its smallest indiscretions and cycling through the rest in ascending order. In the case of a tie for highest level PC, the DM chooses who is targeted.

During the first 5 rounds a PC is displayed on the wall, he is targeted with a hypnotic pattern spell as cast by a 5th-level sorcerer. Thereafter, he is targeted with an emotion (despair) spell as cast by a sorcerer whose level is equal to the number of rounds the PC has been displayed (maximum 20th-level). Once, the projected negative emotion could be controlled by the celestial wardens, but since their deaths, the Room only projects despair.

The target PC may make Will saves to negate these spell effects once each round. Further, he must make a successful Will save (DC 10 + 1 per round he is displayed, maximum 40) in order to leave the Room. If he leaves, the cycle begins anew with the next-highest level PC or creature remaining.

The drow rebels avoid this chamber except when moving to the sentry station at Room M49. They also know to look away when entering, which grants a +4 circumstance bonus with Will saves made to resist the Room's effects.

If the PCs investigate the western door, they find it locked. A successful DC 25 Open Lock check accesses the small chamber beyond, a thick chain is anchored to the ceiling and extending through a 2-ft. × 2-ft. shaft in the floor. The chain is white hot, its end dipping into a lava river 20 ft. below.

Should a PC touch the chain, he suffers 5d6 fire damage and 1 point of temporary Dexterity damage per round of exposure. Alternately, the PC may don a pair of fire resistance gauntlets hanging on a peg to the right of the door, which can protect him from the searing iron. Either way, the PC must make a successful Strength check (DC 18) to pull the chain out of the lava and into the room. At the chain's end is an iron box that's protected with the same fire resistance as the gauntlets and chain. This box is locked, requiring a successful DC 25 Open Lock check to access.

Encounter Condition: Extreme heat (western Room only)

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Within the iron box, the PCs find a number of magic items the drow have collected to help the rebel movement — 1 horn of fog and 2 potions of hiding.

Additionally, the PCs may take the fire resistance gauntlets, and with a successful Craft (ironworking) check (DC 15) or Strength check (DC 25), they can remove the fire resistant iron box as well. Both of these items possess 10 points of damage reduction against fire.

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the spellcaster levels of the Room's spell effects by 2 (keeping the maximum spellcaster level of the emotion spell effect at 20). To decrease the challenge, target the highest-level PC with the hypnotic pattern spell effect for 8 rounds and increase the spellcaster level of the emotion (despair) spell effect by 1 per 2 rounds the PC is displayed.

M47. VISIONS OF BLISS

Reinforced wooden doors lead out of this square chamber to the north, south, and east. Cots are notably positioned away from the walls here, several dark elves are asleep upon them. Warmth bathes you from beyond the eastern door, and moments after you enter, the western wall starts to glow, emitting images of an adventuring party — your adventuring party — enjoying an evening at a kindly pub. The images begin just before you entered the dungeon, but quickly cycle backward in time, to happier and happier moments...

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: The celestial Halcyon originally used this Room as an tool for interrogating and pacifying the demon prisoners. The west wall displays the past glories of the highest-level non-celestial PC or creature in the Room, beginning with its smallest successes and cycling through the rest in ascending order. In the case of a tie for highest level PC, the DM chooses who is targeted.

During the first 5 rounds a PC is displayed on the wall, he is targeted with a hypnotic pattern spell as cast by a 5th-level sorcerer. Thereafter, he is targeted with an emotion (hope) spell as cast by a sorcerer whose level is equal to the number of rounds the PC has been displayed (maximum 20th-level). Once, the projected positive emotion could be controlled by the celestial wardens, but since their deaths, the Room only projects hope.

The target PC may make Will saves to negate these spell effects once each round. Unlike Room M46, the displayed PC may leave this chamber at any time. If he leaves, the cycle begins anew with the next-highest level PC or creature remaining.

The drow rebels use this chamber as a barracks, enjoying the pleasant dreams it brings them — indeed, 4 rebels sleep here as the PCs enter. Develdar has started to notice that the rebels are growing complacent and perhaps dependent upon this Room, however, and is considering moving the barracks and closing this part of the headquarters. Unfortunately, this is the only safe avenue between his quarters and the southern rooms, and so his plans remain stymied for the time being.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The drow awaken as the PCs unwittingly adjust the west wall's display, though they are disoriented by the sudden shift in their dream-scapes. Consequently, they suffer a -4 circumstance penalty with all attack rolls and skill checks made during the first 4 rounds after they wake. Still, they recognize the PCs as intruders and grab their weapons, stumbling into combat unless the PCs are accompanied and endorsed by a trusted drow rebel or immediately display identification from Lorath, the drow captain in Region 1 (Room 1103). Even then, their Initial Attitude begins at Unfriendly and must be improved through persuasion, as standard.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, decrease the spellcaster levels of the Room's spell effects by 2. To decrease the challenge, increase the spellcaster levels of the Room's spell effects by 2 (keeping the maximum spellcaster level of the emotion spell effect at 20).

M48. ACID STEAM VENT

The southwestern half of this room contains the ruins of a grand bed chamber, the northeastern half seemingly having broken away and fallen into a cavern. Steam rises, collecting on the ceiling before dripping onto the remaining furniture. From the sizzling hiss rising from every surface, you get the impression that the steam is not merely evaporated water.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This chamber was once the private quarters of a celestial named Halcyon, the warden for this part of the prison. Its northeastern floor was weakened in several places during the earthquake that rocked the dungeon, and later collapsed entirely when the lava river running below this area thrust an acidic steam vent into the Room. Now the Room is nothing more than an obstacle the drow rebels avoid unless they're forcing intruders into it.

Any PC who runs into the Room through the north door must make a successful Reflex save (DC 15) or fall into the steam vent, suffering the trap's damage in addition to falling toward the lava river below. The unfortunate victim has one chance to catch himself, a task that requires a successful DC 35 Climb check. Should the PC fail this second check as well, he suffers 20d6 per full round of exposure and is slowly swept north at a rate of 10 ft. per round, editing into the mapped lava river between Rooms M5 and M6 (assuming his body isn't reduced to -25 hit points and destroyed first).

• Acid Steam Trap: CR 6; mechanical; location trigger; no reset; no attack roll necessary (6d6); DC 20 Fortitude save for half; Search N/A; Disable Device: N/A. Note: Targets all PCs in the Room at the start of each round.

Encounter Condition: Extreme heat

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The furniture and celestial belongings in the Room are damaged beyond identification, value, or repair by the acidic condensation. If a PC picks up anything in this Room, the item collapses in his hand and he suffers 2d6 acid damage as it oozes around his fingers.

EL: 6

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the trap's Fortitude save DC by 2. To decrease the challenge, reduce the trap's damage by 1d6.

M49. SPY STATION

As you round this hallway corner, you come upon a dark elf standing in a roughly dug extension heading west. He faces the hallway's end, his back to you and his arms crossed. His stance is fixed, as if he's lost in deep concentration.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: The drow rebels cleared out the Room that originally comprised this "hallway corner," approaching within several feet of the slave pit to the west. Now they assign guards here with a ring of x-ray vision that the movement recovered from the original dungeon. The sentry observes everything that happens in the slave pit beyond the western wall and reports to Develdar, who uses the information to formulate new plans to rescue the surviving slaves.

If the PCs try to talk to the sentry, he becomes defensive. He draws his weapon unless the PCs are accompanied and endorsed by a trusted drow rebel or immediately display identification from Lorath, the drow captain in Region I (Room I103). Even then, his Initial Attitude starts Unfriendly and must be improved through Diplomacy.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The sentry is focused on his observations and the PCs may sneak up on him with a successful Hide check (DC 18), gaining a partial action each during a surprise round. Unless he is cornered (which is a distinct possibility within these tight confines), he attempts to flee to the south, fighting defensively as needed. If the lava curtains in Room M43 are functional, he heads to the eastern chamber in Room M46, uses a potion of hiding, then grabs the horn of fog and uses it to alert the guards at Room M44. Otherwise, he heads directly to Room M44, warning the other guards about the intruders.

The sentry assumes that he isn't a match for the party and surrenders if forced to fight. If questioned with a successful Bluff or Intimidate check (DC 18), he reveals the name of the rebel leader (Develdar) and draws a rough map of this Section, noting guarded locations and the number of drow stationed at each. He leaves out details about traps and treasure unless interrogated with a successful Bluff for Intimidation check (DC 30), and even then can't detail anything within Develdar's quarters (Room M50), a location he's never visited.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 7

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the sentry becomes aware of the PCs as they enter the Room. To reduce the challenge, the drow sentry is so fixed on his observations that he fails to notice the PCs until they draw his attention or attack him.

M50. DEVELDAR'S QUARTERS

This room's dimensions are lost to shadow. Candles illuminate its center, which contains the closest edge of a sleeping mat and a recently used training mat.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This Room houses Develdar, one of the rebel slaves' leaders and the great-grandson of one of the drow originally enslaved during the failed drider coup. Develdar is one of the few drow with direct knowledge of his peoples' origins, information passed down through his family line but completely suppressed by the Spider Kings. Along with this background, Develdar knows the secrets of his family trade, the finer points of stealth and quick, decisive combat. Still more importantly, however, he remembers watching his father, Mahir's closest advisor, whom the sorcerer betrayed and used to construct the trap guarding his hidden chambers. Today, Develdar burns with a desire for vengeance, and doesn't hesitate to use anyone or anything to achieve that goal.

When he needs to be, Develdar is a charismatic sort, stating his goals in terms that cast the rebels in the best possible light. He attempts to win the PCs' confidence, hoping they will join his cause. All he asks is that he deliver the death blow to Mahir's protégé, Elotor. Develdar assumes the PCs are hostile when they enter his quarters, unless the PCs are accompanied and endorsed by a trusted drow rebel or immediately display identification from Lorath, the drow captain in Region I (Room I103). Even then, his Initial Attitude starts Unfriendly and must be improved through Diplomacy.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs are properly introduced, Develdar silently moves through the shadows to a position from which he can deliver a sneak attack and immediately withdraw to a new position using his Spring Attack feat ability. He repeats this tactic (with standard melee attacks when no PCs remain flat-footed), always remaining close to the door, until the PCs either illuminate the room or attempt to block the door. At this point, he exits to Room M51 (if possible), or moves into a position with his back to a wall (or better yet a corner), and engages in two-weapon melee combat.

Once outside, Develdar gathers his personal sentries and leads the PCs on a chase through the barracks (Room M47) to the unnumbered intersection west of Room M44. There, he tries to set up an ambush with his personal sentries on one side and the guards in Room M44 on the other. Throughout, he tries to attack from hiding as often as possible, taking actions to slip out of sight when necessary.

Develdar has great influence over the other rebels, both for his leadership ability and his martial prowess. All rebels know that he will murder anyone who flees his command, and fight to the death when he is present.

Evasion (Ex): Develdar can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If he makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, he instead takes no damage. A helpless raider does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Sneak Attack: Develdar's attack deals extra damage any time his target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when Develdar flanks his target. This extra damage is 3d6. Should the raider score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet.

Poison (Ex): An opponent hit by a drow's poisoned weapon must succeed on a DC 13 Fortitude save or fall unconscious. After 1 minute, the subject must succeed on another DC 13 Fortitude save or remain unconscious for 2d4 hours.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Develdar can react to danger before his senses would normally allow him to do so. He retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire; 3/day—hypnotism. Caster level 10th.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds Develdar for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: +3 chain shirt of silent moves, +2 wounding rapier, dagger of venom, 4 poisoned daggers, 2 vials antivenom, drider key.

M51. SENTRIES

A partial dungeon room opens to the edge of a molten lava river, beside two corridors extending into darkness. Two dark elves stand guard flanking a door within the partial room, dutifully withstanding the brutal heat.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: These guards are fiercely dedicated to Develdar, the slave movement's combat leader (see Room M50), but do not immediately attack intruders unless they approach from one of the two southern corridors without a rebel escort (in which case they assume the intruders bested the other rebels and alert Develdar before attacking).

Instead, they remain silent until the PCs approach within 10 ft., at which point they issue a quiet challenge, asking about the party's business in Drow. If the PCs state that they're just passing through, the drow warn them not to venture west. They recommend that the party cross the northern plain or head east, where happier hunting grounds await.

Alternately, if the PCs mention that they're looking for drow or slaves, the guards show them into Develdar's quarters (Room M50), introducing the rebel leader as an informant who might know something about the "other drow" who escaped the Spider Kings. Develdar plays this role to the hilt, offering to take the PCs to the "rebel leader" in Room M49 (in fact, one of Develdar's guards). Once there, Develdar shows the PCs the horrible conditions in the slave pits in an attempt to enrage them, then reveals his true identity and attempts to enlist their aid.

If the PCs speak poorly about the driders or the "Spider Kings," one of the guards leads them into Develdar's quarters (Room M50), where the rebel leader discusses the drow's dire situation, seeking to secure the party's help. Any positive comments about driders or the Spider Kings immediately worsens the guards' attitude to hostile, at which point the guards demand the PCs leave or suffer the consequences.

In all cases, Develdar remains in the shadows in his chambers, even when speaking with the PCs — just in case he encounters them later and can attack them from a different angle (and using a disguised voice).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs attack or incite Develdar's guards, one uses the darkness ability to conceal the combat while the other pounds on Develdar's door and tries to secure an effective sneak attack. Then the second guard distracts the party while Develdar and the first guard perform sneak attacks. Develdar and the guards trade off in this fashion until and unless the PCs dispatch the leader or one of the rebels, at which point the others flee south along the lava river and through the barracks (Room M47) to the unnumbered intersection west of Room M44. There, the survivors try to set up an ambush with the sentries on one side and the guards in Room M44 on the other. If he lives, Develdar tries to attack from hiding as often as possible, taking actions to slip out of sight when necessary.

Develdar has great influence over the other rebels, both for his leadership ability and his martial prowess. All rebels know that he will murder anyone who flees his command, and fight to the death when he is present.

M52. REPELLING DOOR

A stout iron door rests at the end of this short hall. Inscribed upon its surface are glyphs whose meaning is all too clear: stay clear, keep away, danger.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Celestial magic lingers in this door, protecting it from all entry without a long-lost phrase the PCs can't guess. Whenever anyone touches the door from the east, he is repelled by a telekinesis spell as cast by an 12th-level sorcerer. In most cases, this merely pushes the PC harmlessly back into his party, or onto the corridor floor. If the no other PCs or objects block his path and he fails a Reflex check (DC 18), however, he slides along the corridor floor and into the lava river, where he suffers 20d6 damage during each round of immersion and 2d6 damage during each round of non-immersion contact until he escapes.

M54 THROUGH M63. THE SLAVELORDS

This Section is home to the Spider Kings directly in charge of the drow slave population. It is also the refuge for the worst of the Spider Kings' experiments gone awry. Both drider overlords in this Section were horribly twisted by their peers' exploratory research, the weaponsmith Noh crippled and bound forever to his cavernous home (Room M59) and the thinker Faieth prematurely aged beyond his years, gifted with supreme magical vision but cursed with a frail physical form.

These unfortunate rejects have not joined their fellows in leading the drider movement in many years, and represent weak links in the Region's power structure the PCs can exploit. Also, if the PCs manage to wrest control of this Section away from the slavelords, they can form the drow into a small but respectable army they can turn against the more powerful Spider Kings to the west.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Check for Random Encounters each hour the PCs explore this Section.

1d20	Encounter
1	A rumbling sound of stone on stone echoes through the tunnels, followed by distant, blood-curdling screams.
2	An explosion rips through the halls. Dust and rocks falls from the ceiling, possibly creating a cave in. Stagnant Air, Tremors 20.
3	A male moans in pain to the party's right, but when they look, they find nothing. A female moan answers from the left, with the same result. This continues for 1d10 rounds, moving away from the PCs and toward Room M55.
4–13	Nothing
14	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	◆ Camouflaged Pit Trap (60 ft. deep): CR 5; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; no attack roll necessary (5d6); multiple targets (first target in each of two adjacent 5-ft. squares); DC 30 Reflex save avoids; Search DC 25; Disable Device DC 20.

	◆ Fireball Trap: CR 5; magic device; touch trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (fireball , 8th-level wizard, 8d6 fire, DC 14 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28.
16	The cataclysm finally takes its toll upon this part of the dungeon, collapsing a 10-ft. × 10-ft. section of the ceiling down upon the PCs.
	◆ Falling Block Trap: CR 10; +15 melee (10d6); Search DC 30; Disable Device N/A.
17	One drider guard escorts a flesh golem. Upon seeing the PCs, the guard sends the flesh golem to summon 1d6 drider reinforcements, returning in 2d6 rounds.

- 18 A patrol of four to six driders ambushes the PCs. They wish to take the credit for capturing the PCs alive and do not call for reinforcements. They retreat if two or more driders are killed.
- 19 Wicieth (Room M62), is on a secret trip to meet the rebels. Unless the PCs notice him, he hides from sight until they pass. If attacked, he flees to the nearest drider outpost where guards are typically stationed and warns the drider sentries of intruders.
- 20 The drider Faieth (Room M61) and two drider guards patrol the halls. Surprisingly, the driders do not attack unless accosted. Faieth does not warm the other Spider Kings of the PCs' presence, either.

M54. SPOOKED DRIDER GUARDS

Moans float through these tunnels. Huddled in a shallow side passage, two man-spiders try to ignore the unearthly sound. Fortunately, this means they also ignore the corridor.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: All drider guards despise this assignment and frequently conspire to saddle others with it. The source of the problem is the strange tomb in which the invisible stalkers' victims are confined (Room M55). Trapped between Planes, these unfortunate spirits incessantly mourn their physical lives, haunting their confines and unnerving all nearby. Consequently, the PCs gain a surprise round if they attack the drider guards at this post (hp 45 each), or gain a +4 circumstance bonus with all Hide and Move Silently checks made to slip past them.

The guards are spooked enough that if they notice the PCs under any circumstances, they attack immediately.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 4, Fear 22, Haunted

Tactics: If attacked, the driders take to the ceiling, employing their longspears' superior reach and their own sorcerous abilities to attack from a distance. Due to their distracted state, they suffer a -2 morale penalty with all attack, damage and save rolls. Further, each time one of the driders is injured, the DM should roll 1d20. If the result is equal to or less than the damage the drider has sustained so far during this combat, he flees to Room M56. If the PCs follow and don't possess a drider key, they trigger an invisible stalker's creation in Room M57. Within Room M56, the driders attempt to fight face south, hoping the invisible stalker will catch the party by surprise and flank them.

These Driders cast spells as 6th-level sorcerers.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: +2 studded leather, masterwork longsword, large short bow, masterwork arrows (20).

M55. SPIRIT RUBBLE

This enormous volcanic chamber is pitted and uneven, worked but clearly only enough to open the space up, not to develop a dwelling place. Unnaturally dark soil leaks through giant fissures in the walls. A gentle draft billows through the chamber, the air sounding not unlike... voices. Forlorn, fragile voices.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The Spider Kings are not content to merely eliminate intruders—they wish to torment them as well. When anyone wanders past the wardstones without a drider key, one or more invisible stalkers are created in Room M57 and dispatched to subdue or kill them. The spirit of anyone killed by an invisible stalker is bound to this Plane and transported here, where it remains trapped, unable to leave or proceed to its final rest.

Hopeless, these spirits occupy themselves by moaning about their predicament. The words unnerve any who enter or pass by this Room.

For the most part, the voices gibber incoherently, but a successful DC 25 Gather Information check reveals an important clue about events in the Barrows—that 'airdeaths' (invisible stalkers) are summoned by the 'tattooed stones' (wardstones).

If the PCs think to use magic to free the spirits, the most stable spirit (i.e. the spirit most recently killed) remains behind for 1 day, following and assisting the party as an invisible stalker (hp 52). Freeing the spirits may be accomplished with a break enchantment, death knell, death ward, dismissal, greater restoration, or plane shift spell.

The spirits within this Room may not be targeted with a raise dead, resurrection, or soul bind spell, nor may the PCs interact with them using an astral projection or etherealness spell.

M56. WARDSTONE

The northern tunnel widens to accommodate a 15-ft. tall, three-sided irregular stone covered with deeply carved runes. Beyond, the tunnel tapers off to a dead end.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This stone is a standard wardstone. Unlike most other wardstones, this gigantic specimen creates two invisible stalkers (Room M57).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: There is a 50% chance that two invisible stalkers arrive from Room M57 in 3d6 rounds, at which point they move into flanking positions around any non-slave not carrying a drider key. Free to move in three dimensions, the stalkers attack from above as well. The stalkers continue to gang up on intruders one by one until all are subdued, then guard them until two drider guards arrive to deal with them 1d10 minutes later. If the PCs flee, the stalkers pursue, using their Improved Tracking ability to keep on their prey and shrieking loudly to alert nearby guards.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the invisible stalkers' flight rates, reducing the time until their arrival to 5 rounds. To reduce the challenge, remove one invisible stalker.

M57. THE WHEEL OF SORROW

The secret door to the northwest can be found by the PCs with a DC 30 Search check. Opening the secret door requires the PCs to swivel a false stone in to the right, creating two small portals flanking a central axis. Only PCs of Small size or smaller may move through these portals.

You exit the tunnels into a titanic chamber that extends over 100 ft. in every direction. Its walls are constructed from enormous 10-ft. by 10-ft. blocks of perfectly cut stone, all scrubbed meticulously clean. The centerpiece of the Room is a black stone pillar over 15 ft. in diameter, covered in glyphs that glow with a faint blue-black illumination.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The Spider Kings' principal line of defense outside their dwindling drider guardship is this massive pillar, an impressive magical construct known as the Wheel of Sorrow. Linked to the web of wardstones throughout this Region and capable of creating a small army of invisible stalkers, this device is a monument of magical engineering.

When activated by a wardstone, the Wheel spins and its glyphs glow a shade brighter. During this round, the sound of grinding stone on stone is clearly audible in Rooms M4, M56, M58, M59, M60, M61, and M63. At the end of the round, the Wheel stops spinning and its glyphs flash brightly for a second, blinding anyone looking upon them for 1d4 rounds unless they make a successful Reflex save (DC 18). The flash ushers forth 1 to 2 invisible stalkers, as noted within the triggering Room's description. These creatures promptly head to the triggering Room at their maximum flight speed. Their actions are also detailed in the triggering Room's description, but mainly revolve around subduing or killing intruders (and in the latter case, sending their spirits to the ethereal tomb in Room M55).

For all its power, the Wheel of Sorrow demands a high price — in flesh, blood, and spirit. To remain operational, the Wheel must consume a minimum of 1 Medium-sized PC or creature with an Intelligence score of 6 or higher per week. Unless this minimum sacrifice is met, this device and all wardstones in this Region cease to function. The Spider Kings usually offer drow slaves, but may decide to offer the PCs instead, especially if the party kills one or more of their precious driders.

The Wheel also spins when it is offered a sacrifice, though it does so for a total of 5 rounds. During this time, its glyphs glow red, starting with a pale crimson and deepening until they appear to be scrawled in phosphorescent blood by the end of the fifth round. At this point, the glow from the Wheel's glyphs expands out to the edges of the Room (and into the earthen side chambers), touching every surface and engulfing every victim within. Thereafter, at the start of each round, each PC or creature in the Room must make a successful DC 20 Fortitude save or suffer 1d4 temporary Con damage. If any victim's Con drops to 0 as a result of this attack, its body explodes into a fine mist of blood, liquefied tissue, and shattered bone fragments. These remains slowly migrate into the cracks between the massive stones, feeding the Wheel. This process continues — and the Wheel keeps spinning — until no living PCs or creatures remain within the Room.

Two sets of shackles are bolted into the walls of the side chambers. Sacrifices are typically bound here, preventing their escape before the Wheel consumes them. The shackles possess a hardness of 10, 15 hit points, a Break DC of 26, and an Open Lock DC of 24. The door into each side chamber possesses a hardness of 10, 50 hit points, a Break DC of 28, and an Open Lock DC of 24.

The PCs may disable the wardstones by preventing the Spider Kings from sacrificing anyone to the Wheel. Alternately, they can attempt to destroy the Wheel, though this is not an easy task. It possesses a hardness of 30, 500 hp, and no Break DC. Also, should the PCs attack the Wheel, or approach within 10 ft. of it without a drider key, it creates 6 invisible stalkers (hp 52 each) to defend itself.

Finally, if the DM rolls any random encounter result other than 'Nothing' while the PCs are located here, he ignores the scripted encounter in favor of the Wheel creating 1d2 invisible stalkers. Unless the PCs possess a drider's key, the invisible stalkers attack them before moving on to the triggered wardstone; otherwise, they make their way to the wardstone, ignoring the PCs entirely. If the PCs wish, they may follow the stalkers to the wardstone — to an encounter with intruders of the DM's design. The DM may use this opportunity to introduce new PCs, replenishing a depleted group.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: Within this Room, invisible stalkers gang up on intruders, grappling them and dragging them to the lava river to the north. Unless they lose their target, they throw him in and return to do the same with anyone who remains. The lava river inflicts 20d6 damage per round of immersion and 2d6 damage per round of exposure.

Since the stalkers are at their point of origin, they don't realize they should stop fighting before they're killed.

Natural Invisibility (Su): This ability is constant, allowing a stalker to remain invisible even when attacking. This ability is inherent and not subject to the invisibility purge spell.

M58. SLAVE PEN

The secret door to the northeast can be found by the PCs with a DC 30 Search check. Opening the secret door requires the PCs to swivel a false boulder in to the right, creating two small portals flanking a central axis. Only PCs of Small size or smaller may move through these portals.

Two dozen pitiful drow slaves huddle in the dark corners of this large, warm cavern, flinching each time their drider masters stalk by. Half the slaves here look far too weak to perform any manual labor, while the other half look strong enough to drag boulders or dig tunnels if needed. The reasons behind this motley collection of slaves escapes you.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: These slaves (hp 3 each) belong to the Spider King Noh (Room M59). The weak slaves are destined to be fed to the Wheel of Sorrow (Room M57), while the others are off-shift workers assigned to Noh's forge, where they create weapons for the Spider Kings' drider and drow guards.

The drider guards (hp 45 each) keep the slaves at the edges of this large room, leaving a wide open space in the middle. This space has no purpose other than to provide a clear line of sight for the guards, who remain on diametrically opposed sides of the outer ring at all times. The driders make a full circuit of the ring every 5 minutes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless they're surprised, the driders attempt to converge on any intruders, pinning them down against a wall. They ignore the slaves throughout any combat, however, potentially leaving themselves vulnerable to blindsight attacks. Noh's driders are not very imaginative fighters, relying almost exclusively upon straightforward charge and flank patterns, even if those patterns prove less than entirely effective.

Both driders fall back to Room M59 if either suffers 10 or more points of damage — enough for the wounds to be obvious to both creatures.

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two drider guards. To decrease the challenge, the physically fit slaves rise up against the drider guards when the PCs attack, likely keeping at least one of the driders busy at any time.

M59. NOH'S FORGE

The air in this irregular cavern is heavy with the tang of hot metal, rising from four enormous forges lining its southern half. As if in preparation for a full-scale war, dark-skinned elves slave over the forges, producing lines of swords, bows, and spears. High above, hanging in a web of leather and silk, the bloated, pale form of a spider-like creature lords over the sweaty scene, driving its underlings under a malevolent gaze.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Noh (hp 95), leader of the Barrow's drider guards, dwells in this humid Room. Long ago, Noh volunteered to participate in a Spider King experiment to engineer a more powerful drider warrior. The process boosted Noh's fighting prowess, and granted him offensive magic abilities. Unfortunately, it also rendered his legs useless, confining him to a life within this cavernous web. A master black- and weapon-smith, Noh hand-picks Drow slaves to create arms for the Spider Kings' legions. He also protects and feeds the Wheel of Sorrow (see Room M57).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Noh constantly watches his slaves to ensure they aren't fouling up his designs or growing bold. As such, any skill checks made to move through this chamber unobserved suffer a –4 circumstance penalty. Should Noh spot the PCs, he casts fireball to catch as many of the party in one powerful attack as possible. The Spider King doesn't care which of his slaves are caught in the explosion — he's far too offended that the PCs would dare invade his lair to consider the losses required to kill them.

Noh counts on the fireball to lure his private guards from Room M58 and the rank and file driders from Room M28. After casting the fireball, he follows up with magic missiles, always targeting spellcasters, then rangers and bards, and focusing on combat PCs last. He knows that the drider guards will focus on the combat PCs, and is least worried that they will harm him — unless they climb up to his web. Any PC who manages to enter Noh's web becomes the Spider Kings' focus until he is dead or grappled and thrown back to the ground.

Climbing to Noh's web requires a successful DC 25 Climb check, and moving across his web requires a successful DC 25 Balance check each round. Any PC failing this second check may fight in place, but may not move across the web in any fashion, not even using his bonus 5-ft. step. When attacking a PC in his web, Noh uses his thundering whip in conjunction with the true strike spell in an attempt to grapple the PC and dislodge him from the web, sending him tumbling to the floor 30 ft. below.

If Noh ever loses 10 or more points of damage from a ranged attack, he casts shield and protection from arrows to protect himself. This may buy the PCs a moment to regroup and decide on a new strategy if their tactics are faring poorly.

When all else fails, Noh relies upon his longbow until he runs out of ammunition, then drops to 15 ft. from the floor and stabs the closest PCs with his longspear.

Treasure: The PCs may choose from up to 20 masterwork longswords, 15 masterwork longspears, or 10 masterwork longbows that lean against the walls here. Chests in the corners contain hundreds of well-crafted (though not masterwork-quality) arrows as well.

The Spider King Faieth (hp 80) makes its lair to the north of here (in Room M61), spending many exploratory days basking in the spring's waters. When the PCs arrive, there is a 1 in 10 chance that the drider is submerged in the spring, where he suffers a –4 circumstance penalty with all Listen and Spot checks made to notice intruders. Otherwise, two of Faieth's drow guards (hp 28 each) are stationed here. Unknown to Faieth, the guards also spend their shifts in the warm water, suffering the same penalty when making skill checks to notice intruders. Noticing either of the creatures in the spring requires a successful Spot check (DC 16).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: For an overview of Faieth's tactics, see Room M61. The guards remain hidden until they can silently rise to the cavern floor behind the intruders. Thereafter, they attempt to sneak up behind the party and attack from the shadows to maximize potential damage. Thereafter, they close to adjacent positions, forcing the PCs to engage them with restricted weaponry. The drow withdraw to Room M63 if either of them is reduced to 15 or fewer hit points.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster level 4th.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Evasion (Ex): A night guard can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If he makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, he instead takes no damage. A helpless night guard does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Sneak Attack: The night guard's attack deals extra damage any time his target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when the night guard flanks his target. This extra damage is 2d6. Should the night guard score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A night guard can react to danger before his senses would normally allow him to do so. He retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

Possessions: +1 fire resistant studded leather, dagger of venom, dagger (3).

M60. HOT SPRING

You follow the narrow western tunnel into a tall cavern with three additional exits, one at each remaining compass point. Central within the chamber is a hot spring, its surface bubbling with heat. A stench of sulphur and brimstone clings to everything in the room.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The spring's mineral-rich water is heated by the subterranean lava rivers within this Region, creating a therapeutic environment in which any PC or creature gains 1 additional hit point per full day spent steaming.

M61. FAIETH'S CAVE

This Room is protected with a mental alarm spell cast by its occupant.

The tunnel dead ends into a long cavern. Chains are suspended from the ceiling, supporting a steel platform upon which squats a ravaged man-spider. A lone candle burns on the floor, a thin trail of smoke curling up around the creature's face.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This chamber belongs to Faieth (hp 80), another of the Spider Kings' experiments — this time to create the perfect sorcerer. The attempt was a success, imparting upon Faieth superior spellcasting ability and insight into the nature of magic, but it also left the drider horribly disfigured, and prematurely aged.

Faieth finds limited relief in the hot spring to the south (Room M60), and visits there often. If the PCs already encountered him there, they find this Room empty except for Faieth's candle of lawful invocation.

Before the procedure, Faieth possessed a great deal of influence within the Spider Kings' inner circle, and he used this power to shift his dwelling away from the others, to this location where he hoped he could remain outside — perhaps even oblivious to — the others' petty aspirations. Here, he spends all his time in self-exploratory thought, meditating on the nature of his people and their role in the universe. His mind lingers mostly on the innate power of energies and the elements, and how they interact and combat one another.

Faieth has little interest in fighting intruders or serving the other Spider Kings. Unless attacked, he addresses the party in Undercommon, demanding that they leave him to his studies, lest they incite "a fearsome agony to shepherd them to their graves". Unlike the other driders within this Region, Faieth responds to respectful talk and his attitude may be improved up to friendly with the right approach (and an impressive Diplomacy roll). Faieth finds high-minded ideas about obscure natural and magical topics the most stimulating. The slightest impropriety and he lashes out, demolishing the party. He reacts likewise to any questions about the Spider Kings, their territories, strengths, or plans.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If pushed to violence, Faieth casts fog cloud to obscure vision within the Room (he relies on his darkvision and knowledge of the chamber to get around). Within the fog cloud, Faieth uses his spells to trick intruders, always seeking a way to catch them off guard with one or more of his powerful offensive spells. For example, he might use ghost sound or ventriloquism to lure the PCs into a corner, then cast fireball to engulf them in flame. Alternately, he might use mage hand to unsheathe the PCs' weapons and toss them into the distance, where the PCs can't easily find them (and where they might blunder into another offensive spell, like flaming sphere).

When Faieth can't see a ready way to trick the PCs, he casts 'blunt' spells like blindness/deafness, cause fear, daze, flare, or scare at them, hoping to disable them or drive them from the Room. He saves face-to-face spells like chill touch, shield, and wall of fire as last resorts, to support his meager melee combat abilities as he flees the chamber. Gaseous form is his ultimate ticket to safety, and he doesn't hesitate to use it to get away from a superior fighting force, or to pin down a party that has insulted him.

If reduced to 50 or fewer hit points, or backed into a corner, Faieth falls back on his backup plan — he casts polymorph self to make himself appear like one of the PCs, then either gets close enough to use burning hands against one of the other PCs, or uses his appearance to help him escape to Room M63. When in a bind, he can use this trick to imitate a second PC, allowing him to play elaborate mind games with party members isolated in the fog. If discovered and unable to shift appearance again, he casts mirror image buy more time to best the PCs.

Faieth looks at combat as a chess match. He's always thinking several moves ahead, and his tactics should reflect this. Whenever possible, the DM should plot out at least his next 2–3 actions at any time, dropping clues in his descriptions to show the PCs who the Spider King thinks. With luck, the PCs will start to think ahead as well, making this encounter more of a meta-gaming challenge between players than a simple game of numbers.

M62. WICIETH'S LAIR

Silken webbing hangs from every surface of this cave, fluttering in the thermals created by the nearby hot spring. Worthless art adorns the chamber but is still quite beautiful.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This is the lair of Wicieth (hp 40), an aranea who acts as courier between the Spider Kings and their allies in Region 1. Unbeknownst to her masters, Wicieth also acts as a spy and courier for the rebel drow, with whom she feels great sympathy.

Wicieth fears her mistress Faieth (and especially Faieth's propensity for fire magic). She always casts endure elements upon herself before entering the Spider King's chambers (Room M61). Any skill check made to sway her directly against her mistress gains a +2 circumstance bonus, but only if she sees a high chance of success and low chance that she will suffer as a result. Wicieth refuses to partake in any plan that promises to inflict great harm. Ultimately, one of the reasons that she has survived this long in this position is her healthy paranoia.

All this assumes that the PCs manage to convince Wicieth to entertain them in the first place. When they first enter this Room, they find her in hybrid form, lounging at the center of a web that spans to the walls in all directions and hangs three feet off the ground. This web is hard for any non-arachnid to navigate — thus the Room's poor footing encounter condition. It dips flush with the floor at the Room's entrance, preventing anyone from crawling underneath without first bursting the web with a DC 26 Strength check or cutting through its 6 hit points. The web possesses no hardness, and suffers double damage from fire-based attacks, as standard.

When Wicieth notices the PCs, she addresses them bemused. She isn't concerned for her safety at first, confident she can escape. She takes charge of the conversation, asking the PCs how they got here. She avoids all questions about herself until she's sure that she can trust the party (i.e. until they manage to improve her attitude to friendly or better).

If her attitude is improved to helpful, she can tell the PCs about some of the drow secrets, such as the infirmary in Room M39 and the headquarters beyond Room M43. She is loathe to do so, however, in case the PCs are kindly Spider King plants. Instead, she offers to take them there during her next courier mission, which occurs in 1d20+4 hours. Until then, the party is welcome to stay in her rear cave, where she says (truthfully) the driders and Faieth ignore.

Encounter Condition: Concealment, poor footing 8, soft cover

Tactics: If forced into combat, Wicieth tumbles through a hole in the webbing, then spends 1 round repairing the hole. Then she shifts into spider form and scurries about beneath the PCs, using the webs to conceal her movements and act as cover against attacks. She relies on her spells to distract the attackers and on her rogue abilities to strike with surprise. She saves her charm person and sleep spells for moments when she can affect more than one enemy and crisis points when she has no choice but to fight directly.

Treasure: At any time, ten false web bundles are poorly hidden across the web surface in the forward cave, planted so that the Faieth or the drider guards can find them. Each bundle contains a variety of small gems amounting to no more than 50 gp in worth.

The real treasure in this Room, however, is buried in the northern wall of the rear chamber, and may only be found with a successful Search or Spot check (DC 20). A small coffer contains the next prize Wicieth intends to deliver to the drow slaves — a scroll of spike stones stolen from the Spider King Elotor (see Room M65).

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, improve the soft cover encounter condition to standard cover and increase the webs' Break DC to 30 and its hit points to 12. To decrease the challenge, reduce the poor footing encounter condition to 4.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 16, initial damage 1d6 Str, secondary damage 2d6 Str. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Change Shape (Su): Wicieth's natural form is that of a Medium monstrous spider. It can assume two other forms. The first is a unique Small or Medium humanoid; an aranea in its humanoid form always assumes the same appearance and traits, much as a lycanthrope would. In humanoid form, an aranea cannot use its bite attack, webs, or poison.

The second form is a Medium spider-humanoid hybrid. In hybrid form, an aranea looks like a Medium humanoid at first glance, but a DC 18 Spot check reveals the creature's fangs and spinnerets. The aranea retains its bite attack, webs, and poison in this form, and can also wield weapons or wear armor. When in hybrid form, an aranea's speed is 30 ft..

An aranea remains in one form until it chooses to assume a new one. A change in form cannot be dispelled, nor does an aranea revert to its natural form when killed. A true seeing spell, however, reveals its natural form if it is in humanoid or hybrid form.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/6; save DC 12 + spell level): 0—dancing lights, daze, ghost sound, prestidigitation, read magic; 1st—charm person, endure elements, sleep.

Wicieth casts spells as a 3rd-level sorcerer.

Web (Ex): In spider or hybrid form (see below), Wicieth can throw a web up to six times per day. This is similar to an attack with a net but has a maximum range of 50 ft., with a range increment of 10 ft., and is effective against targets of up to Large size. The web anchors the target in place, allowing no movement.

An entangled creature can escape with a DC 16 Escape Artist check or burst the web with a DC 20 Strength check. The check DCs are Constitution-based, and the Strength check DC includes a +4 racial bonus. The web has 6 hit points, hardness 0, and takes double damage from fire.

Sneak Attack: Wicieth's attack deals extra damage any time her target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when Wicieth flanks her target. This extra damage is 3d6. Should the rogue score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 feet.

Evasion (Ex): Wicieth can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If she makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, she instead takes no damage. A helpless rogue does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Wicieth can react to danger before her senses would normally allow her to do so. She retains her Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if she is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, she still loses her Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills and Feats: Araneas have a +2 racial bonus on Jump, Listen, and Spot checks. They have a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on Climb checks even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: Bracers of armor +3, masterwork dagger, masterwork thieves' tools, bag of caltrops, vial of antivenom (2), potion of cure light wounds (3), potion of invisibility, potion of jump.

M63. ELITE GUARD NEST

The far end of this cavern is comprised of gleaming amber, as if the diggers who tunneled this portion of the dungeon suddenly came across a great find and left it behind for some reason.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Eight nodules are carved into the amber, each enchanted by the Spider Kings as a resting place for elite drider guards. The nodule entrances are designed to be flush with the wall and are difficult to notice, requiring a successful DC 25 Search check or DC 30 Spot check to find. Opening each of them, however, simply requires a partial action.

Currently, four of the nodules are occupied by Faieth's drider hunters (hp 58 each). For every round during which the PCs move about within the Room, the driders may make a DC 15 Listen check to notice them.

Encounter Condition: Darkness ambush

Tactics: Once the driders become aware of the PCs' presence, they use their clairvoyance/clairaudience abilities to observe the intruders and their suggestion abilities to increase the party's curiosity about the amber wall. Ideally, the PCs approach to adjacent with the amber nodules, at which point the driders spring out to bite them; otherwise, they use their heavy crossbows before closing to use their longspear.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 1 level of fighter to each drider guard. To decrease the challenge, remove both levels of ranger from the drider guards.

Possessions: Masterwork longspear, dagger, heavy crossbow, bolt (15).

M64 THROUGH M72. THE SPIDER KINGS

This Region's final Section houses the most powerful Spider Kings, a fractured leadership that withdraws more and more from its unified goals. Each of the four Spider Kings dwelling here — Alith the Earth-Weaver (Room M64), Eltor the All-Seeing Visionary (Room M65), Nielial the Ever-Vigilant Watcher (Room M66), and Radija the Rot-Summoner (Room M64) — is a force equal to the PCs. Together, they form one of the most powerful alliances the party has yet faced within the World's Largest Dungeon. Only by dealing with them individually, or with great skill and much luck, can the PCs expect to survive this Section without permanent loss. But should they survive, they may find one of the dungeon's most elusive treasures — a way out.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

1d20	Encounter
1–2	Wailing screams are heard from the direction of Room M65. Something's spirit is dying, and its body is soon to follow.
3	The sound of a mountain eagle is heard through the cavern's roof, carried through the tunnels from the surface.
14	The PCs stumble upon a trap left by the driders.
	✦ Camouflaged Pit Trap (60 ft. deep): CR 5; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; no attack roll necessary (5d6); multiple targets (first target in each of two adjacent 5-ft. squares); Reflex save (DC 30) avoids; Search (DC 25); Disable Device (DC 20). Note: This trap is disabled by finding the floor panel release and hammering it into place.
15	The cataclysm finally takes its toll upon this part of the dungeon, collapsing a 10-ft. × 10-ft. section of the ceiling down upon the PCs.
	✦ Falling Block Trap: CR 10; +15 melee (10d6); Search (DC 20); Disable Device (DC 25). Note: Can strike all PCs in a 10-ft. × 10-ft. area. This trap is disabled by propping up the ceiling with strong supports, such as pole-arms.
16	One drider guard (hp 45) and one flesh golem (hp 49) discover the PCs. The guard sends the flesh golem to summon 1d6 drider reinforcements (hp 45 each), which return with the stalker in 1d4 rounds. These creatures retreat if more than 1/3 their number are killed (rounded down).
17	A patrol of 2 driders (hp 45 each) comes upon the PCs. Drugged during a failed slave attack, the driders assume the PCs to be escaped drow slaves, and drive them toward the workshop (Room M64). Not possessing their full faculties, these driders fight to the death.
18	A patrol of 4 driders (hp 45 each) comes upon the PCs. They wish to take the credit for capturing the PCs alive and do not call for reinforcements. They retreat if 2 or more of their number are killed.
19	Wicieth, an aranea courier dominated by the Spider Kings (Rog 6, hp 40), comes upon the PCs during a secret trip to meet the rebels (for more information, see Room M62). Unless the PCs notice the creature, it hides from sight until they pass. If attacked, it flees to the nearest drider outpost where guards are typically stationed and warns the drider sentries about the intruders.
20	The drider Nielial (Ftr 12, hp 159) comes upon the PCs, challenging them as described in the Tactics section of Room M66.

M64. THE WORKSHOP

At the north end of the cavern, read this description:

You enter a cavern so large its far end is a blur behind a buzz of gruesome activity. At the cavern's northeast corner, hapless drow slaves shovel a pile of volcanic rock into a steaming apparatus of metal pipes, gears, and wide leather belts. The soil disappears into a central box at least 20 ft. high, upon which stands a thin, wiry man-spider who screams orders at the slaves. To the west, the box slowly disgorges a stream of black liquid similar to the rock hard webbing on all the walls here and throughout the nearby tunnels. To the east, the box vomits forth a purple fluid that the slaves seal in barrels and store against the eastern wall. All around, slaves monitor the box. Surrounding it all, side passages vanish into darkness in all directions.

At the south end of the cavern, read this description:

You enter a cavern so large its far end a blur behind a buzz of gruesome activity. At the cavern's southernmost edge, drow slaves clinically hack bodies to pieces — bodies of their own kind. The body parts are delivered to tables by type — here a table for heads, there another for arms, one for legs, with torsos on the right. More slaves take the parts and use a metal apparatus of gears and needles to thread them together, forming new bodies that they lay upon a long, curving leather belt. The monstrous creations chug slowly into another apparatus. When they topple out the other end, they catch themselves on the ground, suddenly animate. With the help of a last set of slaves, the newly created beasts stumble toward one of two central structures, where they lay with others of their kind. Periodically, one rises and — much more coordinated than before — lurches into the darkness of a side passage. All around, slaves monitor the boxes. A robust man-spider warrior views the slaves' efforts from atop a floating disk of light, periodically delivering a near-death blow whenever one or more of them make a mistake.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The Spider Kings use this workshop for two purposes — to create the flesh golems used as expendable troops and to create silkstone, the bizarre substance from which the walls of this Region are constructed. Each of these projects is overseen by a trusted drider lieutenant answering directly to Nielial the Ever-Vigilant Warlord (Room M66) and Elotor the All-Seeing Visionary (Room M65).

To the north, Alith the Earth-Weaver (hp 65) commands the creation of silkstone. The slaves deliver volcanic rock mined in Room M38 into the apparatus, where it undergoes a process created by Elotor. When operational, the apparatus spits 1 application of marbleized silkstone into a vat in the west and 1 application of purple silk solvent into a vat in the east every 10 rounds.

Silkstone possesses statistics identical to stone, but may be temporarily dissolved using silk solvent. One application of silk solvent can temporarily dissolve a 10-ft. × 10-ft. patch of silkstone, and multiple applications can be used to "dig" through walls to surprise the occupants of other Rooms. Applying three applications to a single 10-ft. × 10-ft. area, however, permanently dissolves it in 1d6+4 rounds.

Both substances are dangerous when applied to exposed flesh. Silkstone fluid hardens on contact with any PC or creature's skin. The process takes 2 rounds, after which the victim loses the use of the affected limb. If the victim's face is encased, he suffocates. Removing the silkstone requires someone to rip it off with a DC 15 Strength check. With failure, the victim suffers 1d4 damage and the effects of the silkstone remain. With success, the effects of the silkstone end, but the victim suffers 1d10 damage. Alternately, 1 application of silk solvent frees 1 limb, head, or torso, but inflicts 1/4 the silk solvent's standard damage in the process, rounded down.

Silk solvent acts like a mild acid, burning any PC or creature it contacts. For each round of exposure to silk solvent, a victim suffers 1d6 acid damage. For each round of immersion, the victim suffers 4d6 acid damage.

If someone is dumped into one of the vats, he suffers the effects of immersion. In the case of silkstone, the victim's entire body is encased as the fluid out to 1 ft. around him solidifies. Up to three victims may be dumped into each vat at any time, and after 3 days, any victims who remain in the silk solvent vat are completely dissolved.

If someone is dumped into the northern apparatus, he suffers 1 point of permanent Constitution damage at the start of each round until he dies or pulls himself free, a task that requires a successful Strength check (DC 20 + 1 per round he remains in the machine). If one Medium creature (or an equivalent mass) dies within this machine, it breaks down, unable to process the organic matter.

To the south, Radija the Rot-Summoner (hp 65) commands the creation of flesh golems. The slaves deliver hacked apart pieces into the apparatus, where the machine sews them together and imbues them with artificial life using a process created by Elotor. When operational, the apparatus spits 1 completed flesh golem out of its northernmost end every 10 rounds. Unless halted by the PCs, this process continues even during combat, though all newly created flesh golems are useless during the first 24 hours of their existence, as they acclimate to their shells. The PCs may not realize this, attacking the new golems near the north apparatus or even stabbing at the inanimate bodies on the belts before they arrive to the north. Both of these actions are merely wasted time and effort — but attacking the 20 golems resting upon the central structures is not.

During any combat, 1 new flesh golem arises from one of these structures every 10 rounds, entering into combat under Radija's control (or under Alith's control if Radija is incapacitated or dead). The only way to prevent this process is to inflict at least 20 points of damage to every flesh golem on the structures, severing their heads, critical tendons, or causing other bodily harm that prevents them from moving. Setting the golems on fire is even faster — any golem set on fire is assumed to suffer enough damage that it cannot rise, and is in fact destroyed if left to burn for 10 minutes or longer.

If a PC or creature is dumped into the southern apparatus, he suffers he suffers 1 point of permanent Con damage and 1 point of permanent Charisma damage at the start of each round until he dies or pulls himself free, a task that requires a successful Strength check (DC 20 + 1 per round he remains in the machine). Unlike the northern apparatus, this machine does not break down if someone dies within it — instead, the mutilated corpse of anyone who dies within it is animated as a flesh golem at the machine's northern end, as standard.

The machines are delicate, and require many rare and precisely fashioned components Elotor concocts in his lab (Room M65). Thus, each apparatus runs for an extremely short period of time each day. No matter when the PCs arrive, both machines are running, though if the PCs hide from sight for 4d6+6 minutes, the machines are turned off for the day and the slaves are set about cleaning up before they are fed and delivered to Room M68.

The PCs may not decipher the methods of either apparatus with any skill or spell; indeed, even the methods behind them are a mystery that Elotor plans to take to his grave. Disabling either machine requires a great deal of work, but sets the Spider Kings back weeks, if not months. Each possesses a hardness of 10, 200 hit points, and no Break DC. The northern apparatus may also be disabled by feeding it the equivalent of one Medium creature, whole or in pieces.

Both overlords order all forces to attack as soon as they spot any intruders. In Alith's case, this is more because she fears reprisal if she appears weak to Radija, Elotor, and Nielial than because she wishes to kill. If the PCs can somehow catch Alith alone, out of sight from her peers, subordinates, and slaves (who would almost certainly turn her in to receive special treatment), they have one — and only one — chance to sway her. If they make a case that the DM finds both believable and persuasive, and the PCs manage to improve Alith's attitude to indifferent or better (sparking her natural inclination to distrust the drider's new leadership), she aids them. Failing to improve Alith's attitude, however, prompts her to attack as soon as she can muster her troops.

If Alith's attitude is improved to indifferent, she offers to deliver messages to slaves under her command, slow production by up to 50%, or dupe any of the lesser Spider Kings to the east in support of the PCs' actions, though only if the party promises a decisive victory over Elotor and Nielial in the next week at the outside.

If Alith's attitude is improved to friendly, she offers to deliver messages anywhere in this Section and devote up to 6 slaves under her command to actions of the PCs' design, slow production by up to 75%, or dupe Radija in support of the PCs' actions, though only if the party promises a decisive victory over Elotor and Nielial in the next month, with regular updates no less often than every week.

If Alith's attitude is improved to helpful, she offers to deliver messages anywhere in the Region and devote up to 12 slaves under her command to actions of the PCs' design, halt production for up to 3 days, or dupe anyone in the Region in support of the PCs' actions, and is willing to wait indefinitely for the PCs to secure a victory over Elotor and Nielial (though she grows antsy every so often and must be reassured that the course is true and ultimate triumph will come soon).

Encounter Condition: Echoes 4

Tactics: In combat, each leader's first action is to command their drider guards into battle. Second, each leader uses a flare spell to warn the other of an intrusion. Only then do the leaders engage the PCs directly, again as described here.

In the north, Alith orders two drider guards (hp 45 each) to drive the PCs toward the apparatus, dumping one or more of the intruders into the vats or push them toward Radija's forces to the south. Alith's driders utilize their longswords first and foremost, and if either of them falls, the other flees to gather additional forces from Rooms M28, M59, and M58, in that order.

Alith gets lost in the combat, popping up near the PC combatant who looks the most mentally vulnerable ('looks' being the operative term here — Alith may easily be mistaken in this regard). Alith uses defensive spells on herself, and saves enlarge for the first active flesh golem within range. She prefers to use non-lethal forms of attack, such as sleep, web, and bestow curse, but resorts to magic missile and her poisoned weapon when necessary to stay alive and safeguard the machines. Unlike Radija, Alith defends her drider guards and the slaves under her command, and this selflessness may illustrate to the PCs the potential to sway her to their cause.

In the south, Radija orders two drider guards (hp 45 each) to delegate commands. One runs to the central structures, taking command of the two flesh golems (hp 75 each) and ordering them to attack the nearest PC. This drider leads the golems from PC to PC, engaging alongside the constructs, until none remain standing or the golems are destroyed, at which point he falls back to receive more orders.

The second drider leads the slaves in a bull rush toward the PCs, hoping to drive them into the northern forces and disorient them long enough for Alith and Radija to gain command of the situation. When the slaves' ranks are broken, this drider wades into the party, fighting until his hit points are reduced to 20 or less, at which point he falls back to receive more orders.

Radija remains close to his driders and the active flesh golems, casting spells to support them and increase their abilities, and engaging the PCs whenever he believes he can inflict fair to great damage. He uses bull's strength, invisibility, jump, mage armor, protection from arrows, resistance, and stoneskin to boost the statistics of the driders and flesh golems as needed, and uses mending to heal the flesh golems of 1d6 damage per casting. When he can't boost his troops' abilities any longer, he supports them with magic missile and lightning bolt. He also casts hold person to give his troops an edge against tough opponents.

Radija is very much a general, directing troops with a keen strategic eye and remaining out of the battle until he is needed. By then, given his might and magical weapons and with the party weakened by his troops, he's likely to present the PCs with a solid final engagement before they secure the Room. The DM should hold Radija back as much as possible throughout the combat, unleashing his full strength upon the party when he needs to give the battle a final dramatic adrenaline shot. After that, this close to the conclusion of the Region, he should pull out all the stops and make the players work to capture Elotor's machines.

Treasure: For every 15 minutes the PCs spend working in the north, they gain 1 application of silk solvent (to a maximum of 100 applications). Each application of silk solvent has the dimensions and weight of 1 full water bladder.

Skills and Feats: —

Berserk (Ex): When a flesh golem enters combat, there is a cumulative 1% chance each round that its elemental spirit breaks free and the golem goes berserk. The uncontrolled golem goes on a rampage, attacking the nearest living creature or smashing some object smaller than itself if no creature is within reach, then moving on to spread more destruction. The golem's creator, if within 60 ft., can try to regain control by speaking firmly and persuasively to the golem, which requires a DC 19 Charisma check. It takes 1 minute of inactivity by the golem to reset the golem's berserk chance to 0%.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): A flesh golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals cold or fire damage slows a flesh golem (as the slow spell) for 2d6 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for every 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, a flesh golem hit by a lightning bolt heals 3 points of damage if the attack would have dealt 11 points of damage. A flesh golem gets no saving throw against attacks that deal electricity damage.

Skills and Feats: Craft (any one) +4, Listen +1, Search +2, Spot +1, Survival +1; Endurance.

Elf Traits: Immunity to sleep spells and effects, and a +2 racial saving throw bonus against enchantment spells or effects.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, foerie fire. Caster level 1st.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

M65. ELOTOR'S LABORATORY

Each door leading into this Room is blocked by a portcullis that may be opened by lever from within or with a successful DC 25 Strength check. Each portcullis has a hardness of 10, 75 hit points, and a Break DC of 30.

Beyond the iron portcullis, you find an arcane laboratory. Sorcerous tools and implements of spell construction lie beside medical and burial appliances, covered in gristle.

The air here is foul and low; lost whimpers are heard from cages lining the west wall. Dozens of impossible creatures inhabit these hovels, their bodies twisted like broken dummies discarded by a mad puppeteer. Transfixed, you try to avert your horrified eyes, only to notice a ball of fur quivering in the last cage to the right — an ebon, overly muscular badger with spikes instead of hair, its eyes blind-dry from endless tears.

A sudden movement in distracts you, as a tiny fist of flesh rolls across a table and blossoms into a 6-in. tall humanoid with a head far too large for its fragile frame. It emits a sarcastic cackle before rolling away again, toward a man hunched over another table. Every time the man's hands move, a squeal rises from before him. Ignoring you, he picks up a hammer and chisel...

Initial Attitude: Hostile, indifferent

Encounter: This gruesome laboratory belongs to Elotor the All-Seeing Visionary (hp 105), one of two chief commanders within the driders' leadership. Elotor hopes to circumvent the typical creation of his kind, forging new driders by willful application of darkest magic. His explorations of magic's effect upon a creature's physical form demand the sacrifice of many innocent beasts — the pitiable beings in the western cages. Most of the travesties inflicted upon these prisoners served a far-reaching purpose within Elotor's grand scheme; some merely for amusement's sake.

Now is a time of great progress for the Spider Kings — Elotor's cages hold not one but three magical creatures: a centaur paladin named Melody, a unicorn named Windshadow, and a vicious, deceitful lamia named Zoisimas. These three prisoners are at the core of Elotor's current experiments — he hopes that their bodily materials can substitute for the bronze dragon's egg destroyed in the Halls of Flesh (Region I) by his mentor, Mahir.

The unicorn Windshadow (hp 38) was captured only 3 months ago, and looks to be in sorry shape. His horn is gouged away in many places and infected wounds dot his torso and legs where Elotor removed strips of flesh. It seems that Windshadow is not long for this world. His damaged horn does not heal as well as it once did, and although he cures the damage, each day Elotor makes it worse. To add insult to injury, Windshadow's legs were broken and reset wrong, hobbling the beast and reducing his movement.

Zoisimas (hp 31) bickers constantly with Windshadow, forcing Elotor to periodically subdue them with spells. Only one thing irritates Zoisimas more than the unicorn — his imprisonment. Should he ever escape, he plans to wreak the most painful vengeance he can conceive upon the Spider Kings. This he vows every night before he collapses into haunting slumber and every morning as he wakes in a cold sweat.

The centaur paladin Melody (hp 51) made a holy pilgrimage to the dungeon, retracing the steps of her ancestors to the dungeon where they served as underlings to the celestial wardens. Unfortunately, by the time Melody arrived, the celestials were overthrown and the dungeon lie in ruins, overrun by an army of former prisoners and invaders. She and her companion, Hakarr, ventured into the remains of the prison seeking a way to restore order, and some time later, they were set upon and captured by agents of the Spider Kings. The driders separated the centaurs, delivering Hakarr to the bloodletting chamber (Room M30) and Melody here, where she remains one of the few untouched beasts in Elotor's cages. The master sorcerer seems to be saving her for something special — a stage of experimentation he has yet to reach.

Melody is every inch the paladin, forthright and pure. If given the opportunity, she aids the PCs however she can, and can be a valuable guide to the Barrows and the Regions to the south.

Within the remaining cages is a freakish collection of modified beasts. Following the examples shown in this Room's read-aloud text, the DM is encouraged to occupy the cages with a wide variety of his own twisted, merged, and malformed critters.

The test subjects are destined to languish here until the end of their miserable days, periodically observed by their tormentor, his sycophantic follower Sinalith the Shaper (hp 55), and his homunculus familiar, Scuttle (hp 52). Beyond these creatures formidable power, this Room is guarded by a pair of flesh golems (hp 75 each), one stationed beside each door. These golems are built to resemble the Room's walls, and therefore easy to miss. The PCs only notice them if they intentionally spend a round searching the Room for other occupants or make a successful DC 30 Spot check.

Elotor is a true villain, caring for nothing beyond the advancement of his mad plan to create more driders. He considers all life and all living beings mere resources to be exploited, and collects PCs and creatures of all types as test subjects. Humanoids are highly prized, being closest in form to the drow from which driders are created. Any intrusion by humanoid PCs gains his immediate attention, and he takes every step necessary to capture them alive. Per the DM's discretion, PCs captured elsewhere in the Spider Kings' realm may also be delivered into Elotor's hands.

Elotor ignores all attempts at conversation that don't involve his experiments. Should any PC express an interest in Elotor's work, he gleefully discusses his current thoughts on seemingly rational terms, carefully outlining the benefits of becoming 'one of the flesh'. He genuinely believes that his work elevates his subjects to a higher plane of life, where they will share in the triumphant ascension of the misguided drow slaves. Never one to tell when he can show, Elotor highlights his commentary with torturous experiments, providing disturbing illustrations for his captive audience.

Sinalith is a true sycophant, a loyal, simpering advisor to Elotor, even though the master sorcerer looks upon the follower with equal degrees of contempt and condemnation. Sinalith is a coward, but happily throws himself in harm's way to protect his beloved Elotor, and it is only this devotion that keeps him from joining the caged flesh-puppets.

Finally, the homunculus Scuttle is Elotor's familiar, created by Sinalith with a very real part of the sycophant's spirit, but dedicated absolutely to the master sorcerer alone. Indeed, the homunculus would happily sacrifice itself to save its master, even as it watches Sinalith regularly scorned and beaten.

Scuttle is surprisingly intelligent, if vile in disposition, and frequently corrects the 'mistakes' of others — even the Spider Kings (except Elotor, of course). Worse, it's usually correct. When not aiding Elotor in the lab, the familiar spends its time scurrying about the Barrows, spying on their denizens and reporting back to its master. Scuttle is aware of the slaves' plot to rebel against their masters, but ironically can't bring Elotor to believe it.

The Spider Kings despise both of Elotor's "pets", and would gut them for sport if the All-Seeing Visionary didn't hold them in such high esteem — or so it seems. In truth, Elotor feels nothing for Sinalith or Scuttle, but enjoys the way his quirky underlings get under the other Spider Kings' skin. Secretly, Elotor finds amusement as much in tormenting his peers as in tormenting innocent test subjects.

As the PCs enter this Room, Elotor is busy with his latest line of research — transposing the torsos of a formian and girallon. Both are Small specimens, and with the procedure only half done are helpless and incapable of performing any action more complicated than squirming in unthinkable pain.

If the PCs enter from the north, Elotor takes them for either extremely capable combatants or sneakers. If they enter from the south, he makes no such assumptions. Either way, with a wave of his hand, he orders Scuttle to secure the most immediate help available from the opposite direction. This signal is obvious to Sinalith and the flesh golems as well, all of whom move to subdue the party.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Any battle in the laboratory happens in layers. The flesh golems stand at the front of the enemy forces, striking intruders with their gauntlet-covered fists. These fists are enchanted with the shock magical weapon ability and inflict additional electricity damage that also heals the flesh golem with every successful hit. This enchantment comes with a price, however — the chance that each golem goes berserk rises to 5% per round. The golems fight to the death and do everything in their power to prevent the PCs from approaching either Elotor or Sinalith.

Behind the golems, Sinalith the Shaper casts mage armor, shield, magic circle against good, endurance, and see invisibility upon itself, in that order. Once the PCs circumvent or break through the golems, however, he goes on the offensive, casting stinking cloud to slow the party down and hold person to keep them within the cloud's area of effect. He follows this up with ghoul touch spells cast through spectral hands. If all else fails, Sinalith falls back on his melee weapons, casting blur to (hopefully) keep himself just out of reach. Like the golems, Sinalith refuses to flee — unless Elotor falls, at which point he runs for the southern exit, planning to exit the Region, never looking back.

Elotor typically begins each battle by casting quicken displacement upon himself, followed by minor globe of invulnerability. During Round 2, he follows up with a quicken slow spell against the most mobile opponents, then hold monster or hold person targeting heavy fighters. Rounds 3 and 4 bring a maximized cloudkill (even if Sinalith's cloudkill spell is still active), followed by a mass hold person to catch any stragglers in the double cloud. Assuming all this comes off without a hitch.

The master sorcerer saves his damaging spells as last resorts, and uses circle of death and evocation only if personally threatened with a clearly superior force (at which point he unleashes everything in his arsenal, seeking only to destroy the PCs once and for all). In Elotor's eyes, damaging or killing potential test subjects, or bleeding them of their life force, is the worst possible outcome, to be avoided at all costs.

Elotor loathes melee combat and only engages the PCs directly when he has no other choice. He retreats if reduced to 40 or fewer hit points, casting wall of force to cover his withdrawal, and using limited wish to change the Room's structure or contents, or eliminate doors through which he flees.

If Scuttle makes it out of the Room, he heads to Room M28 or Room M64, as appropriate, seeking help in the laboratory. In the former case, all the drider guards arrive in 5 rounds, followed by Scuttle with half the guards from Rooms M58 and M59 after another 7 rounds thereafter. In the latter case, Radija and his flesh golems arrive in 4 rounds' time with Scuttle in tow. If the PCs have already eliminated any of these forces, Scuttle becomes flustered and confused, and returns to his master for new orders. He likely doesn't have the time to perform any more.

In a fight, Scuttle slips under the Room's tables and nips at the PCs' feet, trying to poison them with its bite. If Elotor is killed or flees, Scuttle follows, casting a minor offensive spell to harass the PCs on his way out (though only if Elotor lives to extend it to him).

All forces in the Room know not to kill intruders unless they must to protect Elotor. The master sorcerer is a firm believer in the adage, "Waste not, want not" and demands that his troops strive to secure new test subjects whenever possible, or at the very least leave the recently dead largely intact to allow for postmortem experimentation.

Finally, the PCs may free one or more of the 25 test subjects currently caged against the west wall. Each cage possesses a hardness of 8, 50 hit points, and a Break DC of 24, and each cage door lock requires a successful DC 18 Open Lock check to unlock. All test subjects attack Elotor immediately upon their release, the unnamed ones performing +2 melee attacks that inflict a meager 1d2 points of damage. The named subjects take more advanced actions, as follows.

Windshadow charges Elotor or the enemy's front line, attempting to impale an opponent upon its horn, then rearing up and striking with its hooves. The unicorn refuses to abandon any ally, especially the PC who freed him, and applies his healing abilities to this PC as needed.

Zoisimas slinks into the shadows, attempting to avoid the fight altogether. If forced to fight, he lashes out with the nearest sharp instrument — likely one of Elotor's scalpels (which operates like a standard dagger).

— applying his Wisdom drain ability to each successful hit. At the first available opportunity, he uses charm person or suggestion to convince a victim to cover his flight from the Room. Zoismas grabs any fallen PC or creature's weapons to assist his escape.

As befits her paladin training, Melody wades into the enemy's front line, relying upon her Spring Attack feat at first and Trampling from there. Like Windshadow, she seeks to cut a clear path to Elotor, downing the villain as quickly and decisively as possible. Like Zoismas, Melody grabs weapons from the fallen PC and enemies, outfitting herself as best she can along the way.

The attitudes of all test subjects begin at indifferent, but immediately improve to friendly upon their release. Also, the PCs gain a +4 circumstance bonus with skill checks made to further improve the subjects' attitude thereafter. Only Melody agrees to accompany the PCs, however, and she departs once they leave this Region, dedicated to restoring the celestials' dungeon on her own terms.

Treasure: Stacked upon the shelves throughout this Room are dozens of scrolls, only some of which are decipherable by the PCs and only a few of which are truly magical. For every 10 minutes the PCs spend going through the shelves, the PCs may make a DC 18 Search check to find one of the following, in this order: identify, locate object, hold person, enervation, stone shape, and flesh to stone. After one hour of searching, the PCs have found all the scrolls they can, and subsequent investigations turn up nothing.

Further, a toxic of clear thought rests atop the highest shelf in the laboratory, locked with a magical padlock that may not be broken. Elotor wears the key on a chain around his neck.

Skills and Feats: Hide +14, Listen +4, Spot +4; Lightning Reflexes.

Alertness (Ex): While a familiar is within arm's reach, Elotor gains the Alertness feat.

Deliver Touch Spells (Su): Scuttle can deliver touch spells for Elotor. If the master and the familiar are in contact at the time the master casts a touch spell, he can designate his familiar as the "toucher." The familiar can then deliver the touch spell just as the master could. As usual, if the master casts another spell before the touch is delivered, the touch spell dissipates.

Empathic Link (Su): Elotor has an empathic link with his familiar out to a distance of up to 1 mile. The master cannot see through the familiar's eyes, but they can communicate empathically. Because of the limited nature of the link, only general emotional content can be communicated.

Because of this empathic link, the master has the same connection to an item or place that his familiar does.

Improved Evasion (Ex): When subjected to an attack that normally allows a Reflex saving throw for half damage, Elotor takes no damage if it makes a successful saving throw and half damage even if the saving throw fails.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 19, initial damage sleep for 1 minute, secondary damage sleep for another 5d6 minutes. The save DC is Constitution-based and includes a +2 racial bonus.

Scry on Familiar (Sp): Elotor may scry on Scuttle (as if casting the scrying spell) once per day.

Share Spells: At Elotor's option, he may have any spell (but not any spell-like ability) he casts on himself also affect Scuttle. The familiar must be within 5 feet at the time of casting to receive the benefit.

If the spell or effect has a duration other than instantaneous, it stops affecting the familiar if it moves farther than 5 feet away and will not affect the familiar again even if it returns to the master before the duration expires. Additionally, Elotor may cast a spell with a target of "You" on his familiar (as a touch range spell) instead of on himself.

Elotor and his familiar can share spells even if the spells normally do not affect creatures of the familiar's type.

Sinalith casts spells as a 7th-level sorcerer.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: Dagger of venom, scroll of prismatic spray (13th).

✦ Flesh Golem: CR 7; Large Construct; HD 9d10+30; hp 75; Init -1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18, touch 8, flat-footed 18; Base Atk +6; Grp +15; Atk Slam +11 melee (2d8+6 plus 1d6 electrical); Full Atk 2 slams +11 melee (2d8+6 plus 1d6 electrical); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Berserk: SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 5/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL (Always) N; SV Fort +3, Ref +2, Will +3; Str 21, Dex 9, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Improved Grapple.

Berserk (Ex): When a flesh golem enters combat, there is a cumulative 1% chance each round that its elemental spirit breaks free and the golem goes berserk. The uncontrolled golem goes on a rampage, attacking the nearest living creature or smashing some object smaller than itself if no creature is within reach, then moving on to spread more destruction. The golem's creator, if within 60 feet, can try to regain control by speaking firmly and persuasively to the golem, which requires a DC 19 Charisma check. It takes 1 minute of inactivity by the golem to reset the golem's berserk chance to 0%.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): A flesh golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below. A magical attack that deals cold or fire damage slows a flesh golem (as the slow spell) for 2d6 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for every 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, a flesh golem hit by a lightning bolt heals 3 points of damage if the attack would have dealt 11 points of damage. A flesh golem gets no saving throw against attacks that deal electricity damage.

Possessions: Two +1 spiked shock gauntlets (attached to the golem with steel pins, the golem heals 1/4 of the electrical damage it inflicts).

▲ Windshadow, Unicorn: CR 3; Large magical beast; HD 4d10+20; hp 42; Init +3; Spd 5 ft.; AC 18, touch 12, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +4; Grp +13; Atk +11 melee (1d8+8, horn); Full Atk +11 melee (1d8+8, horn) and +3 melee (1d4+2, 2 hooves); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., magic circle against evil, spell-like abilities, immunity to poison, charm, and compulsion, low-light vision, scent, wild empathy; AL CG; SV Fort +9, Ref +7, Will +6; Str 20, Dex 17, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 21, Cha 24.

Skills and Feats: Jump +21, Listen +11, Move Silently +9, Spot +11, Survival +8; Alertness, Skill Focus (survival).

Magic Circle against Evil (Su): This ability continuously duplicates the effect of the spell. Windshadow cannot suppress this ability.

Spell-Like Abilities: Windshadow can detect evil at will as a free action.

Windshadow can no longer use greater teleport and can only use cure light wounds twice per day (caster level 5th) by touching a wounded creature with its horn. It cannot cast cure moderate wounds any longer. Once per day it can use neutralize poison (DC 21, caster level 8th) with a touch of its horn. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Wild Empathy (Ex): This power works like the druid's wild empathy class feature, except that a unicorn has a +6 racial bonus on the check.

Skills: Unicorns have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

✧ Unicorns have a +3 competence bonus on Survival checks within the boundaries of their forest.

▲ Zoisimas, Lamia: CR 6; Large magical beast; HD 9d10+9; hp 31; Init +2; Spd 60 ft.; AC 18, touch 11, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +9; Grp +17; Atk +12 melee (1d4 Wisdom drain, touch) or +12 melee (1d6+4/19–20, dagger) or +12 melee (1d4+4, claw); Full Atk +12 melee (1d4 Wisdom drain, touch) or +12/+7 melee (1d6+4/19–20, dagger) and +7 melee (1d4+2, 2 claws); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA Spell-like abilities, Wisdom drain; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., low-light vision; AL CE; SV Fort +7, Ref +8, Will +7; Str 18, Dex 15, Con 12, Int 13, Wis 15, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +14, Concentration +10, Diplomacy +3, Disguise +1 (+3 acting), Hide +11, Intimidate +3, Spot +11; Dodge, Iron Will, Mobility, Spring Attack.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—disguise self, ventriloquism; 3/day—charm monster (DC 15), major image (DC 14), mirror image, suggestion (DC 14); 1/day—deep slumber (DC 14). Caster level 9th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Wisdom Drain (Su): Zoisimas drains 1d4 points of Wisdom each time it hits with its melee touch attack. [Unlike with other kinds of ability drain attacks, a lamia does not heal any damage when it uses its Wisdom drain.]

Skills: Lamias have a +4 racial bonus on Bluff and Hide checks.

▲ Melody, Centaur Pal 6: CR 9; Large monstrous humanoid; HD 4d8+8 + 6d10+12; hp 51; Init +2; Spd 50 ft.; AC 14, touch 11, flat-footed 12; Base Atk +10; Grp +19; Atk +14 melee (1d6+5, hoof); Full Atk +14 melee (1d6+5, 2 hooves); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA Smite evil, spells; SQ Aura of courage, aura of good, darkvision 60 ft., detect evil, divine grace, lay on hands, remove disease, turn undead; AL LG; SV Fort +11, Ref +11, Will +11; Str 20, Dex 15, Con 15, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Listen +3, Move Silently +4, Spot +3, Survival +2; Dodge, Mobility, Spring Attack, Weapon Focus (longsword).

Aura of Courage (Su): Melody is immune to fear (magical or otherwise). Each ally within 10 feet of her gains a +4 morale bonus on saving throws against fear effects.

This ability functions while the paladin is conscious, but not if she is unconscious or dead.

Aura of Good (Ex): The power of a paladin's aura of good (see the detect good spell) is equal to her paladin level.

Detect Evil (Sp): At will, Melody can use detect evil, as the spell.

Divine Grace (Su): Melody gains a bonus equal to her Charisma bonus (+3) on all saving throws.

Divine Health (Ex): Melody has immunity to all diseases, including supernatural and magical diseases.

Lay on Hands (Su): Melody can heal wounds (her own or those of others) by touch. Each day she can heal a total number of hit points of damage equal to her paladin level × her Charisma bonus (18). A paladin may choose to divide her healing among multiple recipients, and she does not have to use it all at once. Using lay on hands is a standard action.

Alternatively, Melody can use any or all of this healing power to deal damage to undead creatures. Using lay on hands in this way requires a successful melee touch attack and does not provoke an attack of opportunity. The paladin decides how many of her daily allotment of points to use as damage after successfully touching an undead creature.

Remove Disease (Sp): Melody can produce a remove disease effect, as the spell, once per week.

Smite Evil (Su): Twice per day, Melody may attempt to smite evil with one normal melee attack. She adds her Charisma bonus (+3) to her attack roll and deals 1 extra point of damage per paladin level. If the paladin accidentally smites a creature that is not evil, the smite has no effect, but the ability is still used up for that day.

Turn Undead (Su): Melody has the supernatural ability to turn undead. She may use this ability six times per day. She turns undead as a cleric of 3rd level.

Paladin Spells Prepared (2, Save DC 12 + Spell Level): 1st—bless weapon, protection from evil. Casts at 3rd level.

✦ Test Subject: hp 10 each, no special qualities or abilities.

ELOTOR

Unknown to anyone — including most Spider Kings — the master sorcerer Elotor keeps a terrible secret. During his escape from the magical cataclysm unleashed by his master in the Halls of Flesh (Region I), his form was rendered malleable. His flesh is constantly shifting beneath his robes, taking on new and more disgusting shapes and gaining new and more bizarre utilities. At any time, he possesses too many limbs, too many eyes, or too few. His nails become talons one day and dripping ooze sockets the next. He is a circus of bodily horror.

Each time the PCs encounter Elotor, the DM may choose his mutations or randomly generate them by rolling twice on the following table.

1d20	Mutation
1	None. For a time at least, Elotor's body is at peace.
2–3	Elotor's eyes move to the sides of head and his face becomes a mouth of razor-sharp teeth. (2d6, bite)
4–5	Elotor's fingers grow into razor-sharp talons (1d8+2/19–20, claws)
6–7	Elotor possesses an extra joint in every limb provides a +10 bonus to Escape Artist checks.
8–9	Elotor possesses 1d4 extra limbs and Multiattack.
10–11	Elotor possesses a stoop, which he disguises by hunching over his work. –4 Charisma.
12–13	Spikes along his back rip through his robes, forcing Elotor to retreat out of sight until the mutation shifts. –6 Charisma.
14–15	Bleeding or transparent skin provides Elotor a +10 competence bonus to Hide checks.
16–17	Elotor grows on size category. In addition, he gains +4 Strength and suffers –2 Dexterity.
18–19	Elotor grows a hard scaly carapace (damage reduction 2/—)
20	Roll twice on this table, applying both results. This result may apply multiple times, increasing the number of mutations applied by 1 each time. If this mutation is later lost, all mutations filling the slot are lost (e.g. if one initial mutation roll generates 3 mutations, all 3 mutations are gained and lost together).

During combat, there is a non-cumulative 1 in 20 chance per round that Elotor's body mutates before the PCs' eyes, randomly replacing one of his current mutations for a new one, generated by the table above. Outside combat, there is an equal chance of random mutation every hour the PCs remain in hiding in or near Elotor's laboratory.

Elotor's body resides only partially on the Prime Material Plane, and he is immune to all magic that affects his physical form, including polymorphing, shapeshifting, and petrification. Further, in an effort to create new driders without their goddess' interference and due to intense study of his body's senseless mutations, Elotor's mind has become utterly unhinged, making him immune to all mind-altering effects as well.

None save Alith suspect that Elotor has greater plans for the driders than merely retaking their homeland, and none save Alith suspect the nature of Elotor's injuries (he tells all others that his disfigurement is purely ghastly to look upon). If the PCs improve Alith's attitude to friendly, she warns them that Elotor may not be all that he seems. At helpful, she tells them that she believes he has power over his form, godly power only spoken off in hushed whispers about the drow goddess's most favored — and most vicious — lieutenants in the dark ages thousands of years ago. She warns them to expect the unexpected around the master sorcerer, and beware surprise attacks using weapons no drider should possess.

M66. NIELIAL'S QUARTERS

A warren of tunnels twists and turns through the dungeon rubble dipping as deep as 20 ft. into the volcanic soil and rising in places over a dozen feet above the surface. Sinewy threads shoot through every matte black rock face, creating a look of natural marble. Finally, after several confusing forks and a couple dead ends, you exit the tunnels into a small cavern. A recently dug hole is visible in the center of the floor, a strange clicking rising from its darkness.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Nielial (hp 189), the Ever-Vigilant Warlord, lairs in this distant, dark Room. At one time, Nielial was the driders' spymaster, and her cunning mind was used to outwit armies. Even then, she eschewed the use of magic, which she considered inherently untrustworthy, and refused even to use her own natural drider gifts. After her people came to the dungeon, she realized the futility of her position, and sought to find a new place at the head of her tribe's leadership. She soon found it — by arranging a sudden and bloody death for the driders' previous Warlord, an obese sloth who would eventually lead his kin to an untimely grave.

Nielial takes her position as Warlord seriously, but has grown anti-social of late, especially in light of the realization that her people don't intend to leave the dungeon anytime soon. With all the other driders settling in, Nielial withdrew to this remote cavern, where she rules by proxy. She plans to let the Elotor pursue his fool's errand, and let the others build their citadel and gather their army. When the troops are ready, Nielial will rise to lead them.

Surprisingly, Nielial does not attack anyone who enters this Room. Instead, she emerges from her slumbering hole and calmly congratulates the party for making it here alive. She praises them as noble warriors, complementing them until it becomes uncomfortable, lacing her commentary with random statements about the driders' origins, fallen glory, and hopes for a grander tomorrow.

Nielial is far too smart to fall for any of the PCs' lines, and is therefore immune to all natural forms of attitude adjustment. Instead, unless the PCs improve her attitude to indifferent or better using magic, she waits for a lull in the conversation and says, "You are aware that I can't allow you to leave here alive, aren't you?"

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: Nielial is a calm fighter. She approaches each fight with a clinical detachment, applauding the PCs when they score solid hits and berating herself when she does not. Despite her level-headed demeanor, however, she never pulls punches. She long ago grew bored with all life had to offer, and now seeks nothing short of an absolutely worthy enemy.

She closes with the largest number of PCs at any time, using both her weapons to perform whirlwind and great cleaving attacks as possible. She takes every attack of opportunity due her, and fails to flinch no matter how many enemies she fells during the same round. Nielial is quite literally a combat machine, chugging through the motions with all the practiced rhythm of the finest siege engine ever built, never stopping until every enemy lies dead at her feet. Thereafter, she mutters a casual overview of her performance and returns to her slumbering hole — until the next time she's needed, or the goddess deigns to gift her with more opponents.

Under no circumstances does Nielial retreat. If dealt a mortal blow, she uses her final breath to bequeath her weapons to the victorious PC who felled her.

Treasure: Nielial has amazed hundreds of trinkets, taken from drow victims, but nothing of true value stands out among her possessions, short of the swords that she carries.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 standard drider guards. To decrease the challenge, remove 2 fighter levels from Nielial.

Nielial casts spells as a 6th-level sorcerer.

Skills: A drider has a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks. It has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

Possessions: +1 chain vest, +3 shocking longsword, +3 defending shortsword (with a customized grip so Nielial may use it without penalty), potion of cure serious wounds (3).

M67. MEETING HALL

Beyond a patch of sticky webbing, you find a curving chamber illuminated by phosphorescent fungi upon the walls and ceiling. Central within the chamber is a twisted stone pedestal shot with white threads. The surface is pocked with large spider tracks. The chamber is deserted, and doesn't appear to have been used in a long time.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When the driders first came to the dungeon, this Room was once used as a planning ground, but with the Spider Kings each withdrawing from their makeshift council to pursue their own interests, it has fallen into disuse. No amount of searching turns up anything of interest here.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: A DC 30 Search check reveals old notes (written in Undercommon) regarding combinations of elixirs and the effects this has on the drow body. The notes are gruesome and unapologetic, in most cases referring to the drow like they were cattle... or worse.

EL: N/A

M68. ELOTOR'S CHAMBERS

Surely this must be the heart of madness — the walls of this chamber are caked with gore. Beneath the ichor, every surface is covered in sticky webbing that makes maneuvering the rooms painstakingly slow. Beyond this sparse killing zone are two deeper chambers, the details of both lost.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: These are Elotor's private chambers, though he rarely uses them. The northern chamber beyond houses Elotor's countless magical and reference tomes, resting in alcoves no lower than 5 ft. from the webbed floor and reaching up to a height of 50 ft. in places. Each alcove contains a candle made from elven fat, many of which have burned to the root, left alit after Elotor grabbed a book he needed in his laboratory (Room M65). Mostly, the books in this chamber are both useless and worthless to the PCs, but a few standout volumes may be found.

The southern chamber beyond is Elotor's sleeping quarters, containing a thick mat that has long since been eaten apart by insects and several more forgotten elf candles. This chamber's walls are plastered with detailed drawings of drider anatomy, and any PC who studies them for 1 full hour gains a +1 equipment bonus with attack and damage rolls made against a drider during the following 24 hours. Thereafter, the knowledge becomes jumbled and fades, eliminating the bonus.

Encounter Condition: Poor Footing 8

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: A DC 30 Search check reveals one of the following — a scroll of true seeing, a scroll of vision, and a flesh golem manual.

EL: N/A

M69. SLAVE PIT

This dank cavern extends past your natural vision into the gloom and the heat from the northern lava river brings beads of sweat to your brow. Many shackled dark elves slumber here, their labored breathing merging to become a chorus. A drizzle of dirt falls upon you — something is moving overhead...

Initial Attitude: Hostile, Unfriendly

Encounter: Twenty drow slaves (hp 3 each) sleep before returning to work (Room M64). Though not beaten as often as their brethren, these drow are worked twice as hard and expected to die soon. Most hope to pass in their sleep, before dying by the lash or being thrown into the lava. An even worse fate is being handed over to Elotor (Room M65).

There is a 10% chance that any slave is part of the rebel movement. Rebels whose attitude toward the PCs are improved to Friendly or better may reveal one or more secrets about their allies to the east, such as the infirmary (Room M39) or the base beyond the lavafall (Room M43).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: There is a 50% chance that four drider hunters from Room M63 are in the dark corners of this chamber, standing guard, waiting for the drow to make a move. They do not post here all the time, keeping the slaves in a constant state of fear. Dozens of niches in which to hide, provide the driders and PCs room for guerrilla tactics. If the driders discover the intruders, they take up defensive positions at the southern edges of the chamber, summoning six drow guards to help. Fearing the driders' response, the drow do not flee unless forced, and the driders cut down fleeing drow with missile weapons.

The drider guards are supremely confident in their ability to repel intruders — after their drow underlings have softened them up. They calmly observe the situation until the last drow guard falls, then send a slave to summon Nielial from her lair (Room M66) and stride in to engage the party. Until reduced to 1/2 hit points (rounded down), each drider fights in the open, making full attacks with its poison and melee weapons. Thereafter, the driders levitate above the PCs and pick away at them with missile weapons and ranged magic until Nielial arrives. Fearing their lord's response, the driders do not flee unless forced, and true to this fear, the minions in Room M64 cut down any drow who runs before moving to engage the PCs.

Nielial arrives in 2d6 rounds, with half the driders and flesh golems from Room M64 in tow. She uses every resource at her disposal to destroy the PCs.

Spell-Like Abilities: 1/day—dancing lights, darkness, faerie fire. Caster level 1st.

Light Blindness: Abrupt exposure to bright light (such as sunlight or a daylight spell) blinds drow for 1 round. On subsequent rounds, they are dazzled as long as they remain in the affected area.

Skills: +2 racial bonus on Listen, Search, and Spot checks. An elf who merely passes within 5 feet of a secret or concealed door is entitled to a Search check to notice it as if she were actively looking for it.

M70. THE WANDERER

From afar, a humanoid is seen stumbling up a 'beach' of volcanic sand. Judging by its staggering gait, it must be injured. Badly.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The figure is one of Elotor's flesh golems (hp 55), injured after being pushed into the lava river by the rebel drow to the east. Now it walks back toward the laboratory (Room M65) for repairs. Unless attacked, the golem ignores the PCs — indeed, it ignores everything until it reaches its destination.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Heat

Tactics: If the PCs press for a fight, the flesh golem charges forward slamming its opponents, perhaps coincidentally (and unintentionally) trying to bull rush them into the lava river in the process. Thereafter, it lays into the attackers with its fists, not letting up or returning to its previous task until the enemy is dead or it collapses.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 5

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add increase the hit points of the golem by +20. To decrease the challenge, apply a -2 circumstance penalty to the golem's attack rolls due to its injuries.

Skills and Feats: —

Berserk (Ex): When a flesh golem enters combat, there is a cumulative 1% chance each round that its elemental spirit breaks free and the golem goes berserk. The uncontrolled golem goes on a rampage, attacking the nearest living creature or smashing some object smaller than itself if no creature is within reach, then moving on to spread more destruction. The golem's creator, if within 60 ft., can try to regain control by speaking firmly and persuasively to the golem, which requires a DC 19 Charisma check. It takes 1 minute of inactivity by the golem to reset the golem's berserk chance to 0%.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): A flesh golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals cold or fire damage slows a flesh golem (as the slow spell) for 2d6 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for every 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, a flesh golem hit by a lightning bolt heals 3 points of damage if the attack would have dealt 11 points of damage. A flesh golem gets no saving throw against attacks that deal electricity damage.

M71. FLESH TOMB

From beneath a collapsed pile of rubble, a pale hand breaks free, outstretched as if begging for aid...

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When returning from a patrol of the northern tunnels with a newly discovered magic item, one of the Spider Kings flesh golems (hp 42) became trapped in a sudden rockfall. It attempted to dig itself free, in its extremely weakened state it only managed to break the rubble's surface, not drag itself out from under the fallen stones.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Heat

Tactics: Half the golem's head was crushed in the rockfall and what passes for its brain was severely damaged. If freed from the rubble, it is incapable of any action save moving southeast — it can't even attack or defend itself. With every step, it repeats its intended greeting to Elotor: "This precious thing I find. Taaaaake."

Every round the PCs remain in this Room, there is a 10% chance that another part of the rock face collapses, inflicting 4d6 damage upon each PC. With a successful DC 15 Reflex save, each PC may reduce this damage to half.

Treasure: The treasure here is designed to frustrate the PCs. Every 15 minutes allow a DC 30 Search check, with success revealing a 100 gp pearl. Digging through the rubble for more than 1 hour causes the PCs to become fatigued. The pearl radiates magic due to a magic aura (evocation), but is in fact non-magical. The DM is free to make this as difficult as he likes.

EL: 3

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the flesh golem half-out and ready to fight in 1d4 rounds. To decrease the challenge, have the golem clutch the staff of life to its chest as it emerges from the rubble.

✦ Flesh Golem: Since it is unlikely the PC will fight this creature, use the stat blocks for Room M71, but reduce the movement by 10 ft. and reduce the starting hit points.

M72. THE WAY OUT

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: If the DM is looking for a way to let the PCs reach the surface, this can be it. Crags and tunnels reaching the surface make excellent escape routes. They also serve as a way back down, should the PCs buy a magic item with all that gold they've been lugging around.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Alternately, new PCs come here to take on the second half of the World's Largest Dungeon.

REGION N. TOMB OF THE UNLIVING

Though often considered the ultimate solution, death does not always put an end to evil. Sustained by the power of forbidden magics and dark passions, some creatures bargain away their dignity for a cursed immortality, and so defy moral law. In the eyes of the divine, some of the greatest of mortal villains are those who become the undead. In response to the atrocity of undeath, the gods forged a monument to the finality of life, a sprawling crypt to house the unliving offenders of their most sacred laws, a place where such abominations might live out their depraved existences in immortal impotence, a tomb of the living within a prison of the forgotten.

In the era of the great prison's creation, the most powerful, and most vile undead were gathered and interned within the divine crypt. Among these horrors were Hell Champion Vinnara Catershea, Invistis the prime lich, Soul Empress Kasteoficiss, and a creature known as the World Eater. With an army of rotting servants and petty death lords, these nightmares were sealed away, their souls left to rot with their bodies. And for centuries the undead have done just that, brooding on imagined lives and weaving plots against a world that has forgotten them. Until recently something began to stir back to a twisted form of life: awakening more than a host of zombies and ghouls, but also the potential for eternal death.

At the heart of the Tomb of the Unliving is a great shrine, a sanctuary revering the three aspects of the god of death. Between statues of the guide, the judge, and the merciless executioner, stands a dais filled with holy light. Imprisoned by this divine radiance, intended to sleep until the end of time, are the shadows of the gargantuan World Eater. A creature of such power that the great prison's celestial guards feared to let it roam free even in captivity, the dread worm has remained trapped within the tomb since its creation. But even the most powerful magics weaken and, with the alterations of the prison's physical and arcane supports, the World Eater strains against its walls.

As the blessed light of the ancient terror's cell weakens, surges of power pulse through the crypts. These waves of negative energy have goaded the three most ancient of the tomb's inhabitants to search for the source, and be the first to bend it to his or her dark will. Though none know what power lay dormant with them, or what has reinvigorated it, their perverse ambitions and lusts for freedom have driven them each to obsess over claiming it. But gaining access to the central crypt has proven more difficult than expected. Four gates of celestial steel bar the way to the inner temple and for any creature to enter the sanctuary each trapped portal must be opened. Thus, Vinnara, Invistis, and Kasteoficiss have come into brutal conflict, each battling to gain hold of the holy passages and dominate the tomb's heart.

Over decades of conflict, the servants of the three immortal warlords have each claimed at least one gate for their master. The devout slaves of death worshipping Kasteoficiss have proven most powerful, inspired by madness and their empress' belief that they fight to awaken an avatar of her dark god. Invistis, whose foul genius first uncovered the secrets of lichdom, has fashioned monstrous servants from unliving bone; savage warriors that he hopes will win him access to an untold wealth of dark magic.

But the ghostly Vinnara has proven to be the most pragmatic of her peers, sending her incorporeal soldiers into battle, she fights for a means to escape the prison and torment the world anew. Each with their own perverse motivations, the damned battle in their mass grave for nearly a century now, evenly matched and no closer to their goals than they were at their war's beginning. But with the coming of heroic intruders to the divine prison, all that may soon change.

Besides the massive crypt's undead prisoners, another being's fate is intertwined with the Tomb of the Unliving. A sole lantern archon, Vrisht, is sworn to eternally watch over the gates to the ancient tomb, ready to raise the alarm should the dead ever find a way to escape. But recent events, as measured by those that live-forever, have left him uncertain of his duties. Vrisht has felt the rumblings of dark energy resonating from within the tomb and is the only being in the area that realizes their import. Powerless to prevent the World Eater's revival and forsworn to cause no harm to the undead within the tomb, Vrisht has been forced to wait, feeling the dread worm grow stronger and closer to fully awakening. He fears what will happen if the awesome terror is no longer rest. And so the celestial guard merely watches, hoping that others might come — unrestricted — with the power to put the World Eater back to sleep, hopefully, forever.

UNHOLY CONDITIONS

Unless otherwise noted, the inner doors and walls of the Tomb of the Unliving have the following statistics.

◆ Reinforced Stone Wall (per 5 ft. of thickness): Hardness 10; hp 1,000; break DC 60.

◆ Rusted Reinforced Iron Door: 4 in. thick; Hardness 15; hp 140; break DC 35; Open Lock DC 45.

Compared to the inner barriers, the outer walls and gates are much more durable. Either crafted from heavenly materials or enhanced by powerful divine magics, these structures are immune to all damage except that visited by artifacts and godly creatures. In addition to their powerful physical properties, the outermost barriers of the tomb are infused with a holy seal. This seal (visible in Rooms N1, N5, and N9) maintains properties assuring the undead within never escape. The most potent prevents all incorporeal or ethereal travel through the barrier and makes it physically impassible by all undead that try to move through it.

In addition, the barrier has cut off access to all other planes, paths of teleportation, and all extra-dimensional spaces to all creatures within it. Thus, spells that create a conduit to other planes or places (such as all summon creature and teleportation spells) or rely on pseudo-real spaces (such as those created by the rope trick spell or bags of holding) do not function when cast within the tomb.

Besides the area's powerful divine wards, the entire crypt is tainted by its undead residents. As such, the entire tomb is filled with evil. Unless a Room says otherwise, all Encounters have the following Encounter Conditions — Desecration 4, Fearless, Unhallowed 6. In addition, the tainted power of the halls causes the undead to regenerate back to full health every 24+1d20 hours. Until the PCs destroy the World Eater (Room N159), this power never fades.

All doors are locked from the inside, requiring a DC 30 Open Lock check to get out of these Rooms. Once the PCs learn this trick (after 5 doors or so), they gain a +4 competence bonus to future Open Lock checks from the inside of the doors, but not the outside.

HORDES

A number of creatures occur in such massive numbers in this Region that we developed a new organization type — the horde.

A horde (like a swarm) is a collection of Small or Medium creatures that acts as a single creature. A horde has the characteristics of its type, except as noted here. A horde has a single pool of Hit Dice and hit points, a single initiative modifier, a single speed, and a single Armor Class. A horde makes saving throws as a single creature. A single horde occupies a square (if it is made up of nonflying creatures) or a cube (of flying creatures) 20 feet on a side, but its reach is 5 feet, like that of its component creatures. In order to attack, it moves adjacent to an opponent's space. A horde can move through squares occupied by enemies and vice versa without impediment, although the horde provokes an attack of opportunity if it does so. A horde can move through spaces large enough for its component creatures.

A horde of creatures consists of 30 nonflying creatures or 90 flying creatures. Larger hordes are represented by multiples of single hordes. The area occupied by a large horde is completely shapable, though the horde usually remains in contiguous squares.

Horde Traits: A horde has no clear front or back and no discernable anatomy, so it is not subject to critical hits or flanking. Reducing a horde to 0 hit points or lower destroys it. Hordes are never staggered or reduced to a dying state by damage. Also, they cannot be tripped, grappled, or bull rushed, and they cannot grapple an opponent.

A horde is immune to any spell or effect that targets a specific number of creatures (including single-target spells such as disintegrate), with the exception of mind-affecting effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects) if the horde has an Intelligence score and a hive mind. A horde takes twice as much damage from spells or effects that affect an area, such as thrown weapons with a splash effect and many evocation spells.

Hordes cannot be grappled but have a +4 bonus for grappling others.

Hordes use the saves of their component creatures.

A horde rendered unconscious by means of nonlethal damage becomes disorganized and dispersed, and does not reform until its hit points exceed its nonlethal damage.

Horde Attack: Creatures with the horde subtype do not make standard melee attacks. Instead, they receive a single attack roll for all of the component creatures, based on the HD of the component type of creature, such that a horde of 30 dretch, would have a BAB of +60 (2HD × 30). If they hit the target, they deal damage according to the table below. Horde attacks are not subject to a miss chance for concealment or cover. The amount of damage a horde deals is based on its Hit Dice, as shown below.

HORDE ATTACK DAMAGE

Horde HD	Base Damage
1–10	1× base damage of creature type
11–20	2× base damage of creature type
21–40	3× base damage of creature type
41–80	4× base damage of creature type
81 or more	5× base damage of creature type

A horde's attacks are nonmagical, unless the horde's description states otherwise. Damage reduction sufficient to reduce a horde attack's damage to 0, being incorporeal, and other special abilities usually give a creature immunity (or at least resistance) to damage from a horde. Some hordes also have acid, poison, blood drain, or other special attacks in addition to normal damage.

Special attacks that inflict damage use the multiple for the attack damage +1 (to a minimum of 1) to determine the additional damage. Special attacks that require saves, such as poison, require only one save per attack but have the DC increased by 4.

Undead Hordes and Turning: The focus of negative energy that is an undead horde makes it difficult to turn. Any attempts to do so suffer a –4 circumstance penalty to the turning check. A cleric who would successfully turn the undead that compose a horde, instead causes 2 points of damage per HD of undead turned. A cleric who is powerful enough to destroy the undead that compose the horde instead inflicts 1d6 points of damage on the horde for every HD of undead she would have destroyed.

These rules are reprinted in the Appendix on page 836.

A WORD ABOUT THE "DEAD"

The tomb of the unliving was built 5,000 years ago; before humankind was even a thought in the god's mind. The dead that live here are not human. They are the remnants of horrible races that decided to abandon paradise.

Because the World's Largest Dungeon is set in the DM's personal game world, we can't be the final word on what they truly are. Perhaps they were 10 ft. tall, with horns, tusks, and wings, but were simply the weaker deva. Or, they could have been disfigured prototypes for humanity. What they are (or were) is up to the DM.

N1 THROUGH N4. OUTSIDE THE TOMB

At the base of the great plateau, just beyond the gates of the Tomb of the Unliving, are piles of rock and coal-like stone. These jagged mounds are stray debris from the nearby drow's past excavations sapped of their very earthly vitality due to their centuries long proximity to the crypt's negative energy. Due to the uneven, deteriorating, footing, areas outside the tomb are considered difficult terrain and reduce the movement of non-flying creatures by half.

As within the massive elven structure, this land is not a place for the living. The taint of negative energy has infused the hills with an unnatural lifelessness and has drawn to it all sorts of death hungry creatures. Besides the occasional stray spirit, bodaks, shadows, and worse now haunt these accursed mounds.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	An invisible pulse of negative energy ripples from the tomb. As it passes over a pile of bones, they rise up, form a large, feline skeleton, look about ferociously, then fall back apart.
2	As 1, but a drow skeleton.
3	As 1, but a griffon skeleton.
4	As 1, but a wyvern skeleton.
5-12	Nothing
13	The PCs find several scorched and baked drow or drider bodies. These are victims of the devourer Room N1.
14	A party of drow scavengers from Region M, dig through piles of refuse. Though wary, they are not initially hostile.
15	Four bodaks, former drow slain by the negative energy pulse Section, immediately attack.
16	A lich digs through rubble, searching for spell components. It keeps to itself, but brooks no insolence if disturbed.
17	Seven greater shadows surround the PCs and attack.
18	Two bands of six ghostly warriors fight silently upon a nearby mound. If the PCs interfere, both groups turn and attack.
19	Two dread wraiths and their entourage of eight wraiths ambush the PCs and attack mercilessly.
20	A visible pulse of negative energy ripples from the tomb. As it passes, living creatures must succeed at a DC 18 Fortitude save or suffer 2d8+10 damage.

N1. THE DEAD MOUND

Just west of the river of fire, the largest pile of blackened stone once served as an encampment for drow renegades and is riddled with a series of unstable, claustrophobic passages. Four major openings allow access into the 80 ft. tall mountain of refuse, while small chambers exist at the crux of the tunnels and just off of the southeastern most passage. But, unfortunately for the drow that created the squalid complex, a new resident of the area recently evicted the runaways and has claimed the dead mound as its own lair.

Once the PCs reach the central chamber of the crumbling heap, read or paraphrase the following.

Through a haze of dust and ashen tasting debris, you find your way to a confluence of six uneven tunnels at the heart of the mound. About a dozen blackened supports ring this elongated chamber, leaving the central area open except for a few trampled bedrolls and shattered pieces of furniture. A stone-rung fire pit lies at the deepest recesses of the room, piled almost to its rim with smoky-white ashes. Across the small pit squats a hulking horror, a massive creature of rotting flesh, broken, wicked underbite, and sickly wet exposed bone. Though it doesn't seem to notice you as it sifts one great claw through the dead ashes, the eyes of a tiny creature lodged within the terror's rib cage meet yours and scream soundlessly from its hellish prison.

Initial Attitude: Friendly

Encounter: Attracted by the scent of hundreds of unliving souls within the crypt, a cunning devourer has been attracted to the Tomb of the Unliving. However, upon reaching the area, it ran afoul of the guardians at the crypt's gates and barely escaped with its unlife. Having nursed its wounds (and sated itself on the souls of the mound's previous residents) the devourer broods within the mountain of ash, no match for the tomb's guards but too stubborn to let such a meal slip away, it now waits for an opportunity to present it with a way in.

The tunnels in the hollowed mound are not sturdy constructions by any stretch of the imagination. Poorly supported and built within weak rock, the first PC to make a DC 18

Knowledge (architecture and engineering)

check or Craft (stonemasonry) check will notice the extreme frailty of the passages. For the most part, there is little danger if the PCs are mindful of the feeble supports around them.

But, any action that results in a sizable blast, produces area of effect damage, or causes a powerful strike against a wall has a 90% chance of causing a cave-in for 15 ft. in each direction from the central point of the damage with a 10 ft. slide zone. Creatures caught within an area suffer 8d6 damage — half if they make a DC 20 Reflex save — and are buried. Those in the slide zone must make a DC 20 Reflex save or take 3d6 damage and be buried. DMs may want to consult the rules for cave-ins and collapses in the DMG for further details.

At the central chamber currently lingers the devourer. It should be allowed an opposed Listen or Spot check to notice the PCs as they enter the Room. Depending on whether or not it succeeds at this check, the life-draining undead acts as noted below.

Encounter Condition: Tremors 20

Tactics: When the PCs encounter the devourer, it immediately realizes they are the opportunity it has been hoping for. Obsequious in the extreme, it presents itself to the PCs in the least threatening way possible once it notices them. It begs to speak with them in a sycophantic manner ("Please do not hurt us, masters, good masters. We mean you no harm").

If the PCs speak with the monstrous undead, it is very up front about what it wants — to feast upon the souls inside the tomb. But, it does all it can to paint its intentions the lightest shade of black. It warns the PCs of the various guardians at the tomb's gates (Areas B, C, and D) and promises to help them should they encounter hostile spirits. In truth though, it learned its lesson after it first battled with the crypt guards and doesn't intend to fight them again.

If the PCs blatantly attack the devourer, it flees from the mound as swiftly as possible and watches them from afar. If they head towards the tomb, it follows, hoping to slip inside after the PCs deal with the guardians. But if they head in another direction, it will attack, hoping to steal at least one soul before retreating.

Regardless of how the PCs interact with the devourer, if it survives their confrontation it stalks them from a distance. Once inside the tomb it realizes that the souls of the living are far sweeter than those of the dead, though it does not restrain itself from feasting on the wraiths and allips it encounters. Believing mere mortals could never stand up to the droves of undead inside the tomb, the devourer is certain the PCs will be overwhelmed and anticipates making them a course in its meal. If the PCs notice the trailing devourer, it keeps up its fawning routine, assuring them that it has only the best intentions, but slips away if they turn hostile or fail to keep an eye on it.

Treasure: At the southern most part of the caves is a chamber the drow used as both a pantry and armory. Several empty crates and barrels remain, rotted from age and the tomb's foul taint. However,

PCs that succeed at a DC 24 Search check discover several crates containing the bulk of the drow's weaponry and several other useful supplies, including 8 masterwork hand crossbows, 80 bolts, 8 short swords, and a masterwork healer's kit.

In the center of the mound is a wide area that served as a communal sleep and work area. Two short dead-end passages off this Room once afforded the residents some modicum of privacy, but now the devourer merely uses them as place to throw the remains of its victims. PCs investigating the accumulated bodies find the heavily decayed corpses of several drow residents and (if a PC succeeds at a DC 28 Search check) the body of the renegade leader still wearing a suit of black elven chain bearing an ornate spider and skull motif

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the devourer to 18 HD. To decrease the challenge, replace it with a bodak.

⚔ Devourer: CR 11; Large undead (extraplanar); HD 12d12; hp 78; Init +4; Spd 30 ft.; AC 24, touch 9, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +6; Grp +19; Atk +15 melee (1d6+9, claw); Full Atk +15 melee (1d6+9, 2 claws); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Energy drain, trap essence, spell-like abilities; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., spell deflection, spell resistance 21, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +4, Will +11; Str 28, Dex 10, Con —, Int 16, Wis 16, Cha 17.

Skills and Feats: Climb +24, Concentration +18, Diplomacy +5, Jump +24, Listen +18, Move Silently +15, Search +10, Sense Motive +11, Spot +18, Survival +3 (+5 following tracks); Blind-Fight, Combat Casting, Expertise, Improved Initiative, Weapon Focus (claw).

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a devourer's claw attack or spectral hand ability gain one negative level. The DC is 19 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Trap Essence (Su): The devourer is named for its ability to consume an enemy's life essence. To do so, it must forgo its normal melee attacks and make a trap essence attack. This requires a normal attack roll but deals no damage. The save DC is Charisma-based. A slain creature's essence is trapped within the devourer's ribs, and the tiny figure takes on that victim's features. The trapped essence cannot be raised or resurrected, but a limited wish, miracle, or wish spell frees it, as does destroying the devourer. A devourer can hold only one essence at a time.

The trapped essence provides a devourer with enough power to use five spell-like abilities for each Hit Die or level of the trapped creature. As this energy is expended, the twisted soul fades away until it evaporates completely. The trapped essence gains one negative level for every five times the devourer uses one of its spell-like abilities. When the essence's number of negative levels equals the creature's total Hit Dice or level, the essence is destroyed. If an essence is freed, the restored creature must succeed on a DC 19 Fortitude save for each negative level or lose that level permanently.

Spell-Like Abilities: At the start of any encounter, the trapped essence within a devourer is assumed to have 3d4+3 levels (enough fuel for thirty to seventy-five uses). Once per round, a devourer can use one of the following confusion (DC 17), control undead (DC 20), ghoul touch (DC 15), lesser planar ally, ray of enfeeblement (DC 14), spectral hand, suggestion (DC 16), true seeing. Caster level 18th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Spell Deflection (Su): The trapped essence provides a measure of magical protection. If any of the following spells are cast at the devourer and overcome its spell resistance, they affect the imprisoned essence instead: banishment, chaos hammer, confusion, crushing despair, detect thoughts, dispel evil, dominate person, fear, geas/quest, holy word, hypnosis, imprisonment, magic jar, maze, suggestion, trap the soul, or any form of charm or compulsion. In many cases, this deflection effectively neutralizes the spell. Some of these effects might eliminate the trapped essence, depriving the devourer of its spell-like abilities until it can consume another victim.

N2. CENTRAL GATE

Stretching to the north and south, is a sprawling structure of streaked black stone. Thousands of morbid artisans have labored here, for as you draw near you can make out hundreds of thousands of black skulls, each as tall as a man, carved into the grim facade. Amid the ginning stones and shadowy eye-sockets, rises a huge gateway flanked by a pair of featureless, humanoid statues. Towering nearly three-stories above you, the gate's blackened metal bears in relief the grim form of a faceless figure, clothed in heavy judges' robes, one skeletal hand gripping a gavel while the other holds a scale balanced by skulls. However, the image on the gate is not marred by any creases or hinges, raising the question of how the huge door is opened.

As you ponder this, a sphere of brilliant white light darts from the eye-socket of one of the wall's many skulls. As it nears, it calls out in a tense, buzzing voice, "Hail travelers! Might I... I have a word?"

Initial Attitude: Friendly (Vrisht) and Hostile (iron golem). The PCs cannot alter the iron golem's Attitude.

Encounter: This is the central most entrance to the Tomb of the Unliving. The tomb's outer walls are nearly 80 ft. high and carved to resemble thousands of huge stone skulls stacked one on top of another. The gate is a single 30 ft. tall, two-foot thick plate of blackened celestial steel, designed to resemble the stern judge aspect of the god of death, but is not equipped with standard hinges or opening mechanisms. Instead, the figure of the judge within the gate is actually a massive iron golem, resting almost seamlessly within the metal door. PCs that make a DC 28 Spot check notice a hairline crevice that outlines the golem, but this does not specifically reveal the nature of the gate's guardian, merely that it is a separate piece. The golem is inactive when the PCs arrive, but animates if a non-celestial creature touches it or the door around it.

As the PCs enter this area, Vrisht (hp 8), the lantern archon guardian of the tomb, approaches them. He sputters a brief description of the tomb — a massive crypt built before man walked on the earth, used to imprison the most powerful and corrupt undead ever known. He also explains his current dilemma, that it appears that the most powerful of the tomb's prisoners, the World Eater, is managing to break free of its cell. Since his task is to keep watch over the tomb and to do its inhabitants no direct harm, he is hesitant to respond to this inevitable threat. However, as he notes, valiant travelers like the PCs are not bound by his oaths, and they may be able to find a way to recapture or destroy the nightmarish creature.

Once he explains his situation, Vrisht behaves in a nervous, but friendly manner. If the devourer from area A is openly following the PCs, the archon may question their motivations and be a bit more wary, but does not pass any damning judgments. If the PCs agree to look into Vrisht's concerns, the lantern archon is most thankful and warns the PCs of the guardian in areas B, C, and D and of the pulses of negative energy that are randomly released by the awakening World Eater. But, besides this information, Vrisht knows little about the tomb and nothing concerning the interior. He is also sworn to keep watch at these gates and, thus, cannot leave his post to go with the PCs. However, he promises to aid the PCs in any way possible and knows a great deal about the history of the dungeon, so may be able to shed some light on the PCs' more historically based questions.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The only real threat in this area is the massive iron golem (hp 183) embedded within the gate itself. Remaining inactive until the gate is touched or otherwise tampered with, the golem receives a +18 circumstance bonus to its Hide check to remain unnoticed while inert within the door. The golem is also considered to have taken 20 to Hide, thus a DC 38 Spot check is required to notice that the figure within the door is actually a mobile threat.

Once the golem has been activated it strides from the gate, leaving an opening into Room N4 with the same dimensions as itself. The construct attacks whoever activated it fiercely, making liberal use of its breath weapon, wielding a sturdy iron hammer in one hand, and using the scale in its other like a dual headed flail. Once engaged, the golem fights any non-celestials in the area to the death, but does not chase fleeing opponents. If no threats present themselves within 100 ft. of its gateway, the golem returns to its position within the door and deactivates. Due to the magic infusing the gateway, each hour the iron golem remains inactive within the door, it heals 20 hp.

If the iron golem is destroyed or otherwise removed from its gate, any Huge or smaller creature smaller can easily enter Room N4.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one iron golem. To decrease the challenge, replace the iron golem with a shield guardian.

✦ Golem, Iron: CR 15; Large construct; HD 26d10+40; hp 183; Init -2; Spd 20 ft.; AC 31, touch 6, flat-footed 31; Base Atk +25; Grp +48; Atk +38 melee (2d8+15/19-20, heavy flail) or +38 melee (2d8+15/x3, warhammer); Full Atk +38 melee (2d8+15/19-20, heavy flail) and +38 melee (2d8+15/x3, warhammer); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA breath weapon; SQ construct traits, DR 15/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +6, Will +8; Str 41, Dex 7, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-foot cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Constitution, secondary damage 3d4 Constitution, Fortitude DC 23 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance.

In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

Possessions: Large heavy flail, huge warhammer.

▲ Vrisht, Lantern Archon: CR 2; Small outsider (archon, extraplanar, good, lawful); HD 1d8; hp 8; Init +4; Spd Fly 60 ft. (perfect); AC 15, touch 11, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +1; Grp +1/-8; Atk +2 ranged touch (1d6, light ray); Full Atk +2 ranged touch (1d6, 2 light rays); SA Spell-like abilities; SQ Aura of menace, damage reduction 10/evil and magic, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to electricity and petrification, magic circle against evil, teleport, tongues; AL LG; SV Fort +2 (+6 against poison), Ref +2, Will +2; Str 1, Dex 11, Con 10, Int 6, Wis 11, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +4, Diplomacy +4, Knowledge (the planes) +2, Listen +4, Sense Motive +4, Spot +4; Improved Initiative.

Aura of Menace (Su): Will DC 12 negates.

Light Ray (Ex): A lantern archon's light rays have a range of 30 ft. This attack overcomes damage reduction of any type.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—aid, detect evil, continual flame. Caster level 3rd.

Aura of Menace (Su): A righteous aura surrounds archons that fight or get angry. Any hostile creature within a 20-ft. radius of an archon must succeed on a DC 12 Will save to resist its effects. The save DC is Charisma-based. Those who fail take a -2 penalty on attacks, AC, and saves for 24 hours or until they successfully hit the archon that generated the aura. A creature that has resisted or broken the effect cannot be affected again by the same archon's aura for 24 hours.

Magic Circle against Evil (Su): A magic circle against evil effect always surrounds an archon (caster level equals the archon's Hit Dice). (The defensive benefits from the circle are not included in an archon's statistics block.)

Teleport (Su): Archons can use greater teleport at will, as the spell (caster level 14th), except that the creature can transport only itself and up to 50 pounds of objects. Within the confines of this dungeon, the lantern archon can only teleport within line of sight.

Tongues (Su): All archons can speak with any creature that has a language, as though using a tongues spell (caster level 14th). This ability is always active.

N3. NORTH GATE

Set among the shadow-filled skulls of a thousand stone giants stands a hulking gateway of charred iron. Upon the gate, embossed in elaborate detail, is a scene depicting an elderly man dropping his cane to take the hand of a peaceful looking skeleton. Dozens of shadowy horrors flee from the determined pair while the tree-lined path they stand upon gently fades into the setting sun. Framing the serenely grim work loom a pair of statues, each sculpted from the same dark stone as the walls. Above their featureless faces they reach over the gate, one touching a shepherd's staff to the other's elongated shield.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This gate is the northern most of three leading into the Tomb of the Unliving. Portraying death in the aspect of a gentle guide, this gate is 30 ft. tall and is divided down the center into two doors. Though both ancient and massive, the divine craftsmanship that went into the gateway's creation has not been lost to the ages, and it only requires a DC 18 Strength check to pull one of the doors open 5 ft. wide. For every round that a PC who has succeeded at this Strength check pulls upon the door it opens 2 1/2 ft. wider to a maximum of 10 ft.

Flanking the door, partially within the framework, is a pair of Huge shield guardians (hp 243 each). One bearing a towering staff and the other a massive shield, the pair activate and attack any non-celestial creature that tries to open or even touches the gates. Those that make a DC 26 Spot check may notice the thin fractures in the stone between the statues and the frame. Detecting these cracks hints at the sculptures' separate construction but reveals nothing of their potential threat.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: When the PCs initially encounter the shield guardians they are inactive, standing in conforming alcoves within the gate's framework. While at rest within the stonework the constructs have a +14 circumstance bonus to their Hide checks. Since the automatons take 20 to Hide whenever they move into their alcoves, it requires a DC 34 Spot check to discern that they are threats capable of animation.

Once the shield guardians are set into action they work together with surprising effectiveness. Possibly flanking the creature that activated them, the pair attack the creature that awakened them using their weapons and stored spells, then move on to attack its allies. When the battle begins, both shield guardians are considered to have the spell shout, as cast by an 18th-level wizard, stored. The constructs fight until destroyed or the area within 100 ft. of the gate is free of non-celestial creatures, ignoring creatures that flee outside this area.

Once their Room is free of potential targets they return to their places within the gate's frame. If the shield guardians remain inactive within their alcoves for 1 hour they treated as if shout has been cast into them by an 18th-level wizard.

Skills and Feats: —

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a -2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again). This shield guardian currently stores a shout spell (DC 17) cast by an 8th level wizard.

Possessions: Huge staff, tower shield.

N4. SOUTH GATE

A break in the seemingly endless sea of monstrous skulls and the slight sheen of blacked metal marks the form of a dreadful gate within the dark veined wall. Crafted in detailed relief is a massive, bloody clawed skeleton, its eyes flickering a hellish red as it exalts amid mountains of butchered corpses. Surrounding it, the gate's stone frame has been carved into a pair of giant twin executioners, headsmen's axes held at the quick, underneath an arch of five sneering demons.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This gate is the southern most of three that lead into the Tomb of the Unliving. Reaching a height of nearly 30 ft., the massive double doors are heavy and are held shut by a complex locking mechanism. Within the mouth of the central demon sculpture above the gate there is a button that unlocks and mechanically opens the doors, which any creature capable of reaching this height may make a DC 22 Search check to notice. The gate is crafted from heavenly steel and is impervious to all attacks except those made by artifacts, however a DC 40 Open Lock check can bypass the locking mechanism. Non-celestials attempting an Open Lock check automatically activate the gate's guards, though a Search check does not if it focuses only on the gate's frame. Once opened the gate remains so for 10 minutes, after which it closes and relocks again automatically. A DC 30 Search check on the opened door and a DC 28 Disable Device check reveals this closing mechanism and prevents it from working.

Though not immediately noticeable as threats, this gate is surrounded by a host of guardians. To the right of the gate stands a Huge shield guardian (hp 232) while a group of four gargoyles (hp 129 each) hide above. Those that approach the shield guardian (or somehow get close enough to the gargoyles) and make a DC 26 Spot check notice thin cracks around them, revealing that they can be separated from the structure as a whole. This, however, does not distinguish them immediately as threats.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: When the PCs reach this gate its guardians are hiding within the framework. All the creatures are considered to have taken 20 when making their Hide checks and, since the frames have been crafted to integrate these exact figures hiding within it, they each gain a +14 circumstance bonus to these checks. Thus, PCs must make a DC 24 Spot check to notice the hiding shield guardian and a DC 49 Spot check to notice the gargoyles.

If a non-celestial creature touches the gate in any fashion the shield guardian and gargoyles animate and attack. The shield guardian focuses its attacks on the creature that touched the gate, using its massive axe and its stored phantasmal killer spell, as cast by an 18th-level wizard. The gargoyles know the shield guardian's tactics and engage other creatures, keeping them away from the huge construct so it can fight one on one. Since the shield guardian is unintelligent and the gargoyles are sworn to protect the gate, all of the guards fight until they are dead or threats flee more than 100 ft. away from the gate. The shield guardian never moves more than 100 ft. from the gate, but the gargoyles are more intelligent and chase down PCs that attempt to use hit and run tactics. Once it seems that there are no more threats in the area, the shield guardian and gargoyles will return to their hiding places within the frame work.

If the shield guardian spends its stored spell, being immobile within the gate's frame affects it as if an 8th-level wizard cast the spell phantasmal killer into it.

Particularly canny PCs or those that use alignment revealing spells may come to realize that the gargoyles are both intelligent and good aligned. These creatures are allies of the tomb's creators, tasked to guard this gate from all non-celestials that would try to enter and undead that would attempt to escape. Though the middle of a fight is often a poor moment for diplomacy, a PC that fights defensively and makes at least a DC 25 Diplomacy check may be able to convince the gargoyles of their good intentions and talk them out of fighting. Gargoyles whose attitudes have been turned to friendly or better will inform the PCs of the hidden button that opens this gate, but besides that know little about the tomb's interior and are sworn not to leave their post.

N5 THROUGH N15.

OUTER VAULTS OF THE TOMB

The Tomb of the Unliving is decaying masterpiece, a wonder of grim engineering that has been abandoned to centuries of rot and decay. But though the outer most walls, ceilings, and floors of the structure are infused with powerful divine magics and are untouched by time, the inner structures have proven much more susceptible to the wear and tear of aging.

There are no Random Encounters in this Section.

N5. NORTHERN DEADWARD

An ancient iron door stands opposite the massive outer gates, encrusted with centuries of rust. The door has no lock but is thoroughly stuck, requiring a DC 32 Strength check to force it open.

With the gate open you are faced with a silently crackling plane of blue-white energy. The wall of light rises as high as the gate and seems to be about as thick as the outer walls. Through the semi-transparent force you can make out a small room, a heavily rusted iron door directly across from you.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The wall of energy is a visible manifestation of the powerful divine wards that keep the undead trapped within the tomb. The barrier is not an obstacle to the PCs unless they are currently incorporeal or have somehow become undead themselves (see "Inside the Tomb of the Unliving"). Any PCs that try to move through the barrier feel a slight electrical tingle, but have no real problems with it.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the devourer is with the party, it is apprehensive about passing through the barrier, but moves through without difficulty. It does not realize that it cannot pass back through the barrier and is now trapped within the tomb.

N6. NORTHERN NECROLOGY

Like Room N5, the door leading from this Room is stuck, requiring a DC 28 Strength check to open.

You enter a curved room, its walls shining with a passionless radiance. Etched into the walls, illuminated by, or perhaps the source of, the dead light are thousands of lines of spiraling, elegant runes. Opposite you, the flow of these symbols is interrupted by a simple door set within the opposite wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The runes covering the walls of this Room are in Auran. The text explains the purpose of the tomb, list the names of hundreds of the prisoners within and their most vile crimes, and warns the reader to go no further. No specific names initially jump out from those of the prisoners listed, but if the PCs search this area for information about any of the NPCs, they can study some of the atrocities of the unliving. The exact amount of information is left to the discretion of the DM.

N7. NORTHERN OUTER SHRINE

A broad room, lit by the fires of short, brazier-topped pillars, opens before you. Facing you from the opposite wall is an intimidating pair of dark metal doors, ornately embossed with a scene of a huge, blindfolded skeleton weighing hundreds of miniature corpses in its outstretched hands. To either side of the door you've entered through are a pair of deep alcoves, a fearsome statue standing in each, one of a unclothed skeleton holding a gnarled walking stick and the other of a fleshless warrior wielding a scythe. Before both of these sculptures stand short pillars bearing an unlit brazier.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Any PC succeeding at a DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check realizes the art represents the three traditional aspects of death: the guide, the judge, and the executioner. A pair of 3-ft. tall pillars flanking both the doors hold braziers bearing continual flame.

The doors leading to Room N13 are constructed of the same blacked celestial steel as the outside gates, and are nigh impervious to damage. They are also tied to a complex magical lock operated by braziers in Rooms N10 and N12. If the braziers standing before the statues of the judge in those areas are lit, these doors opens.

The unlit braziers in this Room are parts of the locking mechanisms for other gates, the one before the executioner tied to Room N10 and the one before the guide tied to Room N12. But a magical guard also operates on the braziers to prevent them from being wantonly lit. Should a second brazier be lit before the first's partner in another Room is (for example, if the executioner's brazier is lit before both of the guide's are or visa versa), the fire of the second expels a thick black smoke that fills the area in one round. All living creatures in the Room when the second brazier is incorrectly lit suffer the effects of inhaling the poisonous fumes of concentrated burnt othur.

✦ Poison Gas Trap: CR 12; magic device; device trigger; automatic rest; poison gas (burnt othur fumes: inhaled DC 26; 3 permanent Constitution drain initial damage; 5d6 Constitution secondary damage); all creatures in area; Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 38.

The smoke disperses after 10 minutes but snuffs out the flames in both the statues' braziers (whether they are magical or mundane flames), effectively resetting the trap.

Encounter Condition: Smoke

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, require two Fortitude saves to avoid the fumes. To decrease the challenge, reduce the initial damage to 2 permanent Constitution and the secondary damage to 3d6.

N8. CENTRAL DEADWARD

The door beyond the deadward has no lock but is rusted shut. PCs must make a DC 28 break check to force it open.

The gate opens before you, revealing a blue tinged haze of energy. Scintillating in unknowable arcane tides, the barrier fills the entranceway. Though partially obscured, you can make out a stout door standing in the room beyond.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The light is a visible, divine ward that keep the tomb's undead (even incorporeal ones) trapped inside. The wall should not prove to be an obstacle to the PCs, unless they are somehow undead themselves (see "Inside the Tomb of the Unliving"), causing them to experience a slight electrical "tingle" as they pass.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the devourer has followed the party to this point, it is wary, but eventually moves through without difficulty. It does not immediately realize that it cannot pass back though and is now trapped within the tomb.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N9. CENTRAL NECROLOGY

The door leading from this Room is stuck in its frame and requires a DC 28 Strength check to break.

The curved walls of this chamber seem to be suffused with a dull radiance. Miles of tiny, elegantly carved runes run along every vertical surface here, broken only to make room for a crude iron door.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The walls of this Room are covered in Auran script. This celestial writing explains the tomb's purpose, lists those held within and their crimes, and serves as a warning against entry. Though none of the names inscribed are immediately recognizable to the PCs, a brief history is available. How much information this necrology makes available to the PCs is left to the DM's discretion.

Encounter Condition: N/A

N10. CENTRAL OUTER SHRINE

The sculpted gate leading to Room N14 is constructed of the same indestructible blackened metal as the exterior gates. It is also locked by a complex magical mechanism operated by braziers in Rooms N7 and N12. If the braziers before the statues of the executioner in those areas are lit, the gate opens.

Flames flicker in this room in anticipation of your arrival. Across the room in relief upon a black iron door, a gore drenched skeleton raises a chalice of skulls to its face, showering itself in a rain of blood. To its sides, partially hidden in dim alcoves, stands a statue of a stern looking, blindfolded corpse and a sculpture of an old woman being held aloft by a skeletal form. Before both of these alcoves stand unlit braziers.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Any PC succeeding at a DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check recognizes the art as representations of death's three aspects — the guide, the judge, and the executioner. A pair of 3-ft. tall pillars flank both the entrance and exit, holding braziers alight with continual flame spells.

The unlit braziers are parts of the magical device capable of unlocking the gates in Rooms N7 and N12. The brazier before the judge operates the lock in N7, while the brazier before the guide operates the lock in N12. However, if these devices are operated in haste, the trap built into the Room is sprung. Should a second brazier be lit before the first's partner in another Room is (for example, if the guide's brazier is lit before the judge's counterpart in N12 is), dozens of long, straight blades burst through the thin mortar lines within the floor, affecting all creatures within the Room. The 4 ft. tall razors are made of celestial metal and are nigh indestructible. After the trap is sprung, the blades will stay at their full height for 1 minute before sinking back into the floor.

♦ Blade Grid Trap: CR 12; magic device; device trigger; automatic rest; Atk +25 melee (3d8+10, blade grid); all creatures in area; Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

As the blades lower, any fires burning in the braziers before the statues in this Room (magical or mundane) go out, resetting the trap.

Encounter Condition: Smoke

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the blade grid trap to 5d12+10. To decrease the challenge of this encounter, reduce the damage of the trap to 3d6+6 and reduce all associated DCs by 4.

N11. SOUTHERN DEADWARD AND RUINED NECROLOGY

The door leading from this Room is loose in its frame and loudly falls inward if even the slightest force is applied.

Beyond a veil of flickering magical brilliance are piles of rubble and twisted metal. Several walls stand in various states of ruin though the most distant glow with elaborate script. Beyond the wall of light and the piles of debris, you can make out a simple door of rusted metal.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: These Rooms have been partially ruined by the shuddering throes and surges of negative energy emanating from the awakening World Eater.

Several of the innermost walls are inscribed with works in Auran. Though a PC that can read this language can make out several ominous words and phrases, the damage is too great to make out a comprehensive message, even along the standing walls.

The wall of radiance is the tomb's deadward, a powerful divine spell that keeps the tomb's undead (even incorporeal ones) trapped within its walls. The barrier should not prove to be an obstacle to the PCs, less they qualify as undead (see "Inside the Tomb of the Unliving"). Those that pass through will experience a slight electrical tingle, but will otherwise be unharmed.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 6, Smoke

Tactics: If the devourer from Room N1 is still with the PCs, it is wary, but eventually passes by without any difficulty. It does not initially realize that the barrier allows passage only from one way and that it is now effectively trapped.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

N12. SOUTHERN OUTER SHRINE

The door leading to Room N15 is constructed of the same dark, indestructible metal as the outer gates. It is also locked by a magical device tied to the braziers in Rooms N7 and N10. If the braziers in those areas are lit, the gate opens.

The ambient light of several lit braziers strike a powerful counterpoint to the grim artistry of this room. At the shadowy extremes of the wide hall, the braziers before them extinguished, stand poorly illuminated statues, one of an exultant, fleshless warrior armored in the skins of its enemies, and another of a skeleton, without eye-sockets, seated upon a metal throne. Between the dark figures stands a great metal door, carved with the image of hundreds of tiny figures walking and climbing upwards upon the bones of a massive corpse.

Encounter: The braziers flanking the doors are lit with continual flame spells, their light revealing several morbid pieces of artwork. Those that make a DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check recognize the sculptures as representations of death's three aspects.

The unlit braziers are parts of the magical locks sealing the gates in Rooms N7 and N10. The brazier before the judge operates the lock in N7, while the brazier before the executioner operates the lock in Room N10. However, if these devices are operated hastily, the trap built into the Room is sprung. Should a second brazier be lit before the first's partner in another Room is (for example, if the judge's brazier is lit, then the executioner's, before the second judge's brazier in N10 is), a lightning bolt emanating from one statue and curving to the other, lances through and affects everyone within the Room.

After the trap is sprung, both flames before the statues extinguish (regardless of their nature) resetting the trap.

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 8

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the damage from the lightning bolt trap (instead of ×1.5). To decrease the challenge of this encounter, remove the multiplier and reduce all associated DCs by 3.

N13. NORTHERN INNER SHRINE

Another grimly decorated room stands before you. A great double door of ebony steel, etched with the image of a monstrous skull gashing hundreds of writhing bodies, seems to be the only other exit from the room. Filling the side walls are equally disturbing statues, one a featureless figure hidden by ornate robes, its skeletal hands resting upon a double edged sword, and the other of a bare skeleton walking forward, holding serene looking babes in both arms. Three pillared braziers stand in this room, one in front of both statues and one at the room's center. Only the central brazier is lit.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room too depicts death's three aspects and holds an impervious celestial steel gate. The gate is opened in a similar way as the one in Room N7, being tied to two braziers, in Rooms N14 and N15, standing in front of the statues of death portrayed as an executioner, in those Rooms. Once these braziers are lit, the gate opens.

The doors are the final barrier between the outside world and the interior tomb. The wary undead warlord Vinnara Catershea has posted two dread wraiths (hp 104 each), ordering them to report directly to her if any creature should open the doors leading into this area. Vinnara has been waiting for centuries for such an opportunity and intends to make good on her promise of escape.

Like Room N7, if the second brazier is lit before the first's counterpart in another Room, a magical trap is activated. Those that trigger the trap cause crackling beams of life draining energy to blast from the eyes of the statue behind the incorrectly lit brazier, striking at all creatures in the Room.

As the spell effect occurs any fires before the statues gutter out (regardless of whether they are natural or magical) resetting the trap.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs have managed to bypass the doors into this Room, the dread wraiths have significant forewarning of their arrival. Both sentries hide in the nearby walls, forcing the PCs to make DC 34 Spot checks to notice them. If detected, one immediately retreats to warn Vinnara, while the other moves to Room N13 to follow the PCs. The wraiths do not attack unless they are cornered (an unlikely position for incorporeal creatures) but, should the PCs come into conflict with other dread wraiths loyal to the blackguard, they happily come to the aid of their allies.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N14. CENTRAL INNER SHRINE

The fire of a brazier topped pillar rises before you, encircling the doorway etched with a skeleton offering up its outstretched hands. On either side of the pillar stand unlit duplicates and great shadow shrouded sculptures. You can barely make out a great skeletal sword, impaled downward through numerous corpses, while the other depicts a scale balanced with bodies, a great skull at the fulcrum.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The impervious black gate exiting this Room is locked in a similar fashion to the one in Room N10. Tied to extinguished braziers in Rooms N13 and N15, those before the statues of death depicted as a guide must be lit for this passage to open.

The unlit braziers in this Room partially control the locking mechanisms in Rooms N13 and N15. As in previous Rooms, if both are ever lit, one immediately after the other, a powerful magical trap is sprung. In this case, the unseen world behind the skeleton carved on the gate comes into view, revealing a frozen landscape that blasts all within this Room and in Room N10 with cold. This freezing blast continues for one minute before it (and the scene on the door) fades.

♣ Empowered Ice Storm Trap: CR 12; magic device; device trigger; automatic rest; spell effect (ice storm, 18th-level caster, $3d6 \times 1\frac{1}{2}$ bludgeoning and $2d6 \times 1\frac{1}{2}$ cold damage); all creatures in Rooms N10 and N14; Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

The effects of this spell extinguish all fires within this Room, affecting those within the braziers before the statues regardless of whether they are magical or not, resetting the trap.

N15. SOUTHERN INNER SHRINE

The grim gate is indestructible, and is locked in a similar fashion to the one in Room N12. Unlit braziers in front of statues depicting death as a judge in Rooms N13 and N14 must be lit to make this door open.

Scale in one hand, sword in the other, the stern eye sockets of an enthroned skeleton gaze from the ornate door across this wide chamber. Though three of them create a line through the room's center, only the central brazier is lit. On one side of the room is a sculpture of a skeletal horse rearing up on its hoofs and on the other a statue of a featureless warrior bearing hundreds of different weapons plus two more unlit braziers.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The doused braziers control parts of the locking mechanisms to the gates in Rooms N13 and N14. As in similar Rooms, if both are lit prior to their counterparts, a powerful magical trap is sprung. If activated, the magical trap causes one magical gavel (that functions as an empowered sword spell that deals bludgeoning damage) to appear for each creature in the Room and attack each one individually. The magical weapons remain until they either slay the target or 15 minutes pass. The gavels will not leave the Room. Characters may avoid the gavels simply by leaving the Room, but will have to wait the spells out before they can reenter without being threatened. If numerous targets trigger then leave the Room, then only one reenters, that creature will be attacked by all the gavel-like sword spells in the Room.

♣ Empowered Gavels (Swords) Trap: CR 12; magic device; device trigger; automatic rest; spell effect (swords, +24 melee, $4d6+3 \times 1\frac{1}{2}$ bludgeoning, 19–20, 18th-level caster); 1 sword for each creature in the room; Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

Once the gavels are called into existence, any lit braziers in front of the statues are extinguished, resetting the trap.

N16 THROUGH N52.

THE WESTERN OUTER HALLS

Rooms N16 through N52 are considered wilderness by the resident warlords. Unclaimed and uninteresting, the western most halls hold only the frustration of the great gates and chamber after chamber of crazed dead.

Serving as mass burial chambers for the weakest, most numerous of those interned here, the Rooms in this Section are the largest in the tomb. Most of the ceilings soar 60 ft. or higher above the floor, while the walls and thick pillars are lined with stacks of burial alcoves. A single 10 ft. section of these high walls is capable of holding the remains of 25 or more Medium humanoids, though some sections are crafted to hold fewer creatures of greater size.

Many of the halls are crafted around identifiable themes and hold undead that committed specific crimes. Petty princelings, heretics, and the imperviously lusty are three such examples of lifeless criminals that are now trapped in crypts born of their sins. Though many undead in this region are free to wander, those imprisoned within these crypts are bound to them for eternity and cannot pass through their doors. Crypts concerned with specific sins or criminals are usually obvious as such, their walls heavily adorned with art. Characters interested in determining the theme or crime specific to these Rooms need only make a DC 24 Knowledge (religion) check to reveal the name of the chamber.

Through these halls stalk creatures too weak or unreliable to be recruited into the service of one of the tomb's greater death lords. Allips, insane wraiths, and droves of mindless corpses wander through these reaches, endlessly exploring the same Rooms again and again, hoping for escape.

Though the western outer halls exhibit nothing of practical value, the tomb's warlords are constantly vigilant, watching and patrolling this realm out of fear that one of their opponents may tap into an unforeseen hidden resource. As her domain is closest, Vinnara's dread wraiths maintain the most consistent presence. However Invistis' creations, Kasteoficiss' priests, and the minions of lesser warlords can also be found here.

At the southern most portion of these halls is a heavily trapped egress. Though a particularly canny or powerful creature from that fiery realm may occasionally wander into the tombs, once they do they find that this gate is warded (as the main entrances are) and reveal themselves once opened. Thus, this southern gate proves to be only a one-way entrance and effectively traps any creature that passes through.

WESTERN OUTER HALLS RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour:

1d20	Encounter
1	A lone skeleton (or other non-sentient undead) wanders past the PCs, seemingly unaware of them. The creature is completely non-threatening and crumbles to dust if dealt even 1 point of damage.
2–11	Nothing
12	If the devourer from Room N1 is following the PCs, it draws close enough for the PCs to detect it. Allow a Listen or Spot check opposed by its Hide or Move Silently. If confronted, it parleys for its "life," but continues to follow them. If the creature has previously been dispatched, treat this encounter as "2–11, Nothing."
13	A procession of ten allip mourners wander together in single-file. They eagerly attack the PCs out of hatred for the living and a need to share their disjointed babbling histories.
14	A mob of 14 wights in the service of "Death" (the crazed mohrg in Room N67) stumbles across the PCs while searching for new "criminals." They subdue one PC using nets, swiftly dragging them off before others intervene.
15	A harried mass of eleven maddened wraiths buzz through the area the PCs are in, still searching for an escape (if they're at one of the tombs outer walls, the wraiths bounce off as if they were solid). Once they see the PCs they brutally take out their frustration on them. (EL 12)
16	Five of Kasteoficiss' mohrg priests wander the tomb, looking for sentient creatures to force into their Empress' service.
17	Three of Vinnara's dread wraith soldiers patrol the area. They follow the PCs and report back to their mistress on their actions, attacking only if cornered. (EL 14)
18	Three of Invistis' troll skeletons do battle with one of Kasteoficiss' mohrg priests (or another combination of the undead warlords' troops locked in combat). If the PCs interfere all the combatants will turn on them, but otherwise will ignore them. (EL 9 or variable)
19–20	A visible pulse of dark energy throbs through the tomb. This wave of negative energy extinguishes all non-magical sources of light and forces all creatures unprotected from such energy to make a DC 18 Fort save or suffer 2d8 damage. If the World Eater (Room N150) has been re-imprisoned, treat this encounter as "2–11, Nothing."

N16. NORTHERN GREAT HALL

Like a cathedral, held within the confines of the darkest midnight, this hall stretches out before you. Its walls are lined with rows of burial alcoves, simple dark stone shelves lined with bones and dust. Huge columns, trimmed with sculpted skulls and set with nooks housing dozens of corpses, reach towards a starless sky. How high the walls are or how far this hall reaches is impossible to know, as all its extremes fade to shadow.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly²

The PCs cannot alter the skeleton's attitude.

Encounter: The endless walls and columns hold burial alcoves for hundreds skeletons. Any spark of intelligence or passion that once animated these creatures has long since been dismissed. In fact, examining most of the alcoves reveals that many are too weak to hold humanoid forms.

A door of celestial steel at the west end of the hall leads to Room N13, but there is no lock, handle, or other way to open it.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: The skeletons ignore the PCs if they are left alone. If individual remains are rooted through, the offended undead may pull itself together long enough to make a dispassionate attack, but this is not threatening. As long as the PCs don't do anything to upset all of the hall's residents, such as attempting to sanctify the Room in the name of their gods or trying to destroy it as a whole, the skeletons leave them alone.

However, if forced to do battle, the skeletons form into four distinct hordes (hp 180 each).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one horde. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Skeleton Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 30d12; hp 180; Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13, touch 11, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +0; Grp —; Atk +30 melee (3d4+3, claws); Full Atk +30 melee (3d4+5, claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

N17. ARCH OF THE MASSES

The walls and ceiling of this room are curved like the interior of a broad archway. Sculpted in horrific detail upon the walls are hundreds of humanoids, of all races, piled and climbing atop one another in a brutal, towering melee. The young, aged, and weakest line the base of the wall where they pictured are being crushed by those that struggle above them and who are in turn brutalized by those climbing higher. At the central point of the room, set within the ceiling and shedding a weak yellow light, is what appears to be a single gold piece, for which the sculpted figures battle.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is one of several arches in this section, meant to be an eternal artistic moral warning and perhaps a brutal lesson to the tomb's residents. The gold piece set 25 ft. above the floor is an illusion. Anything that touches the illusion passes through and activates the statue trap.

Being heavily sculpted with hundreds of figures, the walls provide ample grips and foot holds, requiring a mere DC 12 Climb check to scale the first vertical 15 ft., and a DC 20 Climb check to move upon the arched ceiling.

If the illusion set within the Room's ceiling is disturbed, the figures upon the walls animate. Any creatures within 5 ft. of the wall are attacked by the stone figures. Each 5 ft. section of wall is considered to hold one figure capable of making grapple attempts. The sculptures are Medium objects with a hardness of 8, 180 hit points +12 base attack bonuses, and Strength scores of 26 (+8), giving them a +20 to their grapple checks. If a statue succeeds at grappling a target it deal 1d4+8 points of lethal damage for every round it maintains its hold. The trap deactivates after the Room is empty for 10 minutes, and resets itself. The coin illusion on the ceiling is the only part of the trap that radiates magic.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the hit points and base attack bonus of the statues. To decrease the challenge, cut the base attack bonus and hit point totals of the statues in half.

N18. CRYPT OF THE NOBLES

The large, double iron door leading to Room N23 is rusted shut, requiring a DC 30 Strength check to open.

The walls of this chamber are stacked with burial alcoves and lined with dark marble slabs. Numerous flying buttresses create a skeletal archway down the center of the hall, and are sculpted with stone candelabras, ornate trophies, and other regal accouterments. However, despite any images of grandeur, all of the decorations seem purposefully worn and aged to ruin within the stone. Down the hall's center dangle hundreds of threadbare, moldering pennants of ruined silk.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Much like Room N16, this crypt is filled with hundreds of skeletons. However, many of these creatures have weathered the centuries with their minds in considerably better shape than those lesser undead. If the PCs disturb any of the remains here, the bones animate into a two skeleton hordes (hp 180 each).

Though bitter and hateful creatures, they are capable of being reasoned with. A successful Diplomacy check, at a -10 penalty (since these are ancient undead monstrosities) will alter an individual skeleton's attitude. But even more than being hateful creatures, the noble skeletons have retained their petty, materialistic nature. If a PC offers one of the skeletons an object of value, costing more than 50 gold pieces, the undead immediately becomes Friendly. Regardless of how the PCs interact with the creatures here, none ever treat them any better than Friendly. They are simple-minded, forgetting past generosity if the PC return later.

If a PC gains a skeleton's favor, it proves to be most informative about the surrounding area. The creature gladly tells the PCs the names of Rooms N18 through N27 and gives them a brief description of what creatures lurk within, though they do not know about Vinnara's wraiths in Room N27. The skeletons are unable to answer questions regarding the details of these Rooms, as they are bound to this chamber and any information acquired through centuries of hearsay.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Hordes fight like swarms moving over the PCs and surrounding them in a massive assault. They claw and attack the PCs, fearlessly.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the AC of the skeleton horde by +8. To decrease the challenge, remove one skeleton horde.

☛ Skeleton Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 30d12; hp 180; Init +3; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13, touch 11, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +0; Grp —; Atk +10 melee (3d4+3, claws); Full Atk +30 melee (3d4+5, claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

N19. CRYPT OF THE PRINCELINGS

Several figures kneel throughout this long hall. Sculpted from chipped ebony rock, these forms are dressed as servants and seneschals, facing the walls in ineffectual readiness. Upon the walls are hundreds of burial alcoves lined with marble, each holding a tightly wrapped silken cocoon. From hall's dark extremities comes the rustling of fabric.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Much like the nobles in Room N18, this Room houses hundreds of petty princes and corrupt royals. These creatures lie within their individual alcoves dreaming of their glory days, but are still capable of animating if disturbed.

If the PCs awaken one of the skeletons, it either questions them sternly or attacks out of sheer indignity. If it speaks, the PCs have a chance to influence its attitude (though such checks suffer a -10 penalty). If the PCs bribe the undead with something of worth, valued at 100 gp or more, the covetous creature's attitude changes to Friendly and it gladly tells the PCs all it knows about Rooms N18 through N27. For an additional 50 gp (or something of approximate worth) it tells the PCs the servants of Vinnara (Room N102) have created a guardpost and stand watch there.

If the PCs return later, any undead that they previously influenced change back to Unfriendly.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Uncaring creatures, the skeletons here have no sense of camaraderie or understanding of a greater good. Thus, unless the party does something that threatens the entire Room, the skeletons stay in their individual tombs.

They form up into four hordes (hp 90 each) if attacked.

Treasure: N/A

N20. CRYPT OF THE EMPERORS

A stagnant breath rushes past as you enter this elevated chamber that feels hollow like the base of a tower. Stretching up into darkness are stacked dozens of lavish burial alcoves wrought with jade, glass doors and silver. Many of these covers are shattered, their shards glinting in the dust, as if punched out by the wrapped forms inside. Deeper within, set in depressions in the walls stand giant twin statues which are heavily armored skeletal forms resting on down-turned blades.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The creatures here were once emperors, god-kings, and tyrants of the highest degree. When the celestial tomb was constructed, they were stricken from their thrones and imprisoned here, a radical change that drove many of the fiends mad.

Within each of the alcoves here are skeletal creatures covered in black burial linens. Though their skin has rotted away, these creatures are powerful and retain the abilities of standard wights. The undead here all boast an intense hatred of the living and would attack the PCs immediately upon hearing them, but fortunately their alcoves' doors prevent them from hearing much. If somehow all of these glass doors are broken, as by a massive spell effect or the like, all of the wights within will swarm and attack.

The statues here are purely decorative and harmless.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Not all of the alcoves are sealed tightly and a single wight horde (hp 480) is capable of escaping the crypts. Unless the PC make a soundless entry, an unlikely occurrence considering the creaky, rusted doors that open into this hall, these undead swarm down the walls from every direction and attack. Driven on purely by rage and hatred, the wight horde uses no coherent tactics, merely attacking the closest PCs.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N21. CRYPT OF THE SENESCHALS

Simple stone desks have been sculpted from the same black rock of this wide burial room's floor. Detailed to the nth degree, inkwells, stacks of paper, and curling handles adorn these intricate sculptures. Upon the walls are stacked hundreds of simple burial alcoves, each fitted with a simple swatch of worn white silk, upon which piles of ancient remains lay.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The alcoves here each hold the skeleton of a particularly cruel servant or royal lackey, mostly in the service of creatures that are now in Rooms N18, N19, or N20. In life these creatures lived but licking the boots of those in power; with the PCs' incursion, they do what comes naturally. If any of the remains are disturbed, they are only too eager to aid the PCs, detailing what they know of Rooms N16 through N27.

Initially the skeletal seneschals leave out important information or threats that they know off, such as Vinnara's minions or traps (like in N17), and purposefully steer them towards those Rooms. However, if their attitudes are adjusted (checks to do so suffer a –10 penalty as the creatures are still hateful undead), they will reveal they know about those areas. Any such adjustments lasts only for this encounter and are not retained in later encounters.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: These skeletons were banished here for their cowardice. Even if the PCs do something that jeopardizes all of them, they do not attack.

If forced to do battle, they form up into two hordes (hp 90 each).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the hit point of the skeleton hordes to 180 each. To decrease the challenge, remove one horde.

N22. CRYPT OF THE COWARDLY

Compared to the other crypts you've passed through, this burial hall seems deserted. No pillars line the walls nor are there extraneous sculptures to be found, there is only the fetid smell of trapped air. Along the walls, the burial stacks are fitted with rotted shelves, cracked boards dusted with unbound yellowed debris and the occasional rusted iron tool.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This crypt holds cruel, lazy, false, and traitorous servants. Each alcove holds a single skeleton that animates once disturbed. Upon recognizing that the PCs are not something that it can scare away, a lone skeleton screeches in fear and cowers within its resting place until the PCs depart. A skeleton's cry has a 30% chance of attracting a Random Encounter.

The servants here know nothing of the surrounding Rooms and are of no help, regardless of what they are offered.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Even if threatened, the skeletons do nothing more than wail and cry out in fear. If all of them begin crying, the chance of attracting a Random Encounter rises to 60%.

There are five skeleton hordes (hp 60 each).

N23. CRYPT OF CULTISTS

The ghost of bitter herbs lingers here. At the chamber's center, earthen braziers and stone candelabras are crafted into the floor, as if some complex ritual had been thrown down and the moment immortalized in rock. The walls, between burial alcoves that are barred closed, are etched with profane, jagged runes, each now scratched over and obscured. From deep within you can make out the sound of loose iron violently rattling against rock.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The wight horde (hp 480) trapped here is made up of cultists of profane gods and demon lords. Though trapped for centuries, their torment has only increased their hatred. Fortunately, the burial alcoves of these blasphemous creatures is fitted with iron bars (hardness 10, 20 hit points) that prevent the fiends from escaping.

Characters that examine the runes on the walls and make a DC 30 Knowledge (planes) or Knowledge (religion) can extrapolate upon the surviving runes to make out what the symbols represented. Each of over three dozen markings is of a foul demon, devil king, or dark god, their symbols all but desecrated by the powers of light that forged this tomb.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The wights are insane beyond reason. If freed, they violently lash out at the nearest living thing. Even if they remain in their alcoves, they attack anything that comes within range (such as those inspecting the runes on the walls). In combat, they form into a wight horde (hp 480).

N24. CRYPT OF THE BISHOPS

A ghostly whisper hums through this room, a serene, yet barely audible chant that you feel more than hear. Upon the walls are crafted the serene scenes of celestial creatures and holy works, beautiful artistry sculpted from shadowed stone. Among the strangely out of place works are hundreds of burial alcoves, lined with thick metal bars and draped with veils. Several of these shrouds look as though they have been shredded by sharp claws.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: These wights were once the messengers, foul clerics, and misguided prophets of all manner of evil otherworldly creatures. Believing in the power of their gods, some of which they have outlived themselves, these undead wait patiently, meditating within their crypts until the day they are released.

Though they are mostly unscarred, there are bars on the burial alcoves here (hardness 10, hp 20).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The wight horde (hp 480) is hateful, evil to the core, and eager to spread their foul messages. With such an intense desire to escape, they restrain their hatred for the living and make any promise or say anything to garner the PC's assistance. Any wight disturbed by the PCs will break from its meditation and converse pleasantly. They will feign knowing a great deal about the tomb, including how to escape. If the PCs free one of the wights, it will pretend to lead them, but will flee from the party as soon as they are distracted, and find its own way out. If an opportunity ever arises where the wight can use its energy drain ability and escape unharmed, it will make a single attack as a parting thanks for its freedom.

N25. CRYPT OF THE FALSE GODS

This high chamber is a suspended boneyard of the bizarre. Long, thick chains dangle from a trap ceiling, each supporting four or more a dangling cage. Within, cramped and broken, are the skeletons of monstrous creatures, bones thick with claws, fangs, and horns. Several of the cages pitch and sway and a shriek, like that of an unhappy bird cuts through the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Trapped here are the living creatures of monsters and abominations prideful enough to fathom themselves the gods of lesser creatures. The centers of entire cults, these beasts hate the living nearly as much as the gods who trapped them here, who they in a state of delusion believe to be nothing more than scared pretenders.

While many of the horrors here are harmless when in their cages (hardness 12, 200 hit points), the ages have not been able to hold up in the face of the onslaught of the seven now skeletal dragons — three adult black dragon skeleton (hp 129 each), three adult red dragon skeletons (hp 146 each), and one old red dragon skeleton (hp 185). These monstrosities now prowl free, lurking in the shadows near the top of the crypt. Any PC succeeding at a DC 26 Spot check notices that two of the cages are empty, busted open from the inside (another four hang up and out of sight).

The other creatures in the cages are as numerous as they are savage. Their constant rattling, screeching, and bearing create a din that imposes a –15 to all Listen checks.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs enter through magical means, their entrance alerts the dragons hiding at the Room's ceiling. Being nearly 60 ft. off the ground and shedding no light, it is unlikely the PC have the means to notice the undead monstrosities. As such, the dragons wait until the PC reach the Room's center before diving and attacking. Brutal in the extreme, the undead fight until destroyed.

The black dragons drop on the PCs first, fighting tooth and claw. Every so often, one opens its mouth as if to spew fire, unable to let go of its instincts. The red dragons drop down on the PCs from behind, flanking the weakest and culling them from the heard.

The largest red dragon saves the strongest PC for itself.

N26. CRYPT OF THE WARMASTERS

The walls here are hidden by the thick remains of skeletons and their broken armor. Rather than being lined with burial alcoves, the high walls here bristle with protrusions that jut upwards. Upon these dulled spears are the remains of hundreds of impaled bodies that sway and creak in the breeze. At the center of the room are a number of protrusions that broke off from the wall and now the bones that once hung upon them are piled in ruined heaps.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The dead here were once warlords and dictators, creatures that served death in epic proportions. For their service and the blood they have spilled, their bodies have been broken, and they've been trapped here, impaled upon the spikes of their tomb and their peers.

The wights here are powerful. Those upon the walls ignore the PCs unless they are disturbed or the sound of battle rekindles their memories. Having lusted after battle for most of their lives and through their entire unives as well, these creatures do not parley but can do nothing so long as they remain spiked to the wall.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: The wights lie where they are until the PCs approach. When within reach, the undead act as trained warriors and target the weakest PC. Any PC within 5 ft. of the walls risk being grappled by three wights per 5 ft. square. If any of the wights succeed at their grapple attempts they pull their target close enough to impale upon their armor's spikes.

N27. CRYPT OF THE SOLDIER/NORTHERN GUARDPOST

Cracked black stone stretches out before you, forming a broad burial hall, lined with sculpted stone weapons racks. The walls are carved with dozens of stacked alcoves, little more than crude shelves now holding nothing but dust, rusted armor, and splinters of bone. Near this barren room's center, a man shaped shadow refuses to flee. Twin embers of smoldering flame blaze to life as the shadow drifts soundlessly in your direction.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The skeletons here were once soldiers and unholy armies, war criminals, and enlisted brutes. However, time has eroded their will to fight and broken their already weakened minds. If disturbed, the soldiers' animate and attack, ignoring all attempts to parlay.

Three dread wraiths (hp 104 each) also lurk here, serving as guards on the western fringe of Vinnara Catershea's grim fief. While one stands at the Room's center, two more lurk within the shadowed alcoves, requiring DC 34 Spot checks to notice.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment

Tactics: Unless the PCs use magic to disguise their entry, the dread wraith guards notice and move towards them. While the central wraith attracts their attention, the other two sneak up on the PCs' flanks.

If two wraiths are killed, the remaining guard flees towards Room N93 to warn Vinnara of the PC's incursion, using the skeleton horde to guard its escape.

The skeletons form up in two skeleton hordes (hp 90 each).

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft. just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N28. CRYPT OF THE PEASANT

This massive hall echoes with even the slightest sound. Pillars line every modicum of space, making the chamber feel like a forest of midnight stone. The walls and columns are stacked with burial alcoves, but these are only half the size of many that you've previously run into. Inside, what debris remains has been forced and broken to fit within, then stuffed with piles of hay. The smell of this dry rotted vegetation fills the air with a thick earthy dust.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Packed into the alcoves here are the bodies of evil slaves and servants, false and sinful neighbors, and those who had perpetrated petty sins to new levels of atrocities. Most thought that their mountains of petty crimes would go unpunished, so the shock drove many mad when they found themselves locked away here. Perhaps more than any other creatures in the tomb, these skeletons feel that they have been wrongly damned, and that their eternal punishment far out weighs their earthly crimes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Despite the power of their anger and hatred of the living, these creatures are still some of the weakest forms of undead. If the PCs draw attention to themselves, such as by disturbing one of the alcoves or casting a spell with a display large enough to draw these creatures out of their centuries long torpor, the skeletons will attack en masse. Believing themselves wronged by the gods, they will concentrate their attacks on any PC that openly wears the symbol of a god or appears to be a cleric.

There is a massive number of creatures here, many more than can be brought to bear against the party at one time. Individually they present little threat, but the scratching claws of hundreds of undead are certain to deplete valuable spells and turning attempts. Every round the PCs should be faced with the maximum number of attacks coming from all sides and they will be restricted in their movements. Though it is unlikely a simple skeleton will be able to bypass even the weakest PC's AC, bonuses from flanking and critical hits will eventually cause some damage.

The skeletons, like those in most of these outer crypts, are bound to their burial place and cannot leave this Room. They form up in five skeleton hordes (hp 90 each).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two hordes. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Skeleton Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 30d12; hp 90; Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13, touch 11, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +0; Grp —; Atk +30 melee (3d4+3, claws); Full Atk +30 melee (3d4+5, claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

N29. CRYPT OF THE GODLESS

The walls here are covered in runes and ornate symbols, images that exude the delicacies other worlds. Contorted to fit around these fantastic markings are hundreds of burial sites, that look as though their interiors are etched. At the room's center is a simple altar. Though it is crafted to appear ready for a ritual or sacrifice, it looks as though it never saw action.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This is the burial place of those who turned their backs on their gods for petty reasons and who coaxed others from their devotion out of arrogance and pride. Creatures that spend their lives thinking themselves equal to the gods don't come to terms with the error of their ways until in the state of living death.

Though strangely neutral in appearance, the altar here is in fact consecrated to all good and neutral aligned deities. Any PC that casts the spell consecrate (or other holy spell aided by or dependent on an altar) or spends 1 minute sanctifying the altar in the name of their god produces two effects.

First, and most noticeably, the symbol of the caster's god appears, glowing radiantly on the altar. By bringing the worship of a god into the crypt of the godless, all of the skeletons in the hall stop what their doing or awaken, begin confessing their sins, and after 6 rounds of doing so, disintegrate into dust, freed from their torment by their conversion.

Secondly, the PCs find that they've created a sanctuary for themselves, free of undead, devoted to an allied good, and distasteful to wandering undead. Roaming enemies will not enter this Room and the PCs may rest and heal here.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: Unlike the vast majority of undead in the tomb, this skeleton horde (hp 90) has seen the error of its ways, having suffered the power of the gods. They largely ignore the PCs, unless one blatantly appears to be a cleric, druid, or paladin. If such a PC enters their tomb, they begin crawling from their alcoves to surround and plead with the holy PC for forgiveness. Though they don't actively attack, hundreds of pawing and fawning skeletons are still a significant threat.

If there is no such PC, the skeleton horde attacks individually if their alcoves are disturbed and en masse only if their entire crypt somehow seems threatened.

The skeletons form up in two skeleton hordes (hp 90 each).

N30. CRYPT OF THE HERETIC

The walls of this towering chamber seem to be covered with small rectangular shrines. Upon closer inspection, see that each one is in fact a burial alcove covered by a simple brass grate. Before each depression rests a shelf, set with a prominent symbol, surrounded by dozens of partially melted candles. From the floor to its reaches high in the atmosphere above, you can see hundreds of tiny flames flickering weakly in the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This crypt is the prison of the militant profane. Savage cultists, generals of demon armies, blackguards, all condemned to spend eternity here.

Hundreds of burial alcoves are sealed with thin brass plates, decorated with dozens of stylized, "X" shaped puncture marks. Before each one are several candles, each lit with an eternal flame and marked with a holy symbol. Any PC that makes a DC 22 Knowledge (religion) check will recognize the symbol of every god, of every alignment, within the pantheon they are most familiar with, as well of dozens they do not recognize. These symbols each mark what god the accused corpse behind the grate profaned against, forcing them to exist for an eternity in close proximity to the deity they betrayed.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The corpses within the alcoves here are filled with such hatred that they have risen as mohrgs. Fortunately though, the holy symbols outside each alcove keeps them from escaping their crypts.

Should the PCs remove a holy symbol from the shelf it lays on, even for a moment, the mohrg horde (hp 1050) bursts forth and attacks. These creatures are normal undead, except for when a PC attempts to turn them. Being fixated on the authority of one deity for so long, these mohrgs can only be turned by a worshipper of the god they betrayed.

Treasure: Each mohrg was buried with a ceremonial +1 longsword, that remains in their scabbards during battle. There are 30 +1 longswords in all.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the natural armor of the mohrg horde by +12. To decrease the challenge, reduce its hit points to 525.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 21 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

N31. CRYPT OF THE BLASPHEMERS

An airy, serene voice greets your ears as you enter this wide hall. Its words emanate from all around you and are both comforting and demanding. The walls here are lined with sculptures and images of holy inquisitors and justicars, imperious symbols of law and religion. Between them are stacked burial alcoves barred with wooden planks. Upon many of these boards are white scratches and flecks of splintebone.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the prison of creatures so foul and sinful that their own gods shun them. Imprisoned for crimes committed against the gods themselves, this Room rings with a divine whisper, an echo in Auran —

"Repent your treachery, repent your brutality, repent your lechery."

Behind the wooden bars of each alcove lies a single skeleton. Though the criminals here originally rose as a variety of foul corporeal undead, their centuries of hatred and imprisonment, listing every moment to the reprimanding voice of the divine, have driven them all into a collective insanity.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment

Tactics: The hundreds of corporeal undead that once filled this Room have escaped through madness, becoming allips. Dozens have drifted off and now wander the outer halls but several still remain.

When the PCs enter, a DC 28 Spot check reveals erratic movements jerking through the darkness above. Nine allips (hp 77 each) are all that remain from this once great crypt. They lurk above, waiting to attack the PCs when they reach the center of the Room. They drop down and surround the PCs, babbling madly. The allips lash out, seemingly at random. Truly crazed creatures, the allips use no cohesive strategy, and may even break from battling one opponent to fight another, seemingly at random.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, allowing the madness effect of the allips to effect the PCs for 1d4 rounds before the allips strike. To decrease the challenge, remove two allips.

✦ Allip: CR 10; Medium undead (incorporeal); HD 12d12; hp 77; Init +5; Spd Fly 30 ft. Skills and Feats: Hide +12, Intimidate +12, Listen +11, Search +7, Spot +11, Survival +0 (+2 following tracks); Ability Focus (babble), Alertness, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes.

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 ft. of the allip must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse and prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N32. CRYPT OF THE FIENDISH

This cuneiform room is virtually featureless. At the center you can make out a monolith carved from marble, a form made all the more striking by its pristine ivory color contrasting with the hall's black walls. Upon its surface you make out line upon line of elegant runes.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the hall of mortals so sinful and so profane that, had they died normal deaths, they would have been recruited into the legions of fiends. Those imprisoned here were not mere blasphemers, heretics, or criminals in the eyes of the gods, they were beasts with potential to cause the gods problems.

At the center of this Room is a marble monolith, carved with golden Auran runes. Any PC capable of reading this language can see that all four of its sides are inscribed with the same generic, but poignant, prayer. Anyone who wishes to do so can read the entire prayer out loud in 1 minute, but doing so merely increases the Desecration of the Room to 10.

Those that make a DC 18 Search check notice that dozens of even, rectangular mortar marks mar the walls of this Room. Anyone that makes a DC 18 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check, will realize that the mortar marks are outlines of numerous bricked over compartments. Those that break open a compartment (hardness 8, 20 hp) will find a mohrg inside that immediately attacks.

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 8

Tactics: Though time has quelled the essences of many of the spirits here, unbridled hatred still rages within some of those imprisoned. Infuriated by their imprisonment and the indignity of being sealed within their tombs, the combined fury of the undead here has manifested itself in the form of three ghosts (hp 85 each).

Any creature that enters the Room immediately draws the attention of the ghosts, currently floating around the Room. A PC may notice an ethereal wisp in the darkness, hinting at the ghosts' presences, on a successful DC 32 Spot check. Once living creatures enter the crypt and spend a round or two searching it, the ghosts descend, screaming violently, and attacking madly.

Frightful Moan (Su): A ghost can emit a frightful moan as a standard action. All living creatures within a 30-foot spread must succeed on a Will save (DC 18) or become panicked for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic necromantic mind-affecting fear effect. A creature that successfully saves against the moan cannot be affected by the same ghost's moan for 24 hours.

Horrific Appearance (Su): Any living creature within 60 ft. that views a ghost must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 18) or immediately take 1d4 points of Strength damage, 1d4 points of Dexterity damage, and 1d4 points of Constitution damage. A creature that successfully saves against this effect cannot be affected by the same ghost's horrific appearance for 24 hours.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): The ghost barbarian can no longer be flanked.

Manifestation (Su): Every ghost has this ability. A ghost dwells on the Ethereal Plane and, as an ethereal creature, it cannot affect or be affected by anything in the material world. When a ghost manifests, it partly enters the Material Plane and becomes visible but incorporeal on the Material Plane. A manifested ghost can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, magic weapons, or spells, with a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. A manifested ghost can pass through solid objects at will, and its own attacks pass through armor. A manifested ghost always moves silently. A manifested ghost can strike with its touch attack or with a ghost touch weapon (see Ghostly Equipment, below). A manifested ghost remains partially on the Ethereal Plane, where it is not incorporeal. A manifested ghost can be attacked by opponents on either the Material Plane or the Ethereal Plane. The ghost's incorporeality helps protect it from foes on the Material Plane, but not from foes on the Ethereal Plane.

A ghost has two home planes, the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane. It is not considered extraplanar when on either of these planes.

Rage (Ex): A ghost barbarian can fly into a rage three times per day. In a rage, a ghost barbarian temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Charisma, and a +2 morale bonus to Will saves, but takes a –2 penalty to AC. The Charisma bonus increases the ghost's deflection bonus to AC by +2. A ghost barbarian's rage lasts 8 rounds.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A ghost barbarian retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

N33. CRYPT OF THE PRIDEFUL

This vast black stone hall is accentuated by thousands of mirrors. Time after time your reflection is multiplied, but as you pass you see other panes of glass, that hold sculpted busts set in small alcoves. False reflections in mock mirrors, these visages are all of unattractive humanoids that smile crookedly or are scrutinizing their own images. Where there are no mirrors or glass sculptures there are stacks of burial alcoves, their interior stone polished to a reflective sheen.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: Pride being the root of all sins, this Room is the largest dedicated to a specific evil. Entombed within the walls here are those whose extreme sense of self importance was at the root of their evil acts and whose excesses of vanity caused them to cast aside all others.

Along side stacks of burial alcoves, intermixed with actual mirrors, are glass hollows with grinning busts of human figures. These busts are empty burial urns, following the ancient traditions of a long forgotten people, but left unused. A PC that makes a DC 32 Knowledge (religion) check recognizes that hidden behind these panes of glass, these sculptures are containers for the souls of the departed.

Unwilling to let their beauty and ability fade and rot bound to a single transient corpse, the spirits of those imprisoned in this Room left their bodies to take up residence in the sculpted urns. With a casing of stone, these figures retain their nobility and grace. Passing PCs that make a DC 28 Spot check notice subtle movements in the shadowed alcoves, following eyes, licked lips, turned heads, as the spirits animate the various urns. However, if detected and scrutinized, the souls within cease their animation for as long as they are being watched.

The only way to elicit a reaction from these statuettes is to break the false mirror in front of it. With its glass pane broken, the possessed urn inside animates, vigorously complaining about stuffiness and dust, but not thanking the PCs. All of the animate statues speak in an imperious, or bombastic tone and are arrogant in the extreme. They pretend to be knowledgeable and above the PCs, but actually know little about the tomb or the surrounding Rooms. Any freed statues goad and berate the PCs, explaining that their journeys are futile due to their mundane nature and imperfections. Each urn continues its running commentary until destroyed.

The busts have a hardness of 5 and hp 5, though the spirits within control and animate the stone's facial features. The PCs cannot actually move its base, propel it in any way, or even make bite attacks of strength sufficient enough to deal damage.

Another threat in this Room is numerous panes of glass being broken simultaneously (Hardness 1, 1 hp). In any given 5 ft. wide by 30 ft. high wall section is 2 to 5 possessed busts. Should a spell, damaging area of effect ability, or merely over zealous PCs cause 10 or more statues to be released and animate within their alcoves at any one time, their combined harassment has a supernatural effect. Any living creature in the hall that can hear the busts speak must make a DC 20 Will save or suffer the effects of the foiblemind spell, as cast by a 12th-level sorcerer. At the DM's discretion, potent damaging spells can persist past breaking the mirrored alcoves and destroy the busts within, freeing 1d4+1 wraiths from each affected 5 ft. wall section as noted below.

A door of celestial steel at the north-west end of the hall also leads to Room N14, but there is no lock, handle, or other way to it if it is already been closed.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: It is possible that the PCs will tire of being berated by talking heads and try shattering the busts to quiet them. Breaking the hollow urns should not be a problem for PCs, but the indignant essence of the numerous prideful spirits trapped within may be a threat. From the crushed bits of a broken bust rises a ghostly entity — a dread wraith (hp 104) that longs like a well formed humanoid with a face identical to the broken bust and wearing fine, but ancient clothing. The semi-transparent creature immediately attacks the PC that broke its resting place, continuing its string of harassments as it attacks.

If released the dread wraith breaks more urns to release as many as twenty-four dread wraiths into the Room. The DM should be careful about how quickly and how frequently this happens. It is important the PCs not beat on one at a time, lest the encounter grow stale, but more than 9 or 12 at once is certain to tax their strength.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N34. CRYPT OF SINNERS

A stone walkway stretches down the center of this room, passing between twin circular pits. Within, you see that they are heaped with bones, piled a dozen feet from the rim and descending who knows how deep.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The twin pits in this Room hold the corpses of the truly depraved, creatures with crimes so varied that they did not suit any other specific punishment. Stretching who knows how deep, the pits here are mass graves, filled with the bones of thousands of chattering corpses.

Luckily for the PCs, the pit is converted with a permanent wall of force that cannot be removed, short of a wish or miracle spell. The unholy beasts batter themselves against the invisible wall, however, spreading their foul ichor along its base. Those who die in this process, which is common, are shredded by the unholy sinners below them. However, the taint of the tomb causes them to reform at the bottom, for the rest of eternity.

If the PCs are foolish enough to release the unholy beasts, twelve sinners (hp 42 each) erupt from the pit every round. The total number is up to the DM, but should rank in the hundreds, if not thousands.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The sinners fight like maddened beasts. They are not subtle and fearlessly plow into the PCs. Even if death were an option, they would show no fear. Knowing they will rise again from their own ichor in 24 hours is their damnation. Eternally, they will rest here no matter what the PCs do.

What savagery created these beasts is not human and has no conscience.

N35. ARCH OF SINS

The upper walls and ceiling of this room slope inward like an archway. The walls are sculpted with humanoid figures, graphically satiating every imaginable vice and performing even the most unspeakable crimes. At the room's highest, center-most point, the sculptures distort and bend as if they were being drawn into some whirlpool of darkest night.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room is a rendition of the vices that resulted in the tomb's prisons damnation. On the walls, in absurd detail, every sin imaginable is being acted out by detailed figures. This Room is a trap, set down by the tomb's flawless creators, to be the end of those passing through with ill intentions.

Every round that the PCs spend in this Room, they must make a DC 22 Will save or be drawn to join in with the debauchery such as it is painted on the walls. Even considering these acts, pushes the PCs closer to chaotic evil. PCs affected by the Room's enchantment are affected until forcibly removed. Another save may be attempted each hour.

The first round that the walls are touched they seem to animate slightly. On the next round, if the walls are still touched, they animate more vigorously and low cries and moans can be heard. On the third round, if still touched, they seem to be alive and sound fills the hall. By the forth round, the walls leak blood and a dark, unholy shape coalesces at the center of the Room. On the fifth round, a physical manifestation of all the sin and vice within the entire tomb appears at the Room's center and attacks.

The rounds that the walls are touched for do not need to be by the same creature nor consecutive. After 10 minutes of being untouched, the walls will return to their normal state.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20

Tactics: If the walls are touched for 5 or more rounds, a towering being of pure vice (hp 216) is released into the Room. Intelligent and profane, it seeks out the weakest willed PC, attacking him to the exclusion of all others. Characters embracing the walls are ignored until last, though they are allowed another DC 18 Will save to break from the Room's enchantment in the face of this great evil.

Skills: Pure vice has a +8 racial bonus on Listen and Spot checks.

Feats: In combination with its natural abilities, a Pure Vice's Multiweapon Fighting feat allows it to attack with all its arms at no penalty.

shadowed piles of bones throughout this Room are numerous skeletal undead which eagerly rage against the PCs.

The taint of the halls has altered them, making them more and more in the image of the World Eater. N37. CRYPT OF THE SLOTHFUL

The surfaces of this chamber look as though they are melting. Burial alcoves lining the walls sag in all manner of curves. As you examine the walls and floors more closely, you can see that they are crafted to resemble sagging, inactive flesh; the occasional pockmark or freckled rash carved into their surfaces. The effect is so impressive and grotesque you can feel your feet sinking into the lazy meat.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: In this Room the remains of those who lived their lives leeching off of others and shirking their duties to baleful consequences have been condemned. Fortunately, as they were in life, the dead here are lazy creatures and under no circumstances expend power to animate their rotting bones.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unfortunately though, the stone of the tomb here is perverted by the excessiveness of its prisoner's apathy. Though it was crafted to appear weak, the centuries have made its floors and walls unwilling to support anything. Those that make a DC 26 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) or Survival check can discern that the floor here is unnaturally unstable. Any creature that moves more than 10 ft. into this Room sinks into the stone. From that point on, it requires a full round action and a successful DC 16 Strength check to move 5 ft. If this check is failed, the PC is unable to fight against the sinking rock and slips deeper into the floor. Two failed checks (not necessarily

N36. CRYPT OF THE CHAFF

This hall is divided into three parts by two walls of diagonally crossing bars. Between the barred walls, leading from the door you entered through to another on the opposite side of the chamber, is a wide pathway, strewn with the occasional stray bone. Beyond this path, the great bars create two massive, gate-less cells, the floor strewn with mounds of broken, aged carcasses. N38. CRYPT OF THE ENVIOUS

You see the gazes of hundreds of eyes sculptured on the walls of this chamber. A single brazier has been set at the center of this room, filling the hall with a foul light. The resting places upon the walls are fashioned with tarnished silver bars. However, from a distance, sparkling in the light, the bars shine as if newly forged. Between many of the alcoves the restless dead reach outward towards the opposite walls, and towards you, moaning with unquenchable desire.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the crypt of those whose petty desires led them to steal both physically and metaphorically, from those around them. Even in death these fiends covet the possessions of those equally damned, each believing that it has the worst of any suffering around it.

Merely stepping into the Room fills the PCs with dread. Instead of being shaken by the fear effect of this Room, the PCs suffer 1d4+1 Charisma drain, openly displaying their envy and contempt for one another. PCs that lose 5 points of Charisma, are subject to a second DC 25 Will save to resist become enraged like a barbarian. The DM may consider pitting the PCs against one another, but this depends on the vibe of a given gaming group, where such activity may not be appreciated.

These envious dead have reanimated as wights, capable of stealing the life from living creatures that pass too close. Should the PCs come within 5 ft. of the walls the wight horde (hp 460) attacks. However, if the PCs stay near the middle of the Room, the creatures pose little threat. These wights have gold coins buried in their foreheads, just above the eyes. While each wight is oblivious to its own gold coin, it covets the coins the others possess. For centuries they have fought with one another, trying to pry the coins from one another... to no avail. When the PCs enter the Room, what they possess is even greater.

The hundreds of eyes set into the walls, however, hold a danger of their own. Those PCs that enter this Room and don't shield their eyes (as if they were fending off a gaze attack) must make a DC 20 Will save. Those that fail are drawn to the closest wall in a random direction, where they stare, fixated, into a pair of gem-like eyes. While in this position, PCs are considered prone and suffer attacks from the wight horde. After each round of taking damage, enthralled PCs are allowed another DC 20 Will save to escape the walls' gaze, but must continue making saves every round that they do not shield their eyes.

PCs that are attacked and resist the walls' gaze afterwards are subject to the Fear effect of the Room again, this time becoming shaken from a failed save.

Encounter Condition: [Fear 25]

Tactics: If the horde attacks, it surrounds the PCs forming along the walls, rather than taking the typical shape of a horde. They move toward the PCs and attack every round. If the PCs are wise enough to drop treasure on the floor, the greedy hordes fight one another for the coins, stopping only to bicker over the treasure. A minimum of 40 coins of any value is enough to stop the horde.

Treasure: Every wight was buried with a single gold piece, knowing their envy for one another would draw them to covet their fellow crypt-mates' treasure. The gold coin is imbedded in the skull and can only be removed after death.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the DC of the fear effect to 28 and the Charisma drain to 1d6+1. To decrease the challenge, have the wight horde attack every other round as they fight amongst themselves to grab the coins from one another.

N39. ARCH OF FLESH

The walls of this chamber are reveal thousands of realistic-looking figures sculpted into the black stone. The images show humanoids and demons acting out ritualistic scaring and suicide. At the apex, a single skeletal figure grins down at the chaos below.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A reminder to those imprisoned within the tomb who spent their lives engaged in the most profane sins of the flesh, this arch is a masterwork of excess. While the dead that were here are long gone, the Room itself radiates evil.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20, Negative Energy

Tactics: Every minute the PCs linger, they are forced to make DC 16 Will saves or be drawn to touch the wall and commit the portrayed acts. Every round that a PC touches the walls he suffers 1d4 Strength drain. However, he is filled with indescribable physical pleasure, causing him to continue the act of self-mutilation. Each round a PC touching the wall is allowed another Will save, but it becomes more difficult to resist the call, increasing the DC by +1 for each round spent in contact with the walls.

PCs who lose all of their Strength to the chamber's draining effects remain in contact, slumping against the stone as it begins to drain away Constitution (at the same rate) and finally slays them.

Treasure: Buried in the center of the ceiling (60 ft. up) is a chest. A DC 25 Search check reveals the chest, so long as the PCs can see that far away. The lid faces down and the lock is built into the top. A DC 40 Open Lock unlocks it, but the chest is trapped.

✦ Energy Drain Trap: CR 10; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; Atk +8 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 17th-level wizard, 2d4 negative levels for 24 hours, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

Inside the chest are the souls of the dead, trapped in icy spheres. If the PCs are not careful, the spheres crash to the ground shattering like beads of force. There are a total of 333 spheres in the chest, but it is up to the DM how many crash to the ground. In addition, every time a sphere breaks a new soul is added to the walls, forcing the PCs to make more Will saves. For every 10 spheres that break, the Will save DC increases by +1 permanently.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the DC of the Will save by +4. To decrease the challenge, reduce the DC by -4.

N40. CRYPT OF THE LUSTING

The walls of this chamber are sculpted into hundreds of gorgeous nudes of every known humanoid race. Many of these inviting figures hold red candles in their smooth hands, lighting the wide hall with thousands of soft flames. At the room's center are crafted stone pillows set up to resemble a luxurious harem pit. Upon the walls, between these desirable forms, are stacks of burial slabs, their penings covered in red crystalline bars.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Those whose physical passions were at the heart of their crimes are imprisoned here. As an ironic trick by their captors, the undead here were separated from their bodies, resurrected as incorporeal wraiths, condemned never to know the chill of dead flesh nor be capable of touching another creature again.

Though the wraiths that inhabit this Room are its most apparent threat, the 2 ft. deep harem pit at the center of the Room is a tempting, and dangerous, trap for those with lusty thoughts. Any single living creature that enters the pit is wracked by pleasurable sensations, so intense in fact that they must make a DC 20 Fortitude save of lose consciousness for 1d6 minutes. Even if a creature makes this save, if they do not leave the pit immediately they are forced to make the same save each round they remain.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: When the PCs enter this Room, the wraiths linger among piles of bones. It takes only the entrance of a warm blooded creature into their midst to rouse them from their torpor. After 1 round, the entire host of incorporeal undead swarm the PCs as a wraith horde (hp 480), trying to touch and lavish physical affection upon the PCs with feelingless touches that now only drain life. Though the wraiths do not directly mean the PCs harm, they are lured driven beyond reason, and thus cannot be communicated with.

Despite their numbers though, the wraiths pose little threat. It is when and if a creature is rendered unconscious by the pit at the center of the Room's powers that the undead become a threat. Any creature that is knocked unconscious is vulnerable to the "attacks" of several wraiths and could swiftly be drained of life.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N41. ARCH OF BLOOD

Curved into a dangerous arch, the black walls of this chamber are constructed to imitate a gory deluge raining down in a sanguine waterfall. Within the walls, melted or obscured by the frozen liquid, are hundreds of screaming pain-wracked faces. At the room's highest point, the sculpted waves uncover their source, endlessly flowing from the mouth of a skull.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A cursory search of the Room indicates no threats, though detect magic reveals a strong necromantic aura emanating from the skull at the hall's apex. Once a creature attempts to pass through the arch, the extent of the danger is revealed. Any corporeal creature that passes through the center of this Room is targeted by a fireball trap, that consists of blood instead of fire. PCs with resistances or immunities to fire do not gain their normal protection.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, reset the trap after 1 round. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the fireball trap to 10d6 fire damage.

N42. CRYPT OF THE GLUTTONOUS

The walls of this burial hall resemble fruit laden trees, sparkling waterfalls, and fat, lazy animals. Down its center, stone tables are piled with realistic sculptures of food and drink. Set within the walls, totally out of reach of any part of this stony feast, are stacks of specially broad burial alcoves. Each is barred with thick, gnawed bones.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Those who were damned by their hunger and excesses were imprisoned here. Their ravenous undead bodies are warped and bloated to reflect their decedent souls.

Besides the ghouls and ghosts imprisoned here, the carved food on the walls and laden upon the tables running through the Room, is less than mundane. Any creature that touches the bountifully carved walls or tables suffer from a powerful magical contact poison that clots the blood, stiffens the muscles, and causes the affected to move sluggishly.

✦ Gluttony Poison—Contact, Fortitude DC 22, initial damage 1d6 Dex, secondary damage 1d6 Con.

PCs succeeding at a DC 28 Spot check notice nearly a dozen of the burial alcoves have had their bone bars gnawed through, allowing whatever is within the freedom to escape.

Encounter Condition: [Negative Energy], Poor Footing 20

Tactics: The strongest willed and most ravenous undead have chewed through their bars. When the PCs enter, nine ghosts (hp 59 each) linger within their alcoves, waiting for something to enter. If the PCs make noise or are not purposefully moving silently, the ghosts attack.

The ghosts know about the the poison and work together to bull rush or grapple individual PCs, forcing them into the walls or the Room's center. PCs that are moved by a bull rush or fail a grapple check into a wall or the Room's center are exposed to the contact poison there. Once their victim is exposed to the poison, or if it seems that they cannot be moved, the ghosts attack as normal.

Once a PC is down, the ghost continues to attack, feeding on his flesh. Nothing can get it to stop feeding. These beasts can not be satiated, constantly hungry and wanting more than they have. They do not feed on one another.

The Negative Energy in this Room is doubled.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four ghosts. To decrease the challenge, remove the poison.

Ghoul Fever (Su): Disease—bite, Fortitude DC 17, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d3 Constitution and 1d3 Dexterity. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a ghost's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Even elves can be affected by this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Stench (Ex): The stink of death and corruption surrounding these creatures is overwhelming. Living creatures within 10 ft. must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or be sickened for 1d6+4 minutes. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same ghost's stench for 24 hours. A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effect from a sickened creature. Creatures with immunity to poison are unaffected, and creatures resistant to poison receive their normal bonus on their saving throws. The save DC is Charisma-based.

N43. CRYPT OF THE WRATHFUL

Swords, spearheads, blades, and the scent of oil fill this room. The walls are sculpted in a pattern of thousands of interlocking weapons, all of their edges dull and pointing harmlessly away from the room's center. That is, except for where they edge up against the burial alcoves. The surfaces of these shelves consist exclusively of painful-looking blades. Their only dull points are the iron bars that hold the scarred remains inside.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: In this Room are imprisoned those whose rage was at the root of their crimes. In alcoves barred by piercing spears the dead rest, never to know another outlet for their deeply felt fury.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs move stealthily through this crypt, the zombies held inside the alcoves notice them and begin to scream on the round after entering. This hate filled wailing has a dual effect.

First, any living creature capable of hearing the zombies hollow screams must make a DC 22 Will save, or be affected by confusion (cast by an 18th-level sorcerer). This screaming continues for 3 rounds after the PCs have left the chamber or are otherwise out of all of the zombies sight.

Second, the screaming attracts Random Encounters. Every 6 rounds of wailing, roll a Random Encounter that arrives in 1d4 rounds.

If the PCs attack the zombies to end the wailing they must destroy the entire zombie horde (hp 240). This of course isn't an issue because the zombie's deep, unquenchable rage allows them to break from their alcoves and attack the PCs in kind.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the save DC of the confusion effect by +4 and add one zombie horde. To decrease the challenge, reduce the potential of a Random Encounter to once every 10 rounds.

☛ Zombie Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 60d12+90; hp 240; Init -1; Spd 30 ft. Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Single Actions Only (Ex): Zombies have poor reflexes and can perform only a single move action or attack action each round.

A zombie can move up to its speed and attack in the same round, but only if it attempts a charge.

N44. CRYPT OF GREED

The walls of this chamber sparkle with coins and gems. At its center, lies a pile nearly as tall as two men, heaped with wealth. Facing the treasures are dozens of richly appointed burial alcoves. Through gilt and glass doors you can see that they are filled with hundreds of ancient coins, interspersed with what could be gem-encrusted golden bones.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This crypt holds the remains the greediest, most covetous creatures ever to walk the face of the world. Then they were condemned, the gods infused their remains with the precious metals and stones that they so lusted after in life.

In quite the reverse of what their captors intended, the undead here have become so crazed over the centuries that they are now quite happy with their present state of existence. Buried with a horde larger than many ever had in life, infused with wealth itself, and with eternity to revel in their wealth, they have for gotten there was ever any point to so such treasure besides merely possessing it. However, as soon as the PCs enter the Room, the greedy undead covet the PCs possessions, as mundane as they may be, and try to add them to the crypt's hoard.

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 10

Tactics: These greedy souls have been resurrected as eighteen wights (hp 52). Each appears as a skeleton constructed of tarnished gold and gems that seems to each glitter with a hellish internal light.

Once the PCs have been spotted, eighteen wights carefully open their burial alcoves and attack the PCs. If it seems that they can do so without risking much physical harm, the wights disarm the PCs and tear away equipment, as physical possessions are what they are after. However, even if the wights were to somehow gain all of the PCs' equipment, their unnatural hunger for life would only lead them to drain the PCs as well.

The wights are want the PCs equipment for themselves and, as such, do not cooperate or use any coordinated tactics. Instead, they fight and claw at the PCs, taking what they want and ripping away their armor when necessary.

The metal and gemstone coating their bones has sealed their skulls shut, thus the wights are unable to communicate, though they are intelligent enough to gesture their intentions.

Treasure: The coins and gems are nothing more than polished glass and tin, but the PCs must succeed at a DC 20 Will save, lest then dump out all their sacks to fill them with all the coins and gems they can carry.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two wight hordes. To decrease the challenge, remove six wights.

☛ Wight: CR 5; Medium undead; HD 8d12; hp 52; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 28, touch 12, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +4; Grp +5; Atk +5 melee touch (1d3+1 non-lethal plus energy drain, black lash) or +5 melee (entangle, net) or +5 melee (1d4+1 plus energy drain, slam); Full Atk +5 melee touch (1d3+1 non-lethal plus energy drain, black lash) or +5 melee (entangle, net) or +5 melee (1d4+1 plus energy drain, slam); Space/Reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA Black lash, create spawn, energy drain; SQ darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL LE; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +7; Str 12, Dex 14, Con —, Int 11, Wis 13, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Hide +12, Listen +11, Move Silently +20, Spot +11; Alertness, Exotic Weapon Proficiency (net)*, Exotic Weapon Proficiency (whip), Blind-Fight.

Black Lash (Su): The driver wight's whip attack is a touch attack and will damage anyone regardless of their armor.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wight becomes a wight in 1d4 rounds. Spawn are under the command of the wight that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a driver wight's slam or whip attack gain one negative level. The DC is 16 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the wight gains 5 temporary hit points.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N45. SOUTHERN GREAT HALL

As quiet and still as an ancient temple, this massive hall extends into an expanse of perfectly untouched night. Upon its towering walls are carved row after endless row of burial places, simple alcoves, each strewn with bones and rotted death shrouds. Lining the hall are giant columns, sculpted with skulls of black rock and hundreds of their own stony graves. These pillars and the huge walls march endlessly away from you into the darkened void of black silence.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: The walls here hold the burial alcoves of more than 800 of the tomb's weakest prisoners. The skeletons that rest here long ago lost any desire to move about or even expend the energy to animate their rotted bodies, now lingering only in a macabre dream world of imagined memories.

Two doors of celestial steel also lead to Rooms N15 and N46, but there are no locks, handles or other ways to them from this side.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The skeletons in torpor here ignore the PCs if they are left alone. If the PCs root through any of the remains, the offended undead pull themselves together into a skeleton horde (hp 150) long enough to make a dispassionate attack, but it is unlikely to be a threat to even the weakest PC. As long as the PCs don't do anything to upset all of the hall's residents, such as attempting to sanctify the Room in the name of their gods or trying to destroy it as a whole, the skeletons leave them alone.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one skeleton horde. To decrease the challenge, reduce hit points of the skeleton horde to 90.

☛ Skeleton Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 30d12; hp 150; Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13, touch 11, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +0; Grp —; Atk +30 melee (3d4+3, claws); Full Atk +30 melee (3d4+5, claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

N46 THROUGH N49.

THE SOUTHERN/FIRE WARDS

Rooms N46 through N49 make up the southern wards, or the fire wards to those few undead within the tomb who know of it. It is a series of heavily trapped Rooms that guard a fake escape. The gates dividing these Rooms are each made of scorched celestial steel and can only be harmed by magic of artifact or epic power. Thus, for most PCs, only by deactivating the traps held in each Room can the doors be unlocked and passed through. This also means that creatures on the opposite side of the doors (those not holding the traps and unlocking mechanisms) cannot pass through without becoming gaseous or incorporeal (as the tomb's wards prevent teleportation magics). Despite their traps, these Rooms are safe from wandering undead.

N46. FLAME'S INNER SHRINE

You find yourself facing a giant, familiar looking skull, wreathed in flame and with teeth like knives. Set upon a great door of blackened iron, it flickers with the light of twin braziers set to either side of it. To the extremes of the small room, standing among slight shadows, are two statues and a pair of short, brazier topped columns. To the left, a robed skeleton holds a balanced scale in both hands, while to the right a helpful corpse points the way over the shoulder of a crippled old woman.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The continuation of the trap in Room N47 and similar to the locking mechanism of the western gate, the brazier before the stature depicting death in the same form as that on the gate the PCs just passed through, must be lit. In this case, lighting the pillar before the sculpture of death as judge will unlock the door into the inner tombs. However, if the wrong or both braziers are lit, the trap here is activated and the skull upon the door animates, letting out a screaming blast of fire and sonic force.

☛ Fire Scream Trap: CR 10; magic device; device trigger; automatically reset; multiple targets (fireball, 9th-level wizard, 9d6 fire damage + shout, 9th-level cleric, 9d6 sonic, DC 26 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.

As a side effect of the scream, it is possible that some of the tomb's free roaming undead come to investigate. The DM should roll on the random encounter table for the western outer halls. If an appropriate wandering encounter is rolled the creatures will appear in 2d4 rounds.

Encounter Condition: Smoke

Tactics: Once the correct brazier is lit, the door unlocks with a noisy click, and remains so for 5 minutes. Unlocking the gate is the only way to bypass it as it is made of celestial steel and is invulnerable to all but artifact power attacks. A PC that makes a DC 18 Strength check can open the door, but after 5 minutes it closes and relocks itself.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the fire scream trap to 15d6 fire + 15d6 sonic. To reduce the challenge, reduce the damage of the fire scream trap to 6d6 fire + 6d6 sonic.

N47. FLAME'S OUTER SHRINE

Immediately before you looms a black iron door molded to resemble a fire robed skeleton presiding over an elaborate court made up of spectral figures. Beside the door squat two pillars with braziers at their top, the flames within light up the entire room except for two deep alcoves. Examining these refuges, you find that each one bears a detailed statue, one of a scythe-wielding fleshless monstrosity, and the other of a skeleton disguised as a wandering peasant. Before both of these grim statues squat an unlit brazier topped pillar.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: As at the western gates, a simple trap bars passage to the tomb's inner halls. An abbreviated version of that more expansive locking system, this one requires that the brazier standing before the aspect of death depicted on the previously passed through door be lit. Doing so unlocks the next gate, which is constructed of celestial steel and is impervious to all by artifact power attacks. However, being too hasty and lighting both braziers or lighting the incorrect one (in this case, the scythe bearing stature of death the slaughterer) activates the trap, causing the Room to erupt in and arc of flame, lancing from the incorrectly lit brazier to the other.

Encounter Condition: Smoke

Tactics: After the trap is activated, both previously unlit braziers with extinguish and the trap resets. Once the correct brazier is lit, there is an audible click and the gate to Room N46 unlocks for 5 minutes. Any PC making a DC 18 Strength check can pull the door open, though it shuts and relocks itself after 5 minutes.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the fire arc trap to 140 fire. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage to 90 fire.

N48. FLAME'S DEADWARD AND NECROLOGY

As you pass through the gate, a small chamber that shimmers with its dead gray light opens before you. On the walls you can make out thousands of runes that cover every vertical surface in elegantly etched lines. These rows of script are broken only by another large iron door, this one crafted in relief with a simple skeletal figure holding a quarterstaff, standing in a fiery background. Halfway through this room glimmers a faint wall of bluish light that flickers every few moments with a flash of white sparks.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: As in the western deadwards, the light here is a visible, holy, magical ward that keeps the tomb's undead (even incorporeal ones) trapped. The wall should not prove to be an obstacle for the PCs, unless they have become undead themselves (see "Inside the Tomb of the Unliving"), and they will experience only a slight electric-like tingle as they move past it.

Once through the dead ward, any PC that examines the walls and is familiar with the language, will recognize the runes covering the walls as letters in the Auran language. Anyone capable of reading these words will find an explanation for the tomb, a list of hundreds of the prisoners names and their most vile crime, and a warning to go no further. No specific names are recognizable initially from those of the prisoners listed, but if the PCs later search this area for more information about NPCs they encounter within the tomb, they find a brief summary of their history and the atrocities attributed to them. The exact amount of information recorded here is left to the discretion of the DM.

Any PC that attempts to open the door leading to Room N47 finds it solidly sealed and constructed of the same scorched, impervious, celestial steel as those in Rooms N47 and N49. Even the briefest examination of the door will note that the upper portion of the staff of the skeleton depicted here extends slightly from the gate. A DC 30 Search check notes that this extendable section of the staff does not seem to be made of the same metal, while a DC 30 Craft (alchemy) check notes that it is celestial steel covered in a strange sulfur-based coating that is highly flammable. Detect magic reveals a moderate evocation magic emanating from the staff.

If a PC purposefully holds a flame to the extending staff or if a magical fire effect comes into contact with it, the staff erupts in a burst of flame for three successive rounds.

♦ Fireball Staff Trap (x3): CR 10; magic device; device trigger; automatically reset; spell effect (fireball, 15th-level wizard, 10d6 fire damage, DC 19 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 40.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: After it is ignited, the staff tip will burn for 5 minutes. During this time, the gate to Room N47 is unlocked and can be opened with a DC 18 Strength check. After 5 minutes, or if the flame is purposefully extinguished, the door locks again and the trap resets.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the fireball trap to 15d6. To decrease the challenge, have the trap trigger twice.

N49. FALSE GATE

Before you, set into a deep alcove of ebony rock, stands a massive archway of blackened iron. In relief etched upon its surface is a grinning flaming skull with a hungry smile, its teeth filed to cannibal-like points. On the ground lie piles of bones, of both local vermin and what may have been passersby. A stone wall blocks the path beyond the archway.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This horrifying archway of scorched celestial metal is another trap, to lure the undead to a "promised" escape. It is a lie.

Anyone who examines the bones strewn on the ground and makes a DC 20 Survival check can see the bones were literally blasted off the body. [The magical trap here is particularly harmful against undead.] If this Survival check exceeds DC 30, an astute eye also notes that the edges of each broken bone seems melted, as if whatever bit through the bones also was hot.

The reasons for the bones and heat here become apparent if one gets within 10 ft. of the archway. Casting detect magic, revealing strong auras of both transmutation and evocation magic. As soon as any creature comes too close, the great skull upon the door's eyes flame as it animates and strikes out, as if it were holding a ready action, making a +20 melee bite attack that deals 2d8 piercing damage +2d6 fire damage. Also, any creature hit by the skull is forced back 5 ft. and is unable to move any farther on that round. The skull can make two suck attacks per turn at two separate creatures, however a third PC attempting to pass through the skull's threatened area does so without harm. The skull's attack is considered to be a 10 ft. reach attack and thus it cannot attack creatures within 5 ft. It is also considered to be made out of the same celestial steel as the door and is effectively invulnerable, though a dispel magic spell that makes a DC 24 dispel check or a rogue making a DC 30 Disable Device check renders the skull inert for 1d4 rounds.

♦ Fire Skull Trap: CR 9; magic device; proximity trigger; automatically reset; Atk +20 (2d8 bite +2d6 fire damage, double damage to undead, no save); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.

PCs that make it within 5 ft. can test the stone wall and find that it is sealed shut. Those that scrutinize the skull can make a DC 22 Spot check to notice that the skull's eye sockets are not merely carved features, but deep, smoking hollows. Anyone able to examine these hollows on a round that the skull does not attack can make a DC 22 Search or Spellcraft check to determine that the sockets lead into the core of the skull, directly to whatever magical flame that animates it. Anything stuck into the hollow takes 4d6 fire damage and flammable materials instantly catch on fire. Any PC capable of examining the eye sockets on a round it doesn't attack and making a DC 24 Knowledge (arcana) or Spellcraft check made will determine that an ice or water based spell, more than 5 gallons of mundane water, or 5 lbs. of dirt or ash render the skull inert for an indeterminate amount of time. If the PCs are able to deactivate the skull by extinguishing its internal flame, the skull remains inactive for 2d10 minutes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: What makes this such an effective trap is that after 5 minutes, undead believe the stone wall isn't there. This is a particularly powerful effect, considering undead are immune to most mind-affecting magic. The magic is so powerful, in fact, that after the PCs spend 5 minutes here, they must succeed at a DC 20 Will save or believe the stone wall is gone and he can pass through the archway.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of the encounter, raise the damage of the fire skull trap to 2d12 + 2d10 fire, and the Search and Disable Device DCs to 34. To reduce the challenge, lower the damage of the fire skull trap to 2d6 +1d8 fire damage and the Search and Disable Device DCs to 24.

N53 THROUGH N68. DEATH'S COURT

Among the undead condemned to linger in the Tomb of the Unliving, not all chose to rest in peace. Among those that raged for centuries against the will of their captors, several cunning and powerful creatures became immortal rulers over legions of lesser undead. In at least one case, however, cunning has been replaced by madness and the only power involved is that of a centuries-long delusion. Such is the lot of the self-proclaimed ruler of wights, a bodak calling himself "The Great Death". Scoffed at and considered beneath contempt, the True Undead Lords of the Tomb consider this charlatan a bit of a joke. His mad depredations, more evidence that he is a crazed weakling, lordling over a diminutive and mindless brood, proves he is no threat to their power.

In life, his true name was Maleforr the Scourge, and he slew more living creatures than in all of recorded history. He became, as a result, the first bodak and living walking death. But when his sentence to the tomb became the harsh reality of eternity in darkness, The Great Death lost his mind.

Believing himself the judge of the unliving, he built a macabre court, filling it with wights and zombies, appointing barristers, bailiffs, and even witnesses and scribes.

Upon a throne of bones, the manifestation of Death tries those brought before him, judging their crimes and meeting out damnation. With a small army of loyal wight hunters and bailiffs, the court of Death never lacks criminals to be judged, no matter how mindless the subject or how ludicrous the crime. In most cases, the same thoughtless, defenseless zombies are offered up for judgment again and again, their ancient bodies reduced to scraps of shambling flesh over the course of several centuries. But Death never seems to notice such trivialities. He blames the deterioration of the accused on the ever-increasing degradation of the living, and continues to imagine new punishments.

As paradoxical as unlife can be, the Great Death is the personification of irony. Megalomaniacal, Maleforr believes himself Death incarnate and the judge of the living. Yet, his powers hold now sway over undeath. He can, however, rob the living of breath with but a mere thought, were his fractured mind, capable of piecing together such a stratagem. He is a prisoner of his own mind, trapped inside the tortured shell of a bodak judge, confined to a lifetime of penance inside a tomb of unthinkable horror. His fate is not the jester's role his fellow inmates believe it to be.

Though the Great Death pays the tomb's other warlords less mind than they do him, he does keep his borders well guarded. A strength that forces them all to harbor a secret wonder — what if this creature is in fact what he says he is? A wonder that — none will admit — borders on fear.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A zombie drags three large ebon blocks, a punishment handed down from the Great Death. The blocks are affixed by rusted chains to the creature's wrists and looped through its hollow eye sockets. The creature is bent backwards and poses no threat to the PCs.
2–14	Nothing
15	A "jury" of 20 of zombie servants mindlessly marches towards the Great Death's courtroom. If the zombies are left alone, they lead the PCs to the Great Death's Court (Room N67). If attacked, they engage in melee. Fearless.
16	One of the Great Death's hunting parties (10 advanced 8 HD wights) encounters the PCs as they return with a group of non-sentient undead prisoners in tow (a mix of 4d12 skeletons and zombies). The prisoners follow the wights' commands and help them fight the PCs.
17	A group of three mohrgs, which broke free from their prisons before being put on trial, are desperately trying to escape the Great Death's realm. Upon encountering the PCs they threaten and demand to be given directions for the way out. If the PCs give them the information, they flee in that direction. If the PCs offer them the least hesitation or resistance, they attack. The mohrgs are followed 1d6+2 rounds later by 2d12 wights pursuing them. The wights charge the PCs as soon as they spot them.
18	A hunting party of 20 advanced 8 HD wights encounters the party as they head out. These undead attempt to capture the PCs and bring them to the Great Death's court.
19	A hunting party of 10 advanced 8 HD wights captured four bodaks. Upon spotting the PCs, the wights forget the bodaks and charge them. Meanwhile, the newly freed bodaks engage both the wights and PCs in battle, striking any foe at random.
20	A visible pulse of negative energy throbs through the tomb. It extinguishes all non-magical light sources and forces all creatures unprotected from such energy to make a DC 22 Fortitude save or suffer 3d8 points of damage. If the World Eater in Room N159 was released from imprisonment, ignore this encounter.

N53. THE GREAT DEATH'S WESTERN GATE

The stone walls of this hall have been sculpted to appear as though they were made of massive piles of humanoid skulls. Over two dozen skeletons slowly shamble about this chamber, intently polishing the skull-covered walls with their threadbare burial linens. Several feral corpses holding tangled gray whips are watching the skeletons.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The skeleton horde (hp 180) is a minion of the Great Death set on polishing the skull-shaped walls for their master. The eight advanced wights (hp 52 each) needlessly guard the thoughtless undead, playing at being cruel taskmasters and whipping their slaves at the slightest imagined affront.

Aside from the walls being significantly cleaner than perhaps anywhere else in the entire tomb, there seems to be nothing out of the ordinary here. The skull-shaped walls, however, are trapped with a potent mechanical device triggered 1 round after any living being enters. The trap releases a powerful poison gas, which sprouts out from the wall's countless skeletal mouths. The undead are unaffected by this substance, but when released it leaves a blue mark upon the walls. Because of this, and also because this Room marks the beginning of its territory, the Great Death makes sure a throng of skeletons keep the walls of this Room clean at all time.

◆ Burnt Othur Fumes Trap: CR 13; mechanical; proximity trigger (detect living); automatic reset; gas; multiple targets (all targets within the Room); never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (burnt othur fumes, DC 18 Fortitude save resists, 1 Con drain / 3d6 Con); Search DC 42; Disable Device DC 36.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Upon noticing the PCs, the wights order the skeletons into battle and eagerly follow behind. Each wight is armed with a net made from the shrouds of the dead in the surrounding tombs. They intend to capture the PCs and bring them to their master's court so they can stand trial for their crimes.

Black Lash (Su): The driver wight's whip attack is a touch attack and will damage anyone regardless of their armor.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wight becomes a wight in 1d4 rounds. Spawn are under the command of the wight that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a driver wight's slam or whip attack gain one negative level. The DC is 16 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the wight gains 5 temporary hit points.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N54. WORKERS' CHAMBER

This cramped room is filled with dozens of animated corpses piled up atop one another.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When not participating in some pointless task or undergoing a cruel punishment, a number of the Great Death's lowly slaves spend their time here. Mindless and inert, the skeletons are crammed into this Room, filling it to capacity. Though this large number of animated dead may initially be startling, any PC taking a moment to observe them sees the skeletons are harmless enough.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If left alone, the skeletons follow orders and remain in this Room, unmoving. If the PCs attack, however, the entire host shuffles forward and attacks, forming a great skeleton horde (hp 180). The horde moves into the PCs and swarms over them in a chaotic fray. They fight to push the PCs out of the Room more than they fight to kill.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two skeleton hordes to the Room. To decrease the challenge, give the PCs an automatic surprise round and assume they can act before the skeletons each round.

N55. EMPTY WORKERS' CHAMBER

The black walls of this long chamber run for several feet before ending in an abrupt dead-end. Several piles of dust balls and a few bony splinters are the chamber's only contents.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like Room N54, this Room is meant to hold the Great Death's slaves while they are not at work or being punished. The workers' contingent dwelling here is presently cleaning Room N53.

N56. HALL OF ATROCITIES

Several alcoves and hallways lead to rusted iron doors throughout this irregularly shaped chamber. Upon its central walls, shiny pieces of rock and glass have been arranged in crude depictions of the dead rising from their graves and attacking the living. Near the center of the room, an untrained hand attempted to chisel a ferocious figure breaking out of a sculpted coffin. Meandering about the hall are numerous yellow skeletons, trailing stained burial wrappings.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The Great Death is one of the few creatures in the crypt that passed through the Halls of Ages (Rooms N50 through N52) and survived. The halls' theme was not lost on the undead, but their lesson was. Feeling that an integral and obvious step was missing in the halls' progression, he created a fourth hall in the center of his domain: One devoted to the state following death, or unlife. Fortunately, the Great Death lacks the power of the tomb's celestial creators and he was unable to empower his hall with the potent magic of the others. Thus, this Room is little more than a macabre series of decorations.

Despite the Room's lack of power, this is still the highest trafficked Room in the Great Death's domain. With wight guards, prisoners, and court members constantly moving in and out of the courtrooms, there is always someone in this Room. It is, at all times, guarded by four skeleton hordes (hp 180 each).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Though the skeletal hordes do not attack any of the Great Death's servants journeying through this Room, they instantly charge any intruding creature. While three of the hordes attack the PCs as soon as they spot them, the fourth, following the Great Death's orders, moves towards the southwestern corner to block access to Rooms N64 through N67.

In addition, add a Random Encounter after 1d4+1 rounds of combat have passed. Reroll anything lower than 10 (or simply roll 1d10+10).

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N57. THE GREAT DEATH'S COURTYARD

The ebon walls of this chamber were sculpted to resemble artistically trimmed trees and hedgerows. The sculptures, however, were obviously not created by a master's hand; rather, they seem to be the work of the crudest amateur. Many skeletons, with more bones broken than intact, go through the futile motions of tending this two-dimensional garden. Standing behind them, a savage whip-wielding animated corpse oversees their work.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: One of hundreds of meaninglessly cruel exercises the Great Death has his minions perform on a daily basis, is mindlessly gardening the poorly carved walls of this Room. Overseeing them is a single sadistic wight (hp 57), whipping the skeletons with such enthusiasm that it suffers from a –5 circumstance penalty to all Listen and Spot checks.

Encounter Condition: Poor Footing 20

Tactics: If the wight notices the PCs, it orders the skeleton horde (hp 180) to attack while it escapes to Room N56, where he organizes the troops to attack the PCs. If the PCs prevent it from escaping right away, the wight stands behind the skeletons and uses its whip and net from a distance. The wight is intelligent enough to attack lightly-armored PCs with its whip. If there are none, it attacks with its net before retreating to Room N58 or Room N59.

If the wight escapes, it alerts the creatures in the Room he moved to, and stands ready to face the PCs with its companions.

Treasure: The only items of interest in this Room are the wight's whip and net (see Room N58 for details).

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four wights. To decrease the challenge, remove one wight.

✦ Skeleton Horde: CR 10; Medium undead (horde); HD 30d12; hp 180; Init +5; Spd 30 ft.; AC 13, touch 11, flat-footed 13; Base Atk +0; Grp —; Atk +30 melee (3d4+3, claws); Full Atk +30 melee (3d4+5, claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, immunity to cold, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +0, Ref +1, Will +2; Str 13, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

N58. THE GREAT DEATH'S NORTHERN GATE

The walls of this chamber are sculpted with hundreds of skulls that form an open-mouthed screaming choir. However, the fearsomeness of this morbid stone artwork is diminished as several of the open jaws are used to hang nets and knotted gray whips. At the room's center, several hunchbacked corpses untangle an elaborately rotted net, while others like them stand guard.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Aside from being a post guarding the main egress from the Great Death's realm, this Room also serves as a workhouse for many of its wight hunters. As the majority of the Great Death's mindless slaves can only perform the most rudimentary tasks, more complicated work has to be performed by the wights themselves. Currently, twenty wights (hp 52 each) are in this Room. Half of them are at work creating and mending whips and nets from a stock of molding burial shrouds, while the others stand guard.

Though it is the most threatening aspect of their weapons, neither the wights nor the Great Death realize that some of the burial shrouds they make their arms from are infected with a disease similar to mummy rot (in fact, only 20% of their weapons are infected with the disease). Essentially this is because there are no creatures in the tomb that are affected by the disease. Unless the PCs linger in the Great Death's lands for some time, it is unlikely this benefit will be revealed to the undead.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 20°, Stagnant Air

Tactics: The wights in this Room are distracted and suffer a -4 circumstance penalty to all Listen and Spot checks. Once they are made aware of the PCs, ten of them attack viciously while the ten in the middle of the Room take 1d2 rounds to get ready. The first wights to attack use their natural weapons, charging the PCs mercilessly. Meanwhile, the others remain behind and attempt to catch PCs under their nets. Each time a PC is caught by a wight's net, there is a 20% chance that it is infected. If so, the PC must make a DC 20 Fortitude save or suffer the effects of mummy rot.

If the wights were alerted to the PCs coming they all stand ready with nets in hands.

Treasure: Besides those found on the wights, there are 3 whips and 9 nets in this Room, all newly repaired and ready to use. Each time a PC touches any one of these weapons there is a 20% chance that it is infected. If so, he must make a DC 20 Fortitude save to avoid becoming exposed to mummy rot, just as if the weapon had struck him.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, make one of the wights manually trigger a burnt orthur fumes trap. To decrease the challenge, remove eight wights.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N59. THE GREAT DEATH'S FOREST

It seems like a child has etched the ebon walls of this chamber, creating a primitive life-sized depiction of a dense forest. Amidst the crooked boughs of the walls, right in the center of the room, a mob of growling corpses savagely kicks at a fallen skeleton.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: As is apparent in several nearby Rooms, the Great Death imagines itself the ruler of an extensive empire. To better realize his delusion, he ordered the specific sculpting of several areas within its realm. This Room, sculpted by the crude hands of skeletons and zombies, recreates (just barely) the feel of a forest glen.

As the PCs enter, a group of wight hunters (hp 52 each), just back from a failed incursion into the surrounding halls, came across a toiling skeleton (hp 3). They circle the helpless creature and vent their rage out upon it. Intent on beating their prey, the wights suffer a -8 circumstance penalty to all Listen and Spot checks.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Once they notice the PCs, the wights set upon them using their claws. The wights are uncoordinated and merely attack the closest PC, ignoring any strategic notions.

The skeleton joins the battle as soon as the wights stop kicking it. It has the same statistics as a typical human skeleton, but it can move only 5 ft. per round, since its legs are shattered.

The undead continue attacking in this manner until all but two have fallen. The remaining undead then escape to Room N58 or N60 (whichever has not been cleared by the PCs) to alert the guards.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of wights present. To decrease the challenge, remove four of them.

N60. THE GREAT DEATH'S EASTERN GATE

The door leading to Room N89 is never used and sticks in its frame, making it close to impossible to open. A DC 28 Strength check is required to bypass it.

A pile of filthy white cloth is heaped in the center of this hall. A dozen feral gray skinned corpses run the cloth through the hollow eye sockets and snarling jaws of skulls and then knot the strips into crude ropes, nets, and whips.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Like the north gate (Room N58), this Room is both a guard post and a workhouse for the Great Death's wight hunters. Filled with heaps of filthy burial shrouds collected throughout the tomb, the wights work on knotting the cloth into nets and whips.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 20%, Fearless, Stagnant Air

Tactics: As soon as the wights notice the PCs, they ready their whips and nets. Half of them rush forward, attacking with their claws, while the other half uses their nets and whips from a distance. Once a PC is damaged by a whip or stuck under a net, there is a 20% chance that the weapon is infected with mummy rot. If so, the PC must make a DC 20 Fortitude save or the disease.

If these undead were alerted to the PCs' arrival, give them an automatic round of surprise.

Treasure: Besides those found on the bodies of the wights, there are 2 whips and four nets in this Room, new and ready to use. None of these weapons are infected with mummy rot.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the amount of wights present. To decrease the challenge, assume the PCs surprise the wights.

N61. STORAGE

Deep grooves were cut into the rock of this chamber, creating a series of shelves gashed into the original sculpted skulls decorating the wall. Lining the shelves are tools and equipment, all of which seem to be crudely made from splintered pieces of black stone and dirty cloth.

Initial Attitude: Friendly

Encounter: This is one of two storerooms meant to hold a variety of tools, which the Great Death's undead slaves need to exact their master's will. Cut through the sculpted skulls that were originally arrayed upon the walls of this Room, the shelves hold a wide variety of makeshift equipment, but nothing of any interest to the PCs.

Also in this Room is Vir, a crippled wight (hp 47) reduced to assuring the mindless undead are properly equipped for their various tasks. With only a bony shard extending from a rotted stump where its lower leg and foot should be, Vir is forced to constantly grip the walls or be reduced to crawling. As the wound prevents Vir from hunting (and makes the creature a target for beatings from the other wights) it was appointed the task of keeping this storeroom in proper order.

Vir is still a savage undead that would eagerly torment any weaker creature. When confronted by intelligent undead or the living, however, Vir is a coward, quick to prostrate before stronger creatures. The PCs are certainly the strongest creatures it has encountered in some time.

When the PCs enter, Vir begs for mercy and offers them any of the worthless items in the Room. In exchange, Vir asks them to promise not to harm him. Vir is also a great source of information, eagerly betraying the location of guard posts, stores, as well as the Great Death's court.

Despite all the help offered, Vir can be a significant nuisance. After the PCs leave the storeroom, Vir goes to Room N58, N60, and N64 to warn the guards about the PCs' presence. At his request, a wight hunting party is dispatched in the direction Vir says the PCs went. These wights follow the PCs at a distance and ambush them at the next opportune moment: preferably while the PCs are engaged in battle. Unless the PCs notice the wights stalking them, twelve wights arrive 1d4 rounds into the PCs' next battle.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Vir is virtually helpless alone. His wound reduces his movement to a mere 5 ft., but he is otherwise a normal advanced wight. If attacked, Vir begs for mercy, but fights until either the PCs stop or he is destroyed.

N62. THE GREAT DEATH'S ARMORY

This broad room is empty except for two large stacks of dirty fabric. One stack is elaborately knotted while the cloth in the other are tightly rolled. From the walls, row after row of fanged black skulls made of stone stare down.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room serves as the Great Death's armory. When the whips and nets its wights create from stolen burial shrouds are completed, they are placed here.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Currently there are 12 whips and 33 nets piled in this Room. Every time a PC touches one of these weapons, there is a 20% chance it is infected. If so, he must make a DC 20 Fortitude saving throw or become exposed to mummy rot.

N63. STORAGE

Slashing through the faces of dozens of sculpted skulls covering this tiny room's walls are deep grooves. Creating crude rows of shelves, these alcoves are covered with sharp rocks, rolled ropes of gray cloth, hammer shaped stones, and other crude tools.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like the other storeroom (Room N61), this Room holds the equipment used by the Great Death's undead servants to exact their master's will. From crude stone chisels and hammers to bits of rope, the tools are functional if a bit crude.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Unless the PCs have need for one of the seven chisels, four hammers, or six 10 ft. lengths of rope, there is nothing of any use in this Room.

N64. BAILIFFS' POST

Lining the upper rim of this room are dozens of monstrous sculpted skulls with protruding jaws. Several zombies are impaled on the extended stone jaws, twitching and jerking almost as if suffering.

Below them, two doorways filled with rusted bars face each other from opposite walls, while directly across is a large metal door. Upon this door is a crude etching of a black skeleton sitting upon a throne an ornate hammer in one hand.

Several feral corpses mill about the room. As they move about, they claw at the dangling zombies, their heads darting constantly towards door.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the entry chamber to the Great Death's court, where the creature's wight bailiffs (hp 56 each) and those soon to be sentenced await the call of their grim master. The human zombies (hp 16 each) hung upon the walls are those to be tried next, while the barred Rooms off of this one (Rooms N65 and N66) hold those involved in up-coming cases.

Every round the PCs spend in this Room, in Room N65, or Room N66, there is a 10% chance they hear a single loud bang issuing from the Great Death's court (Room N66). This is the sound of the Great Death's gavel as it meets out its verdict and calls for the next case to be presented. One round after the sound of the gavel, eight advanced wights (hp 56 each) enter this Room through the iron door leading to Room N66. They take one zombie off the wall with the help of the wights already in the Room, then drag it before their master (in Room N66). If the PCs are visible or the bodies of their allies lie scattered about the Room, half the wights rush back and alert their master while the others fight the PCs.

The doors leading to Rooms N65 and N66 are locked.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The wights attack as soon as they spot the PCs. At first, they use their nets, hoping to take the PCs prisoner and bring them before their master. If this fails, they fight savagely, using their claws. The wights have no intention of letting the PCs reach their master solo and fight until destroyed.

The zombies on the walls cannot move, but are nevertheless a threat. Any PC that comes within 5 ft. of any wall in this Room is attacked by one of the dangling undead. Unless the PC is specifically watching the zombies, the undead catches him flat-footed. These zombies should be considered when determining flanking bonuses.

Treasure: One of the wights in this Room holds keys unlocking the doors that lead to Rooms N65 and N66. If the PCs defeated the undead, anyone making a DC 22 Search check can uncover these keys, which are kept upon a chain under the wight's shirt.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of wights present. To decrease the challenge, assume the zombies upon the walls do not attack.

N65. CELL OF THE ACCUSED

The barred door leading into this Room is locked. A successful DC 50 Open Lock check or the proper key (found in Room N64) is required to open it, but what lies inside is clearly visible from Room N64.

A dozen zombies and skeletons, tied up with rags and cloth ropes, have been thrown into this small cell. Their mindless quivers and jerks look like enfeebled struggling.

Initial Attitude: Neutral

Encounter: This cell is the holding place for the queue of criminals to be tried in future sessions of the Great Death's court. Imprisoned like mock prisoners, these undead unwittingly await their fate. As their individual trials draw near, groups are taken from here by the wight bailiffs and hung upon the walls in Room N64.

The undead in this cell are all bound, lying prone and helpless on the floor. Unless they are cut loose, they do not pose the PCs even the slightest threat.

N66. CELL OF THE DAMNED

The door leading into this Room is locked and can only be opened with a successful DC 50 Open Lock check or the proper key (found in Room N64). Through the barred jail door, the PCs can see what awaits inside.

Hunched at the rear of this bleak room is a pair of large skeletal figures, eyes glowing with a green light. The creatures rise, causing their roiling entrails to fall from their ribcages and start dancing with a stomach-turning life of their own. The creatures hiss in voices that come as much from their mouths as the orifices of their bloated intestines.

Initial Attitude: Neutral

Encounter: These mohrg (hp 178 and 189) — Malchrisant and Ashril — are servants of the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss (Room N191). While performing duties on the fringes of the mummy's domain, these fiends were overwhelmed by the Great Death's wight hunters and brought here to stand trial. They know of the Great Death and its insane court, and fear its torturous verdict could mean their untimely destruction — a fate they do anything to avoid. Seeking only to return to their mistress, Malchrisant and Ashril see the PCs as their last best hope for escape.

In their present situation, the mohrgs offer the PCs anything they can think of to be escorted out of the Great Death's domain. Since the mohrgs have nothing of value, their most significant bartering chip is a promise to lead them, unharmed, to their mistress, who may know of a way for the living to escape from the accursed tomb. Though this seems like a valid possibility, the reality is that the mohrgs know Kasteoficiss will not aid the party merely out of his own sense of goodwill — and might even attempt to turn them to her service. Thus, through the PCs, not only will the mohrgs be able to make good their escape, but they may also deliver a group of mortal lackeys to their mistress.

Malchrisant and Ashril know little about the surrounding area, except for the most direct route to Kasteoficiss' realm and where the Great Death's court is located (Room N67). However, they know all of Kasteoficiss' domain and are willing to draw a map of the Section for the PCs, but only once they are safely out of the Great Death's realm.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Should the mohrgs' pleas be ignored, they attack the PCs and fight until destroyed. Once engaged in battle, they concentrate their attacks on a single PC in order to turn him into a mindless minion. If a way to escape presents itself, however, they do not hesitate to take it.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one mohrg and assume they attack the PCs after 5 rounds unless they agree to their terms. To decrease the challenge, have the mohrgs wounded (–30 hit points each).

▲ Malchrisant and Ashril, Mohrg: CR 13; Large undead; HD 28d12; hp 191, 183; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) or +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) and +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +9, Ref +15, Will +18; Str 31, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Currently, there is no accused present before the fearsome judge; merely the residual dust of thoroughly crushed bones. Four wight "bailiffs" (hp 52 each), twelve "witnesses/jurors" (hp 26 each) and one "scribe" (hp 37), as well as two ghost "barristers" (hp 66, 63), are also present, sitting in the benches of the Room.

This is an excellent opportunity for role-playing. The Great Death demands that the condemned be brought forth (by the bailiff) and that witnesses be brought forth to testify. There are no barristers, so the PCs must defend themselves against whatever maddened charge the judge comes up with.

If the PCs resist of course, the consequences are severe.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 9, Fear 30, Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 12

Tactics: As soon as the PCs enter this Room, all the undead are immediately aware of their presence. The wight bailiffs move as soon as they notice the PCs, rushing them and using their nets and claws to grapple or otherwise force them to move into the accused area in front of the Great Death. Any PC caught within a bailiff's net is taken by the wight witnesses and brought before the Great Death. Though these twelve witnesses do not immediately engage the PCs, they rush them as soon as the Great Death enters combat.

The wight scribe's job is to record every event in a thick leather-bound volume. The creature continues to do that while battle ensues, but defends itself if attacked. Ironically, the wraith's ghostly pen leaves no marks in the book and his near perfect memory must juggle hundreds of cases in order to recall writ and verse for the Great Death.

Meanwhile, the two ghost barristers remain behind the wight bailiffs, ready to bite any PCs that approach.

If it has not been attacked and entered the fray already, the Great Death imperiously calls for order three rounds after the wight bailiffs engage the PCs. If the fighting does not immediately stop and the PCs submit themselves before the Great Death for judgment, he steps from its throne and attacks. The fiend uses its gavel, targeting the most heavily armored opponents first and maneuvering to flank them. He does not brook this kind of disorder in his court and viciously punishes those who oppose him.

Because the Great Death does not understand his strengths, his attacks are chaotic. He might use mummy rot one round or an incorporeal drain. If the DM would rather roll, use the table below, but this battle is more interesting if the DM has some pattern (or lack thereof) in mind on how the battle resolves.

1d20	Attack
1–3	Slam—Mummy rot
4–9	Slam—Energy drain
10–11	+2 thundering warhammer (gavel)
12–17	Dominate
18–20	Death gaze

Treasure: Aside from its enchanted weapon and armor, the Great Death has a treasure trove tucked away in various corners of his chambers. Hundreds of years of sentencing has forced him to accumulate 4d6 mundane or superior items, 2d6 minor magic items, 1d6 medium magic items, and 2 major magic items. The DM is free to extrapolate or add to this list, but whatever we created would be as chaotic as rolling it up in a book.

EL: 20

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the Great Death sane during combat, finally where he belongs turning the living into nothing. To decrease the challenge, remove the witnesses.

N67. THE COURT OF THE GREAT DEATH

This great room is filled with mounds of carved stone and the dust of powdered bone. A clear path of dark stone in the center of the place is flanked by ebon rubble, shaped into crude rows of benches. This path leads to an open area at the chamber's opposite end, surrounded by more benches. At the area's center stands a podium, to which a broken and inanimate skeleton is attached, facing a dominating regent's chair.

Upon the fearsome throne sits a creature hidden by layers of blackened burial shrouds. The fiend's clawed skeletal hand grips the end of a massive gavel.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The creature on the throne is the crazed undead warlord that calls himself the Great Death (hp 125). While many of the Great Death's powers seldom work against undead, there was a time in his waking life when he fought arm in arm with and against the unliving. As a result, having vanquished undeath and consumed the hallow souls of the unliving, certain powers became his to wield. The creature who was known as Maleforr the Scourge in life now possess the rotting touch of a mummy, the maddened mind of an allip, the desecrating aura of a nightshade, the stench of a ghast, the dominating presence of a vampire, and the draining touch of undead spirits. He is, as his name implies, "the Great Death." But only mortals and wights too foolish to know better fear him.

It is fortunate for the entire world that he is too insane to know his limits.

▲ The Great Death, Bodak Destroyer: CR 18; Large undead (extraplanar); HD 26d12+52; hp 247; Init +6; Spd 20 ft.; AC 29; touch 11, flat-footed 27; Base Atk +13; Grp +24; Atk +24 melee (2d6+14/19–20, ×3, +2 thundering warhammer) or +21 melee (2d6+9 plus energy drain or mummy rot, slam); Full Atk +24/+19/+14 melee (2d6+14/19–20, ×3, +2 thundering warhammer) or +21 melee (2d6+9 plus energy drain or mummy rot, slam); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Death gaze, dominate, energy drain, mummy rot; SQ Damage reduction 10/cold iron, darkvision 60 ft., desecrating aura, immunity to cold and electricity, madness, resistance to acid 10 and fire 10, stench undead traits, vulnerability to sunlight; AL CE; SV Fort +10, Ref +12, Will +19; Str 25, Dex 13, Con —, Int 8, Wis 15, Cha 17.

Skills and Feats: Listen +33, Sense Motive +31, Spot +33; Alertness, Blind-Fight, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Critical (warhammer), Improved Initiative, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (warhammer).

Death Gaze (Su): Death, range 30 feet, Fortitude DC 26 negates. Humanoids who die from this attack are transformed into bodaks 24 hours later. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Dominant (Su): The great death can crush an opponent's will just by looking into his or her eyes. This is similar to a gaze attack, except that the great death must use a standard action, and those merely looking at it are not affected. Anyone the vampire targets must succeed on a Will save (DC 26) or fall instantly under the great death's influence as though by a dominate person spell (caster level 12th). The ability has a range of 30 ft.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by the great death slam attack gain one negative level, suffer 1 point of Constitution drain, and 1 point of Strength drain. The DC is 26 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the great death gains 5 temporary hit points.

The ability drain cannot be avoided.

Mummy Rot (Su): Supernatural disease—slam, Fortitude DC 16, incubation period 1 minute; damage 1d6 Con and 1d6 Cha. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Unlike normal diseases, mummy rot continues until the victim reaches Constitution 0 (and dies) or is cured as described below.

Mummy rot is a powerful curse, not a natural disease. A character attempting to cast any conjuration (healing) spell on a creature afflicted with mummy rot must succeed on a DC 20 caster level check, or the spell has no effect on the afflicted character.

To eliminate mummy rot, the curse must first be broken with break enchantment or remove curse (requiring a DC 20 caster level check for either spell), after which a caster level check is no longer necessary to cast healing spells on the victim, and the mummy rot can be magically cured as any normal disease.

An afflicted creature who dies of mummy rot shrivels away into sand and dust that blow away into nothing at the first sign of wind.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting the great death with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Desecrating Aura (Su): The great death give off a 20-ft. radius emanation of utter desecration, imbuing their surroundings with negative energy. This ability works much like a desecrate spell, except that the great death's evil is so great that it is treated as the shrine of an evil power. All undead within 20 ft. of the great death (including the creature itself) gain a +2 profane bonus on attack rolls, damage rolls, and saving throws, and +2 hit points per HD. (The great death's hit dice, attack, and save entries given here include these profane bonuses.)

Charisma checks made to turn undead within this area suffer a –6 penalty.

The great death's desecrating aura cannot be dispelled except by a dispel evil spell or similar effect. If the effect is dispelled, the great death can resume it as a free action on its next turn. Its desecrating aura is suppressed if the great death enters a consecrated or hallowed area, but the nightshade's presence also suppresses the consecrated or hallowed effect for as long as it remains in the area.

Stench (Ex): The stink of death and corruption surrounding the great death creatures is quite overwhelming. Living creatures within 10 ft. must succeed on a DC 26 Fortitude save or be sickened for 1d6+4 minutes. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the great death's stench for 24 hours. A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effect from a sickened creature. Creatures with immunity to poison are unaffected, and creatures resistant to poison receive their normal bonus on their saving throws. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Vulnerability to Sunlight (Ex): Bodaks loathe sunlight, for its merest touch burns their impure flesh. Each round of exposure to the direct rays of the sun deals 1 point of damage to the creature.

Possessions: +3 mithral shirt, +2 shocking burst warhammer.

▲ Bailiff, Driver Wight: CR 5; Medium undead; HD 8d12; hp 52; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 16, touch 12, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +4; Grp +5; Atk +5 melee touch (1d3+1 non-lethal plus energy drain, black lash) or +5 melee (entangle, net) or +5 melee (1d4+1 plus energy drain, slam); Full Atk +5 melee touch (1d3+1 non-lethal plus energy drain, black lash) or +5 melee (entangle, net) or +5 melee (1d4+1 plus energy drain, slam); SA Black lash, create spawn, energy drain; SQ darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL LE; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +7; Str 12, Dex 14, Con —, Int 11, Wis 13, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Hide +12, Listen +11, Move Silently +20, Spot +11; Alertness, Exotic Weapon Proficiency (net), Exotic Weapon Proficiency (whip), Blind-Fight.

Black Lash (Su): The driver wight's whip attack is a touch attack and will damage anyone regardless of their armor.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wight becomes a wight in 1d4 rounds. Spawn are under the command of the wight that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a driver wight's slam or whip attack gain one negative level. The DC is 16 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the wight gains 5 temporary hit points.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a ghast's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Even elves can be affected by this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Stench (Ex): The stink of death and corruption surrounding these creatures is overwhelming. Living creatures within 10 ft. must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or be sickened for 1d6+4 minutes. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same ghast's stench for 24 hours. A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effect from a sickened creature. Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N68. SOUTHERN HALL

This hall continues on endlessly. The plain black walls fade to a vanishing point in the distance in both directions and there's the hint of the infinite which is unsettling.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This hall is the main thoroughfare from the western end of this Region to the eastern end of the tomb. Though the most direct route, it is rarely traveled. Guarding this passage is a huge iron golem (hp 230) constructed by the tomb's celestial makers. Meant to guard their prison and segregate the undead, the creature attacks all non-celestial beings on sight.

It has been doing this for centuries and never tires. It is a testament to an internal endurance that mankind cannot fathom.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: The iron golem is a mindless automaton and attacks all non-celestial creatures it encounters. Tall and broad, the iron golem fills the majority of the passageway, making it impossible to dart around it. It is unwavering in its task and pursues PCs up to 120 ft. from this Room.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the hit points of the iron golem to 270. To decrease the challenge, reduce the hit points of the iron golem to 190.

Iron Golem: CR 15; Large construct; HD 24d10+30; hp 230; Init -1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 34, touch 8, flat-footed 34; Base Atk +18; Grp +36; Atk +31 melee (2d10+13, slam); Full Atk +31 melee (2d10+13, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon; SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 15/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +7, Will +8; Str 36, Dex 9, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d6+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con, Fortitude DC 19 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

For each point of initial Constitution damage dealt, the iron golem gains 5 temporary hit points.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

N69 THROUGH N110. VINNARA'S REALM

Rooms N69 through N110 are under the control of the Champion of Hell, a blackguard ghost named Vinnara. She is one of the most powerful and cunning undead warlords of the tomb. Her domain is guarded by nightmarish spectres and shadows dedicated to her cause. All corporeal undead that once dwelled in Vinnara's Realm have long since been eradicated or exiled to the Western Outer Halls. As such, the halls in this Section are commonly quite bare, except for the walls sculpted with horrors or the stray burial shrouds dancing in the gusts of the PCs' passage. Despite their abandoned appearances, Vinnara's eyes are everywhere and an empty Room does not guarantee unquiet souls do not haunt it.

Fearful of attacks from the domains of bordering warlords, Vinnara keeps strict patrols throughout her territory and maintains several curtains of guard posts between the borders of her realm and her inner command center. To represent the heightened security and organization of Vinnara's militaristic servants, the DM should roll for Random Encounters once every half hour the PCs spend in this realm.

Despite the fact that Vinnara could be interested in using the PCs in her war against the tomb's other warlords, her minions have orders to attack everything on sight. Even if a spectre escapes a battle with the PCs and alerts Vinnara of their presence, she does not order her servants to stand down. If the PCs are strong and pose a threat, they are weakened by the time they reach her. Only those who survive a brush with death are allowed an audience. If the PCs are capable, Vinnara tasks them to do her bidding and perhaps even aid her in bringing the entire Tomb of the Unliving under her control.

It should be important to note, Vinnara is the only undead creature who can move through the inner walls of the Region, a feat she has kept secret from even her most loyal followers. When the time comes, she intends to pay unsuspecting visits upon Inivists and Kasteoficiss.

Most Rooms in this Section are bleak and without light. The DM should use Deep Darkness generously throughout.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter every 30 minutes.

1d20	Encounter
1	A successful DC 22 Spot check allows the PCs to notice a wraith's glowing eyes veer through a nearby corner. This is one of Vinnara's scouts. Upon noticing the PCs, it reports back to its mistress.
2–11	Nothing.
12–16	A regular patrol of three dread wraiths comes across the party and attacks. They fight until destroyed.
17	The party comes across one of Vinnara's dread wraith fighting a mohrg servant of Kasteoficiss. If they are left to fight, whichever one wins attacks the PCs as soon as it spots them. If both undead are attacked, they forget their battle and engage the PCs instead.
18	A patrol of six dread wraiths chases a group of Death's hunters (12 wights) through the area. The wights flee, ignoring the PCs, but the wraiths turn to attack them.
19	The party encounters a sizable troop movement of Vinnara's forces, made up of 24 wraiths, 4 dread wraiths, and one advanced 20 HD dread wraith lieutenant. The wraiths engage the PCs and fight until they kill them or are destroyed themselves.
20	A visible pulse of negative energy throbs through the tomb. It extinguishes all non-magical sources of light and forces all creatures unprotected from such energy to make a DC 22 Fortitude save or suffer 3d8 points of damage. If the World Eater in Room N150 has been freed, ignore this encounter.

N69. HARVESTED CRYPT

Even in this place of eternal decay, this room seems especially deteriorated. The walls are lined with alcoves stacked all the way to the ceiling, which are covered by warped panes of broken glass. The surfaces of all walls, the floor, and the shattered glass panes are uneven and riddled with holes.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was once a crypt like those found in the Western Outer halls. It housed those who had committed particularly dreadful sins. Between Death's hunters to the south and Vinnara's practice of removing or destroying all corporeal undead, this Room's original inhabitants were destroyed long ago. Only the broken remnants of dozens of regal glass-covered alcove remain.

A potent trap, which releases jets of acid from the high ceiling, remains active to this day. This device is activated as soon as any corporeal being enters, showering everyone in the Room with a potent acid.

♣ Acid Trap: CR 16; mechanical device; location trigger; automatic reset; acid drops from ceiling (20d6 acid, DC 36 Reflex save half); multiple targets (all within the Room); never miss; Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 35.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the acid trap to 26d6. To decrease the challenge, reduce the Search and Disable Device DCs of the acid trap by -5.

N70. SHATTERED STATUARY

The doors to this Room are magically sealed and radiate unholy energy. Opening them requires knock or dispel magic and a DC 22 caster level check. Lawful good clerics casting consecrate are allowed a DC 20 caster level check to open these doors.

Dozens of figures form a tight circle in the center of this alcove-lined room. Each crafted of the same ebony stone as the walls, these statues are covered in featureless sculpted armor. Unfortunately, what the figures represent or what they are doing in this forsaken place is now forever lost, as most of the sculptures have been destroyed. Upon the floor lie crushed ebony weapons, broken limbs, and desecrated stone heads that were undoubtedly once part and parcel of the decor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was once a crypt housing the remains of fallen knights. The corpses its alcoves held have long since been removed or destroyed. Though few realize it, Vinnara herself was originally entombed in this very Room. After battling and destroying her crypt-mates, her body was reduced to dust, as she absorbed the unholy energy from dozens of other fallen knights. This energy fuels her to this day, and now she seeks to fuel herself only with the strongest warriors she can find.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 10, [Safe]

Tactics: During those battles, Vinnara defiled the statues of noble figures standing in this Room and vowed never to set foot in this place again. Because of this promise, this is the only Room which the PCs are safe from Vinnara. Her servants, however, have no qualms about entering.

N71. DUST HALL

A whirling white form rises up in a cloud of swirling mist as soon as anyone enters this room, forming a semi-transparent and alien shape.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room has been empty for centuries. All that remains is a single white burial shroud and ages upon ages of dust. As the PCs enter, their movement disturbs the dust and sets the light shroud floating into the air. This shroud is perfectly mundane. PCs succeeding at a DC 35 Spot check realize this fact, but those who fail this save might easily believe the shroud is actually a ghost.

N72. FONT OF THE FALLEN PRIESTS

The alcoves that line the walls of this room were set vertically with ornately sculpted dividers, mimicking the alcoves of a priestly loft. Though no bodies fill in the shadowy spaces any longer, these alcoves face a single pedestal at the room's center. From within the chamber comes the sound of lapping water and a recognizably bestial scent.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Originally a crypt where false priests were entombed, Vinnara's wraiths and The Great Death's hunters have long since destroyed or removed all the corporeal undead imprisoned within this Room. Nonetheless, there is a vile corruptive force at work in this Room and if the PCs remain too long they will certainly feel it.

A defiled font stands at the Room's center, covered in blood, ichor, and sepsis. Inside, an eternally gurgling spring of blood washes over bones and mummified hands.

Encounter Condition: Fear 18, Haunted, Unhallowed 12

Tactics: If the PCs remain in this Room for 30 minutes or longer — or drink the blood (for whatever reason) — they must succeed at a DC 24 Will save or have their alignment shift one step closer to neutral evil. PCs that are already neutral evil, lose 2 points of Charisma permanently (cannot be restored by any means) and gain 2 points of Wisdom and the Toughness trait.

In addition, PCs receive vile images of ghastly priests committing atrocities against the gods. Their malignant nature still pulling on the will of the living.

Treasure: As a bonus, anyone drinking from the font, whether they succeed at the Will save or not, are bestowed with restoration, as cast by a 12th-level evil cleric. Lawful good PCs suffer a -4 circumstance penalty to the Will saves to resist the blood's taint.

N73. CRYPT OF THE PRIME LICH

The door to this Room is off its hinges, apparently from the inside. Untriggered holy glyphs can easily be spotted on the floor, in front of the door.

The walls of this chamber were crafted to resemble arcane symbols, magical equipment, and alchemical devices. Sculpted in relief on the walls and floor, stone tubes lead from the edge of the room to a bier at the room's center. However, all that lies upon the intricately worked platform are the shattered remains of a green glass coffin.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is one of several Rooms constructed by the tomh's celestial creators to house the great defilers and criminals of an age now long past. This particular Room was once the crypt of a powerful necromancer who became known as Invistis, the Prime Lich. Charged with the discovery and use of the secrets of lichdom, Invistis was imprisoned here, supposedly forever. Over the centuries, the wards binding the powerful lich degenerated and his magic eventually freed him. Fortunately, the Prime Lich did not linger in this grim crypt and now lairs elsewhere in this Region.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: A single clay jar rests in a corner on a bed of straw. The jar looks meticulously crafted, but has cracked open, from the inside. Unholy rune are inscribed on the lid and bottom, apparently drawn in blood over holy runes and sigils to hold the jar closed.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N74. CRYPT OF THE BLACK EMPRESS

The door to this Room is locked and trapped. Large holy sigils and runes decorate the door, declaring that none should venture here. PCs succeeding at a DC 50 Open Lock check, must still bypass the two traps on the door.

♦ Dictum Trap: CR 8; magic device; proximity trigger (detect chaos); automatic reset; spell effect (dictum, 18th-level cleric); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

♦ Wail of the Banshee Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (wail of the banshee, 18th-level wizard, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); multiple targets (up to 17 creatures); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

This room is thick with pervasive mustiness, but unlike the dead dry dust of the other halls, the air in this chamber is alive. Through a haze, the walls glimmer with green tubes and gold runes scattered among the sculptures of rotting skulls frozen in fear. All of the decorations face towards the rear of the hall, where a green glass tomb stands erect. Inside is a shrunken black corpse, pierced by dozens of tubes and alchemical devices. In a mock semblance of life, the dead thing's chest rises and falls, as if breathing.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Any PCs that read Celestial discern from the runes that this is the private prison of the Black Empress, Rastara. Along with the name, centuries of crimes are etched between the walls' sculptures and tubing. A religious zealot of a decadent demon prince, Rastara and her cultists subjugated a land and began a genocidal war that lasted for centuries. While she failed in her mission, her body was laid to rest along with all other mass murderers and tyrants. Her and Invistis' tombs faced one another, powerful runes binding them to their home.

Before her death, she place her own heart in a warded jar, beginning the ritual of becoming a lich. However, before she could complete the ceremony, the celestials banished her to this tomb, facing Invistis' own, where lichdom would remain beyond her grasp forever.

The Black Empress Rastara is still sealed in a prison of divine magic and warped alchemical toxins. While not a lich, she is among the most powerful wights in the dungeon. Though Vinnara drove away all corporeal creatures from her realm, she made an exception with Rastara. During her lifetime, Vinnara had heard of the Black Empress' exceptionally vile deeds and came to respect her greatly. When she discovered this tomb within the borders of her territory, Vinnara honored Rastara's memory by leaving her in peace. Besides, as long as she remains imprisoned, Rastara poses no threat to Vinnara's rule. [Who is to say is she could actually defeat her if she broke the wards?]

Though Vinnara drove away all corporeal creatures from her realm, she made an exception with Rastara. During her lifetime, Vinnara had heard of the Black Empress' exceptionally vile deeds, and came to respect her. When she discovered her tomb within the borders of the territory, Vinnara decided to honor Rastara's memory. Besides, for as long as she remains imprisoned, Rastara poses no threat to her rule.

If the PCs leave the Black Empress' tomb alone, they find no threat in this Room. However, if the glass of the coffin is broken, the Black Empress awakens. Confused and full of crazed hatred, she bursts from her crypt and attacks her liberators.

Opening glass coffin requires a series of five separate dispel magic spells to unlock the wards guarding her and finally a flaming weapon of some kind, held by lawful good PC, must touch the glass. Otherwise, the PCs must destroy the glass through more direct means. A DC 40 Spellcraft check reveals how to break open the coffin, while a DC 30 Spellcraft only reveals that the coffin is guarded and requires special methods to break open.

☞ Glass Coffin: Hardness 20, hp 500, break DC 100, spell resistance 20.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Having slept since the creation of the tomb, the Black Empress knows nothing of the dungeon's inhabitants and layout, or even what has happened to her. In fact, these things matter little as her mind has degraded over the centuries, turning her into little more than a feral beast. If freed, she cannot be reasoned with. In fact, she does not speak except in bestial snarls. She attacks the PC closest to her tomb and concentrates her attacks on him, only relenting if another PC attempts to turn or rebuke her, in which case she attacks this PC instead (assuming the turn or rebuke attempt did not render her unable to).

Every round, as a free action, she may make a DC 24 Will save in order to (think to) use her orb of storms against the PC, unleashing a storm of vengeance the first chance she gets. If she ever rolls a natural '1' or '2' on this Will save, she smashes the orb against the nearest wall, releasing 4,000 years of pent-up magic.

Use your imagination.

Otherwise, the Room is thrown into chaos as an uncontrolled storm of vengeance (caster level 18th) ravages the Room and surrounding area. All the effects last twice as long, but still trigger on the appropriate rounds, overlapping with one another. While the storm rages, a chain lightning targets a random character in the Room every round.

Treasure: The only valuables in this Room are the enchanted items carried by the Black Empress and the ruby-studded golden crown she wears (worth 2,000 gp).

N75. WEST GUARD HALL

This vast hall is partially obscured by darkness. A thick blanket of dust cloaks the floor. The high walls stretch to a ceiling hidden somewhere by midnight blackness, but just above floor level are stacks of burial alcoves. Where there should be hundreds of bodies, however, the alcoves are filled with only dust and a stray fragments of splintered bone.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This vast hall has been cleared of all corporeal undead by Vinnara's legions and the southernmost portion of it was turned into a guard post. Hidden within the walls' alcoves and darkened ceiling, four soundless dread wraiths (hp 111, 108, 103, 101) lurk, prepared for any incursion. Due to their constant state of high alert and the persistent darkness, the dread wraiths are hiding and benefit from a +20 circumstance bonus to their Hide checks.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness)

N76. EAST GUARD HALL

This broad hall sinks into complete darkness. The high walls are filled with burial alcoves, but in each rests only piles of dust and bone fragments. Near the center of the hall is what looks to be a tall pile of shattered bones, constructed of at least a hundred yellow skeletons. More bones litter the floor as if a great massacre occurred in this chamber long ago.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This hall, like many in the Western Outer Halls, was used to imprison those criminals that had committed a specific sin or were controlled by a certain vice. However, between Vinnara's followers and Death's servants, it has since been cleared of all corporeal undead. When Death's wights originally attacked the creatures in this hall, the resident skeletons put up a considerable fight before succumbing to the more powerful undead. The remains of those dead stand in a grim pile at the Room's center.

When this hall came under the control of Vinnara and her minions it became a guard post, perpetually manned by five dread wraiths (hp 117, 109, 105, 101, 101). In the centuries since they have held this Room, the wraiths have felt no need to disturb the bones, which serve as a grim warning to Death's hunters — who, as a result, give this Room a wide berth.

Constantly on the alert for intruders, the dread wraiths are hiding in the shadows of the darkened ceiling and within the walls' alcoves. The wraiths gain a +20 circumstance bonus to their Hide checks as long as they do not move from their positions.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment

Tactics: A well-organized unit, the dread wraith guards are eager to engage the PCs the minute they enter. Operating like the centuries-old military unit they are, they soundlessly surround the PCs. Four wraiths attack from different directions while the fifth descends from the ceiling in the middle of the PCs, flanking them all. The dread wraiths gain a surprise round (if possible), then maneuver to benefit from flanking bonuses throughout the rest of the melee. As much as possible, each wraith focuses its attention on a separate PC, only coordinating their attacks once they have determined which PC is the greatest threat (either physically or magically). Then, three concentrate on this PC until he is defeated.

The dread wraiths fight until only one remains. This final wraith retreats to Vinnara to inform her of the PCs' presence.

N77. THE CRYPT OF SAINT AZAMOND

The door to this Room is locked and trapped. Large holy sigils are evidence that no one should enter this Room. PCs succeeding at a DC 50 Open Lock check, must still bypass the two traps on the door.

A sulfurous heat basking in a hellish glow warms this chamber nicely. The walls of the small crypt were sculpted to represent huge screaming faces with mouths agape with horror. These visages are posed as if trying to turn away, but trapped by the horrid construction. At the center of the chamber, were a dozen large and fearful eyes look on in despair, is a pyramid of red glass that stands about chest level. Within is a horned figure that seems to be engulfed in flames, sitting serenely like a meditating monk.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: Though it is not marked anywhere in the Room, this is the crypt of the creature once known as Saint Azamond (hp 158). Supposedly the offspring of a petty tyrant and one of the lords of Hell, Azamond was trapped within the tomb for countless crimes against the gods and the natural order. Since his imprisonment, he has been left to dwell, forever alone, within a magical ward in a cramped crypt.

Like the tomb in Room N74, a barrier holds Azamond under enchanted glass. Should the glass be broken, a supernatural delayed blast fireball — cast by a 20th-level wizard — erupts from the pyramid, affecting all creatures within range (except for Azamond). Once the fire has dissipated, Azamond awakens and steps from his centuries-old prison.

Breaking the glass coffin requires a series of five separate dispel magic spells to unlock the wards guarding her and finally a flaming weapon of some kind, held by lawful good PC, must break the glass. Beyond that, the PCs must destroy the glass through more direct means. A DC 40 Spellcraft check reveals how to break open the coffin, while a DC 30 Spellcraft only reveals that the coffin is guarded and requires special methods to break open.

Azamond appears much like a stereotypical devil, with short black horns sweeping back from a handsome, but red tinged face. He is devilishly charming and politely asks the PCs where he is. While he inspects the structure of his crypt he allows the PCs to ask him a few questions, but answers them only in the most off-handed fashion. After he tires of this Room and the PCs, he simply walks out and explores the rest of the tomb.

Though not initially a threat, Azamond is the ultimate wildcard. After he is freed, he can show up anywhere and make any number of alliances. At first, he wants to test the seals that binds him to the tomb, but after that is done he sets about making himself the Tomb of the Unliving's newest, and perhaps deadliest, warlord.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 15, Distracting Visions 8, Haunted, Negative Energy, Spell Resistance 15, Unhallowed 18

Tactics: Saint Azamond is curt with the PCs, but not hostile, as long as they do not bar his way or become too demanding. If the PCs wear on his patience, he thinks nothing of using his monk abilities and potent clerical magic to destroy them.

He initially tries to incapacitate and weaken his foes, but does not hesitate to kill an immobilized opponent if it suits his plans. If a PC has been particularly offensive, he performs a brutal murder. He stops fighting if the PCs withdraw or stand down for a round. Azamond does not fight to the death and flees by any method available if reduced to less than 50 hit points.

In combat he uses his most destructive powers first, leveling warriors and paladins who hope to challenge him man-to-man. Spellcasters that drop fire or other powerful magic on him, drawn spells like insect plague and flame strike before he casts spell resistance and adds to the overall protectiveness of the Room. If forced into melee, he casts righteous might and the uses flurry of blows to paralyze his opponent.

Don't let the PCs off easy. Cornering a lich can be too easy an encounter if it isn't handled correctly. If necessary, have him wake with the equivalent of stoneskin (placed there by the celestials before he was entombed).

Creatures of less than 5 HD in a 60-ft. radius that look at the lich must succeed on a Will save (DC 20) or be affected as though by a fear spell from a sorcerer of the lich's level. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same lich's aura for 24 hours.

The effect cannot be dispelled. Anyone paralyzed by a lich seems dead, though a DC 20 Spot check or a DC 15 Heal check reveals that the victim is still alive.

N78. CRYPT OF THE FORGOTTEN ONE

The door to this Room is locked and trapped. Large holy sigils are evidence that no one should enter this Room. PCs succeeding at a DC 50 Open Lock check, must still bypass the two traps on the door.

The walls of this room are completely bare and perhaps a shade lighter than elsewhere in the tomb. At the center of this crypt is a depressing-looking stone bier, now thick with dust.

Initial Attitude: Varies

Encounter: This Room once held an undead being called the Forgotten One. It seems that even the gods were not sure where this faceless evil originated from; only that it should never have been set free upon the mortal world. When the angels created the Tomb of the Unliving, the Forgotten One was placed in stasis in this crypt, but even the power of the celestials could not force it to rest for long. Upon awakening, the living corpse rose and soon came across the crypt of the Black Empress (Room N74). Reading of the ancient tyrant's horrible past, the Forgotten One adopted it as its own and became the Black Empress. It has since then created a new identity for itself, extrapolating upon the original's history of atrocities.

Maddened by the centuries, the Forgotten One has lost its sense of purpose. It remains in this chamber, hides in the shadow of the high ceiling. Even if a creature were to enter its lair, the Forgotten One may appear as a shadow and simply remain hidden until they leave. PCs entering this Room should roll on the following chart to see the Forgotten One's condition.

1d20	Condition
1–4	Suffering from hysteria and memories that do not mesh, the Forgotten One strikes. It rages as a barbarian. Ambush (darkness), Fearless.
5–10	The Forgotten one remains hidden, gaining a +10 bonus to Hide checks.
11–12	From the shadows, she attempts to turn the PCs as though they were undead.
13–18	The Forgotten one casts harm (and other inflict spells) from hiding.
19	The Forgotten one drops from the ceiling and threatens to destroy the PCs with powerful death magic (including powers she does not have).
20	The Forgotten one welcomes the PCs to its lair, seducing them with whatever charms its can muster.

Encounter Condition: Varies

Tactics: The Forgotten One is a crazed but extremely powerful ghost that now believes it is the incarnation of the Black Empress. It keeps to itself and does not bother Vinnara or her incorporeal servants.

If a battle erupts, the Forgotten One swoops down upon the PCs. On the first round of battle, it moans loud and incomprehensible babble, using a combination of its frightful noises and horrific appearance abilities against the PCs. It then descends upon its foes and uses its malevolence ability to merge its body with the strongest looking female PC (or the strongest looking male warrior if there are no females in the group). Once engaged in battle, the Forgotten One fights until destroyed, using its corrupting touch and divine spells against all who would face it.

Draining Touch (Su): A ghost that hits a living target with its incorporeal touch attack drains 1d4 points from any one ability score it selects. On each such successful attack, the ghost heals 5 points of damage to itself. Against ethereal opponents, it adds its Strength modifier to attack rolls only. Against nonethereal opponents, it adds its Dexterity modifier to attack rolls only.

Malevolence (Su): Once per round, an ethereal ghost can merge its body with a creature on the Material Plane. This ability is similar to a magic jar spell (caster level 18th), except that it does not require a receptacle. To use this ability, the ghost must be manifested and it must try move into the target's space; moving into the target's space to use the malevolence ability does not provoke attacks of opportunity. The target can resist the attack with a successful Will save (DC 18). A creature that successfully saves is immune to that same ghost's malevolence for 24 hours, and the ghost cannot enter the target's space. If the save fails, the ghost vanishes into the target's body.

Manifestation (Su): A ghost dwells on the Ethereal Plane and, as an ethereal creature, it cannot affect or be affected by anything in the material world. When a ghost manifests, it partly enters the Material Plane and becomes visible but incorporeal on the Material Plane. A manifested ghost can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, magic weapons, or spells, with a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. A manifested ghost can pass through solid objects at will, and its own attacks pass through armor. A manifested ghost always moves silently. A manifested ghost can strike with its touch attack or with a ghost touch weapon (see Ghostly Equipment, below). A manifested ghost remains partially on the Ethereal Plane, where it is not incorporeal. A manifested ghost can be attacked by opponents on either the Material Plane or the Ethereal Plane. The ghost's incorporeality helps protect it from foes on the Material Plane, but not from foes on the Ethereal Plane.

When a spellcasting ghost is not manifested and is on the Ethereal Plane, its spells cannot affect targets on the Material Plane, but they work normally against ethereal targets. When a spellcasting ghost manifests, its spells continue to affect ethereal targets and can affect targets on the Material Plane normally unless the spells rely on touch. A manifested ghost's touch spells do not work on non-ethereal targets. A ghost has two home planes, the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane. It is not considered extraplanar when on either of these planes.

Rejuvenation (Su): In most cases, it's difficult to destroy a ghost through simple combat: The "destroyed" spirit will often restore itself in 2d4 days. Even the most powerful spells are usually only temporary solutions. A ghost that would otherwise be destroyed returns to its old haunts with a successful level check (1d20 + ghost's HD) against DC 16. As a rule, the only way to get rid of a ghost for sure is to determine the reason for its existence and set right whatever prevents it from resting in peace. The exact means varies with each spirit and may require a good deal of research.

N79. GUARD POST

This hall was constructed to resemble a regal antechamber. Though the walls are the same nightmarish black as elsewhere in the tomb, a fountain-like sculpture was set at the room's center. No water spills over its sides or sprays from its faucets.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room was built to be an antechamber of sorts; an entry hall leading to the personal tombs of so many great evil beings, but the fountain-shaped sculpture was never functional.

Despite the poignant purposeful design of this Room, Vinnara turned it to a more pragmatic one. Being a potential crossroads from several directions, she set a patrol of four dread wraiths (hp 112, 107, 104, 102) here to constantly guard the Section against intruders. They are particularly cautious against wights and living creatures.

Ever on alert, these fiends hide within the dark chamber, gaining a +10 circumstance bonus to their Hide checks.

Encounter Condition: [Ambush (darkness)]

Tactics: If the PCs arrive from the south, the dread wraiths are ready for them and ambush from the shadows. In any case, they are eager to meet living opponents in combat and, as soon as the party enters, all four charge out from the westernmost part of the Room to attack. The wraiths fight whichever PCs seem most vulnerable or close to them. Once engaged, they fight this PC until they destroy him.

After 2d6 rounds of fighting, allow the wraiths in Room N80 Listen checks to overhear the commotion. They suffer a –6 circumstance penalty to the check due to the design of the walls, unless of course, the doors between the two Rooms are open.

The dread wraiths fight until only one remains. This last wraith attempts to retreat to report back to Vinnara, telling her of the PCs presences and what abilities it has witnessed.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N80. TEMPLE OF THE GOD OF SLAUGHTER

This wide hall is filled with sculpted skulls, circling out in a macabre starburst initiated from one huge skull on the opposite wall. This horrific sculpture has its head thrown back in partial exaltation as the smaller skulls stream from it across the stonework, and its teeth are filed to cannibal points. It looks as though the massive, monstrous visage's eyes are flickering with a life of their own.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Created by Vinnara to revere the bloody god that she championed in life, this is the chapel of her army, dedicated to the god of slaughter. Though the undead are less than devout, this Room is maintained and treated with the sanctity that befits a shrine to the dark gods. One of Vinnara's lieutenants, a powerful dread wraith (hp 213), and a small host of acolyte wraiths (hp 65 each) constantly maintain the temple. These creatures see the PCs as defilers and invaders. They attack them on sight.

In addition, this Room is under the effect of unhallow, giving a bonus to the undead's attack rolls and hit points.

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 16

Tactics: The wraiths are not hiding and attack the PCs as soon as they see them. The acolyte wraiths charge the closest PCs and gang up on them while the dread wraith lieutenant targets PCs who bear the symbol of a god other than the god of slaughter.

After 2d6 rounds of fighting, allow the dread wraiths in Room N79 Listen checks to overhear the commotion. They suffer a -6 circumstance penalty to the check due to the design of the walls, unless of course, the doors between the two Rooms are open.

The wraiths fight to the death defending the temple, but Vinnara's lieutenant flees if reduced to less than half of its total hit points. It attempts to report back to Vinnara and alert her of the PCs presence.

N81. ASHES OF THE DEAD

What look like dozens of stone drawers fill the walls of this small room, reaching to a low ceiling just out of arm's reach. The scent of dust and ash fills the chamber, making it close to impossible to breathe.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Many of the truly crazed who are imprisoned within the tomb fought until their very bodies were destroyed. This mattered little to their celestial captors, who cremated their spiteful bodies, entombed their ashes, and left their souls to wander the halls of their tomb in aimless madness. It is from this Room and others like it that many of the wraiths and allips that wander the halls of this Region have their bodily remains stored.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: Searching the stone drawers in this chamber, the PCs find only chalky, gray ash. If this ash is applied to their arms and armor, they gain a +4 profane bonus to AC and damage rolls against all the incorporeal creatures in this Section (except Vinnara). In addition, the mischance for being incorporeal reduces to 25%.

N82. GHASTLY REMAINS FORGED FROM EVIL

A wide circle of darkened stone dominates the center of this small chamber. A closer look reveals runes carved into the blackened floor. The charred remains of what looks like a human lie heaped upon the runes.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room once housed a powerful forge that Vinnar used to burn the remains of destroyed creatures. Though it has been a long time since it has seen any use, the magical writings upon the floor can still be activated. PCs who study the runes for at least ten minutes and who succeed at a DC 40 Spellcraft check uncover how to activate the forge. Failing this check by more than 5 means that the PCs know how to activate the rune, but they do not clearly understand what they are about to do (or they believe the magical writing will have an entirely different effect). Activating this magical device takes 10 minutes. At the end of this period, hot flames appear in the center of the Room, forming what looks like a massive column of glowing fire. Once activated, the magical incinerator burns as a maximized wall of fire cast by a 12th-level wizard. It remains active for one full month. Anyone passing through the flames suffer 32 points of fire damage each round, while creatures within the Room suffer 8 points of fire damage each round.

N83. FORGED FROM SPITE

A pillar of sparkling bluish flames rise in the heart of this small chamber. The heat from the unnatural fire can be sensed as soon as the door of this room is opened.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room, identical to Room N82, holds a magical forge, which burns eternally. A closer look inside reveals a multitude of runes forming a circle upon the stone floor around the column of hot flames. A successful DC 40 Spellcraft check reveals not only that the runes generate the magic fire, but also that this magical device could be stopped once. The runes, however, are now damaged and the fire burns forever. The flames burn as a permanent maximized wall of fire, as cast by a 12th-level wizard.

Anyone entering this chamber suffers 8 points of fire damage each round. Those attempting to pass through the flames suffer 32 points of fire damage.

N84. SACKED BURIAL CHAMBER

The walls of this confined chamber are inset with heavy stone drawers. Two dozen of them take up the majority of the far wall, but all are opened and empty. The air of the room is thick and dry, and a layer of undisturbed ash covers the entire floor. A blanket, something obviously stored beneath it, lays in a corner.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Centuries ago this Room was guarded by magical traps, but the remains of the dead have fled from it and the magic dissipated. Nothing remains, save for a blanket and the body of a dwarven thief that never raised as undead remains.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The dwarf is among the last of a group of treasure seekers who looted the tomb decades ago. This one was killed in his sleep, still clutching a holy symbol in his hand. It is unclear what killed him, but whatever did, turned both his body and his gold coins black.

Treasure: PCs searching the body uncover an undamaged mirror ring of spell storing (with magic missile), a bent holy symbol, and 51 blackened gp.

N85. CRYPT OF THE ASHEN WRAITH

The door to this Room has been broken off its hinges, from the inside.

The walls of this chamber were sculpted to resemble an ocean of blood flowing down in great clots. At the center of the small crypt lies a single stone funeral bier, sculpted as twin stone claws reaching up from the dusty floor. Where there should be a body, however, there is only the center of a great ashen blast ring that scorched every surface of the chamber.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Vinnara was not the first warlord to control this Section of the tomb. Fighting and defeating a powerful dread wraith for control of not only the Region but also a large portion of his followers, Vinnara claimed her realm by laying her enemy in its very crypt. Now, only scorch marks remain of that epic battle.

Encounter: This Room is harmless to all good living creatures. The rune on the floor is a symbol in the Celestial language, which means "Repent". Any creatures (living or otherwise) of evil alignment that pass through the Room must make a DC 36 Fortitude save or suffer from a burst of positive energy that instantly reduces their hit points to half.

Living creatures that even so much as step within 10 ft. of the wall instantly suffer 20d8 points of damage from negative energy as the potent essence washes over them. In the same round, the black wall moves through the Room, affecting everyone within, before disappearing. A successful DC 38 Fortitude save reduces the amount dealt by the magical wall in half.

N88. ASHES TO ASHES

This room holds nothing but four featureless walls and a waist-high pile of ancient dust. The dust is an unusual dull shade of black. An unholy energy bathes everything as the light fades around you. On the north wall, a door with unholy sigils burnt into its surface, beckons.

Initial Attitude: Neutral

Encounter: Like so many others that wasted their bodies fighting against the celestials that would imprison them, one entire cult raged against the heavenly captors but was eventually struck down. The combined ashes of the cult's members rest in an undisturbed pile in the center of this Room.

The cult members still haunt the ashes that once made up their bodies. PCs moving through this Room automatically disturb the fragile ashes unless they succeed at a DC 22 Dexterity check. Anyone disturbing the ashes stirs up an allip horde (hp 390) and enough dust to reduce normal vision in this Room to 5 ft. Beyond this range, PCs are considered blinded.

Encounter Condition: Fog 5, Smoke, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: The allips only attack if their remains are disturbed. Once they are, the undead strike in a manner befitting the crazed dead, completely randomly and without tactics. The allips fight until destroyed, all the while moaning disquieting babble.

Treasure: The door on the north wall is a false door, that is still locked. The sigils are harmless, burned there by allips maddened by the uselessness of their hands.

A DC 40 Open Lock check unlocks the door, revealing a wall of red-black bricks, different from the stones of the dungeon. A DC 30 Search check reveals a series of four loose stones with little to no mortar between them. If removed with DC 14 Strength check, the PCs find a niche where a series of clay jars are stored.

The clay jars are now empty, but once held the souls of liches and mummies buried in the Region. The DM may wish to make these part of a bigger story or bargaining chips against Invistis and Kasteoficiss. Alternately, they can be of some use to Vinnara or the newly awakened Saint Azamond (Room N77).

Lastly, they could be sanctified and prepared soul jars, for powerful PCs who wish to unlock the rites of immortality.

N89. SOUTHERN MUSTERING GROUND

This massive hall seems unusually dark. A closer look reveals deep shadows that turn, twist, and rise by themselves. Nasty red eyes dot the shadows, which are clearly imbued with unlife.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Vinnara keeps a sizable garrison of her lesser soldiers mustered in this great hall at all times, in case she needs to deploy her forces swiftly. Unless the PCs are somehow using magic to pass unseen, the wraiths (hp 65 each), dread wraiths (hp 104 each), and dread wraith lieutenants (hp 172, 163) in this Room attack as soon as they enter.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Sensing the living, the lesser wraiths' only thoughts are to take out their hatred on the PCs. Meanwhile, the dread wraiths concentrate their attacks on the most heavily armed PCs, cunningly maneuvering to flank their enemies. While the rest of their forces attack, the lieutenants concentrate their strikes on the spellcasters, combining their efforts with any wraith already engaged with them. N90. BROKEN HALLS

The central wall dividing the two crypts making this room has fallen. Long ago, its ebon rock crumbled like so much dried clay, thus forming a small and uneven corridor connecting the two burial chambers. Several sculpted stone skulls peer sorrowfully from the rubble.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Powerful negative energy waves emanating from the The World Eater (Room N159) eventually crumbled the wall. Any PC making a DC 24 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check determines the strength of the stone has been unnaturally drained away, much like the rubble the PC saw strewn outside the tomb. It is perfectly safe to navigate between the two crypts, however, as most of the stone has already fallen.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: The power of the Negative Energy Encounter Condition is twice as potent as normal in this Room.

N91. DEAD BONES

From the black walls of this chamber, dozens of demonic busts sneer and smile down from above empty burial alcoves. Four gray skeletons also lie, unmoving, upon the dusty floor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A patrol of Vinnara's guards caught a group of Death's wight hunters scouring this area a few years ago. The remains of that brief battle still linger in this Room. Any PC that makes a DC 24 Heal check can determine that all life has been forcibly stripped from the bones, a DC 30 Spellcraft check reveals that some evil is at work, and a DC 24 Will save makes the PCs aware that something powerful is at play here... almost as if they were being watched.

The demonic busts above the alcove of this Room make up one of the deadliest traps in the Region. Fashioned by a powerful undead who dwelt here centuries ago, the demonic heads release potent blasts of cold energy upon any living creatures caught inside the Room. This trap activates one round after anyone enters the Room, and affect all within.

★ Cold Energy Trap: CR 14; magic device; proximity trigger; automatic reset; magical effect (cold energy, 24d6 cold, DC 30 Reflex save half); multiple targets (all within the Room); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Cold, Fear 15

Tactics: If the DM likes, Vinnara can be watching this Room, eager to meet anyone who could survive this trap. Alternately, she can arrive seconds after the trap explodes, ambushing the PCs from behind the walls.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the cold energy trap to 30d6. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the cold energy trap to 18d6.

N92. ASHEN MORTAR

The dark walls of this chamber are featureless, except for a vast spider web of cracks filled with a strange gray mortar substance.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: One round after the PCs enter this Room, a thousand invisible voices begin to babble. The voices are loud and disquieting, and infused with the potent negative energy released by the World Eater. All living creatures within the Room and able to hear these voices must make a DC 30 Will save each round or become cursed, suffering from a permanent -8 penalty on either attack rolls, Fortitude saves, Reflex saves, Will saves, ability checks, or skill checks (selected randomly). A creature may be affected up to six times by this potent curse. Each time, it suffers a -8 penalty to another type of roll, save, or check. A remove curse cast upon a victim cancels only one effect of this great curse, while a break enchantment or limited wish annuls up to three effects, and a miracle or wish lifts all of its effects.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, raise the save DC of the Room's magic curse to 35. To decrease the challenge, reduce the save DC to 25.

N93. SPECTRAL ARMORY

Large columns of dark stone support this wide hall. The walls of the chamber are made from the same stone as the remainder of the tomb, complete with a number of empty burial alcoves. However, upon the walls, floating seemingly in and of its own accord, is an entire arsenal of spectral weaponry. Each semitransparent and crafted into fierce, unholy shapes, the weapons seem to silently provoke anyone who enters.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room holds Vinnara's armory, which was brought into being by the sheer force of the ghost's will and the devotion of her servants. Though created of the same spectral force composing her wraiths' bodies, these weapons are just as tainted and dangerous as these creatures.

Any living PC moving within 5 ft. of any of the weapons stored in this Room's many alcoves causes the most powerful weapons in the arsenal to animate and attack.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs enter this Room with an escort from Vinnara's servants, a spectral great sword, bastard sword, spiked chain, scythe, double axe, dire flail, falchion, warhammer, ranseur, greatclub, and composite longbow (with 40 arrows) animate and attack as soon as anyone moves within 5 ft. of any weapon. Treat each of these weapons as if they were a dread wraith wielding a +2 ghost touch weapon of the same type. These weapons have all the special abilities and attacks as dread wraiths, except for their Constitution drain special abilities.

There are eleven spectral weapons (hp 96 each) in all.

In battle, the weapons are extremely organized and, if suited to their specific type, attempt to make sunder and trip attacks. After an initial round or two, the weapons decide which PC poses the greatest threat and attack them to exclusion of all others.

If the party enters with an escort loyal to Vinnara, the spectral weapons remain inanimate.

Treasure: As it is defeated, each weapon has a 25% chance of becoming an inanimate +2 ghost touch weapon the PCs can claim. Otherwise, it turns to vapor and dissipates.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two spectral weapons. To decrease the challenge, remove two.

Skills and Feats: —

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a spectral weapon at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Spectral weapons are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A spectral weapon notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a spectral weapon becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of Vinnara and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N94. EMPTIED HALL

This hall has been emptied. There is not a single bone in sight in any of the walls' numerous alcoves, nor a single mote of dust to be found. The entire place seems to have been unnaturally scoured of any traces of life.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Between Vinnara's expulsion of the corporeal dead, The Great Death's need for slaves, and the tides of negative energy caused by the World Eater, everything but the stone structure of this Room has been exhausted. Over the course of the next few years it is likely the walls and ceiling of this Room will collapse, as was the case in Room N90.

Any PC succeeding at a DC 25 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check determines the walls have already begun to weaken and it is only a matter of time before the Room is filled with rubble.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy^{}

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

N95. SPECTRAL BARRACKS

Several strangely shaped columns and pillars, carved into repeating images of sorrowful black skulls, fill this chamber. Hung between these supports, and indeed seeming to stretch vertically across much of the room, are hundreds of dark wisps of thin burial shrouds.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The four entryways leading into this Room, which serves as the "barracks" for Vinnara's troops, have no doors set into them. Though it is obviously unnecessary for the ghost's wraith soldiers to sleep, the militaristic and nostalgic feel of the barracks causes them to relate to this Room with reverence.

The strange black wisps dominating this hall are in fact a network of spectral bunks and hammocks used by the wraiths and dread wraiths serving Vinnara. Though the undead suffer no ill effects from them, any living creature passing through this great net of negative energy finds itself weakened by the otherworldly chill. Any living being moving 10 ft. or more through this Room must make a DC 34 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Strength damage. The victim of this effect must also succeed at a DC 28 Fortitude save one minute later or suffer 1d2 level drain.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment (total)

Tactics: When the PCs enter the barracks, there are twelve wraiths (hp 32 each) in the Room. The wraiths are vigilant. They are automatically made aware of the PCs' presence, as they keep a close eye on all open doorways leading into this Room. As the PCs approach, the wraiths hide among the spectral bunks. The undead blend in perfectly with the inanimate wisps and gain a +15 circumstance bonus to their Hide checks.

After the PCs enter, one wraith floats from hiding, coaxing the intruders to engage it. Fully knowing the dangerous nature of the strands, the wraith hope the PCs will charge it, allowing the other wraiths to dispatch them quickly. Though this tactic most likely works once, the wraiths hope it can sway the battle in their favor.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N96. TRAINING GROUND

Half a dozen shadows of deepest night sway and dance in a fearful battle of silence and breathlessness amid a field of black rubble. The rubble covers the entire floor, turning it into a clearly uneven and precarious surface.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is a training ground where Vinnara's troops endlessly hone their skills. The six dread wraiths (hp 117, 112, 107, 104, 101, 97), currently conducting battle drills, notice the PCs as soon as they move within 60 ft. of this Room. While the drills are a mock representation of their mortal lives, the dread wraiths take it seriously.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Hazardous Footing 22

Tactics: Well organized and eager to do battle, the wraiths advance in an even wave, attacking the strongest combatant and any cleric or paladin openly bearing the sigil of his deity. These fiends fight in melee, using their deadly incorporeal touch attacks and flanking their opponents at every occasion they get. They ignore any other PCs until they destroy their targets.

Meanwhile, the other two dread wraiths soar into the air. They hover above the PCs for one round before descending upon them in a powerful swoop. While attacking in this manner, the wraiths gain a +10 competence bonus to their attack rolls. They can only attack every two rounds, however, taking one full round to fly above the PCs before descending upon them again, one round later.

N97. GUARD POST

Corridors stretch in every direction from this small hall, but four forms — shadows blacker than the onyx walls surrounding the place — float above the floor's center.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is one of Vinnara's many guard posts. Unless the PCs are using magic to disguise their passage, the four dread wraiths (hp 113, 108, 103, 98) notice the PCs approach, either from the north or south.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Fearless, Poor Footing 18

Tactics: If the wraiths noticed the PCs approach, they gain an automatic round of surprise. The four of them charge PCs wearing thick armor or bearing the symbol of good or neutral deities. After 1d4 combat rounds, one of the wraith retreats to warn Vinnara (Room N102) of the PCs' presence.

If the wraiths only notice the PCs once they enter the Room, three of them enter combat, while the fourth immediately retreats to warn Vinnara.

Treasure: N/A

N98. ASHES TO ASHES

The walls of this square chamber are cracked and covered in what looks like splotchy patches of gray clay. This dusty mortar was applied by an unskilled hand, and does not seem to be part of the original wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like Room N94, this Room has been infused with the ashes of the crazed undead that fought against their celestial captors. Starting 1 round after the PCs enter, the sound of potent babbling voices emanates from the walls. All living creatures within the Room and able to hear these voices must make a DC 30 Will save each round or become cursed, suffering from a –6 penalty in a random ability score (Strength, Dexterity, etc.). A creature can only be affected by this effect six times. Each time it is affected, a different ability score suffers a –6 penalty. Once all six ability scores of a creature have been reduced, it becomes immune to the Room's potent magic. A remove curse cast upon a victim cancels only one effect of this great curse, while a break enchantment or limited wish annuls up to three effects, and a miracle or wish lifts all of its effects.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: Each PC digging into the gray mortar of the walls for at least 1 hour are allowed a DC 35 Search check. Success reveals a +3 keen unholy great sword, obviously a source of undead attraction.

This darkened hall is filled with a preternatural chill. Though there is no immediate explanation for it, the cold seems not so much to penetrate the body, but rather to drain the warmth from all living things.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Should Vinnara ever need extra troops, she uses this Room to rally a second garrison. This Room is infused with potent magic created by the negative energy released by the World Eater and is the perfect well of evil.

All living creatures spending more than two rounds in this Room must succeed at a DC 30 Will save or become shaken for 4d6 minutes. Once they regain their composure, all PCs who were shaken must succeed at a DC 30 Fortitude save or suffer 1 Constitution drain and 1 Wisdom drain.

N100. GUARDS AND WARDS

Each of these intersections is warded by traps placed by Invistis. While useful against the PCs, they are deadly to undead.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Stepping on a square between the two alcoves unleashes flaming oil from the walls. There are four vents at each intersection, enough to target the PCs even if they decide to run through the alcove. This oil is specifically designed to burn effectively on dead flesh as well. Another of Invistis' tricks, this necromantic and flaming trap burns undead for an additional two rounds.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 2

Tactics: Wards are placed all around the walls. A DC 20 Knowledge (religion) check indicates that these wards are holy. Clever PCs may notice that whoever placed this trap here has a definite fear of the undead.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the duration of the flaming oil trap to 5 rounds. To decrease the challenge of this encounter, reduce the duration of the flaming oil trap to 1 round.

N101. NORTHERN MUSTERING HALL

This wide hall is filled with shadow tides that roll like a living sea.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Vinnara keeps a garrison of several dozen soldiers on call here at all times, ready to go into battle should her realm be attacked. Unless the PCs are using magic to disguise their entrance, the undead notice them immediately as they enter, and instantly move to attack.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Normally, with a force this size, all tactics swiftly break down into chaos. Vinnara's troops, however, are disciplined and well organized. Six wraiths (hp 65 each) rush the PCs, attacking all of them at the same time. Flanking them whenever possible, they fight until destroyed. Meanwhile, Six dread wraiths (hp 104 each) concentrate their strikes on clerics or paladins bearing the symbol of their gods, or on other spellcasters if there are no divine champions for them to fight. Vinnara's dread wraith lieutenant (hp 164) remains behind its troops, hissing orders in an unnerving voice. If more than three-quarters of the regiment is wiped out, the lieutenant retreats to report the news to its mistress.

N102. VINNARA'S COMMAND CENTER

A chill wind rushes over everyone entering this hall. Furniture fills the room: two great tables, wall maps, suits of armor, and a throne-like chair situated behind a map-laden desk. The furnishings are not crafted of the same black stone as in the rest of the tomb or from any other kind of mundane material, however. Rather, they flicker and fade into reality as ghostly forms.

Among the spectral desks and maps drift animate shadows, silently moving with dire purpose. These creatures pay no mind to the living, but from the back of the chamber, upon the great ghostly throne, a figure rises. Though as spectral as her surroundings, the silhouette is that of a fearsome bald woman with dagger-like features. Resplendent in hulking armor that writhes as if constructed of bound souls, she scans the intruders. Near her stands a transparent scythe that crackles with a morbid green energy, but her ghostly hand does not reach for it. Instead, she booms in a proud voice, "I had forgotten how slowly mortal flesh crawls. Hold live things! I would speak with you."

Initial Attitude: Friendly

Encounter: This Room is the command center of Vinnara (hp 147), and the ghost's personal lair. Here with her four dread wraith bodyguards (hp 160 each) she organizes a never ending war against the tombs' other warlords, overseeing every aspect of her personal campaign with undying zeal.

Chances are that Vinnara was made aware of the PCs' arrival (by wraiths the PCs have seen escape). Whether she learned about their intrusion or just realized a group of living PCs entered her lair, she is eager to parley with them. Vinnara is obsessive about maintaining accurate intelligence on all facets of her realm and an event as significant as the passage of a group of mortals should not have escaped her notice. Thus, upon the PCs' entry, she is eager to speak with those strong enough to defy her guards.

The ghostly blackguard initially asks questions to deduce why the PCs are in the tomb, and more specifically to uncover why they journey through her realm. She attempts to determine whether they are working for any of the tombs' other warlords; though an unlikely possibility, Vinnara is paranoid enough to consider this option.

Once she determines the PCs are not agents of her enemies (real or imagined) sent to destroy her, she eagerly listens to their questions. She has a great deal of knowledge about the tomb and answers many of the PCs' questions openly, hoping to win their trust. The only thing she does not mention or explain is the source of the negative energy waves, the great hall at the center of the tomb (Room N159), or any other detail relating to the World Eater (trapped in Room N159). As she parleys with the PCs, she tries as much as possible to demonize the tomb's other warlords and warns the PCs about them.

As the PCs' dialogue with Vinnara progresses, she makes apologies for any attacks they suffered in her realm, trying to convince the PCs her wraiths were merely following orders to fend off all perceived threats and defend her lands from invaders. This argument should be as convincing, as it is truthful. But a Sense Motive check may be necessary for paranoid or judgmental PCs. If the PCs attempted to communicate with any of Vinnara's soldiers but were attacked anyway, she blames the attacks on her servants' zealotry to follow their orders and centuries of boredom.

By the time the PCs' broadest questions are answered and her soldiers apologized for, Vinnara attempts to recruit them. Knowing that their most likely goal (if they have not said so already) is to escape the tomb, she tells the party that she knows where the only exit is situated, but that it is well hidden. This statement is true, but Vinnara does not describe the passage to the eastern gates in Room N239 in any more detail unless the PCs agree to perform a service for her.

Zealous lawful good PCs may wish to strike Vinnara down, but she attempts to dissuade them by informing them that she cannot escape this tomb, 4,000 years of imprisonment should be proof of that.

Explaining her conflict with the other undead warlords, Vinnara tries to strike a bargain with the PCs. She will tell them how to escape the tomb if the PCs agree to destroy the other warlords in the Region and bring her a specific item from each. Vinnara says the items she desires are symbolic baubles that allow the warlords to control the lesser undead within their realm, but in truth these are keys that bypass the barriers leading to Room N159. Though she is not exactly sure what these "baubles" look like, she tells the party that the other warlords would not part with theirs and will have them with them at all times. A particularly canny PC might ask Vinnara about her own (a topic she tries to avoid). If she believes showing the PCs her key might win their confidence, she reveals a 1-ft. wide flat ruby, some 3-inches thick, and carved in the form of a star with eight branches.

If the PCs agree to Vinnara's proposal, she eagerly awaits their return. If asked for support on their mission she says it takes all of her troops to hold off the attacks of the other warlords. If further pressed, she sends one of her wraiths with the party to her armory in Room N93, where the PCs are allowed to take two weapons. The weapons do not animate to attack the PCs if they have this undead escort, and any weapon picked is automatically useable by them.

Upon the PCs return, Vinnara eagerly accepts her enemies' keys and congratulates the PCs on a job well done. A creature of her word, she orders one of her dread wraith bodyguards to escort the PCs to Room N239 (to show them the secret door) and then to Room N253 (where the mechanism for this secret door is situated). However, if the PCs turn on Vinnara, reveal the items they are to fetch are keys, or otherwise refuse her proposal, she and her dread wraiths set upon them.

Encounter Condition: Concealment, Fearless, Negative Energy, Poor Footing 20, Unhallowed 20

Tactics: Vinnara is a brilliant tactician and her wraiths follow her orders without question or thought of their personal safety. If coaxed into battle, she uses her sneak attack ability whenever possible. Eager for a good fight after centuries of inaction, Vinnara engages the strongest looking fighter while her wraiths attack any obvious spellcasters. Clerics aren't given much thought, as they have so little power here.

If the battle goes poorly for Vinnara and she is reduced to less than a third of her total hit points, she flees through any of the surrounding walls, ordering her wraiths to cover her retreat. If she escapes, it is impossible to track the ghost without magical means. Vinnara takes losing in combat as a great personal dishonor and does not rest until the PCs are destroyed. Upon escaping she rallies her wraith troops and pursues the PCs, attacking again and again, often at the most inopportune moment with parties of 8 to 10 wraiths or dread wraiths (using the same tactics as above) until she is finally destroyed.

Treasure: This Room holds perhaps the single most complete and useful collection of maps and information about the tomb. Any PC examining the spectral maps finds complete details of Vinnara's realm and the Western Outer Halls areas. However, unless the PC can somehow manipulate the incorporeal material, the maps cannot be taken from this Room. The spectral suits of armor are not tangible enough to be used effectively, either, and even if the PCs can manipulate and don them, they offer few benefits. Vinnara's enchanted full plate armor and scythe, however, can be taken from her.

Aura of Despair (Su): Vinnara radiates a malign aura that causes enemies within 10 feet of him to take a –2 penalty on all saving throws.

Dark Blessing (Su): Vinnara applies his Charisma modifier (+5) as a bonus on all saving throws.

Corrupting Gaze (Su): A ghost can blast living beings with a glance, at a range of up to 30 feet. Creatures that meet the ghost's gaze must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 25) or take 2d10 points of damage and 1d4 points of Charisma damage.

Detect Good (Sp): At will, a blackguard can use detect good as a spell-like ability, duplicating the effect of the detect good spell.

Frightful Moan (Su): A ghost can emit a frightful moan as a standard action. All living creatures within a 30-foot spread must succeed on a Will save (DC 25) or become panicked for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic necromantic mind affecting fear effect. A creature that successfully saves against the moan cannot be affected by the same ghost's moan for 24 hours.

Horrific Appearance (Su): Any living creature within 60 feet that views a ghost must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 25) or immediately take 1d4 points of Strength damage, 1d4 points of Dexterity damage, and 1d4 points of Constitution damage. A creature that successfully saves against this effect cannot be affected by the same ghost's horrific appearance for 24 hours.

Manifestation (Su): Every ghost has this ability. A ghost dwells on the Ethereal Plane and, as an ethereal creature, it cannot affect or be affected by anything in the material world. When a ghost manifests, it partly enters the Material Plane and becomes visible but incorporeal on the Material Plane. A manifested ghost can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, magic weapons, or spells, with a 50% chance to ignore any damage from a corporeal source. A manifested ghost can pass through solid objects at will, and its own attacks pass through armor. A manifested ghost always moves silently. A manifested ghost can strike with its touch attack or with a ghost touch weapon (see Ghostly Equipment, below). A manifested ghost remains partially on the Ethereal Plane, where it is not incorporeal. A manifested ghost can be attacked by opponents on either the Material Plane or the Ethereal Plane. The ghost's incorporeality helps protect it from foes on the Material Plane, but not from foes on the Ethereal Plane.

When a spellcasting ghost is not manifested and is on the Ethereal Plane, its spells cannot affect targets on the Material Plane, but they work normally against ethereal targets. When a spellcasting ghost manifests, its spells continue to affect ethereal targets and can affect targets on the Material Plane normally unless the spells rely on touch. A manifested ghost's touch spells don't work on nonethereal targets. A ghost has two home planes, the Material Plane and the Ethereal Plane. It is not considered extraplanar when on either of these planes.

Smite Good (Su): Thrice a day, Vinnara may attempt to smite good with one normal melee attack.

He adds his Charisma modifier (+5) to his attack roll and deals 10 extra points of damage per class level. If a blackguard accidentally smites a creature that is not good, the smite has no effect but it is still used up for that day.

Blackguard Spells Prepared (3/ 3/ 2/ 1, Save DC 12 + Spell Level):
1st—corrupt weapon, inflict light wounds (x2); 2nd—bull's strength, darkness, shatter; 3rd—protection from elements, inflict serious wounds; 4th—inflict critical wounds.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 29 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a dread wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N103. WRAITH OF DESPERATION

Doors lead in three separate directions from this small black chamber. Over each door, a leering skull carved from the dark stone smiles down, as though the inanimate frescos are aware of the horrors lurking beyond. There are four shadows in the center of this chamber. They freeze for a moment, and then swiftly dart in different directions

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Vinnara posted four wraiths (hp 65 each) to watch this Room. Their orders are simple — to report to her and the dread wraiths in Room N157 should they notice anyone approaching.

After the PCs enter, the wraiths escape through the opposite door. Three move to Room N157 while the fourth journey to Vinnara's command center. PCs beating their initiative checks have a chance to prevent the undead from fleeing; otherwise the wraiths escape and alert Vinnara as well as the dread wraiths in Room N157. Once alerted, the dread wraiths from Room N157, accompanied by the three wraiths that alerted them, attack the PCs. Alternately, if the PCs prevent the wraiths from escaping, allow the wraiths in Room N157 the appropriate Listen checks to notice the ruckus of battle. If they do, they join the fray 1d3 rounds later.

Encounter Condition: Concealment

Tactics: The wraiths have no intention to fight the PCs and do anything they can to flee. If caught inside the Room, however, they engage the PCs and fight until destroyed, uttering loud shrieks to alert the dread wraiths in Room N157.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, double the number of advanced wraiths, and make them attack the PCs while the dread wraiths in Room N157 join the fray 1d2 rounds later. To decrease the challenge, remove one wraith and give the PCs a round of surprise.

N104. CONFESSION

This small room is featureless and empty, with the exception of a rune scrawled in glittering green upon the floor. Across the chamber is another featureless door.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Any PC able to read Celestial discerns the rune is the symbol for the word "Confess". Powerfully charged with positive energy, any evil creature passing over the rune must make a DC 30 Will save or be affected as if by confusion (regardless of their usual immunities) for 8 hours.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: to increase the challenge of this encounter, raise the save DC of the confusion effect to 35 and increase duration to 16 hours. To decrease the challenge, lower the save DC to 25 and reduce the duration to 4 hours.

N105. DEATH WAVE

Trapped in place upon the southern end of this small chamber is what could be described as a wall of flowing black oil. Alive and moving ceaselessly, the barrier sparks and jolts at random with an alien life of its own.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Somehow counterbalanced against the powerful positive energies of Room N104, the waves of negative energy released by the World Eater were caught and held in this Room. Fed by the continuing release of negative energy, this barrier affects any living creature that even so much as steps within 10 ft. of it, inflicting 20d8 points of negative energy damage. A successful DC 38 Fortitude save reduces this amount in half.

Once released upon a creature, the wave washes over all others in the Room (thus affecting all PCs present) before dissipating into thin air, as though it had never truly been there.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, assume the wave of black energy washes over the first PC to enter this Room and continues onward, affecting all creatures within a 200 ft. radius (thus healing all undead in its wake). To decrease the challenge, make the negative energy deal only 15d8 points of damage and reduce the save DC to 34.

N106. GUARD POST

Amid the stones and sculpted skulls that make up the walls of this chamber hover four black shadows. Back to back, these eerie fiends stand in the center of the place, their red eyes glowing vigilantly.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is another of Vinnara's guard post. The dread wraiths (hp 111, 105, 103, 101) are alert, but unhidden. Unless the PCs are using magic to conceal their passage, the wraiths notice them immediately, attacking on sight.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: The dread wraiths rush the strongest warrior, and any PCs casting spells. They concentrate their attacks in an attempt to kill their prey as fast as they can. Besides this simple tactic, they fight ferociously but intelligently, flanking the PCs at every turn. They do not allow themselves to be taken advantage of and divide the PCs forces rather than let themselves become divided.

They fight until all but one has been destroyed. The final wraith escapes to report to Vinnara.

Treasure: Silver powder lines the floor, in cracks between flagstones. If the PCs spend 30 minutes collecting it, they can get 1 lb. of powdered silver.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four dread wraiths. To decrease the challenge, remove one dread wraith and have another escapes to report to its mistress 1d4 rounds after combat begins.

N107. ABSOLUTION

Upon the floor of this dead-end is a sizable serpentine rune that is partially stained black. Though the ~~green~~ hue of the rune is soiled, its symbol is still partially visible.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Any PC reading Celestial who makes a DC 20 Intelligence check can make out the partially obscured rune, which reads "Absolve" in the Celestial language. This Room was once a positive energy font similar to Rooms N84 and N106, but its proximity to the World Eater's negative energy waves gradually overpowered it. The rune has no immediate effect on creatures of any alignment. However, any good-aligned PC touching the rune while uttering a prayer to any non-evil deity instantly saps what little remains of the positive energy. This PC instantly receives the equivalent of heal (15th-level cleric) and is considered blessed for 24 hours. Only one PC can benefit from the remainder of the positive energy in this Room. The rune has no further effect once this energy is transferred into someone.

Carved above each of the three doors leading into this square chamber is a row of three stone skulls. Each of these sculptures gaze in opposite directions, as if keeping an eye on every square inch of this room.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is one of many cross-halls surrounding the World Eater's lair (Room N159). It is contested, like many of the others, but Vinnara has gone to great lengths to guard it.

While invisible, several runes were placed on the floor by Vinnara. Undead crossing the runes are targeted with positive energy, dealing 3d8 damage. Unless the PCs succeed on a DC 30 Spellcraft check while casting detect magic or detect evil, they cannot see the runes.

N109. THE SCREAMING SKULL

A gigantic stone skull sculpted on the southern wall dominates this chamber. Another skull dominates the north wall. The skulls' mouths are open and their scowling eyes seem frozen with hate.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Fully 10 ft. tall each, the skulls upon the north and south walls are the only interesting features in this Room. With its mouth open, one Medium creature can easily fit inside the sculpted skull's gaping jaw. PCs succeeding at a DC 30 Knowledge (architecture) check recognize that the skull was built 500 to 2,000 years after the crafting of the dungeon.

After the PCs enter the Room, the door behind them closes and locks. The eyes of the skull glow red and a ghastly smoke fills the Room. This is almost a parlor trick to veteran PCs and not to be given much thought. A simple fear effect follows that probably won't affect anyone.

DMs should "accidentally" reveal the DC as 12.

This is the ruse. The Room is actually quite deadly and the true power of the Room becomes evident when the PCs walk through the jaws of the skull.

First, the PC disappears from view as soon as he steps through the jaws of the skull. While nothing has actually happened, an illusion makes him invisible to the rest of the party. A zone of silence fills the areas just north and south of the Room 1 round later and those who do not step through the skull are targeted by a powerful energy drain trap.

◆ Energy Drain Trap: CR 16; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; Atk +28 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, 3d4 negative levels for 24 hours, DC 28 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 45; Disable Device DC N/A.

One round later, the PCs hear the screams of the PC who stepped through the skull passage, caused by a powerful ghost sound. A DC 24 Will save confirms that the screams are magical in nature. Otherwise, the PCs hear the unbearable echoes of their friend being ripped limb to limb.

Of course, the PC who stepped through the skull is not dead, but left to a much different fate. A forcecage forms just beyond the doors, trapping both the PC and a dread wraith. Cloaked beneath the illusion, the forcecage prevents anyone from stepping into or past it. While the other PCs cannot see what is going on, the PC inside the forcecage must now battle a this creature alone. To make matters worse, they cannot see into or move past the forcecage, nor can they see the PC fighting the dread wraith inside the windowless cell.

The forcecage remains for 18 rounds unless dispelled. The dread wraith is from somewhere in the Region (choose a Room) and has no qualms with killing the PC.

The walls surrounding Room N109 are soundproof and shrouded in zone of silence, which cannot be detected short of detect magic and a DC 30 Spellcraft check.

Encounter Condition: [Deep Silence], [Fear 12], Fearless, [Fog 10], [Negative Energy]

Tactics: Short of the PCs actually digging into the stone of the skulls, there is no way to disable these traps.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, just kill the PCs outright, because obviously this trap just isn't tough enough. Alternately, add cloudkill to the forcecage trap, triggering 1 round before the dread wraith arrives. To decrease the challenge, remove the illusion cloaking the forcecage, but instead Fog 10 inside the jaws.

N110. GUARD POST

Upon entering this room, four pairs of bloodshot red eyes affixed to shadows of pure nightmare begin to drift. These shadows are the only inhabitants in the otherwise bare chamber.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is Vinnara's eastern-most guard post. The dread wraiths (hp 112, 105, 102, 99) standing guard in this chamber are alert. Unless the PCs use magic to hide their passage, the wraiths notice them immediately and attack them on sight.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The dread wraiths charge the strongest looking warrior, and any PC attempting to turn them. Once engaged with a PC, the wraiths fight this foe exclusively. They continue to battle until all but one of them has been destroyed. The surviving wraith escapes to report to its mistress.

Treasure: N/A

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N111 THROUGH N134. THE MUMMY'S TOMB

Rooms N111 through N134 and Rooms N181 through N201 are controlled by Kasteoficiss (Room N191), a zealot mummy priestess who, with her allip servants, worships a long forgotten god of death. The mummy's main goal is to liberate the World Eater in Room N159, for she believes the creature to be the manifestation of her deity's avatar. In her mind, her god was imprisoned at the center of the region (in the central vault) and she devotes her unlfe to setting the deity free. With her god's avatar on her side, Kasteoficiss believes she will be able to conquer the entire region — and perhaps the great dungeon with it — and reign supreme at the end of the day.

Kasteoficiss' mission, however, is far from accomplished. The mummy priestess is in direct competition with Vinnara (Room N102), a cunning ghost blackguard who rules over a vast territory to the east, and Invistis (Room N178), a maniacally insane lich with whom she is waging a long war yet to be resolved.

Though Kasteoficiss does not consider Vinnara and her minions to pose any real threat, she does want to see the ghost out of the picture. Because the mummy priestess deluded herself into believing Vinnara was a weak and undeserving opponent, Kasteoficiss does not waste her time trying to conquer any of the territory she currently claims, nor does she take the occasional violent encounters between her servants and the ghost's minions seriously. In Kasteoficiss' mind, once her God of Death is liberated, Vinnara will have no choice but to bow to her will — and perhaps even agree to serve her for the remainder of her unlfe.

On the other hand, Kasteoficiss views Invistis, the lich lord who rules over a small but well secured domain to the north, as a potentially deadly threat. Over the years, the mummy priestess developed a deep hatred of the maniacal lich lord and his cohorts, however few they might be. Her servants wage a terrible war against Invistis. Most of the conflict is disputed in unclaimed territory to the north and west of the mummy priestess' tomb (Rooms N210 to N239). In recent years, Kasteoficiss lost control of Room N180, an area now called the Badlands because of the terrible devastation caused there. Thanks to her mohrg servants, Kasteoficiss occasionally sends zombie troops to battle Invistis' henchmen there, but her efforts have been for the most part in vain and the lich lord's hold upon the Badlands is now as strong as ever.

Kasteoficiss does not take kindly to intruders. In fact, her allip disciples and mohrg temple guards are expected to attack anyone venturing into her territory — a task they accomplish with stunning efficiency. While journeying through the mummy priestess' tomb, PCs encounter resistance. Characters killed by mohrgs in this section are turned into zombie spawns and sent to the Badlands (Room N180) to fight for Kasteoficiss' cause. Some areas of the mummy's domain are also trapped with ancient magical devices created by the angels who designed the dungeon. Kasteoficiss and her servants know where these traps are situated and avoid them.

PCs who meet with Kasteoficiss might be able to deal with the mummy priestess, who seeks help in destroying Invistis and his cohorts. In the PCs, she sees potentially useful peons she can use to tip the scale in her favor. If the PCs claim they are worshippers of the God of Death — any God of Death — Kasteoficiss might even welcome them in her domain and reveal her true plans to them: the liberation of her deity's avatar in the central vault (Room N159), which ultimately will lead to her dominion over the entire region.

1	A terrible howl echoes in the distance. Echoes 10.
2	Blood pours from the walls, filling the hallway or Room. Flooded.
3	Ichor and fungus grow along the walls. The ground is soft like a bog beneath the PCs' feet.
4	An allip moan fills the halls. The PCs must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect.
5	An allip moan fills the halls. The PCs must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or suffer 1d4 Wisdom drain. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect.
6–14	Nothing
15	A pair of mohrgs and an allip punish a wight by forcing his mouth and ear open and filling them with allip-like insects. They are distracted and suffer a –4 penalty to Listen and Spot checks for 1d6 minutes. The wights screams are distracting and chilling. Distracting Noises 8, Echoes 5, Fear 20.
16	A zombie horde patrols this Section, mindlessly attacking anything in their path. They serve Kasteoficiss, but lack the intellect to know one undead from another.
17	A zombie horde patrols this Section, mindlessly attacking anything in their path. They serve Kasteoficiss (Room N191), but lack the intellect to know one undead from another. Immediately roll a second Random Encounter.
18	Two mohrg riders and their wyvern zombies steeds patrol the Section. One attacks the PCs, while the other summons the aid of a zombie horde from a nearby tunnel. It takes 2d4 rounds for the mohrg and its horde to return.
19	The PCs stumble upon trap.
	☛ Falling Block Trap: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; Atk +22 melee (16d6); multiple targets (can strike all characters in two specified adjacent squares); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 32.
20	An iron golem — sent by the lich lord Invistis (Room N178) rampages through Kasteoficiss' tomb. He is out to cause as much damage as possible. If the PCs defeat this creature and inform the mummy priestess, her Initial Attitude shifts one rank towards Helpful.

N111. OUTER GUARD POST

Two large skeletal figures with pink gooey viscera oozing from their ribcages stand guard in this dark room. The creatures' eye sockets are hollow unnatural tongues with forked ends protrude from their grinning lips.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two large mohrgs (hp 191, 183) protect this chamber. Their duty is to prevent anyone from entering Kasteoficiss' domain as well as protect the only Room leading to one of the four outer antechambers opening into the central vault (Room N159), where the mummy priestess believes the avatar of the God of Death is imprisoned.

These fiends do not expect any menace from the southern corridor, as this is Kasteoficiss' domain. They receive a -8 penalty to any check made to notice PCs approaching from this direction.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: These fiends attack all who this Room. They charge their foes, targeting the largest and most heavily armed and armored opponents first. In battle, the mohrgs use their paralyzing touch attack to diminish the party's strength. They turn the creatures they kill into mindless servants and order these newly created zombies to fight against the lich's minions in the Badlands (Room N180).

Treasure: One of the mohrgs wears a copper amulet embedded with a ruby in its center, on a silver chain and embellished with undecipherable markings. The amulet is worth upwards of 1,500 gp, but historians and collectors might pay up to four times this amount for it.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs. To decrease the challenge, remove one of them.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N112. FIRST CENTRAL ANTECHAMBER

A scintillating wall of force dominates this narrow chamber, preventing anyone from venturing further into it. Though its colors are subtle upon the clear blue energy wall, a rainbow-like pattern rolls upon its surface, constantly changing its shade. Beyond the force field is a bronze door set amidst a thick frame of dark stone. There is no knob upon the heavy door, but the shape of a six-fingered hand lies in a circle of the deepest black in the middle of it.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The celestials created this magical wall of force centuries ago. Like many Rooms in this Region, this chamber is devoid of light and furniture. The door leading to Room N159 is locked, and the only way to unlock it is by finding the mummified six-fingered hand that serves as key (see Room N178, in the Lich's Lair, for further details).

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: There are four outer antechambers like this one. The others are Rooms N134, N147, and N158. The only way to gain access to the central vault (Room N159) is by bypassing the wall of forces in each of the four antechambers and using the four special keys to unlock all the doors leading to Room N159.

In order to bypass these force walls, four different levers must be activated. In other words, PCs using the levers will not see any change in the force wall until all four are used. The different levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, N222, and N250.

N113. MOHRG RIDERS

The only things of interest in this room are the powerful looking skeletal creatures mounted on the grayish forms of large magical beasts with great leathery wings and hollow eyes. The undead atop the zombie mounts hold long lances of a dark metallic shade, but their most impressive features are the writhing viscera issuing from their ribcages and the long forked tongues of a light purplish hue dangling from their bare jaws.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two mohrgs (hp 131, 127) and their wyvern zombie mounts (hp 99, 93) guard this Room, which officially marks the beginning of Kasteoficiss' domain. Like their compatriots, these mohrg riders are part of the mummy priestess' honor guard, which members were once honorable if somewhat cruel knights. These fiends bore deep hatred toward the living and automatically attack all non-undead creatures they meet. Their wyvern zombies are well trained and obey their command.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 18, Tremors 16

Tactics: Unlike most mohrgs, which tend to engage their foes with their natural weapons, these undead prefer to charge the beefiest PCs using their enchanted lances in battle. The mohrgs remain atop their mounts as long as they can, using the wyvern zombies to shield them from their attackers while the mounts slam into their foes. Once forced into melee the mohrg do not hesitate to drop their weapons and use their paralyzing touch to take out the members of the party. These creatures usually target the warriors first, but do not shy from striking anyone within reach.

Treasure: Burned into the bone of one mohrg is a single blue amethyst the size of a fist (350 gp).

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one mohrg, and one wyvern zombie mount. In addition, cast the Room in darkness. To decrease the challenge, give the PCs one round of surprise.

N114. TRAPPED INTERSECTION

There is nothing of interest in this room except for the fact that the gray stone surfaces of its walls are covered with uneven coat of black soot.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Anyone stepping upon the floor of this Room activates a fireball trap, which takes effect one round later when a wide ball of bluish flames drops from the ceiling and explodes in the center of the Room, burning everyone in its wake. The fireball trap effectively triggers twice in one round, cooking everything in its path.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the delayed blast fireball trigger trap a third time, 1d3 rounds after the second. To decrease the challenge, have the delayed blast fireball trap trigger once.

N115. WYVERN ZOMBIES' PEN

The door set upon the north wall of this Room is locked. The key that opened it was lost long ago and a successful DC 30 Open Lock check is required to unlock it. Unfortunately, the small cubicle in which this door opens is empty.

The floor of this chamber is covered with bone fragments and larger skeletal debris. What is most impressive about the room, however, are the two large dragon-like figures standing in it. The animated corpses of the magical beasts have grayish skin, dead eyes, and sharp yellowish claws at the ends of their feet. Their powerful wings are a mass of decrepit leather and the stink of their rotting flesh bathes the room.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four wyvern zombies (hp 99, 97, 94, 92) dwell in this chamber. Mohrg riders once used these mindless creatures before minions of the lich lord destroyed them in combat. Now, these zombie mounts wait for other mohrgs to call for their service. They attack all living creatures entering their pen.

Encounter Condition: Fear 25

Tactics: These wyvern zombies use their slam attacks against the PCs, fighting like children. Each round they focus their energy on the closest PCs, preferring those with little to no armor. Elves are favorite targets for these mohrg who deal an additional +2 damage against them.

Treasure: Scattered among the bones the PCs find 51 gp in assorted coins and a handful of worthless semi-precious stones.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add mohrg riders to each wyvern zombie. To decrease the challenge, remove one wyvern zombie.

N116. UNUSED GUARD POST

Both doors leading into this Room are open.

This chamber is bare. The blackstone walls, a telling sign that evil is as oppressive here as anywhere in this foul tomb. Along the floor lie the scattered remains of a humanoid, its bones now strewn from one end of the room to the other.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was once one of the outer guard posts of the mummy priestess' lair, but in the past few decades her minions gradually conquered more territory and the Room has barely seen action since.

N117. LONE UNDEAD KNIGHT

The secret door upon the south wall is a panel that slides into the wall to the east when a hidden button is pushed. PCs observing this portion of the wall might notice grooves alongside this 10-ft. high and 5-ft. wide secret panel. A successful DC 25 Search check also reveals the hidden button, which is indistinguishable from the masonry of the Room in the center of the north wall. Pressing this button opens the secret door, which automatically shuts by itself one minute later. There is no way to open this secret panel from the other side.

This chamber is bare but a powerful presence is felt within its shadows. A closer look inside this room reveals a mighty skeletal warrior sitting atop a powerful-looking dragon-like creature with sickly gray skin, empty eye sockets, and a pair of wide wings of pale leathery flesh. The bony humanoid corpse wears golden breastplate armor, from under which strands of purplish viscera protrude. The animated skeleton also has a long membrane dangling from its wide-open jaw, which functions as its tongue.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A mohrg (hp 135) mounted on top of a wyvern zombie (hp 97) guards this Room. The creature is in charge of opening the secret door should another of its kind wish to travel to or from Room N118 or Room N119. When mohrgs arrive from the other side of the secret panel, they bang five times upon the masonry wall to let the mohrg in this Room know they are there. PCs imitating this signal fool the honor guard into thinking servants of the mummy priestess wish to pass through.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: This mohrg hates the living and attacks anyone not serving Kasteoficiss. Its wyvern zombie mount obeys its every whim.

The mohrg uses its undead mount to charge the PCs as soon as it spots them. The undead remains atop the wyvern zombie for as long as it can and uses its paralyzing touch attack against the PCs while its mount slams into them. This undead prefers to target armored PCs, but does not shy from attacking anyone closing into melee.

Treasure: The mohrg wears a masterwork breastplate fashioned from gold. This item is worth four times the value of similar masterwork armors fashioned from more typical materials, such as iron or steel. He always wears a signet ring with a fine blood ruby set in the top (250 gp).

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one mohrg and one wyvern zombie mount. To decrease the challenge, remove the wyvern zombie.

N118. SPIKED FLOOR TRAP

The floor of this empty chamber is filled with countless holes lending the impression that an unclear pattern was specially designated for the space.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The entire floor of this Room is rigged with a mechanical trap that is activated one round after anyone weighing at least 50 lbs. steps upon it. There is no way to bypass the trap other than avoid stepping upon the subtle pressure plates covering the floor.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, replace the giant wasp poison with dragon bile. To decrease the challenge, replace the giant wasp poison with blue whinnis.

N119. ALLIP PRIESTS' FIRST PREPARATION CHAMBER

This room contains a five-foot tall basin made out of deep blue marble. The oval basin holds a clear liquid and painted on the north wall in silvery paint, are markings that make up unfathomable designs.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The allip servants of the mummy priestess use this Room to cleanse their spirit before entering the place of worship (Room N120). Though these crazed undead perform mock rituals, ceaselessly uttering disquieting gibberish, they nevertheless obey the wishes of their mistress and perform the cleansing rite to honor her god to the best of their abilities.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy, Unhallowed 8

Tactics: This Room is amazingly clean in comparison to the other Rooms in the Section. The PCs should feel uneasy in this Room, no matter their experience level. The supernatural negative forces have tainted the once warded tomb. Now, the foul taint of the undead spreads over everything like a cancer.

While presently unoccupied, after the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

N120. PLACE OF WORSHIP, FIRST

The walls of this chamber form a perfect circle around a massive stone altar that dominates the place. The walls are painted in a deep blue shade and the flames of the five candles of deep blue wax set upon the altar fail to keep the shadows at bay. The dark shapes of five ghostly creatures fly several feet above floor level. These eerie fiends mumble moaning sounds and utter words that are beyond recognition as they circle around the central altar.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Five mighty allip servants (hp 83, 79, 77, 76, 73) currently pray in this Room. Though their mumbled gibberish is incomprehensible to anyone, these acolytes of Kasteoficiss are deeply focused on their prayers and suffer from a -4 circumstance penalty to Listen and Spot checks made to notice the PCs' presence.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 8, Distracting Visions 8, Echoes 4, Unhallowed 6

Tactics: Once the allip disciples notice the PCs, they engage in melee combat, draining the PCs' Wisdom as their primary objective. They target PCs wearing the signs of other faiths first — such as clerics and paladins — and ceaselessly moan and whine gibberish capable of fascinating the strongest warriors.

Treasure: The five candles upon the altar are made of dark blue wax and enchanted with continual flame. They radiate evil.

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 ft. of the allip must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the dark deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse, prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N121. INACTIVE TRAP

The floor of this dark room is covered with stone debris of all shapes and sizes.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A closer look at the ceiling of this Room reveals that several stones are missing. However, the gap created by the missing stones forms a perfect square, as if the neatly cut stone blocks were meant to fall. A PC succeeding at a DC 20 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check confirms that the broken stones were once part of the ceiling. A PC with the trapfinding succeeding at a DC 25 Search check notices the floor is rigged with countless hidden pressure plates.

This Room once contained a falling block trap that was activated long ago. Because the stone blocks are now broken, the trap is completely useless and may not be repaired.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

N122. ALLIP PRIESTS' SECOND PREPARATION CHAMBER

This chamber holds a dark blue marble basin. The oval basin is five-feet tall and lies at the foot of the north wall. It contains a crystal clear liquid. Painted upon the north wall are runic marks of a strange quality. What is most impressive about this place, however, are the two dark ghost-like creatures hovering three feet above the floor. These fiends are uttering disquieting ceremonial gibberish.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Like Room N119, this chamber is used by the allip initiates of the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss to perform an ancient cleansing ritual prior to entering the place of worship (Room N123). Although the allips' cleansing ritual pales in contrast to what this proud tradition used to be, Kasteoficiss insists that they continue to perform it. Her demented allip servants do the best they can to respect her wishes.

Two powerful allip servants (hp 81, 76) are currently moaning incomprehensible babble in an effort to cleanse their spirit before moving on to Room N123, where they plan on paying homage to their mummy mistress' God of Death. Because they are concentrating on their task, these allips suffer from a -4 penalty to all checks made to notice the presence of the PCs.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Like most of their kind, these creatures whine and babble restlessly, which has a hypnotic effect on the living. These undead fiends close in on the PCs, engaging them in melee, as soon as they are made aware of their presence. They attempt to strike them and drain their Wisdom score, targeting anyone who openly bears the symbol of another deity first.

Treasure: The marble basin in this Room contains the equivalent of 1d6+4 vials of unholy water.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add three allips. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

SERVANTS OF KASTEOFICISS

Kasteoficiss' allip servants worship the same dark god as their mistress. The deity considers the allips active followers and bestows them a number of benefits as long as they continue to perform dark rituals in his honor. These special allip servants can use a number of spell-like abilities each day and are under the permanent effect of bless.

N123. PLACE OF WORSHIP, SECOND

This perfectly round chamber is cast in heavy shadows surrounding a simple but large stone altar where five blue candles are burning. The walls of this room are painted in a deep blue color.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is another place of worship used by the allip disciples of the mummy priestess. This small shrine is currently not used by any of Kasteoficiss' minions, however.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 10, Haunted

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: The five candles upon the altar are enchanted with continual flame. In addition, with a DC 25 Search check the PC find trace amounts of powdered silver portions of the floor (as if they fell out of ones clothing before disrobing).

N124. TRAPPED DOORWAY

The door to this Room is trapped.

✦ Greater Glyph of Warding (Blast) Trap (X2): CR 14; spell; spell trigger; no reset; spell effect (greater glyph of warding [blast], 12th-level cleric, 20d8 acid, DC 21 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34. This trap combines the effects of two greater glyph of warding [blast] traps.

This small room is empty save for the undisturbed cloak of dust covering the floor. An eerie calm fills the air and challenges your senses.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Though the allip servants of the mummy priestess occasionally enter this Room, these creatures prefer to frequent other portions of their mistress' domain, notably the two places of worship (Rooms N120 and N123) reserved especially for them. They are immune to the trap.

Encounter Condition: Deep Silence

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter. Afterwards, no Encounter occurs for 3d6 hours.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add energy drain to the greater glyph of warding trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the greater glyph of warding trap to 16d8.

N125. SKELETAL REMAINS

Several pieces of bone are scattered all over this room, obviously the remnants of a creature or creatures. This room is otherwise empty and oddly clean.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A successful DC 18 Knowledge (nature) check reveals that the bone fragments come from three large minotaurs. The large skeletons are incomplete, however, with missing skulls, jaws, femurs, and ribs. These remains have been here for centuries uncounted.

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 6

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: If the PCs sift through the detritus, they can find a ring of protection +2 with a successful DC 30 Search check. Blackened from age, it looks like any other portion of the floor.

N126. ALLIP DISCIPLES' PRIVATE QUARTERS

The floor of this square chamber is covered with a thick white pelt. Scattered over the pelt are dozens of pieces of black glass. Hovering above the floor are eight ghostly shapes. They look translucent. Their voices echo with their own gibberish, reverberating within the confines of the small room.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room is the private chamber of the allip disciples serving the mummy priestess. Though most allips spend their time in meditative contemplation in Rooms N119, N120, N122, and N123, these allips chatter incomprehensible babble amongst themselves.

Eight powerful allip servants (hp 80 each) hover about the Room, babbling. They dance in some fiendish scene of macabre butchery, acting out their own death thralls. They repeat this act in order to honor the god of death.

Encounter Condition: Concealment, Poor Flooring 20

Tactics: When the PCs enter the Room, the allips attack. They fly to the top of the 40 ft. high ceiling and swoop back down on the PCs. They fly around round after round, attacking the PCs in a feverish ballet of carnage. They can only attack every other round, moving in a mobius strip pattern, gaining the benefit of Flyby Attack and a +4 bonus to Reflex saves against area effect spells and spell-like abilities. Since they attack every other round, four PCs are randomly attacked each round. Because of this, the PCs cannot control which allip they attack each round — they are practically indistinguishable. As a result, when the PCs damage an allip, roll a 1d8 to see which one is injured.

It also important to note, after three rounds the babbling of the allips turns into a feverish whine. The pitch rises and descends, making a horrible noise that combines into a maddening effect.

First, the PCs must save against each babble. Second, even with a successful save, the sound of the whine constantly changes. Thus, immunity against a specific allip only lasts for 1d6 minutes as opposed to 24 hours. Lastly, every time an allip dies, the pitch of the whine changes drastically and all PCs must save again, once, at a DC 15 + number of surviving allips, lest they be fascinated for 2d4 rounds.

A fascinated creature sits quietly, taking no actions other than to pay attention to the fascinating effect, for as long as the effect lasts. It takes a -4 penalty on skill checks made as reactions, such as Listen and Spot checks. Any potential threat, such as a hostile creature approaching, allows the fascinated creature a new saving throw against the fascinating effect. Any obvious threat, such as someone drawing a weapon, casting a spell, or aiming a ranged weapon at the fascinated creature, automatically breaks the effect. A fascinated creature's ally may shake it free of the spell as a standard action.

If the DM wishes to simplify this encounter, have the PCs make a single DC 22 Will save each round, lest they become flat-footed for the round. Since the allips are going to attack every round anyway, the PCs are going to make a lot of saving throws, which is just far too much bookkeeping for some groups.

Treasure: The white pelt comes from a large (and ancient) winter wolf. Though old and dry, this pelt is huge. It could be sold for upwards of 350 gp to naturalists or museums. In addition, the allips have grown fond of turning gems black with the malevolent presence. 1d100 gems of various size and style are now black lumps of glass. Collectors may pay as much as 5 gp each for these pieces, scattered about the floor.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one allip. To decrease the challenge, remove two.

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 ft. of the allip must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 1d6 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the dark deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse, prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N127. TEMPLE GUARDS' BARRACKS

The northern door of this Room is kept open at all times.

Two large skeletal figures with entrails issuing horrifically from their bony ribs stand in this empty room. Each of these loathsome creatures has shadowy holes pierced in their skulls, making their eye sockets a dreadful sight to behold. They also have unnaturally long tongues that end in forked pincers hanging from between their grinning teeth. On the wall behind them, a rod, obviously magical, rests across two metal pegs.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two Large mohrgs (hp 191, 177) guard this Room. These dreadful fiends keep a close eye on the corridor leading north and stand ready to attack anything they do not recognize as their mistress or one of her undead servants.

Encounter Condition: [Fog 5], Unhallowed 8

Tactics: If a fight breaks out, allow the mohrg in Room N128 a Listen or Spot check to notice. If successful, it arrives in 1 round to aid the mohrgs. Otherwise, allow checks every 3 rounds, until it notices the PCs.

The mohrgs in this Room charge the PCs the moment they spot them, preferring to target the strongest opponents. The mohrgs use their paralyzing touch abilities to weaken the PCs and turn all creatures they kill into mindless zombies.

During the first round, the mohrgs charge the largest PC pressing him back into the nearest wall, if possible. While the larger mohrg takes care of him, the other goes after nagging wizards and rogues, using its paralyzing touch to finish off spellcasters before they can do harm.

While they are not spellcasters, they carry special scrolls that Kasteoficiss has scribed just for them. If necessary, the larger mohrg pulls out a scroll of cloudkill and casts it on the entire Room (or hallway). Since undead have no Constitution score they are immune to the effects of the spell, but the PCs suffer 1d4 Constitution damage each round they are within the confines of the cloud. The cloud is 20 ft. high and has a 20-ft. radius. It remains for 18 minutes and obscures vision as fog cloud.

If the smaller mohrg is reduced to 50 hit points or less, it readies a scroll of horrid wilting and targets all living creatures in a 60-ft. radius with 18d6 points of damage. A DC 22 Fortitude saves for half. This scroll, like the scroll of cloudkill, is written in an unholy tongue. If the PCs wish to decipher either one, they must succeed at a DC 28 Decipher Script check or a DC 33 Spellcraft check (on each scroll). Failure means they cannot read them. Failure by more than 10, causes the reader to misread and 'spend' the energy stored in the scroll, rendering it useless. A natural '1' causes the spell to go off, targeting the nearest PC.

If the PCs successfully decipher the scrolls, they can use them normally.

Treasure: The southern door leads to a small closet filled with rotted clothing. Among the useless detritus are a set of golden dolphinshaped earrings (worth 155 gp), an ivory brooch resembling the face of a handsome elven youth (worth 135 gp), and a small piece of irregular amber (worth 90 gp).

A DC 40 Search check reveals a series of loose flagstones out of line with the rest of the floor. A dead elf is buried and crushed underneath. Prying the stones up takes about 20 minutes. Due to the weight of the stones, the bones have been pressed into powder and the corpse is beyond recognition. A DC 30 Heal check allows the PCs to decipher that it was in fact an elf.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Large Mohrg: CR 13; Large undead; HD 28d12; hp 191, 177; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) or +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) and +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +9, Ref +15, Will +18; Str 31, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +18, Hide +25, Listen +15, Move Silently +25, Spot +19, Swim +13; Alertness, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. Any opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Possessions: Scroll of cloudkill, scroll of horrid wilting.

N128. MOUNTED MOHRG GUARD POST

The door in the western wall of this Room has been destroyed and now only an archway stands there, which allows the mohrg guards posted to keep a close eye on the corridor beyond.

A tall skeletal creature is mounted atop a large reptilian beast with leathery wings, sickly skin, and hollow eyes. The bony undead sitting upon the zombie mount has a mass of red and purple writhing entrails encased within the confines of its ribcage. A long purple tongue ending in a claw hangs from the fiend's mouth.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A mohrg (hp 137) and its wyvern zombie mount (hp 98) stand watch in this Room. The mohrg attacks all living creatures that come across its path as well as all servants of the lich lords that dare violate its mistress' domain. Its wyvern zombie mount is well trained and obeys its command.

Encounter Condition: Echoes 6, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: This mohrg rider wears no armor and carries no weapon. It remains mounted for as long as it can manage, using the large body of the wyvern zombie to shield it from the PCs advances. In melee, the wyvern zombie uses its powerful slam attacks while the mohrg tries to paralyze the strongest PCs.

This mohrg fears Kasteoficiss and fights until destroyed, but it shrieks to alert its compatriots in Room N127. A successful DC 20 Listen check alerts the mohrgs in this Room, which come to aid their comrade 1d3 rounds later.

Treasure: The mohrg wears a silver band (worth 25 gp) upon the bony middle finger of its left hand. The band has a single sigil, honoring the god of death.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a mohrg and a wyvern zombie mount. To decrease the challenge, remove the wyvern zombie.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Bane (Sp): The special wyvern zombie is under the permanent effect of a bane.

Magic Circle Against Good (Sp): An aura equivalent to a permanent magic circle against good surrounds the special wyvern zombie.

Poison (Sp): The touch of a special wyvern zombie deals 1d10 Con damage (DC 19 Fortitude save negates), as if under the permanent effect of poison.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals can sense the unnatural presence of the special wyvern zombie at a distance of 30 ft. They do not willingly approach any nearer and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N129. TRAPPED CORRIDOR

The door on the north wall is sealed, requiring a DC 40 Strength check to break open.

This short hallway is cast in total darkness and a layer of dust, long undisturbed, covers the length of the floor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Kasteoficiss placed a powerful spell upon the floor of this corridor when she abandoned her main temple (Room N182) decades ago. There is no way to bypass this trap and her minions avoid this place entirely.

♦ Combined Fire Storm Trap: CR 16; magic device; location trigger; no reset; spell effect (fire storm, 15th-level cleric, 30d6 fire, DC 23 Reflex save half); multiple targets (all targets within the Room); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33. Note: This trap combines the effects of two fire storm spells cast simultaneously.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs find a way to disable this fire storm trap, the door to the Room can be locked and it is considered Safe.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add symbol of insanity to the combined fire storm trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage dealt by the combined fire storm trap to 24d6.

N130. EMPTY WYVERN PEN

Like most rooms in this section of the dungeon, this simple chamber is cast in heavy shadow. A closer examination reveals a small pile of broken bones and dried flesh in the southeasternmost corner of the room.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The mummified corpse in the southeast corner is what remains of an elf who ventured into this Room, drawn by the undeniable a death knell. He was killed by the combined might of three wyvern zombies before being torn to pieces. The corpse is dry and most of it is deprived of flesh. What remains of the elf's skin, however, is blackened and hard.

Encounter Condition: [Ambush (darkness)], Fear 18, Unhallowed 8

Tactics: While there are no "tactics" to the Room, the DM may wish to have the elf come to life as a mohrg, attacking the PCs when they inspect its body. It gains automatic surprise and deals maximum damage on the first round. After that it attacks the closest PC in the hopes of creating more spawn.

Treasure: PCs succeeding at a DC 18 Search check finds a tarnished silver ring (worth 10 gp if cleaned) on a skeletal finger of the corpse. The silver ring has the symbol of the god of death burned into its surface.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N131. COMPACTING ROOM

The three doors leading into this simple chamber are colored with a cracked blue dye and reveal the same gray stone that make up most of the walls of the dungeon under the dry surfaces.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room contains a mechanical trap, placed here centuries before by the celestials. Designed to finish off those who would dare rescue the undead from their tomb, it presses the floor and ceiling together. Two rounds after anyone heavier than 50 lbs. steps upon the floor in the center of the Room, the ceiling and floor move towards one another.

♦ Compacting Room Trap: CR 14; mechanical; timed trigger; automatic reset; hidden switch bypass (Search DC 28); walls move together (16d6 crush); multiple targets (all targets in the room); never miss; onset delay (1 round); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 26.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Immediately after the trap triggers, the doors lock. If the PCs left a door open, it stays open, although bars jut from the doorjam (above and below) where the door would be pinned closed. It takes a full round for the walls to crush together, so PCs have exactly 6 seconds to make it out of the Room. Allow DC 20 Reflex saves to exit through an open door. If no door remains open, escape is impossible and every PC suffers 16d6 crush damage.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the compacting Room trap to 20d6. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the compacting Room trap to 12d6.

N132. LONE MOHRG RIDER

A large dragon-like animated corpse with dark eye sockets, pale gray flesh, and a pair of wide leathery wings dominates this room. A six-foot tall skeleton sits upon the undead beast, an eerie jumble of writhing viscera protruding from its ribcage. The skeleton creature holds a large steel shield and a disquietingly long tongue falls from his half opened mouth.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A mohrg (hp 131) and its wyvern zombie mount (hp 97) are on guard duty here. They attack all living creatures brave or fool enough to enter the lair of the mummy priestess, as well as all constructs and undead fiends they deem enemies. The zombie mount obeys its rider's every whim.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The mohrg maneuvers its mount, using the body of the wyvern zombie to hamper the PCs' movement. Both rider and steed do not hesitate to charge into melee combat. While the wyvern zombie uses its slam attacks to harm the PCs, the mohrg paralyzes them, targeting the spellcasters whenever possible. This mohrg enjoys its unlife and its station among Kasteoficiss' servants. It retreats to Room N133 as soon as its hit point total drops below 75. If unable to retreat, it parleys with the PCs, bargaining any information it has in exchange for their mercy. The mohrg, however, remains loyal to its mistress and never betrays her. If the PCs talk with it, the mohrg offers to arrange a meeting with Kasteoficiss.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one mohrg and one wyvern zombie mount. Replace their masterwork bastard swords with +1 unholy bastard swords. To decrease the challenge, remove the wyvern zombie and the +2 heavy steel shield.

✦ Mohrg: CR 10; Medium undead; HD 20d12; hp 131; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 29, touch 14, flat-footed 25; Base Atk +10; Grp +16; Atk +16 melee (1d6+8, slam) or +16 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +16 melee (1d6+8, slam) and +15 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +6, Ref +12, Will +14; Str 23, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +18, Hide +25, Listen +15, Move Silently +25, Spot +19, Swim +13; Alertness, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. Any opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Possessions: +2 heavy steel shield, masterwork bastard sword.

✦ Wyvern Zombie: CR 10; Large undead; HD 14d12+3; hp 97; Init +0; Spd 20 ft., fly 60 ft. (poor); AC 20, touch 8, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +7; Grp +16; Atk +11 melee (2d6+7 + poison, slam) or +11 melee (2d6+5 + poison, talons); Full Atk +11 melee (2d6+7, slam) or +11 melee (2d6+5, talons); SA Poison; SQ Single actions only, bane, damage reduction 5/slashing, darkvision 60 ft., magic circle against good, undead traits, unnatural aura; AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +4, Will +9; Str 21, Dex 10, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Bane (Sp): The special wyvern zombie is under the permanent effect of a bane.

Magic Circle Against Good (Sp): An aura equivalent to a permanent magic circle against good surrounds the special wyvern zombie.

Poison (Sp): The touch of a special wyvern zombie deals 1d10 Con damage (DC 19 Fortitude save negates), as if under the permanent effect of poison.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals can sense the unnatural presence of the special wyvern zombie at a distance of 30 ft. They do not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N133. OUTER GUARD POST

All three doors to this Room are trapped. Warded with horrid wilting and energy drain, they affect any living creature opening the door.

✦ Horrid Wilting Trap: CR 12; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; spell effect (horrid wilting, 18th-level wizard, 18d6 damage to all living creatures within 60 ft., DC 23 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 36; Disable Device DC 38.

✦ Energy Drain Trap: CR 10; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; Atk +8 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, 2d4 negative levels for 24 hours, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

This room is unlit and empty, but two large skeletal figures with great horns protruding from their skulls stand guard in this chamber. The dreadful fiends' ribcages are filled with horrid viscera of the most hideous shades of reds, purples, and blues, but their most disquieting features are without any doubt the long pincer-like tongues dangling from their skinless jaws.

Encounter: Three mohrgs (hp 195, 187, 171) stand guard over this Room. Their duty is to prevent anyone from entering their mistress' domain, but most importantly to continue to ensure that the mummy priestess maintains access to Room N134 and the central vault beyond (Room N159), where she believes the avatar of her deity is entombed.

Encounter Condition: Deep Silence, Distracting Visions 8, Fear 22, Negative Energy, Spell Resistance 20

Tactics: This is a nearly impossible encounter for the PCs. Even if they survive the traps unharmed, they must contend with three very powerful mohrg and a silence that cannot be dispelled. While the silence does not extend into the hallway, it does make things difficult for those passing back and forth through the doorway.

The mohrg charge anyone entering this Room, pushing the fight into the hallway if the PCs outnumber them. They attack without mercy, targeting fighters and warrior-types whenever possible. In melee, the mohrgs use their paralyzing touch attack to weaken the PCs and turn every target they kill into mindless minions, which are later sent to the Badlands (Room N180).

They are formidable as a three point barricade around a doorway, pinning advancing PCs in the middle. In such an instance, all three gain the benefit of flank, even though there is an "open" side. The largest of the mohrg's has razor sharp bones, granting him an increased critical threat range and multiplier (19–20/x3).

Allow the mohrg rider in Room N132 a DC 22 Listen check. Success indicates the rider joins the fray 1d2+1 rounds later.

If the PCs kill these mohrgs, three more are posted within 24 hours. Future reinforcements arrive in 36-hour intervals, but there are 4 of them. If the PCs succeed in killing 4 waves of mohrg reinforcements, Kasteoficiss (Room N191) herself arrives to finish the PCs off.

Lastly, these mohrg are permanently immune to lightning bolt, magic missile, and searing light.

Treasure: One of the mohrgs carries a masterwork silver dagger, which has never seen combat. The dagger is tucked in a jeweled scabbard in surprisingly good shape. It is fashioned from thick leather and studded with deep green spines. It is worth upwards of 450 gp.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one mohrg. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Large Mohrg: CR 13; Large undead; HD 28d12; hp 195, 187, 171; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) or +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) and +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +9, Ref +15, Will +18; Str 31, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10.

Skills and Feats: Climb +26, Hide +30, Listen +21, Move Silently +30, Spot +25, Swim +19; Alertness, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility, Power Attack, Spring Attack.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N134. SECOND CENTRAL ANTECHAMBER

When the angels designed the dungeon, they created the magical wall of force to prevent anyone from entering Room N159 — as well as to make sure what was imprisoned within would not escape. The bronze door leading to Room N159 is locked. Finding the oversized copper key matching the design engraved in the copper circle upon the door and then placing this key inside the grooves of the copper circle unlocks the door, but only if the keys that unlocks the other three antechambers like this one (Rooms N112, N148, and N158) are also set in place.

This corridor is empty save for the wall of force that scintillates with subtle colors. On the other side of the force field is a wide bronze door set upon a frame of dark gray stone. No knob is set upon the door, but there is a large circle made out of copper in the middle of it. Indented in the center of this circle is the form of a large key.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: To gain access the central vault (Room N159), PCs must bypass the wall of forces in each of the four anterooms and then use the four special keys to unlock each of the doors leading to Room N159. Once the fourth door is unlocked, all doors leading to Room N159 open.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 12

Tactics: To bypass the walls of force, four different levers must be activated. When the PCs place the last of these levers in the northern position, thus activating it, all force walls in the antechambers (Rooms N112, N134, N148, and N158) are instantly deactivated. The different levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, N222, and N250.

The angels who built this place imbued the four antechambers with potent magic, which ensures that no evil-aligned creatures can enter.

N135 THROUGH N159. NEUTRAL GROUND

A wide area comprising Rooms N135 through N159 is neutral ground that separates the domains of Invistis, Kasteoficiss, and Vinnara. Mainly composed of long empty corridors and small chambers, the minions of these three undead masters occasionally visit the place, but for the most part avoid it altogether.

Rooms N135 through N142 separate Invistis' humble domain with Kasteoficiss' vast territory. Some of these chambers are filled with stone debris, some are locked with an intricate mechanism to prevent both warring factions to reach the other side, and others are trapped. While Room N159 holds the most powerful creature in the dungeon prisoner, the other chambers in this section stand between Invistis' lair and Vinnara's haunting grounds.

While journeying through these neutral grounds, PCs encounter little opposition aside from the occasional trap and rare undead minion serving one of the three warring factions.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	Stone debris fall upon the PCs' shoulders. However, the rubble is harmless and the ceiling above is solid enough, posing no immediate threat to the party.
2	A heavy fog moves through the hall. Drafty. Fog 10.
3–11	Nothing
12–13	Two dread wraiths under Vinnara's command patrol this Section. These vile fiends attack the PCs as soon as they sense their presence.
14	Five 12 HD allips are looking to take control of a Room or two in the neutral ground. They view the PCs as a threat, and attack immediately.
15	Two 24 HD mohrgs (serving Kasteoficiss) patrol this Section. Following their mistress' command, these fiends attack anything they encounter before reporting back to her.
16–17	An iron golem loyal to Invistis guards this Room. The automaton's orders are to attack anything it sees.
18	The PCs stumble upon a trap. Maximized Double Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 18; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 120 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28. This trap combines the effects of two maximized lightning bolt spells cast simultaneously.
19	This Room is badly damaged and fallen debris from the walls and ceiling lies scattered about. A PC succeeding at DC 20 Knowledge (architecture and engineering) check realizes the ceiling is about to collapse. Hazardous Footing 22, Tremors 22.
20	A greater shadow considers this Room its private home. It attacks anyone who enters.

N135. EMPTY CHAMBER

Except for a small pile of broken rocks and crushed stone debris on the east wall, this room is empty.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The mound of debris was piled up in this Room at the time Kasteoficiss took dominion of her realm, after her minions cleaned up the rest of the place.

Encounter Condition: Poor Footing 6, [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs find a way to barricade the door, they can rest here for up to 36 hours without harassment.

Treasure: A DC 30 Search check reveals a loose stone, marked with chalk. The chalk marks have faded over the years, but appear to be tally marks. Under the stone is a diary, bound in leather and warded with a fire trap. The diary tells of a band of elves [deserters] who escaped the rigors of Region H and snuck into the tomb of the unliving (apparently using invisibility and having a fast archer distract the shield guardians).

The journal goes on to describe that the tomb is a horrible place, where the dead are never allowed to rest. Zombies that were put down come back to life the next day, ready to kill the elves again. The person writing the journal is obviously a wizard as he explains the various spells they used against the undead.

"Certain Rooms appear to negate our magic and the dead are unrelenting. If only there were a way out."

Lastly, the writer describes what he believes is trickery. "One of our members seems fascinated with the bodies of the zombies. He has started to collect fingers, skulls, whatever he can find. Yesterday he cut a zombie into four quarters and watched as they slowly grew back together. Something is amiss and I no longer trust my companions."

N136. TRAPPED INTERSECTION

The northern door to this Room is broken off its hinges.

Three doors open in this dark and empty room. A heavy chill fills the air as heat pushes up from below. The room is the constant battle of light and dark.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Both the servants of Invistis and the minions of the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss are aware of the lethal trap here and avoid this intersection. Whenever someone moves through this Room, the magical trap is triggered, releasing a mighty storm of hail, sleet, and snow that lasts 10 rounds. This trap affects everyone within a 360-ft. radius centered in the middle of the Room.

Storm of Vengeance Trap (with Meteor Swarm): CR 14; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (storm of vengeance, 20th-level cleric; 1st round—deafened for 1d4 × 10 minutes, DC 24 Fortitude save negates; 2nd round—acid rain for 1d6 damage; 3rd round—six bolts of lightning, maximum of one per target, 10d6 electricity, DC 24 Reflex save half damage; 4th round—hailstorm, 5d6 bludgeoning damage; 5th to 10th round—violent winds); spell effect (meteor swarm, four exploding meteors causing 6d6 fire damage each) Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Drafty, Extreme Cold*, Extreme Heat*, Spell Resistance 20*

Tactics: The Spell Resistance in this Room does not affect the trap, but does affect the PCs.

The Extreme Cold and Heat battle one another, affecting the PCs on alternating rounds. If it is not apparent to the PCs, this is a Room that neither side of this wants to fall into the wrong hands.

Treasure: A DC 40 Search check reveals a pair of mummified hands that are nailed to the east wall. Rings on the hands bear the symbols of Kasteoficiss, but they appear to have been scorched and marked. Allow the PCs to find the hands with ease, if they find a way to light the Room.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add fire storm to the storm of vengeance trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the Search and Disable Device DCs of the storm of vengeance trap by -5.

N137. RUINED CHAMBER

The southern door to this Room is locked from inside. Even if the PCs open the door (requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check), they must succeed at a DC 22 Strength check to push the door open wide enough to walk through.

This room is filled with stone debris. Judging by the state of the walls and the chunks of stone missing from the ceiling, it is obvious that entering this room might be dangerous.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: There is nothing of value here, but the walls and floor indicate that more than a few dozen fights have taken place here. One gouge, three inches deep, indicates that something with a massive axe was here once.

Encounter Condition: Hazardous Footing 20, Tremors 20, Spell Resistance 18

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: Traces of silver powder can be found in various quantities around the Room. There is not enough to be scooped up, but should an undead creature step in the powder it suffers damage as though it were hit with holy water. Kasteoficiss' minions know this and fight from the eastern hallway without entering the Room.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N138. HIDDEN CORRIDOR

This empty room reeks with the overwhelming smell of decay. Narrow grooves are visible upon the south wall of this chamber, revealing a ten-foot wide stone panel.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This panel was designed as a false secret door, which can be spotted as soon as anyone inspects the Room. This heavy panel is fashioned from a single stone block and must be pushed open with a successful DC 20 Strength check. It veers on hinges, which are set into the door frame (so they cannot be seen when the panel is closed).

Beyond the secret doorway is a short corridor leading to a false door. The knob of this door is imbued with contact poison, so any creature touching it automatically suffers its effect. This door is fixed to the stone wall beyond and cannot be opened by any means.

♣ Doorknob Smeared with Black Lotus Extract Poison: CR 12; mechanical; touch trigger (attached); manual reset; poison (black lotus extract, DC 20 Fortitude save resists; 3d6 Con/3d6 Con); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 30.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 7, Fear 15, Fog 10

Tactics: The Fear effect takes place after the PCs touch the trapped doorknob. The fog is also an after effect, blanketing the Room.

After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add dragon bile poison to the doorknob trap and increase the Search DC to 36. To decrease the challenge, replace the black lotus extract from the poisoned doorknob trap with dragon bile poison.

N139. CORNER CHAMBER

This simple chamber connects two corridors together. Though it is obvious that doors once stood in the archways leading into this room, these were taken out, leaving only narrow openings.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room houses an evil feeling. Unlike the other Rooms that are filled with dread and decay, this chamber is filled with a restless energy, like a dead child wishing to return home.

Encounter Condition: Drafty, Echoes 6, Extreme Cold, Haunted, Unhallowed 5

Tactics: If the PCs spend 10 minutes or longer here, haunting images unfold. Feel free to add whatever unnerving, but not horrific images come to mind. The PCs should feel as though they've just seen something very sad take place that they can't do anything to avoid. Heroes of the magnitude of the PCs should be frustrated and saddened by this. Roleplay it up, but don't force them to feel anything. Use your best judgement on how you think they'll respond to these images.

Treasure: If the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, have them make DC 22 Will saves. If they fail, they are shaken for 1d6 hours. If they succeed, they gain the benefit of bles for 2d6 hours.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N140. DAMAGED CHAMBER

Each door leading into this Room is locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock. In addition the southern door is locked and warded from the inside. A DC 45 Open Lock check is required to unlock the southern door from the inside.

♣ Wail of the Banshee Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (wail of the banshee, 17th-level wizard, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); multiple targets (up to 17 creatures); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

There is a wide hole, approximately ten-foot wide by fifteen deep, in the middle of this simple room. A closer look at the pit reveals rusty picks and damaged shovels lying at the bottom of it. The pit was dug from the bedrock, uncovering more solid gray stone. Three rotted corpses, possibly elves, lie in various positions around the room. They look to have died peacefully.

On the left hand of one of the corpses a single ring glows with a sickly pale green light.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Long ago, elves were trapped in this Room. Surrounded on all sides by undead, they locked themselves inside and began digging into the earth below. Having spent months here, they eventually went mad and gave up when they continued to find stone 15 ft. down. Their remains indicate the position they were in when they died.

Encounter Condition: [Fear 22], Haunted, Stagnant Air[®]

Tactics: In addition to the Encounter Conditions above, this Room suffers from a madness effect, similar to insanity. In addition to becoming shaken, PCs failing their fear saves suffer permanent confusion and 1d4 Wisdom drain. This save is only made after the PCs have spent 30 minutes in the Room.

The Stagnant Air ends after all four doors have been open for 30 minutes or two doors have been open for 1 hour.

Treasure: Five heavy pickaxes covered with rust and three unusable shovels lie at the bottom of the pit. The elves carried a small bit of gold on them (45 gp altogether) and several pieces of jewelry (10 pieces worth about 750 gp altogether). One of the elf corpses wears a magical ring that glows green when undead were within 60 ft. The ring glows and radiates moderate abjuration.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N141. RUBBLE MOUND

A giant mound of stone debris is piled in this room. The rubble pile takes up the entire width of the chamber and is twenty feet high at its highest point.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The rubble is impassible. However, even if the PCs manage to clear the rubble, the backwall is just beyond the pile. DMs looking to aggravate the PCs should allow them to think there is a secret door here or at least something of value.

Encounter Condition: [Safe], [Smoke]

Tactics: If the PCs start to move the rubble, dust kicks up like Smoke, choking them as they work. The stones can be cleared in a number of hours equal to 35 minus the Strength of the PC working. Up to two PCs can work together to clear the rubble.

If the PCs have locked the doors in Room N140, this Room is considered Safe.

Treasure: If the PCs spend at least 1 hour clearing away rubble, allow Search checks. A successful DC 35 Search check uncovers a +2 unholy heavy mace and several fragments of elongated bones.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N142. SUMMONED DEMON TRAP

As soon as anyone passes through the archway leading to this Room, a trap triggers. Unholy runes, marking the archway, indicate that something is amiss.

♦ Combined Summon Monster VIII Trap: CR 14; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (summon monster VIII, 18th-level sorcerer; Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33. Note: This trap summons five vrock demons.

As soon as the first PC passes through the doorway, the door closes and locks behind him, trapping him in the Room with the demons. Opening the door requires a DC 40 Open Lock check, which takes 5 minutes. This time is trimmed by 1 minute for every 3 the PC succeeds the check by (minimum 1 minute). Failure means the PC has wasted 5 minutes trying to open the lock.

The DM should make this check secretly.

Two sequential knock spells open the door as well.

There is nothing special in this room except for a small chunk of roughly cut yellow corundum imbedded in the center of the floor and soot ringing the walls, some 3 feet off the ground.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Another of a series of Room that remains uncontrolled, Invistis has placed a horrible trap, used to lure Kasteoficiss' undead to a horrible fate.

Upon triggering the trap, five vrock demons (hp 115 each) surround the PC, filling the Room with unholy energy. Invistis sends servants here from time to time to clear out the Room, destroying any remaining vocks and clearing the Room of dead. Due to the nature of the Room, the Negative Energy effects anything that enters it, living and undead alike.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment, Distracting Noises 9, Fearless, Negative Energy, Smoke

Tactics: Rogues with defensive roll or opportunist are allowed a DC 25 Reflex save to get into the Room before the door closes, thus allowing a second (or third) PC into the fight. Increase the save DC by +5 for every 5 ft. away from the first PC the rogue was standing when the trap triggers. So long as no one is in the square just outside the door, a rogue can use this same Reflex save to exit the Room.

Once summoned, the vocks spend one round orienting themselves, giving the trapped PC time to formulate a plan. On the second round, the vocks close and release their spores, almost simultaneously.

The largest two cast heroism on themselves on round three, as they prepare for the next wave of carnage.

On the fourth round, three of the vocks pull back and begin their dance of ruin. This dance, if it remains uninterrupted, releases a blast of unholy energy three rounds later. PCs inside and outside the Room (up to 100 ft. away) are struck suffer 20d6 damage (DC 18 Will save for half) from the vocks demonic dance. Undead in neighboring Rooms come to investigate if they take damage from this ability.

The vocks release their spores, often. While they can only do this every third round, if spread out enough, it feels like the PCs are being hit every round. Since these spores burrow into the PCs' skin and do damage for 10 rounds, this is a lot of bookkeeping. If the DM wishes he can replace the spores with magma-hot stones that burrow into the skin and do 3d6 fire damage on round 1 and 3d6 fire damage on round 2.

The vocks wait until the PCs open the door before using their stunning screech. Should all of the PCs become stunned or disabled in anyway, the vocks push passed them and into the dungeon, wrecking havoc on the unliving. Their chaotic nature is magnified by the unholy aura of the tomb.

Treasure: The gemstone placed here by [Invistis] to encourage intrusion is a fiery corundum worth 115 gp. Removing it from the wall without damaging it requires a DC 30 Disable Device or Open Lock check.

The gem is trapped with poison gas, should the PCs tamper with it.

♦ Insanity Mist Vapor Trap: CR 9; mechanical; location trigger; repair reset; gas; never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (insanity mist, DC 15 Fortitude save resists, 1d4 Wis/2d6 Wis); multiple targets (all targets in a 10-ft.-by-10-ft. room); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 20.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, replace the summon monster VIII trap with a summon monster IX trap (which summons five hezrou demons). To decrease the challenge, replace the summon monster VIII trap with a summon monster VII trap (which summons five babau demons).

♦ Vrock: CR 9; Large outsider (chaotic, extraplanar, evil); HD 10d8+70; hp 115; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., fly 50 ft. (average); AC 22, touch 11, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +10; Grp +20; Atk +15 melee (2d6+6, claw); Full Atk +15 melee (2d6+6, 2 claws) and +13 melee (1d8+3, bite) and +13 melee (1d6+3, 2 talons); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Dance of ruin, spell-like abilities, spores, stunning screech, summon demon; SQ Damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to electricity and poison, resistance to acid 10, cold 10, and fire 10, spell resistance 17, telepathy 100 ft.; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +9, Will +10; Str 23, Dex 15, Con 25, Int 14, Wis 16, Cha 16.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +20, Diplomacy +5, Hide +11, Intimidate +16, Knowledge (any one) +15, Listen +24, Move Silently +15, Search +15, Sense Motive +16, Spellcraft +15, Spot +24, Survival +3 (+5 following tracks); Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Multiattack, Power Attack. Dance of Ruin (Su): To use this ability, a group of at least three vocks must join hands in a circle, dancing wildly about and chanting.

At the end of 3 rounds of dancing, a wave of crackling energy flashes outward in a 100-ft. radius. All creatures except for demons within the radius take 20d6 points of damage (Reflex DC 18 half). Stunning, paralyzing, or slaying one of the vocks stops the dance. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—mirror image, telekinesis (DC 18), greater teleport (self plus 50 pounds of objects only); 1/day—heroism. Caster level 12th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Spores (Ex): A vrock can release masses of spores from its body once every 3 rounds as a free action. The spores automatically deal 1d8 points of damage to all creatures adjacent to the vrock. They then penetrate the skin and grow, dealing an additional 1d4 points of damage each round for 10 rounds. At the end of this time, the victim is covered with a tangle of viny growths. (The vines are harmless and wither away in 1d4 days.) A delay poison spell stops the spores' growth for its duration. Bless, neutralize poison, or remove disease kills the spores, as does sprinkling the victim with a vial of holy water.

Stunning Screech (Su): Once per hour a vrock can emit a piercing screech. All creatures except for demons within a 30-ft. radius must succeed on a DC 22 Fortitude save or be stunned for 1 round. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Summon Demon (Sp): Once per day these vocks can attempt to summon another vrock with a 35% chance of success. This ability is the equivalent of a 3rd-level spell.

Skills: Vocks have a +8 racial bonus on Listen and Spot checks.

N143. EMPTY INTERSECTION

The three doors opening into this chamber are locked. A successful DC 40 Open Lock check is enough to unlock them.

A pale coat of dust cloaks the floor of this empty chamber. Two other doors lead out of the room, coated with ichor and dead flesh. The smell is pungent and rank, filling your nostrils with an almost acidic odor. An unholy chill fills the air.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room lies between three evil empires. While no one lays claim to it, the hate that brews in the tomb is concentrated here. The stagnant, cold air, makes the conditions almost unlivable.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 22⁺, Extreme Cold, Stagnant Air, Unhallowed 16

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Treasure: Buried under one of the stones is the crushed stone of a mohrg lieutenant that Invistis captured and tortured centuries earlier. Unless the PCs succeed at a DC 60 Search check, there is no way for them to find the head. Should they find it and remove it from the Room, the Extreme Cold is removed and the Unhallowed Encounter Condition is reduced to 10.

N144. AUDACIOUS ALLIP

A successful DC 40 Open Lock check is required to unlock each of the four doors leading into this Room.

This chamber, spartan and damp, is cast in heavy shadow. The ghostly shape of an eerie figure emerges from the darkness, moaning and gibbering, its empty eye betraying an underlying evil.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A maddened allip (hp 81) loyal to Kasteoficiss haunts this Room. Fearlessly, it ventures as close to Invistis' lair as it dares, waiting before reporting back to its mistress. It attacks the PCs as soon as they enter, unafraid of anything.

Encounter Condition: Fear 25, Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 15

Tactics: This allip attacks the most heavily armored opponents first. It babbles ceaselessly, using its ghostly touch to sap the health of its victims. It also babbles in an impossibly chaotic pattern, muttering at various frequencies and pitch. Because of this, PCs must make Will saves against the allip's babbling each round, regardless of whether they succeeded in previous rounds. In addition, it is among one of the most powerful allips in the dungeon. Its touch deals 1d6 Wisdom drain instead of 1d4 and the save DC of its babbling is increased by +4. Lastly, its AC is increased by +4 and it can fly 40 ft. per round.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two allips. To decrease the challenge, reduce the Encounter Condition to Unhallowed 2.

✶ Allip Servant: CR 10; Medium undead (incorporeal); HD 12d12; hp 81; Init +5; Spd Fly 40 ft. Skills and Feats: Hide +12, Intimidate +12, Listen +11, Search +7, Spot +11, Survival +0 (+2 following tracks); Ability Focus (babble), Alertness, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes.

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 ft. of the allip must succeed on a DC 22 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the dark deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d6 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse and prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d6 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N145. UNBLEMISHED INTERSECTION

This small chamber connects four corridors. There is something peculiar about the place, something out of the ordinary — this room is clean. There is barely any dust upon the floor and the walls of the place are smooth and undamaged.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A simple but effective magical device is barely visible, but a rogue experienced in locating traps might be able to uncover the tiny "Z"-shaped rune in the middle of the floor of this chamber — before it is too late. The 10-ft. by 10-ft. area centered upon this rune is rigged. Anyone stepping upon this portion of the floor automatically triggers the trap.

✶ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28. This spell combines the effects of three lightning bolt trap triggered simultaneously.

Encounter Condition: Spell Resistance 20⁺

Tactics: The Spell Resistance in this Room does not affect the trap.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, replace the lightning bolt trap with a chain lightning trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage dealt by the lightning bolt trap to 20d6.

N146. BATTLE SITE

The walls of this chamber are marked with small grooves and tiny gauges, obviously made by weapons some time ago. The floor is tainted with patches of dried blood, which fill every crack in the stone surface. Though a battle undoubtedly occurred here, there are no bodies or items anywhere; only the tiny pieces of chipped stones from the walls scattered about the place.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Many battles have been fought here by undead trying to take control of this Room, a strong point in the undead's advancement north. However, no creature has ever held it for longer than a month.

Encounter Condition: Drafty, Echoes 6, Safe

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter. Once a Random Encounter occurs the Room is considered Safe for 38 hours.

Treasure: PCs succeeding at a DC 40 Search check find a number of trinkets, scattered about the Room, in various nooks. Six gold teeth (worth 5 gp each), a silver ring — now crushed — worth 2 gp, and brooch of shielding, dented and worn (with 11 points still remaining).

EL: N/A

N147. LONE SHIELD GUARDIAN

All four doors leading into this Room are locked, requiring DC 45 Open Lock checks to unlock.

A tall and emaciated statuesque figure built from burgundy and green stones, as well as with a black metal, stands in front of a door leading south.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A powerful shield guardian (hp 388) loyal to the lich lord Invistis stands guards here. Though Invistis does not govern the Section, he hopes to establish a stronghold. The lich's goal is to secure safe passage to Room N148, and eventually to Room N158; both outer antechambers leading to the central vault where the World Eater is imprisoned.

The shield guardian's stored spell is a quickened alarm.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: This automaton attacks all creatures other than its master and other constructs. It targets no particular type of foes and uses no connivance in battle other than moving within the melee range of its intended victim.

It is a typical construct, designed to guard. On the first round of combat it fights defensively and triggers its quickened alarm spell, altering Invistis of intrusion. Iron golems from Room N161 arrive 3d6 rounds later to investigate.

In addition to the typical strengths of a shield guardian, this one has damage reduction 10/—, spell resistance 20, and vampiric touch.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one shield guardian. To decrease the challenge, assume that the creature is damaged with only 50% of its hit points remaining.

☛ Shield Guardian: CR 14; Huge construct; HD 45d10+40; hp 388; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 26, touch 8, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +30; Grp +54; Atk +42 melee (2d6+12, vampiric touch); Full Atk +42 melee (2d6+12, 2 vampiric touches); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA —; SQ Construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., damage reduction 10/—, fast healing 5, find master, guard, low-light vision, shield other, spell resistance 20, spell storing; AL N(E); SV Fort +11, Ref +11, Will +11; Str 35, Dex 11, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called in).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a –2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th-level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again).

Vampiric Touch (Su): This shield guardian has a vampiric touch that works much like the spell of the same name. However, unlike the spell, the shield guardian gains temporary hit points equal to 1/4 the damage dealt.

N148. THIRD CENTRAL ANTECHAMBER

The builders of the dungeon created a magical wall of force to prevent anyone from entering Room N159 and insure the creature within remained imprisoned forever. The door leading to Room N159 is locked. It can only be unlocked by finding the rough diamond key which fits perfectly into an indentation in the middle of the white diamond circle amidst the door. This special key is held by Invistis the lich lord (see Room N178 for more details), but the other three doors of the antechambers must also be unlocked in order for the door here to open.

This hallway contains a wall of force which scintillates with pale colors ranging from yellow to purple. There is a bronze door on the other side of the force field. It has no knob and in the middle of it is a wide circle of sparkly white diamond with a hole in its center.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: There are three other outer antechambers like this one (Rooms N112, N134, and N158). To gain access to the central vault (Room N159), PCs must first bypass the wall of forces in each of the four Rooms and then use the special keys to unlock each of the doors there. Once the fourth door is unlocked, all doors leading to Room N159 open.

Encounter Condition: Fear 16, Haunted, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: Four different levers must be activated to bypass the walls of force in Rooms N112, N134, N148, and N158. All must be placed in the northern position in order to deactivate the magical walls. Once the fourth lever is thus activated, all force walls dissipate. These levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, N222, and N250.

N149. DEVASTATED CHAMBER

The southern and western entry ways once held doors, but now only the heavy coppery hinges that once supported them are left.

Several piles of detritus lie scattered upon the floor. Composed of powdery rocks, broken stone boulders, charred wood, and the busted remains of wooden stools and a marble table, these piles take up most of the floor, making travel through the room difficult at best.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The rubble hides a few bodies from the PCs. A successful DC 30 Search check reveals several rotted garments as well as the skeletal corpses of elves (two male, one female), buried under the rubble.

Encounter Condition: [Fear 20], Flooded or Hazardous Footing 22, Haunted

Tactics: The bodies have rotted away to nothing and the Room feels dirty and unclean, making holy PCs nervous. A DC 20 Willpower save overcomes any fearful conditions, but does nothing to shake the feeling that this Room is unclean.

Casting consecrate or a similar spell removes the Haunted Encounter Condition but not the Fear.

Treasure: PCs taking time to move the rubble (an act requiring at least 1 hour) find a silver earring (worth 35 gp), a piece of black volcanic glass (worth 20 gp), and a total of 51 gp in assorted coins and small gemstones (within an old but solid leathery pouch) with a successful DC 30 Search check.

N150. ABANDONED CHAMBER

The doors upon the east and west walls of this chamber are locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to open. The door on the south wall is unlocked, but a closer examination reveals that it holds a busted locking mechanism, which is damaged beyond repair.

This chamber is empty except for the undisturbed gray dust blanketing the floor. Oddly, there is little foot traffic across the dust.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Allips and other ghostly creatures have been moving through eliminating the evidence of their footprints in the dust. PCs stepping onto the floor soon learn why. Trapped with a field of electricity. Most of the undead are aware of Invistis' little trap and avoid this Room. However, that doesn't help the PCs.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the Search DC of the lightning bolt trap to 45. To reduce the challenge, allow the PCs Spot as well as Search checks to find the trap.

N151. DREAD WRAITH HAUNTING GROUND

This room is empty both of light and furniture. Even magical light is swallowed by the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A dread wraith (hp 164) serving Vinnara the Black Guard watches over this chamber and the corridor leading to Room N155. The creature's duty is to keep an eye out for trespassers. When it senses living creatures present, it attacks immediately, hoping to turn its prey into wraith servants. Unliving creatures are torn to shreds, and their remains brought back to Vinnara for desecration.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Concealment, Deep Darkness, Desecration 6, Fear 16

Tactics: The dread wraith gains a +2 bonus to its Initiative check during the first round of combat, attacking from the shadows. It ambushes the weakest PC first, looking for those wearing the least armor. In an effort to create spawns, it viciously directs its attack on the same target for as long as it can manage. If its hit point total drops below 50 points or less, it utters a loud cry and flies away to its mistress (Room N102), warning her of the threat the PCs pose.

Treasure: The dread wraith wears +3 ghost touch full plate that become substantial when the creature is destroyed.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Possessions: +3 ghost touch full plate.

N152. RIGGED HALLWAY

The doors are magically trapped. Two rounds after a door is opened, arcane erupts from the floor and ceiling, exploding in the center of Room N152.

Like many others in the area, this room is dark and empty, the gray stone of its walls covered with a thick layer of soot. There are four doors in this chamber: One upon each wall. The door leading south is dented with claw marks, but otherwise exactly as the others.

The skeletal remains of a humanoid creature lie in the center of this room. The skeleton's cranium is reminiscent of that of a dog, but the rest of its bony structure is identical to that of a broad-shouldered human.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A hound archon serving the angels died long ago, protecting the borders of the Region from interference. When his time came, he journeyed to this hallowed Room and passed on.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 8, Positive Energy, Safe

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This chamber once held a potent mechanical trap. The device was neutralized ages ago, leaving a narrow ledge which creatures can use to maneuver around the pit.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Moving through this chamber is easy. PCs rushing through the Room need to succeed at a DC 18 Reflex save to avoid falling into the 100-ft. deep pit. PCs taking their time to walk upon the ledge pass through the Room harmlessly.

The dagger glows barely enough to read by in total darkness (which would definitely cause eye strain), but otherwise provides light no further than 3 ft.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four dread wraiths (hp 111, 109, 106, 99), loyal to Vinnara, stand guard in this Room and the length of corridor leading to Room N158. The unliving are stripped of whatever flesh is on their bones and returned to Vinnara to be desecrated and destroyed.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Concealment, Desecration 4, Deep Darkness, Distracting Visions 8, Fearless, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: The dread wraiths ambush the PCs from darkness, charging the less armored foes with their ethereal touch and attacking from cover whenever possible. In addition to Constitution drain, these four dread wraiths have a corrosive touch that deals Charisma damage as well. PCs struck by the incorporeal touch of these creatures suffer 1d4 Charisma damage.

N158. FOURTH CENTRAL ANTECHAMBER

The hallway opens into a short corridor leading east. A dazzling wall of force, from which several subtle shades can be seen, however, blocks this corridor. At the eastern end of it, beyond the force field, is a bronze door set upon a thick frame. There is no knob upon the dark brown door. Instead, a large circle of glimmering red stone is set in the midst of it. The center of the circle is indented in the shape of a star with eight branches.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The magical wall of force prevents anyone from gaining access to the special door leading to the central vault (Room N159) where a powerful fiend is imprisoned. The door leading to Room N159 is locked. The only way to unlock this door is by finding the ruby star matching the design engraved in the circle upon it, and place this special key inside the indented circle (Vinnara the Black Guard Ghost has this key in her possession).

Encounter Condition: Unhallowed 2

Tactics: There are three other outer chambers similar to this one (Rooms N112, N134, and N148). To gain access the central vault (Room N159), PCs must bypass the walls of force in each of the four Rooms and use the proper keys to unlock the four doors leading to Room N159. Once the fourth door is unlocked — and only then — do all doors leading to the central vault open.

To bypass the walls of force, four different levers must be activated. When the PCs activate the last of the levers, all force walls in the outer antechambers (Rooms N112, N134, N148, and N158) are instantly deactivated. The different levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, N222, and N250.

THE FINALE TO END ALL FINALES

The final battle in Room N159 is quite possibly one of the most difficult of the PCs' lives. Even if they've fought undead before, this encounter is sure to test their resolve.

For starters, the World Eater is a monstrous beast with a single goal... to reach the surface. He intends to bring whatever undead he can with him, but doesn't care if a few thousand die in the process.

Secondly, this Room may have once been warded against evil, but the taint of the World Eater could not be abated and now its foul aura has permeated into everything.

Lastly, the rising undead that the PCs killed earlier have returned. Stronger and now loyal to the World Eater, they work together in a wave of evil unlike anything the PCs' world has ever seen.

To make matters worse, if the PCs killed Invisits, Kasteoficiss, or Vinara, they have no allies in this battle and must go at it alone.

Now that the bad news is out of the way, here are a few suggestions to make this encounter memorable:

- Whatever undead lord remains, have him or her arrive to aid the PCs, insisting "We can settle our differences later."
- If the undead lords arrive, they can fight the little undead, while the PCs take care of the World Eater. This gives the battle an epic feel, without having to roll a die for every action at the battle.
- PCs who die in battle return as undead in 1d4 rounds, making an already impossible battle nigh impossible.
- This is a battle where the details and the scope may not mesh. Its important to describe the battle effectively, but worrying about every undead hit point is going to slow the game down. Focus on what matters.
- Allow the PCs to win. If the PCs have been heroic, valorous, or just plain determined, allow them to win this one. Certainly avoid "handing" them a victory, but unless they do something supremely stupid, this battle should be a challenge, not the nail in their coffin. PCs that have behaved "questionably" shouldn't be given a reprieve, but certainly they should be allowed to heal themselves and "power up" before the big fight.
- If the PCs have opened the tomb without knowing what they've done or where it leads, allow the negative energy pulse to act as a guide, drawing them to the tomb.
- Make them wish they'd stayed in Region A. Anyone can loot a tomb. But few PCs have what it takes to save the world.
- A battle to rival the gods. This is the PCs swan song. Even if they intend to slog through Region O in an attempt to reach the surface, this fight is going to have lasting repercussions. "Every time its cold, I feel the unholy touch of that demon-thing in my bones and it reminds me of why I became an adventurer in the first place."
- Destroying the World Eater destroys all the undead in the dungeon, except for Invisits, Kasteoficiss, and Vinara.
- If the PCs fail to stop the World Eater, its a long journey back to the surface where the World's Largest Graveyard™ waits for them. A campaign world where the entire populace of the earth is undead (except for the PCs) is certainly an excellent way to advance from level 21 to 40.

N159. CENTRAL VAULT

In order to gain access to this Room, PCs must locate the levers that deactivate the force fields in the outer antechambers (Rooms N112, N134, N148, and N158) and activate them. Then, they must find all four special keys that unlock the doors leading into the central vault. When the last of these intricate keys is put in its proper place, all four doors opens, revealing the great hall at the center of the region.

The DM should be prepared for a 3 to 4 hour long encounter, once the PCs start the fight.

As you near the edge of a massive circular room, a wave of hot and cold assaults you. The pain is like nothing you've ever experienced, it is the feeling of your skin being charred and your bones being chilled all at once. It feels as though you're being pulled apart. All the while, unholy energy wants to rot you from the inside, challenging your courage. You realize in that moment, lesser heroes would certainly fall.

Inside, the high walls and ceiling of this wide hall would form a perfectly symmetrical globe were it not for the pulsating floor that cuts the structure in half. Made from stone that turned into a dull black shade, the walls and ceiling disappear in long brooding shadows, which make it almost impossible to determine where the stone structure begins and where the darkness ends.

The weird floor of the hall is made from the same dull black material, but an eerie glow pulses from within its almost opaque surface, bathing the place in an orange light that fails to cast the shadows aside. Along with the orange glow, each pulse comes with a deep echoing sound like distant thunder. The disquieting effects of the illumination and the echoing pulsations are reminiscent of a colossal heart that beats every minute, sending flows of vibrant light into the hall with each pulse.

Ringling the interior of the room is a low wall, some 3 ft. high and inside 24 columns, perfectly equidistant from one another. Atop the 20-foot high pedestals are opaque spheres of diminished light. Inside that ring are three stones walls and three magical wards.

In the center of it all, a small dais rises. Chains litter the floor around it.

If the PCs arrive before the World Eater starts digging, read the following.

What is most impressive about the place, however, is the colossal shape of a worm covered with thick plates of black semitransparent armor. This worm has a wide maw full of tiny black teeth and capable of swallowing a human whole.

If the PCs arrive after the World Eater has started digging, read the following.

At the top dead center of the ceiling, a massive whole cuts up into the earth above as hundreds of pounds of dirt and stone crumble down through the hole and onto the ground below. The sound of metal and stone grinding against one another echoes through the near-perfectly spherical room. A handful of zombies and skeletons work to move the stones onto a platform.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The most powerful inhabitants of the region vie for control of the four antechambers surrounding this central vault in an attempt to free the powerful World Eater (hp 500) trapped inside. They believe freeing it ensures its loyalty, but in truth the World Eater answers to no one; not even the clerics that worship it.

The World Eater, a deadly nightcrawler, is locked away in the central vault of this Region. This creature is strong enough to tunnel its way out of the crypt, forming a way out for all the undead inhabitants of the dungeon in the process, but a special temporal stasis field prevents it from moving. This field, however, is deactivated as soon as the four doors leading into this hall are opened. After the final lever is pulled, a pulse of negative energy radiates through the entire dungeon bestowing 4 negative levels of every living thing in the dungeon. This kills most low level creatures and even high level creatures in Regions the PCs have yet to investigate are noticeably weakened.

Undead (with the exception of Invistis, Kasteoficiss, and Vinara), on the other hand, grow stronger as a result of the World Eater's "rebirth." Hordes increase their hit point total to maximum and other undead gain +4 HD and the benefits of unholy aura. All undead in the dungeon (even those loyal to the three undead lords) are now loyal to the World Eater and begin the long journey to Room N159 where they begin construction of a massive ziggurat of stone and earth, so they can climb to the hole in the ceiling and then to the surface of the world. If the PCs do not stop the World Eater, thousands of undead will be unleashed on the world.

Lastly, all dead (non-extraplanar) creatures in the dungeon, rise as undead. Depending on the course the PCs took to reach this Region, this could literally be hundreds of undead creatures shambling through the halls. Any creatures killed in the initial blast of negative energy rise as undead.

The DM should track exactly what survives and what dies from this event, since the PCs have at least one, if not two or three Regions left to explore.

After the pulse shatters most living things, the World Eater takes 1 hour to regain its memories and senses (about the time the PCs are entering the chamber). Once alert, it begins the long journey of digging through the ceiling. Capable of flying, it moves to the ceiling and begins digging through the stone at the incredible rate of 5 ft. per round. Since nothing in the dungeon can cut through the stone, this is an awesome feat. It is 6 miles to the surface from the top of the tomb, thus digging takes just under 1,200 rounds (2 hours) to complete. 100 feet long, the World Eater disappears from view within 20 rounds, mulching the earth above it.

It never tires and only stops digging if attacked. Should anything get in its path, the World Eater mercilessly vents its anger swallowing the annoyance whole before moving on.

Encounter Condition: Concealment, Cover, Desecration 14*, Echoes 8, Extreme Cold, Extreme Heat, Haunted, [Invisible], Negative Energy*, Spell Resistance 20, [Stagnant Air], Unhallowed 12*

Tactics: In combat, this intelligent undead outsider uses a number of tactics to kill its victims as quickly as possible. It casts contagion, unholy blight, cone of cold, confusion, and hold monster to weaken its opposition and assess the strengths and weaknesses of each target. It also casts invisibility upon itself and summons minor undead creature to its aid. In melee, it strikes with its bite and sting, hoping to poison its preys or swallow them whole. This World Eater fights to the death. If it defeats the PCs, it tunnels its way out of the dungeon where it unleashes its wrath upon the world.

The World Eater has been asleep for too long and any fight with this beast should be deadly for the PCs. This is easily the most difficult battle in the dungeon. For more information on tactics and how to handle this encounter see the sidebar on Page 746.

The Negative Energy of this Room is three times more potent than normal.

Treasure: Circling the tomb of the World Eater are 24 columns, 20 ft. tall and about 6 to 7 ft. in diameter. Atop the columns, solid spheres of light rest. The spheres measures 3-ft. wide and have a hardness 10. Each sphere can only be opened by breaking them or if a lawful good character succeeds at a DC 25 Will save while touching the top. Alternately, a cleric can "spend" a turn undead attempt for the day, gaining a +5 bonus on the Will save.

☞ Sphere: Hardness 10, hp 50, break DC 40.

Each sphere holds a different treasure to aid the celestials in defeating the World Eater.

1. Twelve beads of force
2. Wand of ice storm
3. Wand of fire

4. Wand of magic missiles
5. +4 silver dagger
6. +2 flaming short sword
7. +1 undeadbane light mace
8. Celestial holy symbol (+4 divine bonus on turn attempts)
9. Twelve vials of holy water.
10. Twelve potions of cure light wounds
11. Six potions of cure moderate wounds
12. Three potions of cure serious wounds
13. The contents of this sphere are both spoiled and tainted. When this sphere is opened, a wave of negative energy pulses through the dungeon again. Every creature within 5 miles gains 1 negative level and the Negative Energy of the Room increases by a factor of 1.

If the World Eater is dead, the Negative Energy Encounter Condition can be removed by casting consecrate on the Room. In addition, casting consecrate on the sphere before it is opened, negates both effects before they happen.
14. When this sphere is opened, fire storm fills the Room, targeting undead only. Caster level 20th.
15. When this sphere is opened, a magical null force explodes from it, like a rod of cancellation. Every continuous magic effect is negated (no save) and Spell Resistance is reduced to 0 for 1 hour. Magic items are safe from this effect, but continuous effects from potions and the like are not. Wands, rings, and so on are drained of 1d3 charges each.
16. When this sphere is opened, 100 diminutive celestial spirits erupt, attack everything in their path. Each deals 1d4 points of damage and dies on contact with a demon, devil, or undead creature. This is perfect for attacking the swarms of undead in this Room. If used against the World Eater, they deal 1 point of damage each.
17. When this sphere is opened, chain lightning fills the Room, targeting undead only. Caster level 20th.
18. Three potions of cure serious wounds
19. Six potions of cure moderate wounds
20. Twelve potions of cure light wounds
21. Twelve vials of holy water
22. Wand of sunburst
23. Divine scroll of imprisonment (caster level 20th). The PC must be a lawful good cleric or paladin to read this scroll.
24. Divine scroll of divine favor (caster level 20th)

Only use the magical items if the PCs are having trouble fighting the World Eater. Its anti-climactic for the nightcrawler to die because of the DMs deus ex machina. Use these sparingly and let the PCs find them on their own.

EL: 22*

* Depending on the undead the DM adds, this number can potentially be much higher.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the hit points of the World Eater to 700 and increase its AC by +8. To decrease the challenge, remove the Extreme Cold, Extreme Heat, Negative Energy, and Spell Resistance Encounter Conditions. Alternately, have the World Eater dig at half the rate.

Caster level 25th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Aversion to Daylight (Ex): If exposed to natural daylight (not merely a daylight spell), nightshades take a –4 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, and skill checks.

Chill Touch (Su): This nightcrawlers maw and skin are always surrounded by negative energy with the same effect as a chill touch spell: 1d6 negative energy damage plus Fortitude saves (DC 17) or take 1 point of Strength damage. Anyone touching the nightcrawler with bare flesh is also subject to this effect. The save is Charisma based.

Desecrating Aura (Su): All nightshades give off a 20-ft. radius emanation of utter desecration, imbuing their surroundings with negative energy. This ability works much like a desecrate spell, except that the nightshade's evil is so great that it is treated as the shrine of an evil power. All undead within 20 feet of the nightshade (including the creature itself) gain a +2 profane bonus on attack rolls, damage rolls, and saving throws, and +2 hit points per HD. (The nightshade Hit Dice, attack, and save entries given here include these profane bonuses.)

* Charisma checks made to turn undead within this area suffer a –6 penalty in addition to any other penalties.

A nightshade's desecrating aura cannot be dispelled except by a dispel evil spell or similar effect. If the effect is dispelled, the nightshade can resume it as a free action on its next turn. Its desecrating aura is suppressed if a nightshade enters a consecrated or hallowed area, but the nightshade's presence also suppresses the consecrated or hallowed effect for as long as it remains in the area.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures inside a nightcrawler's gizzard gain one negative level each round. The DC is 41 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the nightcrawler gains 5 temporary hit points.

Evil Blessing (Su): After any spell with the good descriptor is cast on this nightcrawler or after it is attacked by a good-aligned weapon, it immediately gains the benefits of a protection from good spell at 25th level of effect for 1d4+2 rounds.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a nightcrawler must hit with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can try to swallow the opponent in the following round.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 35, initial and secondary damage 2d6 Strength. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Summon Undead (Su): The world eater can summon any undead to him at will, within 5 miles. They arrive in 1 hour and remain in its service indefinitely.

Swallow Whole (Ex): A nightcrawler can try to swallow a grabbed opponent of Gargantuan or smaller size by making a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 4d6+25 points of bludgeoning damage plus 12 points of acid damage per round from the nightcrawler's gizzard and is subject to the creature's energy drain.

A swallowed creature can cut its way out by using a light slashing or piercing weapon to deal 35 points of damage to the gizzard (AC 29). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out. A nightcrawler's interior can hold 1 Gargantuan, 8 Huge, 32 Large, 128 Medium, 512 Small, 1,048 Tiny or smaller opponents.

N160 THOUGH N180.

THE DOMAIN OF THE LICH LORD

The lich lord Invistis controls Rooms N160 through N180. Though his claim on the Badlands (Room N180) is disputed with the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss, who holds dominion over a large domain to the south, Invistis' hold on his own territory is secure. Uncharacteristic of a lich lord, Invistis does not keep many servants. Though he uses a few zombies as couriers, he relies, instead, on an impressive number of arcane traps to protect the borders of his realm and unwavering constructs to do his bidding. His most important minion is a powerful skeletal hydra, which currently ensures that the Badlands remain under the lich's control (the only of his undead minions the Kasteoficiss that has not turned against him). Invistis wages a centuries' old war against Kasteoficiss, as both the lich lord and the mummy priestess vie for the governance of a vast unclaimed territory, namely Rooms N210 through N239.

Invistis has taken to building golems and constructs to defend his lair. While he is still the master of undeath, Kasteoficiss' magic makes it difficult for him to rely or trust them for long. The constructs, to date, have proven a more effective tool against her allips, mohrgs, and wyvern.

Like the two other undead lords in this Region — Kasteoficiss the Mummy and Vinnara the Ghost — Invistis' main goal is to gain access to the central vault (Room N159) and liberate the World Eater imprisoned there. Unlike Kasteoficiss, who believes what is in the vault is the incarnation of the God of Death she worships, Invistis knows that the creature held there is an extremely potent nightcrawler — a fact that he guards carefully. He is also convinced that by liberating the fiend, he can turn it into an ally, thus allowing him to gain control over the entire region.

Though Invistis wishes to see Kasteoficiss destroyed, he realizes he is not strong enough to take on the mummy priestess and her many minions unaided. Because his nemesis controls one of four lever Rooms that allows the deactivation of the force fields in Rooms N112, N134, N148, and N158, and suspects that she holds one of the four keys needed to open the central vault (Room N159), he needs to find a way to take over her lair. Because of this, Invistis takes an interest in the PCs.

If the PCs meet Invistis, the lich lord is surprised to see them. He is even impressed by the fact that they survived a number of his traps on the journey to his throne Room (Room N176). Unless the PCs attack him on sight, the lich is happy to parley with them, and he hopes to convince the PCs to join forces with him.

Invistis is the most knowledgeable of all the creatures in the Region. He is more than happy to trade information with the PCs, especially if he believes they will help him further his cause.

All of Invistis' golems and constructs can be healed by casting inflict spells on them as though they were undead.

N160. ALLOY GOLEM

This room is filled with coins that shine brilliantly in the light of ten torches set upon large bronze sconces into the south wall. Against the back wall, a giant statue of bronze and iron stands, darkness cast across its inhuman face.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: One round after living creatures enter this Room, the bronze and iron alloy golem (hp 350) comes to life, dragging itself across the stone floor and slowly tracking the PCs movement. The back of the golem opens, revealing a flaming two-handed sword which takes a move action to draw. However, opening and closing the "scabbard" of the golem is a free action that takes 1 full round to resolve.

Due to the nature of the iron golem, it is completely immune to all energy damage except sonic. This is among one of Invistis' prize possessions and the most powerful golem in the dungeon. The alloy nature of the golem gives it an addition +5 natural armor, which has already been taken into account.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Negative Energy

Tactics: Invistis created this automaton to attack undead, not the living. While the golem attacks anyone threatening the chamber, it does not chase the living beyond the confines of the archway. Undead are another matter, however. It knows its strengths and has been programmed to fight as smart as a 5th-level fighter would, employing intelligent tactics against small groups. Assume it has the Cleave and Combat Reflexes feats despite not satisfying the prerequisites.

It fights defensively most of the time, having a high enough attack bonus for it not to affect its overall effectiveness. It fights until it reaches 40 hit points or less, at which point it retreats to the east wall where it shuts down.

Treasure: The ten torches in this Room are under the effect of continual flame.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the hit point total of the alloy golem to 580. To decrease the challenge, remove its immunities to everything but necromantic magic.

♦ Alloy Golem: CR 16; Huge Construct; HD 54d10+40; hp 350; Init -2; Spd 20 ft.; AC 36, touch 6, flat-footed 36; Base Atk +40; Grp +59; Atk +50 melee (4d6+17/19–20 plus 2d6 fire, +1 viciously flaming two-handed sword) or +49 melee (4d8+11, slam); Full Atk +50/+45/+40/+35 melee (4d6+17/19–20 plus 2d6 fire, +1 viciously flaming two-handed sword) or +49 melee (4d8+11, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA breath weapon; SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 20/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to acid, cold, electricity, fire, and magic, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +18, Ref +16, Will +18; Str 33, Dex 7, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: [Cleave], [Combat Reflexes].

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Constitution, secondary damage 3d4 Constitution, Fortitude DC 37 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below. A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

Necromantic magic is reflected back at the caster, like spell turning. This effect is flawless and cannot be dispelled. The iron golem can reflect up to 18 spell levels per day.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

Possessions: +1 viciously flaming two-handed sword (a viciously flaming weapon inflicts an extra 2d6 fire damage on a successful attack and inflicts 1d6 fire damage on the wielder after each successful strike).

N161. OLD STORAGE ROOM

The door leading into this chamber is locked and requires a DC 50 Open Lock check to unlock. Invistis has the key that opens it (in Room N178). The golems can unlock the doors at will.

This chamber is filled with broken crates and sacked barrels. The rotten wood of the containers is splintered and covers most of the floor. Broken pieces of equipment can also be found scattered about. Two zombies move about as if they've suffered head trauma. Against the back wall stand two massive statues of iron and bronze, cold and unmoving.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Sitting in cold storage are two large iron golems (hp 210 each). Having had centuries to build them correctly, Invistis has bestowed them with maximum hit points. They remain here, unmoving, unless the shield guardian in Room N147 casts alarm, at which point that come to life and immediately make their way out of the Room and down the hallways toward Room N147. They do not stop for anything and ignore even well-known enemies of Invistis.

Like undead creatures, these iron golems can be healed with inflict spells and the Negative Energy of this Room.

There is a 50% chance of two zombies (hp 11 each) milling about the Room cleaning up. They are far from industrious, making more of a mess than anything. They serve Invistis, but are in all ways mindless undead.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Negative Energy

Tactics: If attacked, the iron golems come to life, defending themselves immediately

Treasure: A successful DC 30 Search check reveals two vials of alchemical fire as well as a small gourd containing three doses of antitoxin.

N162. ILLUSIONARY TREASURE ROOM

This room is illuminated by an unknown light source, revealing a great mass of golden hued coins and colorful gemstones in the center of the otherwise empty place.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room once contained a mechanical pit trap. Though its pit remained intact when Invistis took over the area, the portion of floor opening into it had long ago been destroyed. Only the two small nooks in the eastern and western walls have real flooring. Thanks to the lich lord's magic, the entire Room is now under the effect of a permanent image illusion while the floor above the pit trap is rigged with a sensitive force field. One round after anyone steps upon this force field, both the illusion of the treasure and the field acting as a floor disappears. All PCs caught inside the Room instantly fall victim to the trap, which can be avoided by jumping out of the Room or within one of the two nooks, requiring DC 25 Reflex saves.

This trap can be avoided with a DC 21 Will save (disbelief), revealing both the false treasure and invisible force field covering the floor).

✶ Magically Covered Pit Trap: CR 13; magical device and mechanical; touch trigger; automatic reset; DC 35 Reflex save avoids; 100 ft. deep (14d6, fall); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC Special*; Disable Device DC Special*. * To locate this trap, a successful DC 21 Will (disbelief) save is required (see above) and disabling it requires a successful casting of dispel magic made against a caster level of 18th.

Encounter Condition: Cursed 4, Distracting Noises 8

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: This Room contains no real treasure, but one of the three skeletons at the bottom of the pit (ironically) wears a ring of mind shielding.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the save DCs of the magically covered pit trap by +5. To decrease the challenge, reduce the depth of the magically covered pit trap to 60 ft.

N163. FALSE LEVER CHAMBER

The only door leading into this Room is locked and requires a successful DC 50 Open Lock check to open. Like most locked doors in the lich lord's lair, Invistis has the only key that opens the door to this chamber.

A heavy-looking iron lever protrudes from the floor of this room. Set into a 1 ft. wide by 4 ft. long groove, the lever is placed at a 45-degree angle, its tip pointing south.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Created by Invistis (in the semblance of the four Rooms containing the special levers that deactivate the force fields in the antechambers surrounding Room N159), this chamber contains a false lever. When pushed into the northern position (or replaced in the southern position), a powerful electrical discharge is activated.

✶ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; special trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 38. This trap combines the effect of three lightning bolt spells cast simultaneously.

Encounter Condition: [Smoke]

Tactics: This is a vicious trap and PCs that stumble upon it are likely to die. The trap radiates strong evocation and faint necromancy.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add waves of exhaustion to the lightning bolt trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the lightning bolt trap to 20d6.

N164. ABANDONED CHAMBER

This chamber was abandoned long ago and Invistis has, for the moment, no particular use for it. He did, however, set a simple trap upon the door leading the place. The magical runes upon the door leading into this Room are silvery and in the form of a pair of clawed hands.

The trap activates as soon as anyone opens this door, summoning two bebeliths (hp 150 each) on opposite sides of the PCs.

✶ Symbol of Stunning and Summon Monster IX Trap: CR 14; magic device; touch trigger; no reset; spell effect (symbol of stunning, 18th-level sorcerer, DC 22 Will save negates); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 feet); spell effect (summon monster IX, summons two bebelith demons); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

This almost "L"-shaped hall is dark and empty. Dust on the floor appears untouched by age.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: As the PCs round the corner, they see a zombie, nailed to the stone. It is in a state of constant agony, but since its jaw is broken (lying on the floor), it cannot cry out. Whoever has done this has sent a powerful message.

Encounter Condition: Echoes 2, Haunted

Tactics: The bebiliths are vicious fighters, clawing and biting the instant they are summoned. On round three, they use their web ability, targeting the most dangerous PCs. Armored PCs are targeted with rend armor nearly every turn, unless an extremely powerful wizard makes himself a presentable target.

This zombie was once a courier's of Invistus, but mohrg raiders loyal to Kasteoficiss captured it and pinned it to the wall. By breaking its jaw, they hope the make the creature suffer thus sending a message to Invistus that his domain was crumbling.

Invistus never got the message.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the symbol of stunning and summon monster IX trap summon two additional bebiliths. To decrease the challenge, remove the symbol of stunning from the symbol of stunning and summon monster IX trap.

▼ Bebilith: CR 10; Huge outsider (chaotic, extraplanar, evil); HD 12d8+96; hp 150; Init +5; Spd 40 ft., climb 20 ft.; AC 22, touch 9, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +12; Grp +29; Atk +19 melee (2d6+9 plus poison, bite) or +11 ranged (web); Full Atk +19 melee (2d6+9 plus poison, bite) and +14 melee (2d4+4, 2 claws); or +11 ranged (web); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Poison, rend armor, web; SQ Damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., plane shift, scent, telepathy 100 ft.; AL CE; SV Fort +16, Ref +9, Will +9; Str 28, Dex 12, Con 26, Int 11, Wis 13, Cha 13.

Skills and Feats: Climb +24, Diplomacy +3, Hide +16, Jump +28, Listen +16, Move Silently +16, Search +15, Sense Motive +16, Spot +16, Survival +1 (+3 following tracks); Cleave, Improved Initiative, Improved Grapple, Power Attack, Track.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 24, initial damage 1d6 Con, secondary damage 2d6 Con. Bebilith venom is highly perishable, losing its potency and becoming inert, foul-smelling goo almost as soon as it contacts air. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Rend Armor (Ex): If a bebilith hits with both claw attacks, it pulls apart any armor worn by its foe. This attack deals 4d6+18 points of damage to the opponent's armor. Creatures not wearing armor are unaffected by this special attack. Armor reduced to 0 hit points is destroyed. Damaged armor may be repaired with a successful Craft (armorsmithing) check.

Web (Ex): A bebilith can throw a web up to four times per day. This is similar to an attack with a net but has a maximum range of 30 ft., with a range increment of 10 ft. This attack is effective against targets of up to Gargantuan size. The web anchors the target in place, allowing no movement.

An entangled creature can escape with a DC 24 Escape Artist check or burst the web with a DC 24 Strength check. The check DCs are Constitution-based. The web has 14 hit points and hardness 0. There is a 75% chance that the webbing will not burn if any sort of fire is applied to it (check each round).

Plane Shift (Su): This ability is useless in the dungeon.

Skills: A bebilith has mottled coloration that gives it a +8 racial bonus on Hide checks.

N165. TRAPPED HALLWAY

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Invistus is fond of electrical energy, and many of the traps he sets upon his domain revolve around this element. A chain lightning trap, set into the floor, is another of his many toys in this Section.

Encounter Condition: [Smoke]

Tactics: As soon as anyone sets foot in front of the door leading to Room N166, a chain lightning trap triggers.

◆ Maximized Chain Lightning Trap: CR 16; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (chain lightning, 18th-level sorcerer, 108 electricity to target nearest center of trigger area plus 54 electricity to each of up to fifteen targets), DC 22 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add polar ray to the maximized chain lightning trap. To decrease the challenge, replace the maximized chain lightning trap with a chain lightning trap.

N166. FALSE THRONE ROOM

The door leading to this chamber is locked and requires a successful DC 45 Open Lock check to unlock. Invistus has the only key to this door.

This room is split in two parts. The western portion of the chamber contains a massive iron coffer covered with rust, resting against the southernmost wall. A three feet high dais upon which is a large throne carved out of black stone dominates the eastern part of the room. Sitting upon the kingly chair is a skeletal figure holding a jeweled sword. The rotted clothes of the skeleton are thick and retain many of their colorful patterns, suggesting they were of remarkable quality.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The eastern portion of this place is a false throne Room created by Invistus to fool creatures brave enough to venture into his domain. Though the jeweled blade held by the skeletal figure is enchanted and obviously valuable, touching it or the skeleton triggers a trap that causes the skeleton to explode in a thousand bone shards.

◆ Exploding Skeleton Trap: CR 14; mechanical; no reset; exploding bone shards effect (8d12 piercing, DC 35 Reflex save half damage); multiple targets (all target within the eastern part of the room); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: A faint abjuration radiates from the skeleton, if detected and the sword glimmers with strong conjunction.

Treasure: The blade held by the skeleton is a +2 longsword with a handle studded with green emeralds and blue amethysts. It is worth three times the value an equivalent enchanted blade. The iron chest in the western portion of the chamber is unlocked and empty.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the exploding skeleton trap to 16d12 piercing. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the exploding skeleton trap to 6d12.

N167. IRON GOLEM GUARDIAN

Both doors to this Room are locked and trapped. A DC 40 Open Lock check is needed to open the lock. The trap triggers whenever someone touches the door or lock.

◆ Incendiary Cloud Trap: CR 9; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (incendiary cloud, 15th-level wizard, 4d6/round for 15 rounds, DC 22 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

A second trap is on the doorknob itself.

◆ Destruction Trap: CR 8; magic device; touch trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (destruction, 13th-level cleric, DC 20 Fortitude save for 10d6 damage); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

A large iron statue in the form of an armored humanoid dominates this square chamber. Its arms and head face in both directions at once, its anatomy an unsightly perversion of human form. A macabre helmet rest atop spiked shoulders, hollow eyes set all around its "face." The statue holds a heavy flail made from blackened steel.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Another of Invistis' prized creations, this iron golem (hp 210) stands guard, attacking anyone daring to violate Invistis' lair. Because this is so close to Invistis' throne Room (Room N176), the golem is extremely sensitive to the presence of anything, living or otherwise.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: This iron golem is armed with a flail, made from blackened steel. The flail radiates evil, dealing an additional 2d6 unholy damage to lawful or good PCs. It also has an improved critical threat range and multiplier. In the right hands, this weapon is devastating.

When the door opens, the golem closes to melee and strikes the first PC to come through the door. It continues to batter the hapless PC, ignoring pleas for help. If the PC is downed, it performs a coup de grace before moving on to the next PC. It uses its potent breath weapon against spellcasters, should they prove a threat, but they are usually saved for last. If the PCs escape the Room, the golem gives chase to the end of hallway, before returning to this Room.

The golem can lock or unlock the door at will.

Like a ranger, it treats undead as a favored enemy, gaining a +4 bonus in combat to attack and damage rolls against them. Like all of the constructs in this Section, it cannot be reprogrammed or controlled to turn against Invistis.

Because of the traps and locked doors, it is impossible to surprise the golem.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add an iron golem. To decrease the challenge, replace the iron golem with a stone golem.

✱ Iron Golem: CR 13; Large construct; HD 18d10+30; hp 210; Init -1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 30, touch 8, flat-footed 30; Base Atk +12; Grp +28; Atk +23 melee (2d10+11, slam), or +23 melee (2d8+18/17-20 x3 plus 2d6 unholy damage, +2 blackened flail); Full Atk +23 melee (2d10+11, 2 slams), or +23/+18 melee (2d8+18/17-20 x3 plus 1d6 unholy damage, +2 blackened flail); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon; SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 15/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL N(E); SV Fort +6, Ref +5, Will +6; Str 33, Dex 9, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1

Skills and Feats: —

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con, Fortitude DC 19 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below. A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

Necromantic magic is reflected back at the caster, like spell turning. This effect is flawless and cannot be dispelled. The iron golem can reflect up to 18 spell levels per day.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

N168. PILLAGED ROOM

Both doors to this Room are locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock. The southern door of this chamber is blocked by the debris and impossible to open.

Countless pieces of broken wood, warped iron bars, and crushed stones cover the entire floor of this dark room. The rubble is piled several feet high, making travel through the chamber close to impossible.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room contains broken furniture and the remains of several elves from when Invistis took control of it, ages ago. The lich lord then ordered his minions to bring heavy boulders and other debris into his new lair, allowing him not only to clean up the messy Rooms but to prevent anyone from journeying through this particular chamber. They were later destroyed when they stopped proving useful.

PCs moving the debris can uncover the southern door after six hours of manual labor, which also reveals the skeletal bodies of five elves who died here long ago.

N169. IRON GOLEM GUARD POST

The doors to this Room are locked, requiring DC 45 Open Lock checks to unlock. Exiting the Room also requires an Open Lock check, as the doors are locked from both sides. The iron golems inside can unlock the doors at will. There are no keys to these doors and Invistis uses knock to move through this area at will.

The tall silhouette of a heavily armored humanoid baring a large shield and a long hammer stand in the center of this otherwise empty room.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: An iron golem (hp 270) guards in this chamber. It carries a +2 heavy steel shield and a +2 shattering warhammer. The warhammer does maximum damage to structures with each hit. It is another of Invistis' guardians and fights fearlessly. If the PCs step away from the door and leave, it does not attack, but otherwise any other action is considered hostile and it charges into the lead PC. Assume that it 'takes 20' on its Initiative, always at the ready.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: The iron golem switches from using its warhammer to using its breath weapon. This iron golem's breath weapon is slightly different than normal, however. One, it can only be used once every 1d6+1 rounds. Second, the round after the poisonous gas is expelled, the iron golem sucks the poisonous gas back into its "lungs", absorbing the lost Constitution of the PCs and gaining 5 temporary hit points (for each lost Con point) in return.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the iron golem to 30 HD. To decrease the challenge, replace the iron golem with a stone golem.

For each point of initial Constitution damage dealt, the iron golem gains 5 temporary hit points.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

Possessions: +2 heavy steel shield, +2 shattering warhammer

N170. MARKED INTERSECTION

A pattern of red markings is painted upon the floor of this intersection. The marks are made in the form of a wide circle with several triangles and stars drawn into it. The images seem oily, reflecting light as though the substance — like blood — had not dried. The entire hallway is covered.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A closer look at this pattern reveals that the red paint is dry, but only gives the effect of being wet. A successful DC 14 Knowledge (nature) also tells that the substance used to draw these images is not blood, but probably an especially treated dye.

PCs foolish enough to step over the warded area, trigger the trap placed here. A DC 30 Jump check clears the ward without triggering the trap.

✦ Greater Shout Trap: CR 10; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; spell effect (greater shout, 18th-level wizard, 10d6 sonic damage, stunned 1 round, deafened 4d6 rounds, DC 18 Fortitude save partial); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

The greater shout trap is unaffected by the Spell Resistance

Encounter Condition.

Encounter Condition: Spell Resistance 25

Tactics: PCs who talk, make other noises, or use artificial light while in this chamber may alert the shield guardians in Room N171 of their presence. Allow the shield guardians the appropriate Listen or Spot checks to notice the PCs. If they do, they move into this Room and attack 1d3 rounds later, completely immune to the trap.

If the PCs trigger the greater shout trap, the shield guardians automatically detect them and come to investigate.

On the eastern annexed hallway, the two false doors are also trapped. The doors are locked, but lead to solid stone. A DC 45 Open Lock check opens the door, but tampering with the lock or doorknob triggers the trap. The energy drain and ghoul touch trigger immediately, followed by the deeper darkness and silence which triggers 1d3 rounds later.

✦ Sensory Depravation Trap: CR 14; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; Atk +8 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, 2d4 negative levels for 24 hours, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); spell effect (ghoul touch, 18th-level wizard, DC 13 Fortitude save negates); spell effect (deep darkness, fills entire Room with magical darkness); spell effect (silence, fills entire Room with magical silence); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 44.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, remove the red paint so the PCs are surprised by the trap. To decrease the challenge, remove the Spell Resistance Encounter Condition.

N171. SHIELD GUARDIANS' OUTPOST

The north door to this Room is locked, requiring a DC

The open doorway on the south wall allows the shield guardians in this Room to see approaching PCs long before they arrive. In addition, any commotion in Room N170 alerts them of the PCs before they arrive.

Two tall emaciated statues are the only notable features of this chamber. One of the statues, fashioned from green and gray stone and dark burgundy metal stands upon the east wall, while its counterpart, shaped with greenish stone and bluish alloys, has its back to the west wall.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two shield guardians (hp 270 each) guard this Room and the southern corridor leading into Room N170. With the exception of other constructs and their lich lord master, they attack all creatures on sight and pursue their prey until they either kill them or are destroyed.

Their stored spells are enervation and ice storm.

Encounter Condition: Cursed 4, Fear 18, Fearless, Negative Energy

Tactics: When combat begins, these constructs cast enervation and ice storm, immediately, before engaging the heavily armored PCs in melee. They are thoughtless and lack tactical sensibility, but fight on nonetheless. Assume each has Improved Sunder, despite not having the prerequisites for this feat.

The shield guardians fight until destroyed and pursue retreating party members.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two shield guardians. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Shield Guardian: CR 10; Large construct; HD 24d10+30; hp 270; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 24, touch 9, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +18; Grp +29; Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, slam); Full Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, find master, guard, low-light vision, shield other, spell storing; AL N(E); SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +7; Str 24, Dex 11, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: [Improved Sunder].

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a -2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th-level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again).

N172. ANCIENT BLAST TRAP

The door to this Room is locked, requiring a DC 50 Open Lock check. It is also trapped and anyone tampering with the lock or doorknob triggers a lightning bolt trap.

⚡ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; special trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 38. This trap combines the effect of three lightning bolt spells cast simultaneously.

The light from half a dozen torches set upon heavy bronze sconces into the east and west wall illuminates this chamber, revealing bare walls and a dust-covered stone floor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room contained a magical trap when Invistis took control of the area. Instead of disabling the device, the lich lord decided to keep it active to protect his private throne Room (Room N176). This trap is activated one round after anyone steps inside the Room and affects all targets within 5 feet.

⚡ Greater Glyph of Warding (Blast) Trap: CR 14; magical device; automatic reset; spell effect (greater glyph of warding [blast], 18th-level cleric, 20d8 sonic, DC 21 Reflex save half damage); multiple targets (all targets within 5 ft.); Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31. Note: This spell combines the effect of two greater glyph of warding (blast) traps triggered simultaneously.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Cold

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, maximize the greater glyph of warding trap (having it deal 160 sonic damage). To decrease the challenge, remove the lightning bolt trap.

N173. TRAPPED HALLWAY

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The hallway is rigged with an arcane trap of Invistis' design. This trap is automatically sprung two rounds after anyone steps on the floor of the corridor and affects everyone within 30 ft. of each other (see mass hold person for more details). The trap also summons a creature that appears in the center of the corridor and attacks the closest targets.

In addition to the magical trap described below, a loud rigging alarm sounds for 10 consecutive rounds, instantly alerting Invistis of company. Though the lich hides in Room N178, he patiently waits for the PCs to enter his throne Room (Room N176) before using a project image spell to meet them.

⚡ Mass Hold Monster and Summon Monster IX Trap: CR 14; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; multiple traps (one mass hold monster trap and two summon monster IX traps that brings forth two colossal fiendish monstrous spiders); spell effect (mass hold monster, 18th-level sorcerer, DC 24 Will save negates), spell effect (summon monster IX, 18th-level sorcerer, two colossal fiendish monstrous spiders); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20, Fearless

Tactics: Once the two monstrous spiders (hp 208 each) are summoned they attack the held PCs, using their bite to reduce the Strength of the trapped victims before turning their attention to the rest of the PCs. Being fiendish, they have no sense of danger and fight madly to destroy the PCs.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add energy drain to the mass hold monster and summon monster IX trap. To decrease the challenge, remove mass hold monster from the mass hold monster and summon monster IX trap.

🕷 Colossal Fiendish Monstrous Spider: CR 11; Colossal vermin; HD 32d8+64; hp 208; Init +2; Spd 30 ft., climb 20 ft.; AC 22, touch 4, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +24; Grp +50; Atk +26 melee (4d6+15 plus poison, bite); Full Atk +26 melee (4d6+15 plus poison, bite); Space/Reach 40 ft./30 ft.; SA Poison, smite good, web; SQ Damage reduction 10/magic, resistance to cold and fire 10, spell resistance 25, tremorsense 60 ft., vermin traits; AL N; SV Fort +20, Ref +12, Will +10; Str 31, Dex 15, Con 14, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 2.

Skills and Feats: Climb +16, Hide +10, Jump +10, Move Silently +0, Spot +7.

Poison (Ex): Bite, Fortitude save DC 28, 2d8 Strength initial and secondary damage. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Smite Good (Su): Once per day this spider can make a normal melee attack to deal +20 damage against a good foe.

Web (Ex): Monstrous spiders often wait in their webs or in trees, then lower silently on silk strands and leap onto prey. A strand is strong enough to support the spider and one creature of the same size. Web-spinners can throw a web eight times per day. This is similar to an attack with a net but has a maximum range of 50 ft., with a range increment of 10 ft., and is effective against targets up to one size category larger than the spider. A creature can escape with a successful Escape Artist check (DC 28) or burst it with a Strength check (DC 32), both are standard actions. The check DCs are Constitution-based, and the Strength check DC includes a +4 racial bonus.

Web-spinners often create sheets of webbing sixty ft. square. They can position these sheets to snare flying creatures or to trap prey on the ground. Creatures must succeed on a DC 20 Spot check to notice a web or stumble into it and become trapped as by a successful web attack. Attempts to escape or burst the webbing gain a +5 bonus if the trapped creature has something to walk on or grab while pulling free. Each 5-ft. section has the 18 hit points, and sheet webs have damage reduction 5/—. A monstrous spider can move across its own web at its climb speed and can pinpoint the location of any creature touching its web.

Skills: Monstrous spiders have a +4 racial bonus on Hide and Spot checks and a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks. They can always choose to take 10 on Climb checks, even if rushed or threatened. They use either their Strength or Dexterity modifier for Climb checks, whichever is higher. Web-spinners have a +8 racial bonus on Hide and Move Silently checks when using their webs.

N174. ANCIENT COLD ENERGY TRAP

The door to this Room is locked, requiring a DC 50 Open Lock check. It is also trapped and anyone tampering with the lock or doorknob triggers a lightning bolt trap.

⚡ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; special trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 38. This trap combines the effect of three lightning bolt spells cast simultaneously.

The wavering flames of six torches set high upon heavy bronze sconces in the east and west wall send light into this simple and empty hall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like Room N172, this Room was already rigged with a trap when Invistis found it. The lich lord kept the trap active to insure no one would trespass deeper into his lair. This trap is activated one round after anyone steps inside the Room and affects all targets within 5 ft.

⚡ Greater Glyph of Warding (Blast) Trap: CR 14; magical device; automatic reset; spell effect (greater glyph of warding [blast], 18th-level cleric, 20d8 sonic, DC 21 Reflex save half damage); multiple targets (all targets within 5 ft.); Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 31. N175. SPECIAL LEVER CHAMBER

The door to this Room is locked and trapped. Though Invistis carries a key that unlocks it, a successful DC 50 Open Lock check also opens it. Anyone tampering with the lock triggers its magical trap.

♣ Maximized Horrid Wilting Trap: CR 16; magical device; automatic reset; spell effect (horrid wilting, 18th-level sorcerer, 108 damage, DC 23 Fortitude save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

This room contains a massive iron lever, which comes out of a one-ft. wide by four-ft. long groove in the stone floor. The lever is made from tarnished iron and is set at a 45-degree angle, its tip pointing south.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room holds one of the four intricate mechanisms linked to the powerful force fields in the antechambers opening into Room N159. The lever must be pulled up, requiring a successful DC 20 Strength check. The other three levers can be found in Rooms N199, N222, and N250.

All four must be raised in order to deactivate the force fields.

Encounter Condition: Positive Energy

Tactics: Chaotic or evil creatures touching the lever suffer 1d4 negative levels per round they remain in contact. Chaotic evil creatures are destroyed irrevocably with no chance for a save. Caster level 20th.

When the final lever is pulled, the World Eater wakes and a pulse of negative energy blasts through the entire dungeon. See Room N159 and the Sidebar (page 746) for more information.

N176. INVISTIS' THRONE ROOM

This great hall is illuminated by the light of two-dozen torches set upon dark bronze sconces some twenty feet above the cold stone floor. Upon three of the walls are a total of nine deep alcoves. Each alcove contains a tall thin figure with thick stony appendages. Every third statue is made of bronze and iron and is much more squat than the others. Their hands are coarse and the heads are made to resemble macabre skulls. Shiny bluish metals, and red-green stones adorn the taller statues, while the iron statues lack any adornments at all. Shaped to look like the dead, these statues are unnerving to gaze upon.

Set at the foot of the flat northern wall is a massive stone dais, about one-ft. high, upon which sits a dark throne fashioned from burgundy stones. Suddenly a skeletal figure wearing rich but rotted clothing of a deep blue shade materializes upon the throne, a pair of heavy-looking bronze bracelets upon its thin forearms and a silver amulet dangling from a chain at its neck. Within the eye-pits of his skeletal head burn deep red lights filled with cunning, hatred, and malevolence. His voice is deep, with the ring of education and class. He carries himself with dignity.

"You are indeed brave. A trait that I imagine will lead you to greatness."

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: Here is where the PCs meet Invistis (or a facsimile) for the first time. The fanatically paranoid lich lord uses project image, allowing him to talk with the PCs while remaining safely hidden away. Invistis is interested in the PCs, especially if they are healthy and uninjured (having either triggered or bypassed a good number of the arcane traps protecting his territory). The lich lord, however, has only 15 rounds before his spell ends, so he engages the PCs in conversation quickly, hoping to access their goals and ambitions.

Invistis does not waste time and asks the PCs for help. His goal is to convince them to conquer the lair of the mummy priestess to the south and bring the remains of her destroyed body to him. In exchange for this service, Invistis promises to give the PCs all the treasures held by the mummy priestess plus half of what he holds (in his false treasure chamber). If the PCs seem interested, Invistis is eager to seal the deal.

If the PCs are morally pure or righteous, he tries to sway their hearts by telling them stories of the mummy lord and how she captures children to augment her army's ranks. "As you can see, I no longer dabble in the black arts, but only with machines. This prison has taught me the error of my ways and I am more learned now, than before my banishment. Though I am cursed, I no longer wish to enthrall the living... or the dead."

If the PCs have met Kasteoficiss and tell Invistis that she has said vile things of him, he replies, "Look at the evidence. Look at the death she surrounds herself with. Certainly men as wise as yourselves do not need me to beguile them with lies. I shall allow my record to speak for itself."

While Invistis is not angry yet, he is losing patience. He hopes the PCs can reach an accord quickly.

Should the PCs detect moderate evil from the Room, but none from the projected image. A DC 40 Sense Motive check reveals that Invistis is lying. Paladins and lawful good PCs suffer a -4 circumstance penalty to this check upon hearing the news of his "rehabilitation."

If the PCs cast detect magic, the DM should make a DC 25 Spellcraft check in private for the caster. Failure indicates that the strength of the magic of the Room makes it difficult to isolate the magic of the projected image. Whether or not they believe it is real, is up to them.

If the PCs still aren't convinced that his intentions are pure, he tells them that he possesses a special key that he has hidden from the Kasteoficiss lest she use it to release the god of death.

If the PCs give Invistis grief or otherwise disrespect him, he orders his six shield guardians (hp 270 each) and three iron golems (hp 210 each) to attack. They suffer a -4 penalty to their Initiative check, but nonetheless attack without fail.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: If combat breaks out, the iron golems and shield guardians advance, engaging the PCs in melee while the image of the lich lord weaves powerful arcane spells against them (see Room N178 for more details on Invistis).

Each shield guardian has one of the following stored spells — contagion, crushing despair, flame arrow, haste, lightning bolt, and wall of fire. They cast these spells in the first three rounds of combat, targeting warriors first. The lich remains hidden in his crypt (Room N178), convinced that his minions can take care of the PCs.

The iron golems attack any clerics, rangers, or rogues, knowing full well that wizards cannot harm them.

If the PCs defeat the guardians and golems, but appear ravaged by the battle, Invistis is 50% more likely to enter the Room and demand their audience lest he finish what his golems started.

Treasure: At first glance, there seem to be no treasures in this hall except for the twenty-four continual flame torches. A successful DC 35 Search check, however, reveals one of the armrests of the throne is loose. This portion of the kingly seat can be removed and put back into place easily, uncovering a small alcove holding a potion of eagle's splendor (5 doses).

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one shield guardian and one iron golem. To decrease the challenge, remove three shield guardians.

✦ Shield Guardian: CR 10; Large construct; HD 24d10+30; hp 270; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 24, touch 9, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +18; Grp +29; Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, slam); Full Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, find master, guard, low-light vision, shield other, spell storing; AL N(E); SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +7; Str 24, Dex 11, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a –2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th-level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again).

✦ Iron Golem: CR 13; Large construct; HD 18d10+30; hp 210; Init –1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 30, touch 8, flat-footed 30; Base Atk +12; Grp +28; Atk +23 melee (2d10+11, slam); Full Atk +23 melee (2d10+11, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon; SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 15/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL N(E); SV Fort +6, Ref +5, Will +6; Str 33, Dex 9, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con, Fortitude DC 19 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below. A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

Necromantic magic is reflected back at the caster, like spell turning. This effect is flawless and cannot be dispelled. The iron golem can reflect up to 18 spell levels per day.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

N177. FALSE TREASURE ROOM

The secret door from Room N176 is a simple wall panel that sinks into the floor when a hidden lock is bypassed, whether by using the proper silver key (in Invistis' possession) or by picking it with a successful DC 50 Open Lock check. A DC 35 Search check is required to find this lock. Once the wall panel sinks into the ground, it stays there for two full minutes before rising and locking itself back into place.

The secret door leading to Room N178 is identical (granting the PCs a +5 competence bonus to locate it), but the key that opens it is different. In order to find the mechanism opening this door, the PCs must first move the chest lying in front of it.

The secret stone panel sinks into the ground, revealing a small dark corridor. This hallway opens into a narrow room holding two large coffers, one upon the east wall and the other upon the south. The ceiling, some 100-ft. tall, makes the hallway feel more cramped.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This chamber was altered by Invistis to fool grave robbers into thinking this was his treasure chamber. Since he travels from Room N176 to N178 via levitate, PCs inspecting the floor see no footprints in the thin layer of dust covering the stone. This should lead them to believe that the Room has gone unnoticed for centuries.

This is not the case.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: PCs examining the Room have a number of opportunities to trigger traps scattered about. Every minute the PCs spend searching the Room, there is a 25% chance of triggering a trap from the list below.

1d20	Trap
1	✦ Power Word Death Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (power word death , 18th-level wizard), Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.
2–4	✦ Power Word Stun Trap: CR 8; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (power word stun , 17th-level wizard), Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.
5–8	✦ Incendiary Cloud Trap: CR 9; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (incendiary cloud , 15th-level wizard, 4d6/round for 15 rounds, DC 22 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.
9–10	✦ Energy Drain Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; Atk +9 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, 2d4 negative levels for 24 hours, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.
11–12	✦ Insanity Mist Vapor Trap: CR 9; mechanical; proximity trigger (alarm); repair reset; gas; never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (insanity mist, DC 15 Fortitude save resists, 1d4 Wis/2d6 Wis); multiple targets (all targets in a 10-ft.-by-10-ft. room); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.
13	✦ Prismatic Spray Trap: CR 9; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (prismatic spray , 18th-level wizard, DC 20 Reflex, Fortitude, or Will save, depending on effect); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.
14–18	✦ Reverse Gravity Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm , 10-ft. area); automatic reset; spell effect (reverse gravity , 18th-level wizard, 10d6 fall [upon hitting the ceiling of the 100-ft.-high room], then 10d6 fall [upon falling 100 ft. to the floor when the spell ends], DC 20 Reflex save avoids damage); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 35.
19–20	✦ Wail of the Banshee Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (wail of the banshee , 17th-level wizard, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); multiple targets (up to 17 creatures); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

If the PCs trigger any traps in this Room, Invistis hears it in Room N178. From there, he can trigger the traps, one per round, as a free action. PCs in the Room that are not supposed to be here, can be eliminated fairly quickly if they don't find the other secret door.

Treasure: The two chests in this Room are identical. Both require a DC 40 Open Lock check and both are trapped.

The chest upon the east wall is guarded by a fire trap and contains 5,000 fake platinum pieces. A successful DC 25 Appraise check is required to notice the coins are worthless, however.

♦ Fire Trap: CR 7; spell; spell trigger; no reset; spell effect (fire trap, 17th-level wizard, 1d4+17 fire, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

The chest on the west wall is guarded by a sepia snake sigil and is filled with beautiful clothing of various sizes and makes. Long silken robes, leather vests, cotton jerkins, woolen shirts, and thick fur cloaks are folded nicely inside the chest. These items are worth a total of 565 gp if sold (mainly due to the high quality of the fur cloaks and silk robes).

♦ Sepia Snake Sigil Trap: CR 6; spell; spell trigger; no reset; spell effect (sepia snake sigil, 17th-level wizard, DC 16 Reflex save negates); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

If the PCs trigger the fire trap or make a Reflex save against the sepia snake sigil, the noise is loud enough to attract Invistis' attention (in Room N178).

EL: Varies

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have a trap trigger 50% of the time. To decrease the challenge, have a trap trigger 15% of the time.

N178. INVISTIS' SECRET CHAMBER

A quiet alarm has been placed on the door, alerting Invistis of intruders, if they somehow bypassed the traps in Room N177.

This is a particularly brutal encounter and the DM should familiarize himself with Invistis' and Ravel's abilities before attempting to run it. Okay. You've been warned.

A wide throne carved out of burgundy stone and a deep blue marble desk take up most of the floor space in this dark chamber. The desk lies five feet from the east wall and runs from the northern wall to the middle of the room. Upon its marble surface is an amalgam of empty glass vials of various shapes and sizes, jars containing powdered substances of different shades, and the yellowed bones from a number of odd creatures.

The throne-like chair is set in the middle of the south wall and the emaciated frame of an almost skeletal humanoid shriveled skin sticking to its bony frame still sits upon it. The ancient blues robes worn by this creature are rotted and a pair of thick bronze bracelets is set into its forearms. A silver amulet hangs from a chain around his neck, and his eyes glint with a dim blue light yet burn with a reddish inner glow that is disquieting to behold. His gaze is certainly inhuman.

On his right shoulder rest a decayed cat and in the northeast corner, an archaic rusted automaton towers over the contents of the room. Written on the chestplate of the metal beast are hundreds of runes. In its hands, it grips a massive double-headed greataxe.

On either side of the kingly chair are two massive iron chests. Each one holds a wide lock upon their heavy lids. On the wall behind the throne is a majestic purple tapestry of an elf maiden astride a robust unicorn steed. This laughable scene sharply contrasts with the dim surroundings of this tomb.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Invistis the Lich Lord (hp 132) resides in this Room. Though extremely cunning, Invistis is paranoid, maniacal, and teetering on insanity. Haunted by the ghosts of his brothers, whom he murdered in order to gain lichdom, Invistis is a megalomaniac who believes he should rule the entire dungeon — and indeed the world. Because the ghosts of his murdered family torments him ceaselessly, and also because he is the only one who can perceive and interact with them, Invistis often seems to speak to himself. Though he mostly mumbles when talking to the ghosts, he is prone to great fits of anger directed at them, making him appear totally insane.

If Invistis convinced the PCs to help him achieve his goal (see Room N176), the lich sees them as important allies, but never allows them into his private sanctum. Instead, when he needs to meet with them, he uses his project image spell to talk to them in Room N176. Invistis' most immediate ambition is to destroy the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss and take over her domain. With the special key she has in her possession and the two central antechambers she controls (Rooms N112 and N133) he will be in a much better position to liberate the creature in Room N159 and then take over the entire region.

If the PCs agree to help the lich lord, he asks them to destroy Kasteoficiss and bring back the oversized copper key she owns. If the PCs want to help Invistis but refuse to destroy the mummy priestess, the lich lord asks that they bring him the two missing keys (the copper key owned by Kasteoficiss and the oval diamond in Room N206) as well as locate the missing levers and pull them in the northern position.

If the lich lord strikes any kind of bargain with the PCs, he honors his part of the deal. He is willing to part with all the monetary treasures he owns as well as with the mighty enchanted warhammer, which is of no use to him. Other magic items, however, are off limits.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 10, Echoes 2, Fear 20, Haunted, Negative Energy

Tactics: If the PCs met Invistis in Room N176 and defeated his constructs, the lich lord dissuades the PCs from fighting him head on. If this fails, he goes for the big guns immediately.

Invistis is supremely confident of his ability to ward off attackers and fights as though possessed. He launches into the battle, throwing powerful magic at the PCs. With his shield guardian in tow, he isn't afraid of warriors. And since he is protected by a contingency — that activates a globe of invulnerability the moment a spell of 4th level or lower spell is cast at him — spellcasters are also ignored. He also has permanent spell immunity against flame, lightning, and cure spells (including harm) in case anyone tries something obtuse. Lastly, since he is undead, sneak attacks do not frighten him.

When the fight begins, Invistis takes a methodical approach to the battle. He does not pull punches, seeking to eliminate the PCs as quickly as possible. On the first round, he casts cloudkill on the PCs and then encloses them within his quicken wall of force. The shield guardian takes a defensive stance next to Invistis and his mummified cat familiar pulls down a tapestry on the far wall. Behind the tapestry — of the elven maiden and her unicorn — (perhaps some inside joke), is a symbol of weakness that triggers, immediately (3d6 Strength damage, DC 26 Fort save negates).

If the PCs disperse before he can drop the wall of force, divides the PCs by using a quicken wall of fire at far-away PCs and waves of exhaustion on those close to him.

Once the battle is underway, he uses different tactics on different PCs. Rogues become the target of quicken slow followed by horrid wilting or greater shout. Others are hit with quicken slow and an empowered chain lightning. If the PCs group properly, he uses wail of the banshee to kill them off.

If he needs to end the combat and flee — which he does if he's dropped to 30 hp or less — he casts multiple walls of force and walls of fire to seal the PCs in the Room and escape through whatever opening the shield guardian can make for him.

Beyond pulling down the tapestry on the north wall, Ravel stays near him at all times, only moving to attack those who engage its master in melee combat. Ravel also benefits from the shield guardian's guard ability but not from the shield other ability.

Invistis' shield guardian stands in front of him, with a readied action to intercept and pummel anyone who tries to engage Invistis. It uses its stored spell (ice storm) when commanded to by Invistis or on whoever strikes Invistis down, should such an event occur.

If the PCs reduce Invistis to 25% of his total hit points or less, the lich lord escapes to Room N167 where he orders the construct there to protect him while he desperately tries to figure out a plan that would rid him of the heroes. If the PCs have already destroyed the golem in Room N167, he uses his scroll of arcane lock to bar the door while he repairs the iron golem.

He then leaves the golem to take care of the PCs while he races to Room N180 to retrieve his prize skeletal pyro-hydras. Invistis does everything he can to avoid death at the PCs hands. While he would eventually return to undeath in 2d6 months, he fears what would become of his empire during his death.

If reduced to 5 or fewer hit points, Invistis takes his own life, rather than letting the PCs destroy him. His body turns to dust. Since his soul is stored inside one of the iron golems (pick one), he returns to undeath in 2d6 months when a new body is forged from his ashes. During that time, he remains inside the iron golem, finding a quiet corner of the dungeon to hide.

Treasure: In addition to the magical items he carries, Invistis has a ring with several mundane keys upon it. These keys unlock the doors in Rooms N161, N162, N166, N175, N177, and N179, as well as the two chests found in this chamber. The lich lord also has in his possession two very special keys. The first one is a human-sized, mummified, six-fingered hand, which skin has turned a dull shade of black. This key unlocks the door in Room N112. The second special key that Invistis has is a fist sized rough-cut diamond. This special key fits in the door of Room N148.

The four chests in this chamber are locked and trapped. Unless the PCs steal the keys required to open them from Invistis, a successful DC 50 Open Lock check is needed to unlock each of the chests. Anyone tampering with any of the locks without the proper key, however, triggers the arcane trap set upon the chests.

Chests 1 and 2. The easternmost chests are trapped with simple magic missile traps that targets all PCs within the Room. The missiles are distributed equally among them, starting with the PC that tampered with the lock.

♦ Maximized Magic Missiles Trap: CR 15; magic device; touch trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (magic missiles, 18th-level sorcerer, twenty missiles dealing 5 force damage each); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 40. This trap combines the effect of four maximized magic missile spells triggered simultaneously. The missiles can be divided up however DM likes, but evenly is the best.

Chest 1 contains a 5,550 pp and 12,400 gp.

Chest 2 contains jewelry and gems worth over 100,000 gp.

Chest 3 and 4. The westernmost chests are rigged with acid arrow spells targeting the PC who tampered with the lock.

♦ Maximized Acid Arrow Trap: CR 18; magic device; touch trigger; automatic reset; Atk +32 ranged touch; spell effect (acid arrow, 18th-level sorcerer, 24 acid/round for 5 rounds); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 40. This trap combines the effects of three maximized acid arrow spells cast simultaneously at the same target. The arrows can be divided up however DM likes, but evenly is the best.

Chest 3 contains over 30 potions, 12 wands, and a ring of wishes (1 charge). The ring is cursed and to date, Invistis has not been able to undo its effects. While the wish comes true, the effect is unpredictable. A PC wishing for a weapon, gains the weapon from an unholy source. A PC wishing for gold, bankrupts an empire. A PC wishing for magical knowledge results in a library burning to the ground and so on. The exact interpretation is left to the DM, but should pervert the true intentions of the PC, no matter how moral. Immoral PCs making immoral wishes find their gold in the hand of a local orphanage instead.

The DM can choose the potions and wands from the DMG or roll for them randomly as major magic items.

Chest 4 contains Ramnak, a powerfully enchanted +4 axiomatic warhammer of icy burst. This weapon has an Intelligence score of 13, a Wisdom of 10, and a Charisma of 13. It is lawful neutral in nature, communicates empathically with its wielder, and has 60 ft. vision and hearing. Ramnak can also be used to bless its allies three times per day and detect magic at will. Of dwarven make, this powerful item is cast from a blue alloy that sparks when within 60 ft. of a magical source. Unlike most hammers, the head and shaft of Ramnak is cast from the same material and may not be detached from one another. The 3-ft. long steel handle is covered with woven black leather, while the massive head of the weapon forms a perfect rectangle. The dwarven runes for "Ramnak" and "Glory" are embossed on the head of the hammer.

The hammer has been trapped with Invistis for over 2,000 years and yearns for battle. If there is a dwarf within 100 ft. it demands to be placed in his hands, even if dead. Ramnak can turn his powers on and off at will, so PCs that fail to heed his requests will find themselves holding a -2 warhammer in now time. He is as stubborn as any dwarf, and twice as opinionated. Having been trapped for so long, he is eager to hear stories of his lands and people's deeds (if the PCs have any). Otherwise, he tells them a few of his own.

EL: 24

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four wizard levels to Invistis. To decrease the challenge, remove two wizard levels and replace his bracers of armor +8 with a ring of protection +4.

▲ Invistis the Lich Lord, Wiz 18: CR 22; Medium undead (formerly human); HD 18d12; hp 132; Init +6; Spd 30 ft.; AC 26, touch 21, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +9; Grp +9; Atk +9 melee touch (see below); Full Atk +9/+4 melee touch (see below); Space/Reach 5 ft./5 ft.; SA fear aura, paralyzing touch, spells, touch attack; SQ Damage reduction 15/bludgeoning and 15/magic, darkvision 120 ft., immunity to cold, electricity, permanent spells, polymorph, and mind affecting attacks, turn resistance +4; AL NE; SV Fort +8, Ref +10, Will +16; Str 10, Dex 14, Con —, Int 26* [28], Wis 16, Cha 15.

* Invistis' Int includes a +2 inherent bonus from use of a wish.

Skills and Feats: Concentration +21, Craft (alchemy) +29, Craft (clockmaker) +29, Decipher Script +29, Hide +10, Knowledge (arcana) +29, Knowledge (architecture and engineering) +29, Knowledge (history) +20, Knowledge (the planes) +20, Knowledge (religion) +20, Listen +13, Move Silently +13, Search +17, Spellcraft +29, Spot +13; Craft Magic Arms and Armor, Craft Construct, Craft Wand, Craft Wondrous Item, Empower Spell, Eschew Materials, Extend Spell, Improved Initiative, Maximize Spell, Quicken Spell, Scribe Scroll.

Fear Aura (Su): Liches are shrouded in a dreadful aura of death and evil. Creatures of less than 5 HD in a 60-ft. radius that look at the lich must succeed on a Will save (DC 21) or be affected as though by a fear spell from a sorcerer of the lich's level. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same lich's aura for 24 hours.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): Any living creature a lich hits with its touch attack must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 21) or be permanently paralyzed. Remove paralysis or any spell that can remove a curse can free the victim (see the bestow curse spell description). The effect cannot be dispelled. Anyone paralyzed by a lich seems dead, though a DC 20 Spot check or a DC 15 Heal check reveals that the victim is still alive.

Permanent Spells (Su): The following spells are permanent and always active—arcane sight, read magic, and see invisibility.

Touch Attack: A lich has a touch attack that uses negative energy to deal 1d8+5 points of damage to living creatures; a Will save (DC 21) halves the damage.

Wizard Spells Prepared (4/7/6/6/6/5/5/4/4/3, save DC 19 + spell):

0—arcane mark, mage hand (2), mending, message (2); 1st—magic missile (3), shield (2), floating disc, unseen servant*; 2nd—command undead, glitterdust, acid arrow (2), scorching ray (2); 3rd—blink, fireball, lightning bolt, slow, vampiric touch (2); 4th—enervation (2), greater invisibility (2), wall of fire (2); 5th—cloudkill, cone of cold, wall of force (2), waves of fatigue; 6th—chain lightning, disintegrate, greater dispel magic (2), true seeing; 7th—prismatic spray, quickened slow, spell turning, waves of exhaustion; 8th—empowered chain lightning, greater shout, horrid wilting, quickened wall of fire; 9th—energy drain, wail of the banshee, quickened wall of force.

* Already cast, Invistis cast unseen servant at the beginning of each day and always has it available to him.

Skills: Liches have a +8 racial bonus on Hide, Listen, Move Silently, Search, Sense Motive, and Spot checks.

Possessions: Amulet of proof against detection and location, bracers of armor +8, headband of intellect +2, ring of minor energy resistance (fire), ring of protection +1, cloak of resistance +2, broach of shielding (45 points left), scroll of empowered chain lightning (18th), scroll of empowered incendiary cloud (18th), scroll of empowered greater dispel magic (18th), scroll of empowered eagle's splendor (5th), scroll of empowered globe of invulnerability (11th), scroll of empowered lighting bolt (3, all at 10th), scroll of empowered summon monster VII (13th), wand of ice storm (19 charges, 7th level), ivory statuette of an elven maiden with gemstone flowers in her hair (worth 2,000 gold, focus for contingency), master shield guardian amulet.

Spellbook: 0—all; 1st—all; 2nd—arcane lock, blindness/deafness, blur, command undead, darkness, eagle's splendor, false life, fox's cunning, ghoul touch, glitterdust, knock, acid arrow, obscure object, scorching ray, see invisibility, spectral hand, summon monster II, whispering wind; 3rd—arcane sight, blink, dispel magic, displacement, fireball, flame arrow, haste, lightning bolt, nondetection, protection from energy, ray of exhaustion, sepia snake sigil, slow, summon monster III, vampiric touch; 4th—animate dead, arcane eye, bestow curse, contagion, crushing despair, detect scrying, dimensional anchor, enervation, ice storm, fire trap, greater invisibility, lesser globe of invulnerability, minor creation, stoneskin, summon monster IV, wall of fire; 5th—break enchantment, cloudkill, cone of cold, dominate person, fabricate, hold monster, magic jar, major creation, permanency, summon monster V, symbol of pain, teleport, wall of force, waves of fatigue; 6th—chain lightning, circle of death, contingency, create undead, disintegrate, eyebite, globe of invulnerability, greater dispel magic, quest/geas, summon monster VI, symbol of fear, true seeing; 7th—control undead, delayed blast fireball, limited wish, prismatic spray, project image, reverse gravity, spell turning, summon monster VII, symbol of stunning, waves of exhaustion; 8th—discern location, horrid wilting, incendiary cloud, polar ray, polymorph any object, power word stun, greater shout, summon monster VIII, symbol of death; 9th—energy drain, power word kill, summon monster IX, wall of the banshee, wish.

All ten of Invistis spellbooks, one book per level, are each guarded by a number of sepia snake sigils equal to the level of the book. Each book has a massive lock upon which fire trap has been placed (should anyone open the books with anything but the key). An eleventh book, obviously different and marked with strange sigils and holy wards is protected by a greater glyph of warding (blast). Inside this book are nine divine spells that Invistis has transcribed into arcane text. While blasphemy, deeper darkness, glyph of warding, greater glyph of warding, raise dead, resurrection, silence, and spell immunity are not normally available to wizards, Invistis has spent hundreds of years turning divine magic against itself in his quest for immortality.

▲ Ravel, Mummified Cat Familiar: CR *; Tiny undead [formerly magical beast]; HD [18]; hp 66; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 23, touch 14, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +9; Grp +8; Atk +15 melee (1d2+3 plus poison, claw); Full Attack +15 melee (1d2+3 plus poison, 2 claws) and +10 melee (1d3+3 plus poison, bite); Space/Reach 2 1/4 ft./0 ft.; SA Deliver touch spells; SQ Alertness, damage reduction 5/—, darkvision 60 ft., improved evasion, low-light vision, permanent spells, scent, scry on familiar, share spells, speak with master and animals of its kind, spell resistance 23, turn resistance +4, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +8, Will +12; Str 8, Dex 15, Con —, Int 14, Wis 12, Cha 7.

Skills and Feats: Balance +10, Climb +6, Hide +14, Jump +10, Listen +3, Move Silently +6, Spot +3; Weapon Finesse.

Alertness (Ex): While Ravel is within arm's reach, Invistis gains the Alertness feat [included in Invistis' stats above].

Improved Evasion (Ex): When subjected to an attack that normally allows a Reflex saving throw for half damage, a familiar takes no damage if it makes a successful saving throw and half damage even if the saving throw fails.

Empathic Link (Su): The master has an empathic link with his familiar out to a distance of up to 1 mile. The master cannot see through the familiar's eyes, but they can communicate empathically. Because of the limited nature of the link, only general emotional content can be communicated.

Because of this empathic link, the master has the same connection to an item or place that his familiar does.

Deliver Touch Spells (Su): Ravel can deliver touch spells for Invistis.

If the master and the familiar are in contact at the time the master casts a touch spell, he can designate his familiar as the "toucher." The familiar can then deliver the touch spell just as the master could. As usual, if the master casts another spell before the touch is delivered, the touch spell dissipates.

Permanent Spells (Su): The following spells are permanent and always active on Ravel—arcane sight, greater magic fang (+4), resistance, and see invisible.

Poison (Su): Ravels claws and bite carry a magical venom, Injury, Fortitude DC 17, initial and secondary damage 1d4 Dex. The save DC is Charisma based.

Scry on Familiar (Sp): Invistis may scry on his familiar (as if casting the scrying spell) once per day.

Scent (Ex): Can detect approaching enemies, sniff out hidden foes, and track by sense of smell.

Share Spells: At Invistis', he may have any spell (but not any spell-like ability) he casts on himself also affect Ravel. Ravel must be within 5 ft. at the time of casting to receive the benefit.

If the spell or effect has a duration other than instantaneous, it stops affecting the familiar if it moves more than 5 ft. away and will not affect the familiar again even if it returns to the master before the duration expires. Additionally, Invistis may cast a spell with a target of "You" on his familiar (as a touch range spell) instead of on himself.

A master and his familiar can share spells even if the spells normally do not affect creatures of the familiar's type (magical beast).

Speak with Master (Ex): Ravel and Invistis can communicate verbally as if they were using a common language. Other creatures do not understand the communication without magical help.

Speak with Animals of Its Kind (Ex): Ravel can communicate with animals of approximately the same kind as itself (including dire varieties): i.e. with felines. Such communication is limited by the intelligence of the conversing creatures.

Skills: Cats have a +4 racial bonus on Climb, Hide, and Move Silently checks and a +8 racial bonus on Jump checks. Cats have a +8 racial bonus on Balance checks. They use their Dexterity modifier instead of their Strength modifier for Climb and Jump checks. In areas of tall grass or heavy undergrowth, the Hide bonus rises to +8.

✦ Shield Guardian: CR 8; Large construct; HD 15d10+30; hp 112; Init +0; Spd 20 ft.; AC 29, touch 9, flat-footed 29; Base Atk +11; Grp +21; Atk Slam +17 melee (1d10+7/19–20, +1 bastard sword); Full Atk +17 melee (1d10+7/19–20, 2 +1 bastard swords); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, find master, guard, low-light vision, shield other, spell storing; AL N; SV Fort +5, Ref +5, Will +5; Str 22, Dex 10, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a –2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again). This shield guardian currently stores ice storm cast at 18th level of effect.

Note: This is the first shield guardian that Invistis built and he keeps it around partially out of sentimentality.

Possessions: Chain mail, twin +1 bastard swords.

N179. RIGGED CORRIDOR

Both doors opening into this corridor are locked and require a successful DC 50 Open Lock check to unlock. The keys that open each of these doors can be found on Invistis' body (Room N178).

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The length of this corridor is rigged with a meteor swarm trap, which create four spheres that explode simultaneously, causing a total of 24d6 fire damage to all within the area.

♦ Meteor Swarm Trap: CR 13; magical device; spell trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (meteor swarm, 18th-level sorcerer, four exploding sphere dealing 6d6 fire damage each, DC 24 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the meteor swarm trap to 30d6. To decrease the challenge, replace the meteor swarm trap with a symbol of death trap.

N180. THE BADLANDS

This hall is filled with debris and rock. The walls form a labyrinth of quasi-natural grottos and passageways. Travel here is always a challenge. The air here is heavy, charged with evil.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This Room, better known as the Badlands, was once comprised of smaller individual Rooms and corridors, but the devastation caused by a war between Invistis' minions and Kasteoficiss' servants mutated the Room. Over several decades of conflict, the original walls crumbled to dust and new passageways were formed. Today, the Badlands are an intricate complex of rough grottos and hallways that none other than Invistis' skeletal ally and the mindless zombie minions of the mummy priestess dare enter.

Though the mummy priestess regularly sends zombie minions here, it is Invistis' servants, five mighty skeletal pyrohydras (hp 142, 135, 130, 127, 121) that dominate the region. These mindless servants of the lich lord attack everything crossing their path. Appearing as masses from which a dozen long skeletal vertebral columns ending in dragon-like skulls protrude, these creatures fight to the death.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Cover (soft), Deep Silence, Desecration 8, Drafty, Fearless, Flooded, Fog 10, Haunted, Hazardous Footing 20, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: In combat, the skeletal hydras use no special tactics. Instead, they move toward their prey and use their multiple jaws to tear their opponent's flesh. These creatures are used to moving through the debris of the Badlands, having spent decades here. They do not suffer from any movement penalty normally caused by the rough terrain.

Because of how they were built, they are the only undead which Invistis claims. They can breath powerful necromantic fire, capable of reducing even the most powerful creatures to nothing.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two skeletal pyrohydras. To decrease the challenge, remove two.

♦ Skeletal Pyrohydra (12-Headed): CR 9; Huge undead; HD 12d12; hp 142, 135, 130, 127, 121; Init +6; Spd 20 ft., swim 20 ft.; AC 29, touch 10, flat-footed 27; Base Atk +6; Grp +20; Atk +12 melee (2d8+6, bite); Full Atk +12 melee (2d8+6, bite) and +7 melee (2d8+3, 11 bites); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., immune to cold and fire, metallic, resistance to electricity 10, spell resistance 12, turn resistance +4, undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +4, Ref +6, Will +8; Str 23, Dex 14, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Improved Initiative.

Breath Weapon (Su): Though undead, these skeletal pyrohydras can still breathe jets of necromantic fire 10 ft. high, 10 ft. wide, and 20 ft. long. All heads breathe once every 2d4 rounds. Each jet deals 3d6 points of fire damage, 3d6 unholy damage, and 1d4 Constitution drain per head. A successful DC 21 Reflex save halves the fire and unholy damage, but not the Constitution drain. The save DC is Strength-based.

For every point of Constitution drained in this manner, the Negative Energy effect of the Room increases by a factor of 1.

Metallic: These have been modified by Invistis the Lich Lord who has reinforced the bones by inlaying and plating them with metal. Invistis has further protected them by working magical wards over the surface of the hydra, making them resistant to magic and to turning.

Due to the metal affixed to these hydra skeleton, they are considered to be metal for the purpose of spells which target metal (such as rusting grasp) or which gain bonuses when attacking someone in metal armor (such as shocking grasp).

N181 THROUGH N201. MORE UNDEAD

Rooms N111 through N134 and Rooms N181 to N201 are controlled by Kasteoficiss, a zealot mummy priestess who, with her allip servants, worships a long forgotten God of Death. For more on this Section, see Rooms N111 through N134 on page 728.

N181. LOCKED CORRIDOR

Both doors leading to this corridor are locked. A successful DC 45 Open Lock check is required to open them. Otherwise, the key to unlock both doors can be found in Room N191.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

Encounter Condition: Echoes 8, Poor Footing 4

Tactics: The eastern door to this Room has a trap on it that triggers whenever the door is opened.

♦ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; special trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 38. This trap combines the effect of three lightning bolt spells cast simultaneously.

PCs entering this Room from Room N180, suffer a –10 circumstance penalty to Search checks to spot the trap. Disabling it from Room N180 is impossible.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the lightning bolt trap to 30d6+30. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage to 21d6.

N182. ANCIENT TEMPLE

The door on the northern wall of this Room is locked, requiring a DC 45 Open Lock check to unlock. The door on the southern wall is sealed shut, requiring a DC 40 Strength check to break open. Finally, the door on the eastern wall is locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock.

Four intricate columns of dark basalt supporting the fifty feet high ceiling dominate this wide hall. The glassy surfaces are polished and reflect ambient light. Eight ogres with pale green skin, rotted clothing, and hollow eyes stand in this room. Among them is a smaller humanoid skeleton with an eerie forked tongue and a disgusting mass of viscera crowded into its ribcage.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: When Kasteoficiss first took control of this Section, she used this Room as a temple to her dark god. Several decades ago, when battle for the Badlands (Room N180) began, the mummy priestess moved the altar to Room N193. Though the lich lord's forces never breached this Room, Kasteoficiss is prepared for the worse. She keeps loyal servants on hand here at all times, but occasionally sends groups of zombie spawns into the Badlands in what have thus far been futile attempts to reclaim them.

A group of eight ogre zombies (hp 65, 62, 57, 56, 56, 54, 50, 46) led by a large mohrg (hp 184) prevent anyone from entering this chamber. Having been slain by the mohrg, they serve it unwaveringly. The ogres are brutes in every sense of the word down to their shoulders slumped like massive apes when they walk.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 10, Fearless

Tactics: The zombies charge the PCs, fighting like standard ogres... only they are completely mindless. Meanwhile, the mohrg cunningly maneuvers to flank the PCs, preferring to strike spellcasters and light-armored PCs. If no enemy presents itself, it flees to Room N189 or N191 to guard Kasteoficiss. The ogre zombies fight to the death.

The mohrg wears a medallion, dedicated to the god of death. So long as the mohrg remains in the Room, the ogre zombies gain a +2 profane bonus to attack rolls, damage rolls, and saving throws. In addition, they gain +2 hit points per hit die. The medallion protects the mohrg with an unholy aura.

Treasure: One of the zombies carries a leather pouch with 17 gp and 42 sp. Another wears a copper armband worth 15 gp. The mohrg wears a cloak of fine blue silk embroidered with silver thread. This garment is in terrific shape and worth upwards of 150 gp.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs and a zombie horde. To decrease the challenge, remove the mohrg.

✦ Large Mohrg: CR 13; Large undead; HD 28d12; hp 184; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) or +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) and +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits, unholy aura; AL CE; SV Fort +9, Ref +15, Will +18; Str 31, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10

Skills and Feats: Climb +26, Hide +30, Listen +21, Move Silently +30, Spot +25, Swim +19; Alertness, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility, Power Attack, Spring Attack.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Unholy Aura (Su): The mohrg is shrouded in a permanent unholy aura, as cast by a 17th-level cleric. If dispelled, it reforms 1d6+1 rounds later. The unholy aura grants a +4 profane bonus to AC, +4 profane bonus on saves, and spell resistance 25 against good and spells derived from a good source. In addition, any good creature that strikes the mohrg in melee, suffers 1d6 points of temporary Strength damage (DC 20 Fortitude save negates).

✦ Ogre Zombie: CR 3; Large undead; HD 8d12+3; hp 65, 62, 57, 56, 56, 54, 50, 46; Init -2; Spd 30 ft. (can't run); AC 15, touch 7, flat-footed 15; Base Atk +4; Grp +14; Atk +9 melee (2d8+9, great club) or +9 melee (1d8+7, slam); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Single actions only, damage reduction 5/slashing, darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +2, Ref +0, Will +6; Str 23, Dex 6, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Single Actions Only (Ex): Zombies have poor reflexes and can perform only a single move action or attack action each round. A zombie can move up to its speed and attack in the same round, but only if it attempts a charge.

Unholy Aura (Su): So long as the mohrg remains in the Room, the ogres gain a +2 profane bonus to attack rolls, damage rolls, and saving throws. In addition, they gain 16 hit points each.

N183. ABANDONED STOREROOM

The door to this Room is locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock.

A stink issues from this chamber, filling the only corridor leading to it with an unpleasant smell that accentuates when the door is open. This chamber is filled with crates and barrels. The wood from these items is completely rotten and a closer examination reveals the containers are empty.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The materials here are rotted. What was stored here is anyone's guess, but the undead have let the Room go to seed.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 18, [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs fail to lock the door behind them, roll for a Random Encounter after 30 minutes in this Room. If the PCs lock the door behind them, the undead patrolling the halls assume the Room is empty and leave the occupants alone for 12 to 18 hours.

Treasure: A DC 30 Search check uncovers six vials of oil and a small pot of honey that did not spoil.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N184. EMPTY BEDCHAMBER

The door to this Room is locked, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock.

Massive bunks line up the east and west walls of this rooms. A closer look at the beds reveals that the wood is rotten and that the mattresses are now a deep brown mess of pine needles. There are also two iron coffers covered with rust lying at the foot of the south wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The materials are rotten. Who could possibly have lived here is anyone's guess, but the undead have let the Room deteriorate.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 18, [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs fail to lock the door behind them, roll for a Random Encounter after 30 minutes in this Room. If the PCs lock the door behind them, the undead patrolling the halls assume the Room is empty and leave the occupants alone for 12 to 18 hours.

Treasure: The lids of both coffers were smashed opened long ago by the servants of Kasteoficiss. There is nothing inside them except decrepit clothing.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N185. TORTURE CHAMBER

Both doors to this Room are locked, requiring DC 40 Open Lock checks to unlock.

This room widens to the north, revealing crude and rusty instruments lined up upon the northern wall, where the chamber is at its widest. A metallic rack dominates the wall: a spiked chain, a long razor-like instrument the size of a dagger, an iron plate holding rotten pieces of bamboo and a rusted scalpel, a handful of two-foot long but narrow needles, a metal ball with long spikes protruding from all sides, and a thick clay jar of salt.

The most impressive of the instruments is a wooden bed, rotted, upon which countless nails are set. The bed rests up against the north wall next to the tool rack, and is obviously fragile.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was a torture chamber, but its is as yet unknown who it was used by. Now, its implements lay unused. Whoever used it is now long gone and the undead have allowed it to fall into disrepair.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 18, [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs fail to lock the door behind them, roll for a Random Encounter after 30 minutes. If the PCs lock the door behind them, the undead patrolling the halls assume the Room is empty and leave the occupants alone for 12 to 18 hours.

Treasure: The only items salvageable from this Room are the master-work spiked chain, which must be cleaned since it is rusted; the razor-like instrument with the thin serrated blade (which functions as a dagger); and the jar filled with salt (which is still good). The spiked ball could be cleaned and used as the head of a morningstar, but this would require some real work as there is no place to set a handle upon the item. Rust rendered the scalpel and needles too fragile, and the bed of nails is so rotted that it crumbles into several useless pieces as soon as it is moved.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N186. OUTER GUARD POST

Both doors to this Room are locked, requiring DC 40 Open Lock checks to unlock.

The gibbering of muffled voices can be heard in the darkness. Closer examination reveals two ghostly figures hovering three feet above the floor. The eerie, shadowy shapes leave a vaporous trail in their tracks.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This chamber is one of several guard posts delineating Kasteoficiss' domain. Since this guard post opens into territory that is unclaimed by either of the mummy priestess' archenemies, only two guards are posted. While the Rooms east of here are abandoned, Kasteoficiss does not trust her enemies and suspects that they might slip past her and establish camps in Rooms N183 through N185.

Two allip servants (hp 83, 77) stand watch — their duty is to alert the guards in Room N182 if anyone trespasses into their mistress' territory. The allips move swiftly to Room N182, where the guards there ready themselves to face the PCs.

However, if the PCs corner the allips, they fight mercilessly, their babbling and shrill noise allows the allips in Room N182 a Listen check to overhear the fighting.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 7, Fog 10, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: These allips are insane and furious. They close into melee combat targeting the most heavily armed and armored PCs and drain the life out of them. These allips babble ceaselessly, their noises an impossibly chaotic pattern of muttering. Because of this, PCs must make Will saves against the allip's babbling each round, regardless of whether they succeeded in previous rounds.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two allips. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

✦ Allip Servant: CR 10; Medium undead (incorporeal); HD 12d12; hp 83, 77; Init +5; Spd Fly 30 ft. Skills and Feats: Hide +12, Intimidate +12, Listen +11, Search +7, Spot +11, Survival +0 (+2 following tracks); Ability Focus (babble), Alertness, Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes

Babble (Su): An allip constantly mutters and whines to itself, creating a hypnotic effect. All sane creatures within 60 ft. of the allip must succeed on a DC 18 Will save or be affected as though by a hypnotism spell for 2d4 rounds. This is a sonic mind-affecting compulsion effect. Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse, prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N187. BLOOD-COVERED HALLWAY

The entire length of this corridor is covered in dried blood. The walls, floor, and ceiling are painted with a substantial coat, giving the place an eerie feel and a disquieting smell.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This corridor was decorated with blood as a warning to those that would oppose Kasteoficiss. A close examination at the hallway determines that the blood was applied long, long ago. Still, the unmistakable smell lingers.

After the PCs spend 15 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter. Roll again 30 minutes after that and every 30 minutes thereafter.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: There are a number of chaos traps hidden throughout the corridor. The DM should drop one of two on the PCs.

Kasteoficiss maintains these traps herself, making sure to rewrite the runes when they are triggered. Every chaos trap that Kasteoficiss makes is different. Some are even imbued with a mind-affecting enchantment. Knowing that elves and other creatures from the dungeon have found ways into the tomb, she has devised ways of dealing with them as well.

✦ Chaos Trap I: CR 14; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (dictum, 15th-level cleric, no save); spell effect (symbol of insanity, 15th-level cleric, DC 23 Will save negates); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 feet); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: Since these runes are written by Kasteoficiss each time the PCs stumble upon this trap, they gain a random +1d4 circumstance bonus to the Search check to find it.

✦ Chaos Trap II: CR 13; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (greater glyph of warding (blast), 15th-level cleric, 10d6 sonic damage, DC 20 Reflex save half); spell effect (holy word, 15th-level cleric, no save); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 ft.); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. N188. TRAPPED CORRIDOR

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The walls of this corridor are marked with runic patterns drawn in silver. If the PCs do not notice the runes, they trigger the chaos trap set into the floor and walls. The DM may trigger the trap at any point.

Kasteoficiss maintains this trap herself, making certain to rewrite the runes when they are triggered. Every chaos trap that Kasteoficiss makes is different. Some are imbued with a mind-affecting enchantment. Knowing that elves and other creatures from the dungeon have found ways into the tomb, she has devised ways of dealing with them as well.

N189. RIGGED ANTECHAMBER

The surface of the eastern door leading into Room N191 is marked with runic symbols in the shape of an open mouth. Anyone touching the door automatically triggers this magical trap, which automatically resets itself one minute after it was activated.

Kasteoficiss maintains this trap herself, making sure to rewrite the runes when they are triggered. Every chaos trap that Kasteoficiss makes is different. Some are even imbued with a mind-affecting enchantment. Knowing that elves and other creatures from the dungeon have found ways into the tomb, she has devised ways of dealing with them as well.

♣ Chaos Trap IV: CR 15; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (fire storm, 15d6 fire, 15th-level cleric, DC 23 Reflex save half); spell effect (blasphemy, 15th-level cleric, no save); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 ft.); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: Since these runes are written by Kasteoficiss each time the PCs stumble upon this trap, they gain a random +1d4 circumstance bonus to the Search check to find it.

This room is empty and dark. Sounds of scuttering insects echo off the stone.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When this trap is triggered, its high-pitched screech (alarm) automatically alerts the undead in Rooms N190 and N191. The guards in Room N190 hurry into this Room 1d3 rounds thereafter and attack the PCs, while Kasteoficiss (in Room N191) casts defensive divine spells and readies herself to face the would-be intruders.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Distracting Noises 9, Poor Footing 4

Tactics: If the mohrg from Room N182 is present, the trap has been disabled already (except for the alarm) and the guards in Room N190 arrive in 2 rounds. Kasteoficiss is already prepared for the intruders and has her defensive spells prepared.

N190. KASTEOFICISS' PERSONAL GUARDS QUARTERS

The walls of this room are bare and there is no furniture. Four undead skeletons with bloody viscera protruding from their bony chests and strange long tongues that end in eerie claws stand in this room. The vile creatures wear golden helmets crowned with red feathers that fail to hide their hideous skeletal jaws.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four impressive-looking mohrgs (hp 137, 132, 129, 125) — Kasteoficiss' personal guards — are posted in this Room, waiting for their mistress to call upon them. Though these creatures are not the mightiest servants under Kasteoficiss' command, they served her well in life as well as in death and have been rewarded with this post.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Fearless

Tactics: In combat, these cunning and merciless undead fiends work well as a group. They close in on the PCs and flank them, attacking the strongest opponents first. While two use their paralyzing touch, the others use +2 unholy longswords, gifts from the mummy priestess.

Treasure: The golden helmets worn by these mohrgs are of exquisite quality. Each is worth upwards of 750 gp to any collector, but otherwise about 190 gp each because of their obvious good quality. In addition they radiate necromancy and grant the mohrgs a +4 armor bonus and additional +4 turn resistance.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a mohrg must hit a creature of its size or smaller with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): A mohrg lashes out with its tongue in combat. Any opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 17 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by a mohrg rise after 1d4 days as zombies under the mohrg's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Possessions: +2 unholy longsword.

N191. KASTEOFICISS' PRIVATE SANCTUM

A massive column stands in the middle of this large hall. The basalt pillar supports the ceiling, which is cast in darkness. A dozen torches set upon bronze sconces on the walls illuminates sections of the room, revealing the countless paintings on the south and north wall to the west of the single column. These paintings, made directly upon the stone of the wall, are in various tints of beige, brown, and orange. They depict a tribe of desert nomads performing a number of different religious ceremonies to honor a deity represented by a large and shadowy mass that hovers above the people. The nomads in the pictures seem fearful of this worm-like god.

At the foot of the column is a massive throne carved out from the same dark and glassy material. Upon the throne is the gaunt shape of what must have once been a humanoid female. The cracked flesh of the creature is almost black and sticks to the thing's bones, as if it had no muscles or fat. The undead is attired in a golden crown studded with three shiny emeralds. It also wears a wide torc covering most of its chest. This item matches the crown's color and is also embedded with wide emerald stones. In the creature's creased but delicate hands is a thick scepter with a flanged ball at one end, also made from gold.

Along the north and south wall are three pedestals each, with black statues of faceless shrouded figures hunched over. An uneasiness washes over you as the air fills with the impossible sounds of chattering and moaning.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This is the private abode of Kasteoficiss, the mummy priestess controlling this Section. The Room is divided in two. The first, west of the column, serves as her personal throne Room. Though she seldom meets people here, the proud mummy insists on having a chamber worthy of her station.

The north and south walls have pedestals with statues resting on them. The statues are, in fact, allips, frozen in place and disguising themselves as statues. There are six allips altogether (hp 104, 101, 98, 96, 91, 91 each), lying in wait to strike. PCs trying to peer passed the ruse must succeed at a DC 32 Spot check or a DC 27 Search check to notice they are not really statues.

The second part of the Room, the long hall running from north to south in the eastern section, is where Kasteoficiss has her bedchamber and personal treasure Room. A large and sumptuous bed covered with rosy sheets of fine silk dominates the northern portion of the Room and beyond there is a round stone. The southern portion contains a two massive iron chests resting on a small stone altar lie in the southern branch.

Kasteoficiss (hp 126), a mummy lord and cleric of the God of Death, whose main goal is to liberate the entity in Room N159, lives here. Kasteoficiss is proud, haughty, and accustomed to having things done her way. She is impatient and prone to fits of anger, but she is not unreasonable. The mummy priestess is eager to evaluate the PCs' strength to see if they can help her attain her goals.

Kasteoficiss is vain and uses her haircomb of disguise to look like the beautiful dark eyed woman she was in life. If combat ensues, she lets her disguise evaporate so the full power of despair can cripple her enemies. If the PCs see through the disguise (true seeing, etc.) they are also affected.

As soon as the PCs enter the Room, they must make DC 18 Will saves or be affected by the babbling of the allips. Since there are six of them, they must make one per round until they have succeeded six times. Any failed save results in being hypnotized for 2d4 rounds. This will certainly help Kasteoficiss manipulate the PCs. It should not be apparent where the moaning is coming from OR that it is allips that make this noise.

Kasteoficiss is immune to the babbling of the allips.

When the PCs enter her private chamber, Kasteoficiss is more than willing to parley with them. She offers all the treasure held within the chest in this Room if the PCs agree to locate the levers and activate them, and then find the three missing keys that unlock the central vault (Room N159). The mummy priestess suspects that her two archenemies, namely Vinnara and Invistis, control some of the levers and also have some of the keys in their possession. She tells the PCs that her two main enemies are loathsome creatures who deserve to be destroyed.

Kasteoficiss controls one lever (Room N199), holds one key (the large copper key that opens the door in Room N134) in the silken bed of this chamber, and controls two of the outer antechambers leading to Room N159 (namely Rooms N112 and N134). She also knows that one lever is in Room N222. Kasteoficiss knows for a fact that Invistis holds at least two of the keys she needs. She is also painfully aware of the fact that she needs to activate all four levers in order to drop the force fields before she can gain access to the doors in the outer antechambers (see Rooms N112, N134, N147, and N158) and then have all four special keys in order to unlock these doors.

If the PCs want a way out of this Region, she promises to show them how to exit this place in exchange for Invistis' special keys. If the PCs bring her back these two keys, she pays them whatever rewards she promised and reveals to them how to access the secret door in Room N251. If, on the other hand, turning the PCs into allies proves too difficult a task — or if they declare themselves her enemies — Kasteoficiss does not hesitate to attack.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Desecration 12, [Distracting Noises 9], Fear Echoes 8, 20, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: From the pedestal, the allips (disguising themselves as statues) strike. Just before ambushing the PCs, the allips cast the Room into darkness and attack from behind. They attack mercilessly as Kasteoficiss prepares her spells. She leaves the allips to tend with the PCs, using defensive spells or ranged attack spells for as long as she can. However, if her opponents are close enough she uses the coup de grace action on those affected by her despair before moving to spells.

If no one is close enough to coup de grace she casts a maximized (through the use of the rod) flame strike into the largest group of PCs. She then summons a blade barrier to shield her from melee attacks while she hammers away with her spells. If wounded, she spontaneously casts mass inflict serious wounds (being evil and all) in place of greater scrying, making herself a target. She replaces undeath to death with mass inflict moderate wounds and so on. Each time she heals herself, she uses less useful divination spells to do so. In addition, if the PCs are in the way, they take damage from the mass inflict spells.

Kasteoficiss uses a multitude of divine spells to hinder or harm the PCs while the fight continues with the allips. Among her favorites are bestow curse, contagion, destruction, empowered searing light, slay living, and several inflict wound spells. She is also fond of using flame strike, but usually waits for her foes to discover she is well-equipped to resist fire before casting this spell. When forced into melee, she wields her greater metamagic rod as a +2 light mace and uses her inflict wound spells in combination with her mummy rot ability, targeting spellcasters first.

If reduced to 35 hit points or less, the mummy priestess pleads for her life, trying to convince the PCs that she could be useful to them — mainly by providing information about Invistis' lair and schemes.

She is not afraid of death, but is accustomed to controlling everything around her. Death is not the end for her and she knows this. However, she bargains whatever she can to negotiate for her release. Since her treasure is in this Room (and trapped) she offers it to the PCs as a last resort.

Chances are, whether the PCs are victorious or not, Kasteoficiss is out of spells when this combat is over. Which is a perfect time for Invistis to strike with three iron golems, if he knew the PCs were there.

Treasure: Kasteoficiss wears a crown of exquisite quality worth 25,000 gp and a torc that weighs 10 lbs and is made out of solid gold. It holds three valuable emeralds. It is worth 75,000 gp.

Both the crown and torc hail from a fallen dynasty, of which Kasteoficiss was the last descendant. She keeps set of keys that open the chest in this Room, as well the locked doors in Rooms N181, N197, N198, and N199. Her unholy symbol is a skull medallion. This item is made of white gold and hangs from a golden chain she wears around her waist. It is worth approximately 200 gp, but followers would pay upwards of 1,000 gp for it.

In addition to the items she carries, Kasteoficiss' treasure hoard includes 40,000 gp worth of jewelry and assorted gold and platinum coins, which is kept in her locked chest in the southeastern branch of her bedchamber. This chest is locked and trapped with a chaos trap. It can be unlocked using Kasteoficiss' key or with a successful DC 40 Open Lock check. The trap triggers whenever a PC touches the lock without the proper key.

Kasteoficiss maintains this trap herself, making sure to rewrite the runes when they are triggered. Every chaos trap that Kasteoficiss makes is different. Some are imbued with a mind-affecting enchantment. Knowing that elves and other creatures from the dungeon have found ways to get into the tomb, she has devised ways of dealing with them as well.

◆ Chaos Trap V: CR 16; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); no reset; spell effect (symbol of death, 15th-level cleric, separate DC 23 Will save negates each effect); onset delay (1 round) spell effect (create greater undead, 20th-level cleric, no save); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 ft.); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: The create greater undead spell goes off without effect if none of the PCs died as a result of the trap.

Upon the small stone altar next to the chest are three vials of unholy water and a skull the size of a fist, shaped from pure ivory. This is holy relic of the God of Death worshiped by Kasteoficiss. It is worth 800 gp to any follower of the faith, but could otherwise be sold for a quarter of that price.

Kasteoficiss' most important possession, however, is the oversized copper key that unlocks the special door in Room N134. She keeps this item hidden in her bed, wrapped inside layers of silken sheets. A successful DC 45 Search check is required to find it. The silken sheets upon the bed are old but in good shape. They are worth a total of 35 gp.

Despair (Su): At the mere sight of a mummy, the viewer must succeed on a DC 25 Will save or be paralyzed with fear for 1d4 rounds. Whether or not the save is successful, that creature cannot be affected again by the same mummy's despair ability for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Mummy Rot (Su): Supernatural disease—slam, Fortitude DC 25, incubation period 1 minute; damage 1d6 Con and 1d6 Cha. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Unlike normal diseases, mummy rot continues until the victim reaches Constitution 0 (and dies) or is cured as described below.

Mummy rot is a powerful curse, not a natural disease. A character attempting to cast any conjuration (healing) spell on a creature afflicted with mummy rot must succeed on a DC 20 caster level check, or the spell has no effect on the afflicted character.

To eliminate mummy rot, the curse must first be broken with break enchantment or remove curse (requiring a DC 20 caster level check for either spell), after which a caster level check is no longer necessary to cast healing spells on the victim, and the mummy rot can be magically cured as any normal disease.

An afflicted creature who dies of mummy rot shrivels away into sand and dust that blow away into nothing at the first wind.

Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the dark deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse, prayer.

N192. RUINED BARRACKS

This oddly shaped chamber is filled with rotted wooden debris and pieces of rusted metal. The remains of sturdy beams are still attached to some of the walls, suggesting that these materials were once large bunk beds that were destroyed long ago.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This empty chamber was the site of a major battle between Kasteoficiss' mohrg servants and ogre warriors, too ambitious for their own good. The ogres were destroyed and turned into zombie servants.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: If the PCs find a way to lock or bar the door, this Room remains Safe for 12 hours.

Treasure: Scattered among the debris is a wide but simple copper armband made to fit a Large creature (worth 40 gp). A successful DC 20 search check is required to uncover it.

N193. NEW TEMPLE

Massive basalt columns support the fifty-foot high ceiling here which is separated in two identical parts by a pair of narrow corridors. Though the eastern portion of this chamber is empty, a large altar made out from the same glassy substance as the column lies in the center of the place, five feet from the door beyond.

Upon the altar are five blue candles which fail to push back the heavy shadows. Next to the candle is an ivory skull. What is most impressive about the place, however, are the six black ghost-like shapes hovering around the altar and singing a disquieting hymn.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is Kasteoficiss' main temple, which is dedicated to the God of Death. The mummy priestess visits this place on a daily basis, but for the most part entrusts the shrine to the care of selected allip disciples, which are the only other creatures aside from Kasteoficiss allowed inside this Room.

Six mighty allips (hp 90, 86, 82, 77, 75, 71) currently pray in this temple, their gibbering voices forming a cacophonous hymn in honor of their dark deity. These fiends attack anyone entering the unholy grounds, but because they are focused on singing prayers they suffer from a -4 circumstance penalty to all Listen and Spot checks made to notice intruders.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 6, Distracting Noises 6, Echoes 4, Fearless, Unhallowed 16

Tactics: These mad undead creatures charge the PCs on sight. There is no pattern to their attacks — they strike mercilessly until they defeat their foes or are destroyed.

If combat ensues here, allow the allips in Room N120 a DC 18 Listen check to notice the ruckus. Though these servants do not enter the forbidden temple to aid their compatriots, they nevertheless ready themselves for battle should the PCs step foot in Room N120.

Treasure: The candles upon the altar are enchanted with continual flame. The ivory skull is well made and roughly the size of a fist. It is an unholy symbol of the god of death worshiped by Kasteoficiss and her disciples. The item is worth upwards of 800 gp to those who worship the deity, but can otherwise be sold for approximately 200 gp.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four allips and ignore their penalties to Listen and Spot checks to notice the PCs. To decrease the challenge, remove two allips.

N194. MOHRG RIDER PATROL

Three doors open upon the south wall of this corridor; they are all fake. A complex locking mechanism is set above each door's knob, requiring a successful DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock. Because the doors are set directly upon the stone wall on the other side, however, they cannot be opened—even when the mechanisms locking them is successfully picked.

A large dragon-like beast with dark eyes, sickly flesh, and a wide pair of dry leathery wings patrol this long corridor. A six-foot tall skeletal figure rides upon the animated corpse, as if it were a knight or another noble. A loathsome mass of writhing viscera hangs from the skeleton's chest and a hideously long tongue dangles from its skinless jaw. The skeletal creature holds a long double bladed sword.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A mohrg (hp 133) and its wyvern zombie mount (hp 88) are patrolling the length of this corridor, which marks the beginning of their mistress' domain. Unlike most undead in this Region, the mohrg rider does not attack living creatures on sight. Instead, it hails them and orders them to identify themselves, hoping to find allies willing to get behind its cause. Although if fears the mummy priestess it serves, this creature wishes to escape servitude and break its bond with its mistress. If the PCs talk to the undead and state their wish to destroy its kind, the mohrg bargains with them. It willingly divulges any information it has on Kasteoficiss and her servants in exchange for either a way out of the dungeon or a safe turf where it can become master.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: In battle, the mohrg rider fights like a cavalryman. It controls its steed well, never hesitating to charge the strongest PCs and often placing the large body of its mount between itself and its foes. While the rider alternates between sword blows and its paralyzing tongue attack, the wyvern zombie slams the closest PCs mercilessly.

The southern hallways leading from this Room lead to three false doors. All of them are locked, but when opened, lead to solid stone. A DC 45 Open Lock check opens them, but also triggers the traps placed here by the celestials. The trap senses whether the target is living or undead and triggers the appropriate effect.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Bane (Sp): This wyvern zombie is under the permanent effect of bane.

Magic Circle Against Good (Sp): An aura equivalent to a permanent magic circle against good surrounds the wyvern zombie.

Poison (Sp): The touch of a wyvern zombie deals 1d10 Con damage (DC 19 Fortitude save negates), as if under the permanent effect of poison.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals can sense the unnatural presence of the wyvern zombie at a distance of 30 ft. They do not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N195. EMPTY HALL

There is no light in this empty hall, but half a dozen sconces holding unlit torches are set into the walls.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The north wall of this hallway holds a potent relic. Placed ~~there~~ by the angel builders of the dungeon, who could not destroy it, this item is hidden behind a well-fashioned secret panel and ~~protected by~~ a potent trap. PCs must first succeed at a DC 45 Spot check to ~~notice~~ barely visible irregularities upon the north wall. A subsequent DC 45 Search check ~~reveals~~ the narrow grooves surrounding the secret panel, which are 5 ft. wide by 2 ft. tall and stand 5 ft. from the floor. Because the panel is ~~made~~ from the same stone as the wall and set with mortar, a ~~successful~~ DC 30 Strength check is required to pry it open.

Opening the panel triggers a simple but effective mechanical trap, causing part of the ceiling to collapse. PCs in the northern half of the hallway are caught under the falling stone blocks. The collapse also prevents access to the relic inside the alcove, but a PC standing within 5 ft. and succeeding at a DC 35 Tumble check picks up the artifact before it gets buried under the rubble. Doing so, however, prevents him from dodging the falling stone debris.

• Falling Ceiling Trap: CR 20; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; ceiling collapses (32d6, crush); multiple targets (all targets within a 10-ft. by 10-ft. area); never miss; Search DC 45; Disable Device DC 40.

Encounter Condition: [Extreme Cold], [Fog 10], Negative Energy^{}

Tactics: Once the alcove is open a blast of cold air hits the PCs, filling the Room with mist. Within seconds, icy dew forms on the walls and the unholy nature of the Room amplifies. The effect of the Negative Energy Encounter Condition increases by a factor of 1.

Treasure: Inside the alcove is Varnarül, a chaotic evil +5 celestial bane keen bastard sword (Int 17, Wis 10, Cha 17) that speaks Celestial and Infernal. Three times per day, it can use each of the following: ~~dark~~ monster, ~~darkness~~, ~~locate~~ objects, and ~~slow~~. The blade of this sword is crimson and clearly made from an alien material. A tiny silvery rune is set in the middle of the blade, just below the wide guard. It reads "Varnarül", which ~~translates~~ from the Infernal as "angel-slayer".

It is considered an unholy weapon for the purposes of determining who can wield it.

EL: 20

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the falling ceiling trap to 40d6 damage. To decrease the challenge, add rubble to the floor to indicate that the ceiling has collapsed at least once before.

N196. MOHRG GUARD ROOM

A pair of skeletal figures with dreadful entrails within their bony ribcages stand guard in this otherwise dark and empty room. Each of these creatures has dark holes in their craniums for eyes and a long tongue with a forked end dropping from its skinless mouth. They stand motionless, but ready to strike. The stench of evil hangs heavy, choking you.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two large mohrgs (hp 195, 179) stand guard, waiting for an excuse to fight. They are eager to please Kasteoficiss and bring living, but unconscious PCs back to her for interrogation. PCs that die are turned into zombies to add the war effort against Invistis' pyrohyrdas in Room N180.

Their orders are to prevent anyone from entering this Room, and they take this order very seriously. They pay a particular attention to Room N198 and do not hesitate to charge anyone who triggers the trap there (once its danger has passed).

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy^{}

Tactics: These fiends attack any who enter this Room. They prefer to target the largest and most heavily armed opponents first. The mohrgs use their paralyzing touch abilities to weaken the opposition and turn every creature they kill into mindless servants, which they then order to fight against the lich's minions in the Badlands (Room N180).

The effect of the Negative Energy Encounter Condition is increased by a factor of 1.

Treasure: One of these mohrgs wears a simple leather belt with three pouches upon it. One pouch holds a vial of unholy water, the other has a ~~potion of bear's endurance~~ (4 doses), and the third contains 71 gp.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs. To decrease the challenge, remove one.

• Large Mohrg: CR 13; Large undead; HD 28d12; hp 195, 179; Init +9; Spd 30 ft.; AC 30, touch 13, flat-footed 26; Base Atk +14; Grp +26; Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) or +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Full Atk +22 melee (1d8+11, slam) and +22 melee touch (paralysis, tongue); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +9, Ref +15, Will +18; Str 31, Dex 19, Con —, Int 11, Wis 10, Cha 10.

N197. PRIVATE CHAMBER OF THE MOHRG LORD

The doors leading to this Room are locked and require a successful DC 30 Open Lock check to open. Kasteoficiss has the only key that opens both doors.

This room contains a wide bed, which is now a useless pile of rotted wood and ruined blankets. A mohrg, twice the size of any you've seen, stands in the center of the room, its soulless eyes staring imperiously in your direction. A rusty crown juts from its skull, obviously fused to its body. On its belt, hangs a series of serrated axes and the mummified head of an ogre.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The greatest of all the mohrgs, this mohrg lord (hp 311) does not follow Kasteoficiss' bidding. Although loyal, he thinks for himself and works when he wants to. He knows the true secret of Room N159 and N199, but refuses to share this with the mummy priestess. He seeks to earn a place among the other undead lords by killing the PCs and rallying the other mohrgs under his banner.

Smart PCs may find a way to exploit this, if they take the time to learn anything beyond the killing instinct of this massive beast.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The mohrg lord fights intelligently, reducing the PCs numbers quickly and summoning aid if necessary. He does not hesitate and takes the most appropriate action when fighting. He lets his poison reduce the Dexterity of slow clerics and warriors.

If the PCs trigger any of the traps in Room N198, the mohrg lord summons the mohrgs in Room N196 and arrives 1d3 rounds later.

Treasure: The crown imbedded in the skull of the mohrg lord is made from gold, iron, and platinum. While it is worth over 1,000 gp, removing it from the skull is nearly impossible without damaging it. A DC 40 Disable Device check removes the skull without damaging it. Failure reduces its value by 10%. Failure by more than 10 reduces its value by 25%. Failure by more than 20 reduces its value by 50%. Failure by anymore ruins the crown.

PCs with a 5 or more ranks in Appraise gain a +2 synergy bonus to this check.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs, loyal to the mohrg lord. To decrease the challenge, reduce the hit point total of the mohrg lord to 240.

✦ Lord Mohrg: CR 17; Huge undead; HD 40d12; hp 311; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 32, touch 11, flat-footed 28; Base Atk +20; Grp +43; Atk +33 melee (2d8+15/19–20, slam) or +33 melee touch (paralysis plus poison, tongue) or +21 ranged (2d6+15/19–20, +3 keen throwing axe); Full Atk +33 melee (2d8+15/19–20, slam) and +28 melee touch (paralysis plus poison, tongue) or +21 ranged (2d6+15/19–20, +3 keen throwing axe); Space/Reach 15 ft./15 ft.; SA Improved grab, paralyzing touch, create spawn; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., spell resistance 20, undead traits; AL CE; SV Fort +13, Ref +18, Will +24; Str 40, Dex 17, Con —, Int 11, Wis 11, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Climb +26, Hide +30, Listen +21, Move Silently +30, Spot +25, Swim +19; Ability Focus (paralyzing touch), Alertness, Cleave, Combat Reflexes, Dodge, Improved Critical (slam), Improved Initiative, Improved Natural Armor, Improved Natural Attack (slam), Iron Will, Lightning Reflexes, Mobility, Power Attack, Spring Attack.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, the mohrg lord must hit a Huge or smaller creature with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity.

Paralyzing Touch (Su): The mohrg lord lashes out with its tongue in combat. An opponent the tongue touches must succeed on a DC 33 Fortitude save or become paralyzed for 1d4 minutes. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Poison (Su): The mohrg lord's paralyzing touch also delivers a contact poison to the skin of the opponent. When the paralysis fades, the poison takes effect. Contact, DC 18, initial damage 1d6 Dexterity, secondary damage 1d6 Strength. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Create Spawn (Su): Creatures killed by the mohrg lord rise after 1 day as zombies under the mohrg lord's control. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Possessions: +3 keen throwing axe (4), brooch of shielding (51 points).

N198. TRAPPED HALL

The three doors opening into this chamber are locked. A successful DC 40 Open Lock check is required to unlock them, but Kasteoficiss holds a ring containing the keys to each. The door leading to Room N199 is trapped as well.

This large hallway is empty save for the pair of basalt columns supporting its high ceiling. A thin and undisturbed layer of dust covers its floor, suggesting that no one has entered it in years. Drawn on the columns are a series of runes, marking this as a holy place.

When the PCs step into the Room and look around, read the following.

On the northeastern door, a series of demonic sigils have been burned into the door. The rings of sigils appear to have been placed over one another many times, as if the burn marks had faded and then been placed again.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: In order to prevent intruders from reaching Room N199, Kasteoficiss placed a number of traps around the Room. Most importantly is the trap on the door leading to Room N199.

Her minions are aware of the traps and are wise enough to ignore them. Undead in Rooms N195 through N197 race to the Room upon hearing on the traps go off.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 6

Tactics: There is a chaos trap on the door, as well as one on each column. While the door trap is the most lethal, the others are meant to befuddle the PCs until help arrives.

♣ Chaos Trap VI: CR 14; magic device; location trigger; no reset; spell effect (flame strike, 15th-level cleric, 15d6 fire, DC 19 Reflex save half); spell effect (undead to death, 15d4 HD of undead are destroyed, 15th-level cleric, DC 20 Will save negates); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: Since these runes are written by Kasteoficiss each time the PCs stumble upon this trap, they gain a random +1d4 circumstance bonus to the Search check to find it.

If the PCs read the columns, they can see the great history of the tomb written in Celestial and then burned with unholy sigils again and again. If the PCs spend 15 minutes reading the columns, allow a DC 30 Decipher Script check to understand Invistis, Vinnara, and the history of the tomb. There is no mention of Kasteoficiss or the World Eater, however.

Somewhere during the reading, the PCs are going to stumble upon two separate traps — one on each column.

♣ Chaos Trap VII: CR 8; magic device; location trigger; no reset; spell effect (sepia snake sigil, 15th-level cleric, 15d6 fire, DC 19 Reflex save half); spell effect (greater glyph of warding (blast), 15th-level cleric, 10d6 sonic damage, DC 20 Reflex save half); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: Since these runes are written by Kasteoficiss each time the PCs stumble upon this trap, they gain a random +1d4 circumstance bonus to the Search check to find it.

♣ Chaos Trap VIII: CR 8; magic device; location trigger; no reset; spell effect (explosive runes, 15th-level cleric); spell effect (fire trap, 15th-level cleric, 1d4+15); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 40*; Disable Device DC 40. Note: Since these runes are written by Kasteoficiss each time the PCs stumble upon this trap, they gain a random +1d4 circumstance bonus to the Search check to find it.

It is important to note that these traps are arcane in nature, despite the fact that the mummy priestess is a cleric. This is a plot device the DM is free to ignore if the logic does not mesh with the game world.

Treasure: Once the runes are uncovered the PCs are free to decipher the rest of the column. Further research (1 hour) allows for a DC 30 Knowledge (arcana) or DC 40 Bardic Knowledge check. Success indicates a vague memory of undead lore about a beast that could consume the world. Although legends have never named it, the columns here speak of a history vaguely similar to the one the PCs have heard of.

The DM is free to give as much or as little information about the World Eater as he likes. These columns are supposed to point away from the facts, hinting at forbidden knowledge, etc. Since Kasteoficiss, herself, does not know the truth, the lies written on this column could be as far from the truth as the DM likes. What she believes is in Room N159 is the god of death and her ultimate goal is to release him and serve him for eternity.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a symbol of stunning (triggered one round earlier) to the chaos trap. To decrease the challenge, reduce the Search DC of the chaos trap by 2d6.

N199. SPECIAL LEVER CHAMBER

The only door leading into this Room is locked and the mummy priestess has the only key that unlocks it. However, a successful DC 50 Open Lock check is enough to open the door.

A massive iron lever protrudes from a one-foot wide groove in the floor of this room. The groove is four-foot long and the lever stands at a 45-degree angle, its tip pointing towards the south.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room holds one of the four intricate mechanisms linked to the powerful force fields in the antechambers opening into Room N159. The lever must be pulled up, requiring a successful DC 20 Strength check. The other three levers can be found in Rooms N175, N222, and N250.

All four must be raised in order to deactivate the force fields.

Encounter Condition: Positive Energy

Tactics: Chaotic or evil creatures touching the lever suffer 1d4 negative levels per round they remain in contact. Chaotic evil creatures are destroyed irrevocably with no chance for a save. Caster level 20th.

When the final lever is pulled, the World Eater wakes and a pulse of negative energy blasts through the entire dungeon. See Room N159 Sidebar (page 746) for more information.

N200. BORDER POST

Skeletal figures sit atop large animated corpses with hollow eye sockets, sickly gray flesh, and wide leathery wings. Two of each creature stands guard at the center of this wide hall. The six-foot tall skeletons sit atop their undead mounts with putrid masses of purplish viscera hanging between the bones of their ribcages. The winged skeletons have long, sickly tongues ending in pincer-like claws dangling from their frothing mouths.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two mohrgs (hp 137, 126) and their wyvern zombie mounts (hp 99, 95) protect this border of their mistress' territory. The mohrgs attack all living creatures violating Kasteoficiss' domain and the wyvern obey their every whim. They view their work as very important and see this as one of the furthest east locations that the mummy priestess can hold without too much trouble. If this Room falls, however, the interior of her domain is exposed.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Concealment, Fear 18, Fearless

Tactics: These mohrgs charge the PCs, pushing them from the Room if possible. In melee, they flank the PCs, directing their energy at the head of the PCs defenses. They are guards and not masterful tacticians, but they fight vicious, nonetheless. While the wyvern zombies mindlessly strike the closest PCs, the mohrg use their paralyzing touch, targeting spellcasters whenever possible.

If the wyvern zombies are destroyed, the mohrgs fight toe to toe with the strongest PCs, continuing their plan to break their defensive wedge.

Treasure: One of these mohrgs wears a tarnished silver necklace worth 35 gp. The other carries a small pouch, which is tied upon one of its ribs. The pouch contains a total of 278 gp worth of small semiprecious gemstones.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two mohrgs and two wyvern zombies. To decrease the challenge, allow the PCs a chance to surprise the undead.

N201. FALSE DOORWAYS

The door leading to this Room is lock, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This hallway leads to two fake doors which cannot be opened. Made to confuse and frustrate the inhabitants of this Region, each door has a complex locking mechanism set above the knobs. Both lead to traps.

Encounter Condition: Echoes 4, Safe

Tactics: All of the doors are locked, but when opened, lead to solid stone. A DC 45 Open Lock check opens them, but also triggers the traps placed here by the celestials. The trap senses whether the target is living or undead and triggers the appropriate effect.

✦ Maximized Extended Ghoul Touch Trap (living): CR 9; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; spell effect (ghoul touch, a single living subject is paralyzed, 20th-level wizard, DC 25 Fortitude save negates); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 40.

✦ Maximized Cure Mass Critical Wounds Trap (undead): CR 12; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; spell effect (mass cure critical wounds, 52 damage, 20th-level cleric, DC 28 Will save negates); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 40.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, remove the Safe Encounter Condition and roll a Random Encounter after the traps trigger. To decrease the challenge, remove the traps.

N202 THROUGH N209. STASIS CHAMBERS

Rooms N202 through N209 are home to undead creatures held in profound torpor. Though the inhabitants of this section of the dungeon are dormant in their respective tombs, the taint of evil is overwhelming. The stone floor, ceiling, and walls of this section are black and absorb all ambient light. Any light source used in this area has its range cut by 50%. The effectiveness of magical illumination is likewise reduced, which may complicate the journey through the region for some PCs. Unless otherwise noted, treat these Rooms as having the Deep Darkness Encounter Condition.

Though the creatures inhabiting this region are torpid, their foulness warps the walls and they leak black blood. Though undead monsters are not affected by the eerie warping and pulsing effect of the walls, living creatures suffer from a –5 circumstance penalty to all saving throws made to resist fear effects as well as a –2 circumstance penalty to all Will saves for as long as they remain in this section. Additionally, living PCs who use detect evil spells or abilities here must succeed at a DC 20 Will save or become instantly fatigued. Regardless of whether or not a PC succeeds or fails his saving throw, detect evil reveals a potent evil aura in this Section of the dungeon. This vile aura is stronger in Rooms where wraiths or the devourer lie dormant.

Because of the nature of this Section, the other undead creatures in the Region avoid the place. However, while the lich lord Invistis and the mummy priestess Kasteoficiss have little interest in the stasis chambers, both suspect that one of the four special keys needed to gain access to the vault at the heart of this region (Room N159) can be found here. For now, however, both these undead fiends have avoided the place not wanting to awaken the dreadful devourer (in Room N209) and the wraiths loyal to it. Kasteoficiss is afraid of the powerful evil that lies dormant to the east of her territory and she regularly sends her lowly servants on patrol in these parts to make sure that the fiends are still in stasis.

All doors in this Section are locked from the inside and out, requiring a DC 40 Open Lock check to enter or exit. Many of the doors have glyphs of warding as well, which keeps the other undead at bay.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once every two hours.

1d20	Encounter
1	A terrifying screech echoes through the Section. At the same moment, a large quantity of black blood pours from the wall, as if alive and filled with invisible pores. The black substance is eerie but harmless.
2	The sounds of dreadful moans fill the air, chilling the PCs to the bone. Fear 20.
3	The sound of stone grinding against stone echoes through the halls. They PC may believe that a secret door somewhere is opening. Or something else...
4–15	Nothing
16	Six allip servants (answering to Kasteoficiss) are on patrol. Though their orders are to verify none of the undead creatures are awake, they attack the PCs on sight.
17	An iron golem guards this Room. The construct remains unmoving, a steely blue alloy statue. It attacks the PCs when they step within 20 ft. of it.
18	The PCs stumble upon a trap. ◆ Maximized Flame Strike Trap: CR 14; magic device; location trigger; no reset; spell effect (flame strike , 15th-level cleric, 90 fire, DC 19 Reflex save half); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 30.
19	The PCs stumble upon a trap. ◆ Maximized Ice Storm Traps: CR 14; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (ice storm , 18th-level wizard, 54 bludgeoning damage and 36 cold damage to anyone within the area); Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29. This trap combines the effects of three maximized ice storm spells triggered simultaneously.
20	Two dread wraiths recently escaped their centuries-old prison. Free from the stasis chamber, these powerful creatures are vengeful, directing their wrath toward anyone entering their territory.

N202. HISTORY CHAMBER

Both doors leading to this strangely shaped Room are locked and the keys that opened them were lost. A successful DC 22 Open Lock check is required to unlock each door.

This room is empty and the floor is covered with a layer of dust. The stone from the walls, floor, and ceiling here are black (as in the rest of this section) and a dark ooze seeps from the walls. The gooey stuff smells like blood but is black. Four massive columns decorated with runes are the dominant features here.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like many Rooms in this section of the dungeon, the walls of the chamber pulse and ooze with black blood (which is harmless to the touch). There is, beyond the ichor and columns, little else to admire. However, a feeling of dread and confusion should overcome the PCs when they enter this Room. Standing around is in and of itself unnerving and examining the columns introduces the PCs to their dance of positive and negative energy.

Every 5 minutes the PCs spend in the Room have them make DC 20 Will saves. Failure causes them to suffer 1 point of Wisdom damage and confusion for 1d4 rounds. While this isn't designed to harm the PCs, the DM is free to exploit their mental weaknesses as he sees fit.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Noises 8, Positive Energy, Unhallowed 6

Tactics: The columns are adorned with Celestial runes. PCs can spend 1 hour reading the columns — 2 hours if they do not speak Celestial but succeed at a DC 35 Decipher Script check.

The runes, while not trapped, tell the story of the undead in this Section on the north most face of the columns. Those who were most abominable were imprisoned and separated from the others in the tomb. As it was common knowledge they would try to cause harm to others or escape, they were put into a static state. There is also a list of who is where and what their crimes are.

Room N205: Two dread wraith brothers were known for slaughtering an entire race. The race has never been known to the PCs' world (unless the DM has a plot thread that needs further development), and its physical description is completely unfamiliar. Their punishment was to be buried together, without their weapons, with a gem of daylight that has been shining nonstop for 4,000 years. While the gem does not hurt them, the light is a proven to be quite annoying.

Room N206: These wraiths were sentenced to eternal rest which is the cost of betraying the gods. Though they were once angels, now their eyes have been removed, their tongues turned to iron, and their hands sawed off. Their souls were banished here and overtime they evolved into the wraiths they are now. While they tried to escape during the last earthquake to shake the tomb, both were buried with a single scroll of move earth that they could never read or open with their incorporeal hands. This taunt became the final insult to these heinous and abhorrent beasts.

Room N207: Three dread wraiths were buried here. Once men of the cloth, they forsake their oaths and taught the masses to revile the heavens and embrace death. The cult that grew from their teachings leads to hundreds upon thousands of witch burnings and "cleansing," which includes the destruction of entire breeds of elves and the forests they lived in. They were banished to this tomb as a punishment for trusting in themselves more than in the gods. Their pride was their undoing and in death they were denied speech and will — two traits that no priest can survive without.

The runes also detail the history of the Region. Each column covers a millennium, detailing only the most significant events. The fourth column appears unfinished, but speaks of the earthquakes and of the time when they sealed the tomb and left the undead to fend for themselves.

Allow the PCs to ask whatever questions they have about the Region. If the DM believes this information would be detailed on the columns, he may answer their questions as he sees fit.

N203. TRAPPED CORRIDOR

The rotten body of an ogre lies in the hallway. The pale skin of the creature sticks to the bones which has been crushed by a terrible force.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is rigged with a potent mechanical trap. When a PC steps on the trigger in the northern portion of the Room, the heavy ceiling instantly drops, crushing anyone beneath. Strong steel cables hold the rigged ceiling and automatically draw it back up into place 2d4 rounds after it is dropped; thus resetting the treacherous device.

The DM should feel free to place it anywhere he likes in the Room.

♣ Dropping Ceiling Trap: CR 15; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; ceiling moves down (15d6, crush); multiple targets (all targets within a 10-ft. by 10-ft. area); never miss; onset delay (1 round); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 36.

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air

Tactics: The doors to this Room slam shut when the trap triggers, even if the PCs do something to keep it open. A PC trying to keep it open is required to make a DC 24 Strength check or be brushed aside by the door.

Treasure: A pouch containing a carved bone statuette in the form of a warhorse (worth 85 gp) can be found upon the corpse, as well over a hundred teeth from various victims. Many of the teeth have been crushed to powder, but many remain intact.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the dropping ceiling trap to 20d6. To decrease the challenge, reduce the DC of the trap's Search check by 4.

N204. SECRET CORRIDOR

The two secret doors leading to this hidden passageway are identical. Made from the same black stone as the floor, ceiling, and walls of this section, these doors would be extremely hard to notice were it not for the fact that, unlike most walls here, there is no black stuff oozing from them. In fact, the stone of each of the secret doors is perfectly clean.

A successful DC 40 Search check is needed to notice each of the doors, which can be opened by pushing them 1 ft. towards the hidden corridor with a successful DC 24 Strength check. Once a door is pushed, it sinks into the floor. A closer look at the archway where the secret panel originally stood (Search check, DC 30) reveals a simple button made of the same stone. Pushing this button makes the door gradually rise from the floor and then sink back into place; a process that takes 3 full rounds.

This long hallway is cast in darkness and it is obvious by the carpet of gray dust covering the floor that no one has set foot here in ages. The three doors upon the east wall are made of thick bronze with strange signs painted in dried blood upon them. A strange mist emanates from under each of the door, but evaporates quickly as it reaches the corridor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This hallway is eerily quiet, as echoes from other portions of the dungeon collide with the stone and dissipate. Because of the nature of these tombs, it is unlikely any Random Encounters occur here or in Rooms N205 through N207.

N205. STASIS CHAMBER ONE

A pale mist dominates the atmosphere here. The vapor quickly dissipates as it escapes from the chamber, revealing a massive tomb made out from darkened bronze lying upon an elevated dais of black stone in the middle of the place. A closer look at the coffin shows a simple square box, some ten-foot square.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This chamber is one of three stasis Rooms holding powerful undead creatures prisoner (Rooms N205, N206, and N207).

Because the coffin's lid is not only heavy but also made to seal the tomb, moving it to open this coffin requires a DC 26 Strength check. When this lid is moved, a thick cloud of grayish vapor escapes, causing the PCs to choke until the mist dissipates and a ray of daylight follows, blinding the PCs per the spell daze (DC 15). This misty vapor is magical and a massive quantity was placed inside of the sarcophagus to ensure the fiends there remain torpid. The vapor dissipates within 1d3 rounds and PCs gazing inside the bronze sarcophagus notice two dreadful ghostly shapes, which remain unmoving until the mist is gone.

Two dread wraiths (hp 207, 191) are entombed here. These creatures are held in stasis within the sealed sarcophagus and are no threat to the PCs unless freed. Once the tomb is unsealed, these fiends awaken from their centuries-old torpor and attack the PCs.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Visions 8, Echoes 6, [Smoke], Unhallowed 4

Tactics: These wraiths hold a terrible grudge. While in stasis they remained completely aware of the passage of time and this has fueled their hate to near impossible levels. The DM may wish to grant them a random +1d4 bonus to attack rolls and saving throws each round to simulate their fervor.

The dread wraiths vent vehemently on the PCs. In fact, they are so angry, they target no particular foe and use no special tactics in battle. They concentrate on the closest PC and fight until either they or the PCs are destroyed.

Treasure: These dread wraiths were buried with a gem of daylight, which does not necessarily make them powerless, but is torturous. The gem cannot be turned off and has been glowing for over 4,000 years.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one dread wraith (a third brother). To decrease the challenge, remove one.

♣ Dread Wraith: CR 15; Large undead (incorporeal); HD 32d12; hp 207, 191; Init +13; Spd Fly 50 ft.; AC 25, touch 25, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +16; Grp —; Atk Incorporeal touch +25 melee touch (2d6/19–20 plus 1d8 Constitution drain, incorporeal touch); Full Atk +25 melee touch (2d6/19–20 plus 1d8 Constitution drain, incorporeal touch); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Constitution drain, create spawn; SQ darkvision 60 ft., daylight powerlessness, incorporeal traits, lifesense 60 ft., undead traits, unnatural aura; AL LE; SV Fort +10, Ref +19, Will +22; Str —, Dex 28, Con —, Int 17, Wis 18, Cha 24.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 36 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved to the death. They possess none of the abilities they had in life.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a dread wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They do not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

N206. STASIS CHAMBER TWO

A thick cloud shrouds this chamber. As the only door leading to this room is opened, the pale mist dissipates. After a minute, only a thin cloud remains in the room, covering the entire floor. Set upon a two-ft. high dais of black stone, a massive sarcophagus made from darkened bronze is dominant.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Like Room N205 and N207, the sarcophagus in this chamber housed dread wraiths. In recent years, however, an earthquake that shook entire region broke the tomb's seal, and the vaporous substance holding the wraiths in torpor escaped into the Room. Though the chamber kept the incorporeal bodies of the undead fiends "asleep," the wraiths awoke from their slumber and escaped their prison. They now haunt Room N208.

Encounter Condition: Smoke, Stagnant Air, Unhallowed 2

Tactics: A close inspection of the sarcophagus reveals that it is unsealed. Its lid can be pushed aside with a successful DC 18 Strength check.

Treasure: Buried with the wraiths is a scroll of move earth. See Room N202 for details on their accursed lives and subsequent imprisonment.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N207. STASIS CHAMBER THREE

A weak gray vapor hovers in this small room. The vapor quickly dissipates into the corridor beyond as the door to the chamber is opened. Inside is a great tomb carved out from dark bronze, which is set upon an elevated dais. The sarcophagus is a 10-ft. by 10-ft. box of simple design.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Like Room N205, this chamber was made to hold powerful undead creatures in stasis.

The coffin's lid can be pushed opened with a successful DC 22 Strength check, releasing a harmless vaporous cloud into the Room. This pale mist is magical and a massive quantity was placed inside the sealed tomb, insuring the undead creatures within remained in stasis. It takes 1d3 rounds for this vapor to dissipate, and PCs looking inside the bronze sarcophagus notice two horrible ghostly shapes, which remain unmoving until the mist is almost completely gone (1d3 rounds after the tomb is unsealed).

Three dread wraiths (hp 109, 105, 101) are kept in torpor within the sarcophagus. These creatures, held in stasis by the magical mist inside the sealed tomb, pose no danger to the PCs unless they open the sarcophagus' lid. Even then, they are blind and have a Will save bonus of +0. If their tomb is unsealed, the dread wraiths awake as soon as the vapor cloud dissipates, thus ending their age-old stasis.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: These wraiths felt impotent for centuries. While in stasis, they remained aware of the passage of time and their hatred reached new heights. However, blind and spineless, they lacked the will to go on or vent their rage. When released, they lash out at the PCs, as best as they can without sight. Though hateful, they show very little will or desire to fight. If a spell targeting them requires a Will save, they try to resist 50% of the time.

Treasure: There are several dried pieces of yellowed parchment within this sarcophagus. Each is a divine scroll containing the following spells — atonement, mark of justice, protection from energy, remove curse, stone shape.

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, restore the dread wraith's vision. To decrease the challenge, remove one dread wraith.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 25 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N208. FALSE STASIS CHAMBER

The door leading to this Room is locked, requiring a DC 45 Open Lock check to unlock.

A dais takes up most of the floor space here. Upon it is a large but simple bronze sarcophagus. The oversized tomb is approximately ten feet square and fits perfectly upon the elevated dais.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two dread wraiths (hp 111, 107), that recently escaped from their stasis chamber (see Room N206), inhabit this Room. Like the other undead creatures that suffered the misery of being entombed and put in torpor within the ancient sarcophagi, these fiends are hateful and attack everything crossing their path.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 4, Fearless, Unhallowed 2

Tactics: The dread wraiths attack anyone who violates their newfound lair. They utter dreadful shrieks and target the nearest PCs with their incorporeal attacks. They are fierce fighters, capable of reducing the PCs to nothing, given the chance.

Treasure: Unlike the sarcophagi in Rooms N205, N206, and N207, the tomb in this Room never held any creatures, nor was it filled with vapor that put undead in torpor. This chamber was made to fool creatures into thinking an undead was held within the sarcophagus, but a powerful trap was laid upon it instead. This trap is triggered the moment anyone touches the outside of the tomb.

◆ Energy Drain Trap: CR 14; magic device; touch trigger; automatic reset; Atk +10 ranged touch; spell effect (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, 2d4 negative levels for 24 hours; DC 24, Fortitude save negates); Search DC 39; Disable Device DC 39. This trap combines the effect of four energy drain traps triggered simultaneously.

Should the PCs find a way to open the sarcophagus, they discover rotted parchment (possibly a powerful scroll the PCs can piece together). There is nothing else of value.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one dread wraith. To decrease the challenge, remove one dread wraith or the energy drain trap.

N209. DEVOURER'S STASIS CHAMBER

Both doors leading into this hall are locked and trapped. A DC 50 Open Lock check is required to unlock them. The doors lock behind the PCs after they enter.

To prevent anyone from entering this chamber, the celestials placed a potent trap upon each of the doors here. Though the doors can be tampered with and pushed opened, anyone passing through their thresholds falls victim to their lethal magic. When a creature walks through the door, bluish arcane fire appears in the archway. The searing flames deal 72 points of fire damage to those who pass through them, 16 points of damage to anyone standing within 10 ft. of the doorway, and 8 points to creatures between 10 ft. and 20 ft. away. This magical fire remains active for one full round, but if creatures pass through the doorway later, the flames reappear and deal the same amount of damage again. If several creatures move through the archway in the same round, the first one (which activated the flames in the first place) receives 72 points of fire damage for passing through the fire while the others receive an equal amount of damage when they in turn move through it as well as an additional 16 and/or 8 points of fire damage when they move within 10 and/or 20 ft. of the doorway.

◆ Maximized Wall of Fire Trap: CR 12; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (wall of fire, 20th-level wizard, 72 fire damage to creatures passing through, 16 fire damage to those within 10 ft., and 8 fire damage to targets between 10 and 20 ft. away); Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29. Note: This trap combines the effects of two maximized wall of fire spells.

This great hall is suffused with swirls of vapor covering most of the floor. Like most hallways and chambers in this portion of the dungeon, its walls are black and pulsing masses that bleed a dreadful liquid. The pulses are stronger here, however, and with each powerful throbbing a booming echo can be heard.

In the middle of the large hall is a high dais made out of black stone. The round dais stands four feet above the floor and three deep steps encircle it. Upon the elevated structure is an onyx sarcophagus. The sides of this tomb are smooth and contain no markings or special features. Its lid, however, is a work of art fashioned as a six-armed giant humanoid with ghastly features.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Opening the lid of the sarcophagus requires a DC 25 Strength check. As soon as the lid is moved, a cloud of misty vapor erupts from it, temporarily blinding the PCs for one full round. This gray cloud magically held the undead fiends within the tomb in torpor, but the mist dissipates quickly once the sarcophagus' seal is broken. Two rounds after the lid of the tomb is opened, the gas' effect upon the creatures within is cancelled.

Within the confines of the great sarcophagus lies a deadly devourer (hp 168) entombed with its former wraith servants (hp 39, 37, 33, 32, 32, 29, 27, 26). While the wraiths are unmarked from their confinement, the devourer is covered in scars and burns from blessed pieces of gold in the sarcophagus.

Put in stasis centuries ago, these fiends harbor a deep hatred and for their former captors. When the tomb's lid is opened and the vaporous gas holding the creatures in torpor dissipates, the eight writhing greenish and ghostly wraiths within the rotting giant's carcass explodes out of it, shrieking madly as they storm the PCs. The dreadful six-armed giant within then jumps to its feet and engages.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: In combat, the devourer lets the wraiths attack the PCs while using spell-like abilities. It does not hesitate to engage anyone in melee, however, and uses energy drain to deadly effect. Whenever possible, the devourer targets the warriors of the group, preferring to tap the essence of the strongest-looking PCs rather than that of the weak.

For their part, the wraiths hover around the PCs, striking them with their incorporeal hands and draining the health from of them.

Treasure: Buried with the devourer were 2,000 blessed gold coins, lining the bed of the tomb. The blessing has remained all this time.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add six wraiths. To decrease the challenge, remove four.

Spell-Like Abilities: At the start of any encounter, the trapped essence within a devourer is assumed to have 3d4+3 levels (enough fuel for thirty to seventy-five uses). Once per round, a devourer can use one of the following abilities: confusion (DC 18), control undead (DC 21), ghoul touch (DC 16), lesser planar ally, ray of enfeeblement (DC 15), spectral hand, suggestion (DC 17), true seeing. Caster level 18th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a devourer's claw attack or spectral hand ability gain one negative level. The DC is 26 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Spell Deflection (Su): The trapped essence provides a measure of magical protection. If any of the following spells are cast at the devourer and overcome its spell resistance, they affect the imprisoned essence instead: banishment, chaos hammer, confusion, crushing despair, detect thoughts, dispel evil, dominate person, fear, geas/quest, holy word, hypnosis, imprisonment, magic jar, maze, suggestion, trap the soul, or any form of charm or compulsion. In many cases, this deflection effectively neutralizes the spell. Some of these effects might eliminate the trapped essence, depriving the devourer of its spell-like abilities until it can consume another victim.

Trap Essence (Su): The devourer is named for its ability to consume an enemy's life essence. To do so, it must forgo its normal melee attacks and make a trap essence attack. This requires a normal attack roll but deals no damage, the affected creature must succeed on a DC 28 Fortitude save or die instantly. The save DC is Charisma-based.

A slain creature's essence is trapped within the devourer's ribs, and the tiny figure fades on that victim's features. The trapped essence cannot be raised or resurrected, but a limited wish, miracle, or wish spell frees it, as does destroying the devourer. A devourer can hold only one essence at a time.

The trapped essence provides a devourer with enough power to use five spell-like abilities for each Hit Die or level of the trapped creature. As this energy is expended, the twisted soul fades away until it evaporates completely. The trapped essence gains one negative level for every five times the devourer uses one of its spell-like abilities. When the essence's number of negative levels equals the creature's total Hit Dice or level, the essence is destroyed. If an essence is freed, the restored creature must succeed on a DC 26 Fortitude save for each negative level or lose that level permanently.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 14 Fortitude save or take 1d6 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N210 THROUGH N239. DISPUTED TERRITORY

A large portion of this Region, namely Rooms N210 through N239, is disputed territory. Both Invistis, the lich lord and Kasteoficiss, the mummy priestess want a better hold on this Section, which remains for the most part unclaimed. The two archenemies vie for control over this territory, which is rigged with booby traps, guarded by golem guardians loyal to Invistis, and patrolled by undead fiends serving Kasteoficiss.

While journeying through this large and unclaimed domain, PCs find the gray walls and floor scarred by deep claw marks and scorched by fire. Most of the deadly devices constructed by the celestials are still active in this Section, and the lich lord Invistis added a few traps of his own — which ultimately makes travel through this part of the dungeon a deadly affair.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	A lantern archon spots the PCs. It dances in front of them for a few moments before quickly moving away. The archon moves at an alarmingly fast pace and disappears within the dark cracks of the high ceiling, never to be seen again.
2	Unholy screams fill the air, chilling the PCs. Fear 22.
3	The ghostly images of men, knives in their necks, argue with one another. Upon seeing the PCs, they hiss and then flee into cracks in the stone work.
4	Within 1d6 rounds, the hallway or Room fills with water (or blood) and becomes Flooded. 2d6 rounds later it becomes Submerged. 1d6 hours later, it returns to normal.
5–13	Nothing
14	Two mohrg riders mounted upon wyvern zombies move through the Region. These undead creatures serve the mummy priestess and hope to turn all living beings they encounter into zombie spawns. They utter loud cries and charge the PCs as noble knights would. One of the riders holds a +2 longsword.
15	A band of six allips shuffle and mumble down the hall, attacking on sight.
16	Two mighty iron golems (loyal to Invistis) inspect the Room. Their orders are to patrol the grounds, engage anything they encounter, and return to Room N239, to stand guard. These automatons are slow but powerful creatures that attack the PCs without hesitating.
17	A pair of dread wraiths roam the halls in search of prey to torment. They only seek to kill one PC and turn him into a wraith.
18	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	☛ Maximized Incendiary Cloud Trap: CR 15; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (incendiary cloud, 15th-level wizard; 96/round for 15 rounds, DC 24 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33. This trap combines the effect of four maximized incendiary cloud spells cast simultaneously.
19	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	☛ Crushing Wall Trap: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; no attack roll required (18d6, crush); Search DC 32; Disable Device 36.
20	A lone barb devil (Hzzir'zuutl) found his way into this Region. Though a cunning creature, he is far from cowardly. Nevertheless he seeks allies within the dungeon. Hzzir'zuutl knows it cannot survive long if the undead find him, but (luckily) he has met no real opposition. If the PCs threaten him, he attacks without mercy. Otherwise, he parleys with them, hoping to uncover information about the place and its inhabitants — but it offers little in return. Like all devils, he keeps his word, but tries to word things so he doesn't have to be 'good'.

N210. ABANDONED GUARD POST

This chamber is barren and dark. The sound of running water is interrupted by the sound of metal scrapping against rock.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Kasteoficiss used this Room as an additional guard post to secure her domain, but she was forced to abandon this chamber years ago. The sounds of the dead still haunt this place.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Echoes 5, Haunted, [Safe], Unhallowed 16

Tactics: PCs that can find a way to dispel the sounds that haunt this Room can rest here as though it were Safe. Dispel magic quiets the sound for 2d4 hours per casting. Greater dispel magic quiets the sound for 5d4 hours.

N211. HALL OF BROKEN STATUES

This great hall is filled with stone debris. Several elevated stone pillars, six feet high or more, form two lines separating the hall into two sections, but only one bust — a roughly cut demonic head with great horns fashioned from black crystalline stone — remains intact. The others lie in pieces scattered upon the floor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This was once a hall where celestial wardens meditated and revered the gods in holy refuge. However, when the celestials abandoned the halls, the statues were desecrated.

A close inspection of the statues — a DC 35 Search check or DC 25 Craft (stonemasonry) check — reveals that the demonic statues were carved from some other kind of statue. Success on these checks by 10 or more reveals that the previous statues were all angels.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: A close examination of the statues' bases reveals indented signatures (which radiate faint abjuration). The signature takes the form of a triangle with a small circle within it. Those succeeding at a DC 40 Knowledge (religion) check know this it to be a demonic script, with no real power. Whoever signed the statues was apparently ignorant concerning true demonic power and merely emulating something he'd seen before.

Never the less, the signature leads to the real treasure of this Room. Casting comprehend languages, identify, knock, or a similar spell directly on the signature, causes the indented signature to glow. A hissing from inside the statue vents steam from cracks in the base. Finally, the statue opens up, revealing an unfinished homunculus inside.

The homunculus is warded with a fire trap, 12th-level, should anyone tamper with it before disabling or dispelling the trap. The homunculus is consumed by the spell, but there are a total of six in this Room, should the PCs destroy one or two in their haste.

Shaped in the image of the statue, the homunculus requires 1,000 gp worth of materials (and a few spells to finish — arcane eye and mirror image) and a workshop to work in. The dungeon has plenty of Rooms suitable for this purpose, but the DM should make it difficult. A DC 30 Spellcraft check or identify spell determines exact what is missing.

Because of the nature of this homunculus, it is much harder than a typical one. This is a perfect long term project for PCs who intend to stay in the tomb for awhile, fighting the horrors that be. When completed, this homunculus serves whoever placed the final spell into its clay-like frame.

EL: N/A

Scaling: The DM is free to change out the homunculus with a clay golem or gargyle if he likes.

✶ Homunculus: CR 3; Small construct; HD 8d10+10; hp 0; Init +5; Spd 20 ft., fly 50 ft. Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 16, initial damage sleep for 1 minute, secondary damage sleep for another 5d6 minutes. The save DC is Constitution-based and includes a +2 racial bonus.

N212. ABANDONED STOREROOM

This chamber is filled with crushed wooden crates filled with various equipment, which is mostly useless.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The long dead elf deserters used this Room as a cache, storing whatever they could scrounge. After destroying the elves, Kasteoficiss placed a potent spell upon the contents of the Room. A sigil has been drawn on the bottom of a broken crate. Each PC searching the Room has a 15% chance of triggering the trap.

The sigil is fashioned from yellowish powder, and appears as a wide circle with three small fist-like shapes within it.

♣ Chaos Trap IX: CR 11; magic device; touch trigger; no reset; combined spell effects (symbol of death and symbol of insanity, 15th-level cleric, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); multiple targets (all creatures within 60 feet); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: It has been years since Kasteoficiss placed this trap here. She has most likely forgotten about it at this point. But, if the PCs trigger the trap there is a 10% chance of a Random Encounter 1d6 minutes as minions of Kasteoficiss come to investigate.

Treasure: Among the debris, the PCs find several items in good shape — seven torches, flint and steel, two bedrolls, a thick leather pouch filled with caltrops, a 10-ft. long chain, a small whetstone, two iron pots, and a flask of oil.

A DC 30 Search check reveals a small pouch with three vials of holy water.

EL: 11*

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the chance of triggering the trap to 25% per PC. To decrease the challenge, reduce the chance to 10% per PC.

N213. CRUSHING ROOM

Both doors leading into this chamber are marked with large Xs painted in dark green on their center. Elf adventurers placed green marks upon the doors to warn others of the danger within. Already victims of the chaos trap in Room N212, they couldn't make anything more complex than an X at the time.

They died soon after, leaving their cryptic markings behind.

This chamber is empty. Rubble and cloth are strewn everywhere and blood stains mark various points along the north and south walls.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room contains a powerful trap, which is triggered 2 rounds after anyone steps within the center of the chamber. When activated, the northern and southern walls move towards one another and crush everyone within the Room. The trap resets itself the 1 round after it is activated.

♦ Crushing Room Trap: CR 17; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; walls move together (20d6, crush), multiple targets (all targets within the room); never miss; onset delay (1 round); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 37.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 4, [Safe]

Tactics: If the crushing Room trap is disabled, and the doors locked from the inside, this Room is considered Safe.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the crushing Room trap to 24d6 crush. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage dealt by the crushing Room trap to 16d6 and reduce the Disable Device DC to 32.

N214. OLD CORPSES

The gray stone floor of this room is tainted with blood and is scattered with bones amongst which are the remains of steel weapons, bits of decrepit wool, fur, and leather, as well as a massive tangle of what looks like humanoid hair. The southwestern door remains half open.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A major battle occurred in this chamber. The bony remains lying about the Room are those of a band of elf deserters who had secured the Section decades ago. They were later killed by zombies loyal to Kasteoficiss and her mohrg servants.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 2, Stagnant Air

Tactics: Because the creatures who died here, chanted the name of the god in the final hours, they have not risen as zombies. As a result the ground is considered Hallowed 2.

Treasure: Among the debris are a +2 dagger, a longsword, a broken and useless bow with 19 rotted arrows, a hand axe, and an ivory armband with intricate designs carved on its surface (worth 95 gp). There is also one very thick platinum piece with both faces depicting the head of a proud and lovely woman. It is worth upwards of 250 gp to clergymen and other followers of the elven goddess of fortune.

N215. CLERIC'S ROOM

A small stone altar and simple bed decorate this chamber. Upon the one-foot deep altar is a beige wax candle which weak does a poor job of illuminating the rest of the place. Beside the burning candle is a small tome bound in leather.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was the bedchamber of an elf deserter. She was part of the group that was defeated in Room N214. She was the group's cleric and religious leader. Her piety has saved them from becoming undead in service of Kasteoficiss.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 3, [Safe]

Tactics: If the doors are locked from the inside, this Room is considered Safe.

Treasure: The book on the altar is a volume of prayers and rituals dedicated to the elven goddess of fortune. It is worth 200 gp to any worshiper of the deity. The candle beside it is enchanted with continual flame.

A successful DC 25 Search check reveals a small glass vial containing three doses of holy water and a long, dried, and yellowed piece of parchment hidden under the ruined bed sheets. The latter is a divine scroll containing the spells align weapon, cure moderate wounds, cure serious wounds, magic vestment, meld into stone, shield other, zone of truth.

N216. ROGUE'S QUARTERS

A small bed covered in rotten woolen sheets lies at the foot of the north wall of this bedroom. Under the wooden bed is a large but flat chest made from rusted iron.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The chest under the bed is rigged with a simple poison needle trap that triggers when opened. This trap can be bypassed by unlocking a simple lock at the bottom of the chest. The key that bypasses the chest's trap can be found with a successful DC 30 Search check. It lies under one of the feet of the bed, which must be moved in order to notice and recover it.

Otherwise, a DC 40 Open Lock check bypasses the trap and opens the chest.

♦ Poisoned Needle Trap: CR 14; mechanical; touch trigger; repair reset; lock bypass (Open Lock DC 30); Atk +21 melee (1 plus poison, needle); poison (black lotus extract, DC 20 Fortitude save resists (poison only), 3d6 Con/3d6 Con); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 36.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: The rogue who lived here, died in Room N214.

If the doors are locked from the inside, this Room is considered Safe.

Treasure: The trapped chest contains a set of masterwork thieves' tool, three +4 darts, five bright green emeralds (each worth 450 gp), and a glass vial containing 2 doses of purple worm poison.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two additional poison needles targeting PCs in adjacent 5-ft. squares to the trap. To decrease the challenge, replace the black lotus extract on the poisoned needle trap with large scorpion venom.

N217. TOO QUIET

This dark and cramped room opens into a corridor leading south, the door barely hanging on its hinges. The door to the north lies half opened, revealing a dark wall made out of solid stone.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The door upon the north wall was a trapped doorway similar to the one in Room N220. However, an elf deserter disabled the lethal device long ago. A PC who studies the door and archway is allowed a DC 15 Intelligence check. If successful, he gain a +8 competence bonus to his Search and Disable Device checks made to notice or neutralize the traps in Room N220.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: Invisible wards on the outside of the western door of this Room, keep undead away. This and the following Rooms have not been visited by undead in sometime.

The doors to this Room are magically sealed, requiring a knock spell to open.

The remains of what must have been a perfect circle made out of yellow and red power lies on the floor at the center of this bedchamber. Upon the south wall is a simple bed on which rotted silken sheets are neatly tucked in. A wooden stool with a broken leg in the northeast corner completes the rustic decor.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was used by another elf deserter; this one a wizard. Like his loyal companions, he died in Room N214. His spellbook remains hidden here.

Encounter Condition: [Safe]

Tactics: If the doors are locked from the inside, this Room is considered Safe.

Treasure: A successful DC 50 Search check reveals an invisible tome bound in burgundy leather hidden under the bed. Alternately, it can be found with detect magic, see invisible, or any similar spell.

This is the elf's spellbook, containing the following arcane spells: 0—acid splash, detect poison, message, touch of fatigue; 1st—animate rope, cause fear, disguise self, silent image, shocking grasp, floating disk, unseen servant; 2nd—daze monster, glitterdust, hypnotic pattern, magic mouth, mirror image, protection from arrows; 3rd—displacement, illusory script, phantom steed, secret page, slow.

N219. WARRIOR'S CHAMBER

The door to this Room lies half-open, propped by the body of a dead dog.

A wide bed dominates this dark chamber. The bed is covered with thick furs which are obviously old. Weapons are lined up upon the south wall, their tips are rusty but seem otherwise in good shape. On the floor lies the carcass of a dead dog, holding open the door.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: An elf deserter who died in Room N214 long ago, used this Room for a while. He left behind a few items of value, but no sign of what caused his death.

Encounter Condition: Distracting Visions 11, Unhallowed 2

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The furs on the bed are so dry that they break when disturbed. The weapons — a masterwork halberd, three steel javelins, and a long-handled warhammer — upon the south wall are sound but need a good cleaning.

Under the bed, hidden by the furs that drop on either side of it, is a +2 breastplate and a pair of decorated arm greaves made out of strong iron (worth 25 gp if cleaned). These can be found with a DC 25 Search check.

N220. RIGGED FALSE DOOR

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The doors leading to Rooms N221 and N222 are unlocked, but trapped. The door at the end of the east corridor is a trapped false door.

The doors are rigged with a potent mechanical trap, which is triggered as soon as anyone opens it. When this happens, a puff of purplish gas issues from holes in the stone wall behind it. The poisonous gas affects everyone within the Room. This trap resets itself automatically, when the door is closed again, but lacks any ingredients required to expel the fumes.

♣ Burnt Other Fumes Trap: CR 13; mechanical; touch trigger; repair reset; gas; never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (burnt other fumes), DC 18 Fortitude save resists, 1 Con drain/3d6 Con; multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 32.

N222. HEARTH

The only door leading into this Room is locked, requiring a DC 50 Open Lock check is enough to open the door.

A mass of ash — surrounded by a wide circle of crushed stone — lies in the center of this room. Judging by the black soot that marks the stone circle and the remains of charred wood within the ashes, a fire once burnt within this chamber. A pile of dry and half-rotten wood is stacked in the southeast corner of the room.

What stands out most, however, is the massive iron lever sticking out of a long groove in the floor. The blackened lever is positioned at a 45-degree angle pointing north.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room holds one of the four intricate mechanisms linked to the powerful force fields in the antechambers opening into Room N159. The lever must be pulled up, requiring a successful DC 20 Strength check. The other three levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, and N250.

All four must be raised in order to deactivate the force fields.

Encounter Condition: Fog 10, Smoke*, Positive Energy, Stagnant Air*

Tactics: Chaotic or evil creatures touching the lever suffer 1d4 negative levels per round they remain in contact. Chaotic evil creatures are destroyed irrevocably with no chance for a save. Caster level 20th.

If the door to this Room are left open for 1 hour, the Smoke and Stagnant air dissipate.

When the final lever is pulled, the World Eater wakes and a pulse of negative energy blasts through the entire dungeon. See Room N159 Sidebar (page 746) for more information.

Treasure: If the PCs can find a fuel source, the hearth still works, allowing them to use it for crafting items or repairing broken gear.

EL: N/A

N223. GOLEMS' GUARD POST

Two massive statuesque figures made out of dark brown and black metal stand guard on either side of the northern door of this chamber. The great statues are well made, representing heavily armed and armored giants whose faces are covered with thick metal helmets that do show any opening for the eyes.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four mighty iron golems (hp 144, 141, 139, 134) guard this Room. They do not move beyond the doorways and the holy power they guard is built into the floor. These soulless constructs were fashioned by the original creators of the dungeon. They attack anyone entering the Room regardless of alignment.

The door on the eastern wall is fake. Though it leads nowhere, it is locked with a complex mechanism and requires a successful DC 45 Open Lock check to open. Opening this door reveals the stone wall behind it, and closing it automatically relocks it.

If the PCs spend more than 30 minutes (i.e. take 10 or take 20) working this lock, roll for a Random Encounter.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Fog 10, Positive Energy, Safe

Tactics: In combat, the golem close to melee and attack the closest PCs. If the PCs manage to maneuver past the golems and out of the chamber, the automatons do not pursue them. Instead, they return to their original place on each side of the doorway and resume their eternal watch.

They fight to the death, targeting any PC who tries to open the east door.

Treasure: If the PCs search the stone wall behind the false door, allowing them a DC 30 Search check. Success reveals a single black stone that is cut slightly differently than the rest of the wall. Only a knock or similar spell opens the cache behind the stone.

Hidden behind the stone is a bone scroll case containing a scroll of imprisonment and a scroll of freedom (20th-level caster). The celestials placed this final piece of magic here for a time when the prison would no longer be needed and mankind could govern itself. It is a test, albeit a subtle one, for the PCs to reveal their true nature.

If the PCs destroy the scroll of freedom (essentially admitting that they fear the unknown and cannot defeat the beasts of this dungeon), all the doors in the Region open. Every sarcophagus releases its prisoners and every cell is opened wide for the inhabitants to roam free. Everything but the World Eater (Room N159) is released into the Region and out the doors to the west.

If the PCs destroy the scroll of imprisonment (basically admitting they do not need the aid of the gods), all of the undead in the dungeon except Invistis, Kasteoficiss, and Vinnara are irrevocably destroyed, their penance paid.

If the PCs destroy both scrolls, a number of different things can happen, based on the game style of the DM and PCs:

- The entire dungeon crumbles around them, destroying everything inside and teleporting the PCs to the surface where they entered, to meet the real Barcellus (Room O59) and learn the fate of man.
- Everything of an extreme alignment (lawful good, lawful evil, chaotic good, chaotic evil) outside the Room is destroyed and banished from this plane forever.
- The secrets of the dungeon are unlocked (per legend lore) and the PCs understand their purpose and the purpose of the prison.
- The PCs gain 1 level each.
- The PCs are granted one wish each.
- The PCs become outsiders.
- The PCs fully restored to health (as mass heal and greater restoration), although this duplicates the effect of Room N224.
- Any other plot device the DM can think of.

The scrolls can be destroyed with any kind of fire.

If the scrolls are taken from this Room, they turn to dust and their magic is extinguished.

Skills and Feats: —

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con, Fortitude DC 19 negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

N224. AID OF THE GODS

The door to this Room is locked requiring a DC 50 Open Lock check to unlock.

As the door opens, light washes over you. Your wounds close and your will is restored. Weeks of fatigue wash away and your spirits lift as though you were on the surface again. Along the north wall are runes and sigils in a language you've never seen before.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Opening the door to Room is the equivalent of casting mass heal and greater restoration (caster level 20th). The Room will only heal the PCs once, but still provides a safe haven in the tomb. They can remain as long as they like.

Undead avoid this Room.

Encounter Condition: Hallowed 10, Positive Energy, Safe

Tactics: The sigils and runes on the north wall require no special means to read them. In fact, no matter what language the PCs speak, the runes can be read as though written in their native tongue, even if the PC is illiterate.

The runes detail a prophecy, remarking on the feats of great heroes who would one day rid the world of evil. Champions of the gods, these men and women of valor would free their world from tyranny and oppression. These heroes now walk among mankind and their will cannot be opposed.

The story is very specific. It details every action the PCs have taken (DMs should improvise here), from the moment they entered the dungeon to the moment they reached this Room. Wise PCs will surmise that either they were destined or they have been watched.

The runes go on to explain that the heroes would face one more test, beyond anything their world had ever seen. This allusion could refer to the World Eater, scrolls in Room N223, or the frost giant in Region O. The DM is free to elaborate, but the purpose of these markings is to let the PCs know that the gods are watching them.

Long shadows cast this hall in darkness, from which the disquieting sound of a distant voice can be heard. The murmuring voice quickly becomes an inarticulate but clearly audible jumble of distressing cries as the intangible shape of an eerily shaped silhouette emerges from the shadows.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A lone allip (hp 79) inhabits this chamber. This crazed undead is a former servant of Kasteoficiss that chose to turn its back on her almost a year ago. Though none knows why this crazed undead chose to forgo his allegiance with the mummy priestess, its former mistress does not seem to care whether or not he returns to her.

Since leaving, it has become weak and in many ways defeated. It lies in the shadows, whispering softly to itself. It dreads its former companions and fears that Kasteoficiss' allip servants might hunt it down and deprive it of its unlfe. Though it flees and hides from most undead creatures, this rogue allip attacks the living on sight.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Desecration 4, Distracting Noises, Echoes 6, Unhallowed 2

Tactics: In combat, this powerful allip uses its incorporeal touch to weaken the living, constantly mumbling strange and incomprehensible confabulations. It however, is very weak and flees out of the Room if defeat is eminent.

Creatures that successfully save cannot be affected by the same allip's babble for 24 hours. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Blessed (Sp): The allip servant is under the protection of the dark deity it serves. It benefits from a permanent bless.

Madness (Su): Anyone targeting an allip with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its tortured mind and takes 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—guidance; 1/day—bane (DC 12), cause fear (DC 12), darkness, doom (DC 12); 1/week—bestow curse and prayer.

Wisdom Drain (Su): An allip causes 1d4 points of Wisdom drain each time it hits with its incorporeal touch attack. On each such successful attack, it gains 5 temporary hit points.

N226. LIT CORRIDOR

A permanent daylight spell illuminates this hallway.

Unlike most rooms in this region of the dungeon, this corridor is illuminated by an unknown light source which imitates daylight.

Initial Attitude: N/A

N227. HALL OF VILLAINY

The walls of this great hall are blemished with claw marks, some of which are extremely deep and wide. Stone fragments lie about the room; the result of centuries of clawing at the walls. What truly catches the eye, however, is the great army of skeletal and pale-skinned figures wearing rotted cloth and baring rusty armaments that stand within the hall.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four skeletal hordes (hp 120 each) are imprisoned in this Room. These lesser undead attack all living things that enter their lair and pursue them (even through the trapped Room N226) should the PCs retreat.

In life, these fiends were warriors of a horrible army that destroyed everything in their path, including the innocent. They had no respect for the living, so in death they were cast into a pit of darkness, where no weapons or armor could protect them.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: The hordes attack the PCs like an army, forming into lines. They push the PCs back against the wall, making escape impossible.

N228. HALL OF VICTIMS

This massive room is filled with undead, milling about, dejected and demoralized. They hang their heads low and cower from the PCs.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This Room houses all the dead who never stood up for themselves in life. They represent cowards, innocents, and those too stymied to think for themselves. Placed here by an unforgiving god of strength, their punishment was to share eternity with the dead in Room N227, with nothing but a wall to separate them.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20°

Tactics: This skeleton horde (hp 120) is always shaken. Defeated, they do not defend themselves if the PCs attack and are destroyed if any cleric attempts to turn them. They have always sought an escape from undeath and the PCs are their salvation.

Deep shadows bathe this room, swallowing the light. The sounds of crying can be heard from the darkness.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is completely dark and completely empty. PCs spending too long here, are influenced by the sounds of children crying. Every 10 minutes require the PCs make DC 22 Will save or suffer the effects for confusion, until they leave.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Distracting Noises 9, Fear 16, Unhallowed 5

Tactics: Something horrible happened to the world before man was born and this Room harbors much of this pain. There is a lot of Room for macabre imagery and epic story here. DMs should feel free to elaborate on the horrors of their game world at the time when the dungeon was built.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Six zombies hang about the Room, placed here by a vindictive beast. They can easily be cut down or killed, but if left to hang, return to life in 24 hours, stuck in their position.

N233. MULTIPLE FLAME TRAPS

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When the PCs move through this hallway, allow the first one a DC 25 Spot check or DC 20 Survival check. Success indicates he instantly realizes that the gray stone walls are scorched in many places, and thin layers of soot sticks to the lower portions of the walls. This is the result of a potent magical trap.

Several ancient magical traps were built in this corridor. Individually, each of these traps is simple and not much of a challenge, but triggered together they cause great harm to creatures venturing into these parts. What makes these traps even more special is the fact that they appear to strike at random, sending fiery globes at intruders at irregular locations. Also, creatures staying in the hallway for extended periods might trigger the traps again. Since the potent devices automatically reset themselves after 1 round and can strike anywhere within the corridor, PCs might fall victim to them multiple times.

✦ Maximized Flaming Sphere Trap: CR 15; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (flaming sphere, 18th-level wizard, eight globes of fire dealing a total of 72 fire damage each, DC 18 Reflex save negates); Search DC 27*; Disable Device DC 27*. Note: This trap combines the effect of twelve maximized flaming sphere spells triggered simultaneously.

* To disable this potent trap, twelve different Disable Device checks (at different locations throughout the length of the corridor) must be made, and these devices must be found separately.

N234. CHARRED CORPSES

This door is sealed tight, requiring a DC 25 Strength check to open.

The stink of burnt flesh and wood is overwhelmingly strong in this mist-covered hall. Through the gray mist, a great mound of charred carcasses from different humanoids can be seen lying in the center of the place.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The bodies of many derro were burnt here long ago. Though it has been over two centuries since the flesh of these creatures was set ablaze, the Room remained sealed. The mist here is not magical, but simply trapped smoke created by the flames that destroyed the bodies years ago.

The charred remains are derro who dared go where they did not belong. Though dead, they never rose as undead, a fact that cannot be explain although PCs should be suspicious.

Encounter Condition: Haunted, Negative Energy, Smoke, Stagnant Air

Tactics: If the DM likes, the derro could rise as morhg or perhaps devourers.

Treasure: A successful DC 30 Search check through the charred bones reveals a masterwork warhammer, a fist-sized fiery ruby (worth 2,500 gp), and a wide golden band which is actually a ring of mind shielding. These items require thorough cleaning but are still in remarkable shape. The search also exposes the burnt remains of several wooden weapons and the charred bones of at least two dozen humanoids.

The gray walls of this hall are covered with tapestries of faded greens and reds. The thick cloths hanging upon the walls are covered with a bluish mold, which turned their rich shades bland. The tapestries are old and damaged.

The frame of a rotted wooden table dominates here, but this item, along with the stools that surround it, are completely useless.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter Condition: Stagnant Air

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The twelve woven tapestries in this hall are ancient and fragile. A successful DC 25 Dexterity check is required to take each of them from the wall without causing further damage. Failing this check results in the tapestry breaking into several pieces. N236. SHIELD GUARDIANS' HALL

The southern door to this Room is locked and trap. A DC 45 Open Lock check unlocks the door, but anyone touching the door or tampering with the lock triggers a lightning bolt trap.

⚡ Lightning Bolt Trap: CR 16; magic device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (lightning bolt, 18th-level sorcerer, 30d6 electricity, DC 18 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 28; Disable Device DC 28. This spell combines the effects of three lightning bolt trap triggered simultaneously.

A pair of tall and emaciated statues built from gray stone, dark burgundy and tarnished silvery metal, and solid black wood stands on either side of the south door.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Immobile when the PCs enter, two shield guardians (hp 171, 159) guard this Room. When the trap is triggered on the southern door, they come to life. Otherwise, they wait until the PCs move toward the doors to the north or attack them, before they attack.

Loyal to Invistis the lich lord, they attack anyone but their master. Their duty is to prevent creatures from entering Room N239. Their stored spell is vampiric touch.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Negative Energy

Tactics: These constructs fight like the mindless creatures they are, having no specific target and indicating not even a shred of intelligence in combat. They block the northern doors and fight to the death.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one shield guardian. To decrease the challenge, remove their stored spells.

⚡ Advanced Shield Guardian: CR 10; Large construct; HD 24d10+30; hp 171, 159; Init +0; Spd 30 ft.; AC 24, touch 9, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +18; Grp +29; Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, slam); Full Atk +24 melee (1d8+7, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA —; SQ Construct traits, darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 5, find master, guard, low-light vision, shield other, spell storing; AL N(E); SV Fort +7, Ref +7, Will +7; Str 24, Dex 11, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Find Master (Su): As long as a shield guardian and its amulet are on the same plane, the shield guardian can find the amulet wearer (or just the amulet, if it is removed after the guardian is called).

Guard (Ex): If ordered to do so, a shield guardian moves swiftly to defend the wearer of its amulet, blocking blows and disrupting foes. All attacks against the amulet wearer take a –2 penalty when the shield guardian is adjacent to its master.

Shield Other (Sp): The wearer of a shield guardian's amulet can activate this defensive ability if within 100 ft. of the shield guardian. Just as the spell of the same name, this ability transfers to the shield guardian half the damage that would be dealt to the amulet wearer (this ability does not provide the spell's AC or save bonuses).

Spell Storing (Sp): A shield guardian can store one spell of 4th-level or lower that is cast into it by another creature. It "casts" this spell when commanded to do so or when a predefined situation arises. Once this spell is used, the shield guardian can store another spell (or the same spell again).

N237. ABANDONED ALTAR

The floor of this room is covered with a layer of dust undisturbed for some time. In the center of the chamber is a stone altar, also cloaked in dust. An uneasy calm hangs with a distinct sense of impending doom.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is empty, save for the dust and the uneasy sense that something lurks in the shadows.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 10, Fear 30, Haunted, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 12

Tactics: If a PC manages to escape the effects of fear in this Room, allow a second Will save to see past the illusion of this Room. This Room is a sacrificial chamber and the altar is used to invoke black magic. Although long since abandoned, a dead derro lays upon the altar, obviously unable to rot in this defiled hall. Cut into sections and covered in blood and gore, the body was used for some foul purpose. Blood marks the walls and floor as well. Even veteran PCs have not seen an act of vile desecration of this level.

PCs that see through the illusion, must succeed at a DC 25 Fortitude save or become nauseated for 1d6 minutes.

Treasure: PCs that succeed at all three saves above are allowed to Search the Room. A DC 25 Search check reveals a scroll of maximized horrid wilting (18th-level caster) resting in blood on the altar, apparently made during the dark ritual that created this horrific scene.

EL: N/A

N238. TRAPPED ALTAR

A simple altar dominates the hall. A dead humanoid lies on the altar, sacrifice in ritual fashion. Judging by the dust upon the altar's surface and on the floor, no one has entered this place in decades, but the body hasn't rotted yet.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: If a PC steps within 5 ft. of the altar, a tangled mass of black tentacles spring out of the stone altar and surrounding floor. These tentacles are 10 ft. long and strike up to four targets closest to the altar. This magical effect remains active for 18 rounds, after which time the tentacles dissipate into thin air. A minute later the trap resets itself.

Each tentacle bears a contact poison that deals damage even if the tentacles fail to break through the PCs armor. Each time the tentacles (at least) strike the PCs' touch AC, the poison takes effect.

◆ Poisoned Black Tentacles Trap: CR 20; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (black tentacles, 18th-level wizard 1d4+10 tentacles, Atk +18 melee [1d6+4, tentacle]); poison (sasssone leaf residue, Fortitude DC 16 resists, 2d12 hp/1d6 Con); multiple targets (up to six tentacles per target in each of four adjacent 5-ft. squares); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 33.

N240 THROUGH N250.

THE LAIR OF THE WRAITH KING

A mighty dread wraith and its minions control Rooms N240 through N250. Though the creature known as the wraith king by the other inhabitants of the region chose to forgo its proper name, it nevertheless remains an intelligent and over ambitious fiend. The wraith king, in fact, was one of the original creatures entombed in the dungeon.

The wraith king escaped imprisonment when a foolhardy group of elves unsealed the sarcophagus that had until then kept its ghostly body in stasis (see Room N243). The already mighty dread wraith turned most of these foolhardy deserters into servants, but instead of killing them point blank, he gave the last one a chance to live. The wraith king's deal was this — if the elf agreed to free the other wraiths held in torpor (in Room N242), the undead vowed not to harm him. The elf deserter agreed and freed the wraiths that once served the wraith king faithfully, but as soon as these monsters won their freedom, they recanted, killing the elf and turning him into one of their own.

From this moment on, the maligned creature known as the wraith king firmly established dominion over a small portion of this region. Content with his newfound lair, the wraith king agreed not to interfere in the affairs of Invistis the Lich Lord in exchange for a promise from Invistis that neither he nor his servants would ever set foot into the wraith king's domain. This agreement has lasted and the two mighty undead lords stay clear of one another.

The wraith king bears no love for Kasteoficiss because the mummy priestess sent too many of her minions to its lair over the centuries. The ghostly monarch also hates all other creatures and cannot trust anyone but Invistis, proven true to his word over the years. The wraith king delights in meeting living beings all of whom it wants to turn into servants in his vast army. This terrible army will march from the dungeon and attack one humanoid village after another, thus fortifying its army and taking control of vast dominions.

The servants of the wraith king obey a strict hierarchy. The wraith king leads its ghostly undead legions, which are composed of a dread wraith commander, three dread wraith lieutenants, and a small number of lowly wraith soldiers. Each of these groups follows the orders of the previous and all creatures in the army are devoted servants of their monarch's cause. Glory is had by swelling their ranks which winds up be a satisfying endeavor.

Unbeknownst to all but, Invistis, the dread wraith king controls Room N250, where one of the levers controlling the walls of force (in Room N159) are located.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Every hour spent in the lair of the wraith king, roll on the chart below.

1d20	Encounter
1	A mass of charred remains lays in the middle of this Room, and the stench of burnt flesh lingers in the air. Something sprung a magical trap that is no longer active. Stagnant Air.
2	Moans and echoes reverberate. Something sounds as though it is around the next corner. A DC 30 Listen check reveals this is just the dungeon playing tricks. Distracting Noises 9.
3	The sound of battle echoes through the halls. War cries and clanging steel follow. Echoes 2.
4	The floor is coated in blood and ichor. Poor Footing 3.
5	A dead zombie has been broken into several pieces and left on the floor, perhaps as a warning to others.
6–14	Nothing
15	Four dread wraiths on patrol attack the PCs, hoping to reinforce their numbers.
16	Six wraiths ambush the PCs from the shadows, striking out haphazardly at the living. Ambush (darkness).
17	A lone dread wraith lieutenant is on patrol. It mercilessly attacks the PCs on sight, seeking glory for the wraith king.
18	This Room is rigged with a trap that has never been triggered.

◆ Poisoned Spiked Pit Trap: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; hidden lock bypass (Search DC 25, Open Lock DC 30); DC 33 Reflex save avoids; 100 ft. deep (10d6, fall); multiple targets (first target in each of two adjacent 5-ft. squares); pit spikes (Atk +18 melee, 1d4 spikes per target for 1d5+10 plus poison each); poison (purple worm poison, DC 24 Fortitude save resists, 1d6 Str/2d6 Str); Search DC 22; Disable Device DC 24.

19 Four allips serving Kasteoficiss have ventured into the wraith king's lair, hoping to assess his strength. They view the PCs as a threat to their secrecy and attack on sight.

20 A swarm of skeletal dire rats scurry across the floor, moving from one large opening in one wall to a narrow, but deep crack in another.

N240. ABANDONED AND LEFT FOR DEAD

Four stacks of wood are piled in the corners of this room. Each stack is between four to eight feet high and contains all manners of pieces, from the large rough timbers to tiny branches, as well as pieces of broken furniture and other devices. Though most of the wood is covered with a thick layer of mold, some of it is salvageable. A horrible stench fills the air.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A dead body has been placed under the wood. Weak and feeble, it became a zombie but could not free itself from its wood cage. If the PCs lift the wood, it springs up and attacks.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Stagnant Air

Tactics: This zombie is easily dispatched by the PCs. Don't waste time with a fight. If the PCs kill the zombie and examine the body, they can see it was once an elf, stabbed several times from behind. PCs may deduce that he was murdered and his body hid here, but that's all speculative.

Treasure: There is enough wood here to light and maintain a normal fire for 1d10+10 hours.

N241. DESTROYED IRON GOLEM

A large mass of dark blue steel lies on the floor of this hall. A closer look at the debris reveals a statue broken in three distinct parts. The thing is made out of a blue alloy in the form of a giant warrior dressed in plate armor and bearing sword and shield. The facial features of the statue's silhouette are covered with what resembles a full-faced helmet. A double bladed sword and knightly shield are also attached to the statue.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: An iron golem once guarded this hall, but the creature was destroyed centuries ago. Invistis has abandoned the iron golem, because the design was inadequate. With 250 gp of material, it could be rebuilt, but would be far weaker than a normal iron golem.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Allow the PCs to repair the iron golem by casting geas/quest into it. If they also cast cloudkill, it gains a breath weapon attack, but this was the flaw with the original design. Use the stats below if the PCs fix the damaged golem.

XP and gp costs have already been taken care of in the design and construction of this golem. While it will obey whoever places the geas/quest into it, it is inherently evil and radiates taint as undead.

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con, Fortitude DC 19 negates.

The save DC is Constitution-based.

This golem only has a breath weapon if the PCs cast cloudkill on it.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

* Due to rust and neglect the natural armor bonus of this iron golem is reduced to +12.

Construction: An iron golem's body is sculpted from 5,000 pounds of pure iron, smelted with rare tinctures and mixtures costing at least 10,000 gp. Assembling the body requires a DC 20 Craft (armorsmithing) check or a DC 20 Craft (weaponsmithing) check.

CL 16th; Craft Construct, cloudkill, geas/quest, limited wish, polymorph any object, caster must be at least 16th level.

N242. FORMER STASIS CHAMBER

A successful DC 40 Search check reveals a simple hidden wall panel that opens into this Room. To push open this heavy panel (which is in all aspects identical to the walls of this Region), PCs must succeed at a DC 24 Strength check. When pushed, a catch releases and this secret door sinks inside the floor. The door automatically returns to its proper place one minute after it was opened. It can be reopened from inside the chamber by pulling upon the panel, which contains a hollow handle on this side.

A massive tomb fashioned from bronze rests upon an elevated dais of black stone in the center of this great hall. The sarcophagus is a simple, unmarked, and square box, approximately ten-foot square. A closer look at it reveals that its lid is crooked, and a small crack opens inside the tomb.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This chamber is one of two stasis Rooms in this region that once held powerful dread wraiths (the other being Room N243). The elf who agreed to bid the wraith king one last favor in exchange for his life freed the four dread wraiths that were put in stasis within the bronze sarcophagus, ages ago. Like the stasis chambers in Room N205, N206, N207, and N209, a magical vapor — now long dissipated — kept these fiends in torpor. One released, the dread wraiths killed the elf, turning him into a wraith, and vowed allegiance to the wraith king, which they had served it in the past.

These creatures serve the wraith king to this day, occasionally venturing back into their former prison but for the most part preferring to avoid it entirely.

The sarcophagus' lid is heavy and requires a successful DC 20 Strength check to move. Though it is possible to inspect the inside of the tomb without moving the lid, PCs who wish to make a thorough search need to push it back further.

N243. WRAITH KING'S PRIVATE SANCTUM

A successful DC 40 Search check is required to locate the hidden wall panel opening into this Room, revealing tiny grooves on either side of the structure. PCs need to succeed at DC 24 Strength check to push open this panel, which is made from the same stone as the wall so that it matches perfectly. Like the panel opening into Room N242, this secret door sinks into the floor. It then returns to its proper place one minute after, as though it was never opened. The panel can be reopened from inside the chamber by using a hollow handle to pull upon it.

A three feet high dais made from glassy black stone supports a great sarcophagus in the middle of the room. The simple 10-ft. by 10-ft. tomb is made from darkened bronze and bares no special insignia. The heavy bronze lid of the sarcophagus rests crookedly atop the large box.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the second stasis chamber built in this Section of the dungeon. It once kept the powerful wraith king prisoner. The undead's dreary torpor ended when a group of elf deserters (unwittingly) unsealed its sarcophagus. This released the magical gas that held the kingly wraith in stasis (see Room N205, N206, N207, and N209 for further details on this vapor), and thus the fiend was released.

A successful DC 18 Strength check is required to move the heavy lid of the sarcophagus of the wraith king, but this action is not required to inspect the inside of the tomb, as a wide gap is currently opened.

The five corpses upon the floor are those of the elves who freed the ghostly king and its minions. The last survivor of this group — a powerful but defeated warrior — cut a deal with the wraith king, but was hunted down and slaughtered by his hateful servants when he liberated them from Room N242. He died here and, like his fallen comrades, was turned into a wraith that now serves the king's cause.

The wraith king, a powerful dread wraith (hp 228), dwells in this chamber. Free from imprisonment, this creature's agenda is simple. Build an army strong enough to escape the dungeon and take control of an entire kingdom of the living. Unlike the other powerful undead monsters in the region, the wraith king is not interested in parleying with the PCs and could care less about the power struggle over the World Eater (Room N159).

In its mind, living creatures must be turned into wraith servants to strengthen his ghostly host. The dread king attacks as soon as the PCs enter his private sanctum.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 8, Fear 22, Fearless, Unhallowed 8

Tactics: The wraith king is a cunning and vicious foe. It charges the PCs to strike them down with its dreaded incorporeal touch, targeting the spellcasters first. Its objective is to make minions as fast as possible, going after the weakest PCs. Due to his strength, the dead rise to join his ranks in half the time of a normal wraith, making this a particularly vicious encounter.

If reduced to 60 hit points or less, this fiend flies to Room N247 and then to Room N246, ordering its minions to slaughter the PCs.

Treasure: Inside the wraith king's sarcophagus are the skeletons of five dead elves, twisted and mangled. Among their possessions are two rusty longswords, a +1 battleaxe, a short sword, a masterwork dagger, a full plate armor that needs cleaning, a small masterwork steel shield, a wand of magic missiles (14 charges), a potion of cure moderate wounds (5 doses), a potion of invisibility, and a total of 435 gp worth of assorted coins and small gemstones.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They will not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are utterly powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Ruthless Aggression (Su): The dread wraith king is single-minded in its purpose. Capable of unspeakable horror it cannot be swayed by mind-affecting magic. It is immune to all mind-affecting enchantments and ignores spell resistance when targeting lawful creatures with its spell-like abilities.

In addition, anyone targeting the dread wraith king with a thought detection, mind control, or telepathic ability makes direct contact with its vile mind and suffers 1d4 points of Wisdom damage.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—suggestion (DC 15); 1/day—suggestion (DC 26), cause fear (DC 15); 1/week—geas/quest (DC 15).

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 27 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Every 10th temporary hit point gained becomes a permanent hit point.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d2 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N244. TRAPPED CHAMBER

Though the chamber is not rigged, a potent magical trap was placed within the corridor. Anyone stepping 10 ft. inside this hallway triggers the arcane trap, which cannot be bypassed. When this trap is sprung, a mighty storm of the utmost cold appears, creating falling ice shards harming all creatures within the corridor.

Evil PCs approaching the door cause it to open automatically.

☠ Multiple Maximized Ice Storm Traps: CR 15; magic device; visual trigger (true seeing); automatic reset; spell effect (ice storm, 18th-level wizard, 54 bludgeoning damage and 36 cold damage to anyone within the area); Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29. Note: This trap combines the effects of three maximized ice storm spells triggered simultaneously.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: At the end of the hallway is a small sigil, drawn in blood and ichor upon the wall. It is a portion of the wraith king's essence and a tiny piece of its maddening power. It is not a trap, but a prize for those fiendish enough to do the bidding of the dead.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20, Negative Energy

Tactics: PCs examining (or touching) the blood, must succeed at a DC 26 Will save or be overcome with suggestion. This powerful will-bending suggestion urges the PC to join the ranks of the dead, to become the dread wraith's thrall. While the PC does not have to follow the suggestion to the letter, he is for a short time, passionate about his interest in the dread wraith king.

This suggestion is powerful and fills the PC with knowledge of the dread wraith's true plans, allowing the PC to understand its needs. After 5 minutes of visions and anxiety, the PC is allowed a second DC 26 Will save. If successful, he breaks the hold of the suggestion and can act normally, having seen evil for what it truly is. He is no longer required to make Will saves but must make a choice (see below).

If the PC fails this second Will save, his alignment slips one direction toward lawful evil permanently (if he is already lawful evil, he gains +1 Wisdom permanently).

He is then required to make a third DC 26 Will save. If this fails, he suffers the effect of geas/quest and joins the dread wraith (Room N243). Short of the PCs killing him, he cannot be deterred from his quest.

Each time a PC fails a Will save, roll on the chart below. If he fails all three, roll five times.

1d20	Effect
1	PC suffers confusion for 1d4 days, but gains Toughness.
2	PC suffers insanity , but gains +2 Strength.
3-5	PC gains darkvision 60 ft.
6	PC gains lifesense 60 ft.
7-10	PC gains the ability to cast suggestion once per week at a caster level equal to his character level.
11	PC suffers 1d8 Wisdom drain, but gains immunity to mind-affecting magic.
12-13	PC suffers 1d4 Wisdom drain, but gains blindsight 60 ft.
14-18	PC suffers 1d8 Constitution drain, but gains +4 Wisdom.
19	PC suffers
20	PC suffers 2d6 Constitution drain, but gains 1 level if he survives. This drain binds him to the dread wraith, who gains hit points as a result.

Evil PCs suffer a -2 circumstance penalty to these Will saves and lawful good PCs are allowed to add their Wisdom bonus to their Will save twice. If the dread wraith is dead, the PC champions the banner of his martyr king instead of joining his ranks.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add three may of frosts to the multiple ice storm trap. To decrease the challenge, remove one maximized ice storm (dealing 36 bludgeoning damage and 24 cold damage).

N245. WRAITH GUARD POST

This large hall is cast in deep shadows. A low moaning hiss comes from the shadows, hinting of a deadly adversary in the darkness. The high vaulted ceiling disappears in the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Four dread wraiths (hp 117, 113, 106, 101) guard this chamber from high above the PCs. The ceiling is 100 ft. high and the wraiths wait until the last moment to descend on the PCs. They can drop the full distance of the Room in 1 round, attacking with surprise if undetected.

Fiercely loyal to the wraith king, these creatures hate the living and attack anything entering their master's territory. They hiss and moan, distracting the PCs with their unholy presence. Their hateful touch is more menacing than any other wraiths in the dungeon.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Distracting Noises 9, Fear 20, Fearless, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: These wraiths fight surprisingly well together and flank their foes. Their touch is caustic like acid and cold at the same time. PCs struck by the dread wraiths are scarred, suffering 1 point of temporary Charisma damage for each strike (maximum 6). These wraiths seek to prove their worth to the wraith king, by presenting an unsurmountable prize.

Allow the wraiths in Room N246 a DC 22 Listen check. Success indicates that they hear the battle and charge into the Room, emerging from the eastern wall, 1d3+1 rounds later.

Allow the dread wraiths one Intimidate check every 1d6 rounds as a free action, due to their fearful nature.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two dread wraiths. To decrease the challenge remove two.

In addition, every time a lawful or good PC is struck by a dread wraith, he must succeed at a DC 20 Will save or suffer an additional 2d6 unholy damage. Lawful good PCs suffer a -4 circumstance penalty to this save.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

N246. FIRST WRAITH SERVANTS' BARRACKS

The only feature of note in this large hall is the semicircle formed by what looks like one half of a high column of glassy basalt in the middle of the eastern wall. The most surprising thing in the place, however, is the host of black ghostly figures hovering above ground.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Fifteen wraiths (hp 32 each) occupy this hall. These creatures form the bulk of the wraith king's army. They are loyal to the monarch and obey its will and the will of its subordinates (the dread wraith lieutenants and commander). Like most of their kind, they are hateful creatures that attack all living beings.

They are recent additions to the army, however, and lack the fervor of the dread wraiths in Room N245.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20, Fearless

Tactics: These wraiths are cunning in battle and fight like an army. They position themselves to flank their prey, taking advantage of their overwhelming numbers. Once a PC suffers from a wraith's Constitution drain ability, that wraith continues to attack until it kills him or is destroyed itself.

Allow the wraith guards in Room N245 a DC 22 Listen check to hear the commotion. If they do, they emerge from the western wall and join the fray in 1d3+1 rounds. Allow the dread wraith lieutenants in Rooms N247 and N249 the same chance to overhear the commotion. These fiends do not come to the aid of their lesser kindred. Instead, they stand ready for the PCs to enter their offices, surprising them.

N247. DREAD WRAITH LIEUTENANT'S OFFICE

This chamber is filled with broken furniture. A green marble table, thrown to one side, lies in many pieces near the west wall; two rotten wooden chair rest upon the south wall; and a cabinet, which has been smashed opened, dominates the entire eastern wall.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A powerful dread wraith (hp 171) haunts this chamber. Like the other two dread wraith lieutenants (see Room N249), it is extremely loyal to its monarch and tolerates no one other than another dread wraith in its office.

Encounter Condition: Ambush (darkness), Fearless

Tactics: The dread wraith attacks all living beings as soon as it senses their presence. If it senses the PCs outside this Room, it ambushes them as soon as they enter. If the PCs don't enter its Room, it comes out of its office to attack them. In combat, this creature howls loudly. It attacks the most lightly armored PCs first, preferring to target the spellcasters whenever possible.

Allow the dread wraiths in Room N249 DC 18 Listen checks to hear the fighting. If successful, the two dread wraith lieutenants emerge from the eastern wall to share the kill with their compatriot 1d3 rounds later.

The typical wraiths that make up the undead monarch's army (in Rooms N246) do not move from their position, fearing that their dread wraith superiors view the intrusion as interference.

Treasure: PCs searching the cabinet find a potion of remove blindness/deafness (7 doses), a gem of seeing, and two chunks of amber respectively worth 85 and 115 gp.

N248. SECOND WRAITH SERVANTS' BARRACKS

This great hall is empty, but a high semicircle forming a half column of glassy basalt protrudes from the middle of the western wall. Runes cover the face, glowing with unholy red energy.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room is currently unoccupied, but the wraith king hopes to fill it with newly created spawns soon. The rune conveys power upon wraiths, giving them strength to grow larger. Any new wraiths are placed in this Room to "cook" for a while, gaining strength enough to be admitted into the wraith king's army.

PCs staying in the Room too long feel the unholy energy sapping their strength. Every hour spent is the equivalent of a wraith's Constitution drain, requiring a DC 25 Fortitude save, lest they suffer 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The dread wraith king gains temporary hit points from this as if it were his draining touch.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy, Unhallowed

Tactics: Any dead creature found in the dungeon can be placed in this Room, to rise as a wraith 1d6 days later. Casting consecrate on the runes causes them to shut off for 1d4 hours, but greater magic is required to shut it off completely.

N249. DREAD WRAITH LIEUTENANTS'

This room is furnitureless and decorationless, but the intangible shapes of two black figures stand within, facing the only entrance leading inside.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A pair of dread wraiths (hp 169, 162) dwell in this Room. These fiends are totally devoted to the wraith king's cause and attack all living things as soon as they sense their presence. They are eager to please their king and do not share the kill well with others. Should other wraiths join the fray, they become shaken.

Encounter Condition: [Ambush], Concealment, Distracting Noises 9, Fearless

Tactics: If the dread wraiths sense the PCs outside the Room, these dreadful creatures wait for the PC to enter and surprise them. If the PCs never enter, both emerge to attack, striking the first PC they find. So overcome with zeal are they, that they completely lack any tactical acumen, targeting the same PC every time, until he falls.

They wail (almost unconsciously) during the fight, allowing the dread wraith lieutenant in Room N247 a DC 18 Listen check every round to notice. The wraith joins the battle 1d3 rounds thereafter.

N250. DREAD WRAITH COMMANDER

The northern door leading into this Room is locked, requiring a DC 50 Open Lock check is enough to open the door. The southern door is unlocked.

Dreary shadows cast this large and strangely shaped hall in darkness. Amidst the southern nook of the western wall is a massive coffer made out of iron. In the northeast nook is a long lever protruding from a 1-ft.-by-4-ft. groove in the floor. The iron lever is set at a 45-degree angle and points south. The most astonishing thing about the place, however, is the dreadful ghost-like silhouette fluttering about the place.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The wraith king's second in command, a powerful dread wraith (hp 173) claimed this chamber as its own. The commander of the wraith king's army hates all things living and harbors a grudge against the angels that imprisoned its kindred. This powerful undead shares power with its commander-in-chief and bows to no creature but the wraith king itself. It attacks the PCs as soon as they enter its chamber.

This Room holds one of the four intricate mechanisms linked to the powerful force fields in the antechambers opening into Room N159. The lever must be pulled up, requiring a successful DC 20 Strength check. The other three levers can be found in Rooms N175, N199, and N222.

All four must be raised in order to deactivate the force fields.

Encounter Condition: Fear 22, Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 12

Tactics: In combat, the dread wraith commander prefers to charge the beefiest looking opponents first, using its incorporeal touch attack in the hopes of turning the living into minions that would fill the ranks of its monarch's slowly growing army.

Chaotic or evil creatures touching the lever suffer 1d4 negative levels per round they remain in contact. Chaotic evil creatures are destroyed irrevocably with no chance for a save. Caster level 20th.

When the final lever is pulled, the World Eater wakes and a pulse of negative energy blasts through the entire dungeon. See Room N159 Sidebar (page 746) for more information.

Treasure: The iron coffer in this chamber is locked but not trapped. Because the key that unlocks it was lost long ago, a successful DC 30 Open Lock check is required to open it. Inside is a Medium silvery breastplate of electricity resistance.

N251 THROUGH N253. SECRET ENTRANCE

Rooms N251 through N253, as well as Room N261, were originally designed as a secret entrance that allowed the archons and angels in charge of the dungeon to keep an eye on the powerful creatures they had entombed within the region. The secret passage has not been used in centuries and the Rooms leading to it are rigged with powerful traps. Two mighty iron golems also stand watch over the entrance (Room N261).

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Every hour spent in this Section, roll on the chart below.

1d20	Encounter
1–2	A bat swarm, forming a shrieking black cloud over the PCs' heads, flies away from the intruders. The panicked bats use narrow slits and cracks in the room's ceiling to escape.
3–9	Nothing
10–12	Two shield guardians (24 HD) stand guard and attack anything in sight.
13–15	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	☛ Burnt Othur Fumes Trap: CR 14; mechanical; location trigger; repair reset; gas; never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (othur fumes trap), DC 18 Fortitude save resists, 1 Con Drain/3d6 Con; multiple targets (all targets in a 10-ft.-by-10-ft. area); Search DC 38; Disable Device DC 32.
16–18	A potent magic symbol is inscribed upon the wall.
	☛ Maximized Horrid Wilting Trap: CR 16; magical device; automatic reset; spell effect (horrid wilting , 18th-level sorcerer, 108 damage, DC 23 Fortitude save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33.
19–20	Three hellcats (16 HD) set up an Ambush. They are patient, making their presence known at that last possible moment.

N251. TRAPPED SECRET DOOR

The secret door is made from the same smooth stone that makes up the rest of the wall. Minuscule grooves on either side of it can be spotted with a successful DC 30 Search check, revealing that this portion of the wall might have a portal hidden somewhere. The only way to open this door from this chamber is by pressing a tiny hidden button upon the western portion of the north wall. This button can be found with a successful DC 38 Search check. When pressed, a loud grinding sound is heard as the 5-ft. wide by 20-ft. tall panel of the wall sinks into the floor, creating a doorway into Room N239. This door shuts itself off automatically, one minute after it was opened and it is impossible to open it from Room N239. To open the door from the hallway side, the PCs must find the hidden switch in Room N253 and press it.

A potent magical trap was set in the archway of the secret door here. Anyone passing through the doorway with the exception of lawful good creatures automatically triggers the trap, which was designed to prevent the undead imprisoned within to come out of the dungeon, but allow the archons and angels who designed the place to venture into it as they pleased.

☛ Maximized Incendiary Cloud Trap: CR 15; magical device; location trigger; automatic reset; spell effect (incendiary cloud, 15th-level wizard; 9d6 points/round for 15 rounds, DC 24 Reflex save half damage); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33. This trap combines the effect of four maximized incendiary cloud spells cast simultaneously.

There is a massive tomb carved out from dark stone in the middle of this chamber. The heavy lid of this tomb is sculpted to roughly depict a powerful-looking angelic warrior wearing breastplate armor and bearing a long shield. The bony remains of what appears to have been a troll lie at the feet of the western wall, a large glaive made out of rusty metal in its skeletal hands.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room was designed to trick intruders into thinking the only thing of value here was the tomb. In truth, the tomb's treasure is practically worthless and the most important aspect of the chamber is the secret door in the center of the west wall.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The stone sarcophagus is trapped with a simple mechanism made to trick robbers into thinking they found an important treasure. As soon as the lid of the tomb is moved, four arrows shoot out from the massive stone base of the sarcophagus.

☛ Poisoned Arrow Trap: CR 15; mechanical; touch trigger; manual reset; Atk +26 range (1d6/x3 plus poison, arrow); multiple targets (four arrows targeting the nearest creatures); poison (black lotus extract, Fortitude save 20 resists, 3d6 Con/3d6 Con); Search DC 31; Disable Device DC 24.

The sarcophagus contains a pile of gray ashes, which are undoubtedly the remains of the creature entombed in it. Upon these ashes are a magnificent golden girdle depicting a lion's head (worth 450 gp), a +1 throwing axe made of gold (worth twice as much as similar weapons of this quality), as well as a thick golden bracelet with a fiery red jewel in the center (worth 385 gp).

The glaive from the skeletal remains is of masterwork quality.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add power word kill to the incendiary cloud trap. To decrease the challenge, assume the incendiary cloud trap is not maximized.

N252. TRAPPED ANTEROOM

The door upon the eastern wall is locked. If picked (see Room N261 for additional information), it can be pushed opened with a successful DC 25 Strength check. The door on the west wall is unlocked and not trapped.

Aside from the undisturbed layer of dust covering the crushed skeletal remains upon the floor, there is nothing remarkable about this room. The broken bones, however, are neatly piled and form an almost straight line in the center of the chamber, as if marking the way from the eastern door to the western one.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: It is clear that no one has entered this Room in decades. The entire Room is trapped with a powerful crushing wall mechanism that activates itself two rounds after anyone enters the Room.

♣ Crushing Wall Trap: CR 18; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; no attack roll required (26d6, crush); multiple targets (all targets within the room); Search DC 36; Disable Device 30.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: PCs who succeed at a DC 18 Search check find an undamaged silvered dagger, a small piece of amber (worth 35 gp), and 34 gp scattered among the bones in the middle of the Room.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, raise the damage dealt by the crushing wall trap to 32d6. To decrease the challenge, lower the crushing wall trap's damage to 20d6.

N253. HIDDEN SECRET BUTTON

This room is dark and void of furniture and decoration, but there is a narrow door on the south wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The door on the south wall of this chamber leads to a small cubicle. In the center of the eastern wall of this cubicle is a tiny button, which matches the smooth surface of the wall almost flawlessly. A successful DC 32 Search check is needed to spot this button, which can be pushed to open the secret wall panel leading to Room N251. Once this button is activated the secret door connecting Rooms N239 with N251 sinks into the floor for two full minutes before raising back up into place. Passing through the archway of this secret panel triggers the magical trap, as detailed in Room N251.

N254 THROUGH N260. SEALED TOMBS

The Section south of the hidden entrance (Room N251), contains several tombs holding lesser undead creatures. These tombs, sealed by the angels that built the dungeon long ago, are impossible to open from within and the creatures imprisoned in them remain trapped to this day.

Unlike the areas of this region ruled by great undead lords, this section of the dungeon is relatively safe — provided, of course, the PCs do not tamper with the sealed tombs. If they do, they awaken the living dead trapped within.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter every two hours.

1d20	Encounter
1	A skeleton sits, its back against a wall. As the PCs approach, its skull falls to the ground and rolls around at their feet. The sound of the bony skull hitting the ground echoes through the Section. Echoes 6.
2–12	Nothing
13–14	Five wraiths (loyal to the wraith king, Room N240) journeyed out of their lair to patrol these grounds. These fiends attack anything that crosses their paths. Desecration 2.
15	Six allip servants of Kasteoficiss (Room N191) patrol the tombs to make sure they remain undisturbed. They attack the PCs on sight. Unhallowed 2.
16	Two shield guardians (24 HD), the creations of the lich lord Invistis, patrol this Section. Their orders are to take one of the sealed coffins in Room N260 and bring it back to their master, who hopes to find a way to bind whatever lies inside into servitude.
17	A crazed allip haunts this Room. This creature craves attention, desperate to engage the PCs. Unfortunately, it lost the ability to process its thoughts into words and utter incomprehensible gibberish. Unless the PCs find a way to communicate, it becomes enraged and attacks. Unhallowed 4
18–19	An ancient mechanical grate filled with spikes stands in the shadows of the high ceiling, ready to fall upon whoever sets foot under it.
20	♣ Grate Trap: CR 15; mechanical; location trigger; repair reset; grate moves down (15d6, crush); multiple targets (all targets in a 10-ft. by 10-ft. area); never miss; onset delay (1 round); Search DC 34; Disable Device 30. This area is oppressive. This condition follows the PCs, no matter where they go. These conditions continue until they encounter something else. Distracting Noises 8, Echoes 6, Negative Energy.

N254. WIDE ILLUMINATED HALLWAY

The great door on the north side of this hallway is cast in bronze. It is locked with an intricate mechanism that only the most cunning and ambitious thieves can pick. Three DC 40 Open Lock checks are required to unlock this door and if any check fails, all three lock again and the process is repeated.

The flames from ten torches set upon sconces in the wall waver as the light cast from them illuminates enough of the hallway to determine it is empty.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: If the PCs successfully unlock the door, but do not keep it open, the door slams shut and locks, requiring someone to pick the locks again.

Encounter Condition: Fear 22, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 16

Tactics: The threat of evil is heavy here, making the PCs anxious to leave.

Treasure: The torches are imbued with continual flame, but radiate evil, having been corrupted by the taint of this Region.

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N255. FIRST CRYPT

The locking mechanisms of these doors are simple, but the iron inside them is heavily rusted, making each lock difficult to work. Anyone using thieves' tools to pick open one of these locks must apply greater than normal strength and succeed at a DC 30 Reflex save immediately after attempting the Open Lock check regardless or the tool breaks inside the lock, preventing further attempts at unlocking the door. If the door was successfully unlocked, however, it can be opened normally.

The thick odor of dust hits as soon as the door to this vault is opened. Inside, there is a coffin made out of a strange sepia-shaded alloy. A thick gray dust blankets the floor and coffin, which are large enough to hold a pair of giants.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The 15-ft. wide coffin holds a wight horde (hp 480). This tomb is neatly sealed with mortar and is impossible for the creatures trapped within to escape. PCs must succeed at a DC 26 Strength check to remove the lid of the coffin, not because it is especially heavy but rather because it is sealed tightly. When the coffin lid is lifted, the wight horde climbs out of the pit.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Unhallowed 11

Tactics: Once released, it takes 1d3 round for the front rank of the horde to reach any targets, as they must first climb out. The unarmed horde attacks the PCs, concentrating on the closest one until he is either dead or moves out of range.

Treasure: One of these wights was entombed with a bag of holding (type III), its contents lost to the astral plane. The bag is made of gray wool and a simple black leather strap is used to close it. It is in perfect condition.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, reduce the time it takes for the wight horde to leap from the tomb to 1 round (Ambush). To decrease the challenge, increase the time it takes for the wight horde to leap from the tomb to 1d4+1 rounds.

✦ Wight Horde: CR 16; Medium undead (horde); HD 120d12; hp 480; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 15, touch 11, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +2; Grp +3; Atk +90 melee (5d4+5 plus energy drain, slams); Full Atk +90 melee (5d4+5 plus energy drain, slams); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA Create spawn, energy drain; SQ Damage reduction 5/bludgeoning, darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, undead traits; AL LE; SV Fort +1, Ref +2, Will +5; Str 12, Dex 12, Con —, Int 11, Wis 13, Cha 15.

Skills and Feats: Hide +8, Listen +7, Move Silently +16, Spot +7; Alertness, Blind-Fight.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a wight becomes a wight in 1d4 rounds. Spawn are under the command of the wight that created them and remain enslaved until its death. They do not possess any of the abilities they had in life.

Energy Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a wight's slam attack gain one negative level. The DC is 18 for the Fortitude save to remove a negative level. The save DC is Charisma-based. For each such negative level bestowed, the wight horde gains 5 temporary hit points.

Skills: Wights have a +8 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

N256. SECOND CRYPT

Both doors leading to this crypt are locked and require a DC 45 Open Lock check to open.

This chamber smells of dust and old age. A wide tomb — some fifteen feet square — fashioned from a dull brown metallic alloy dominates covering most of the floor area.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The large coffin in this Room holds a ghoulish horde (hp 390). The 5-ft. high tomb is sealed and a DC 26 Strength check is required to unseal and open its surprisingly light lid. If the PCs have not been attacked in one of these crypts yet, allow the ghoulish horde to ambush the PCs.

Encounter Condition: [Ambush]

Tactics: When their tomb is unsealed, the horde climbs out and attacks the PCs. They fight messily, tearing and cutting at everyone. The horde surrounds the PCs if possible, changing up their formation to suit the Room. Due to their size they cannot all fit in the Room at once and pour forth in a whirlwind of chaos.

Treasure: One of the ghouls wears a golden circlet upon its head (worth 90 gp). Another has a tarnished silvered dagger planted in one of its ribs. And a third wears a ring of clumsiness.

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the ghoulish horde's hit point total to +780. To decrease the challenge, reduce the horde's hit point total by -200.

✦ Ghoul Horde: CR 14; Medium undead (horde); HD 60d12; hp 390; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 14, touch 12, flat-footed 12; Base Atk +30; Grp +35; Atk +31 melee (5d6+5 plus paralysis, bites); Full Atk +31 melee (5d6+9 plus paralysis, bites and claws); Space/Reach 20 ft./5 ft.; SA Ghoul fever, paralysis; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., horde traits, undead traits, +2 turn resistance; AL CE; SV Fort +0, Ref +2, Will +5; Str 13, Dex 15, Con —, Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Balance +6, Climb +5, Hide +6, Jump +5, Move Silently +6, Spot +7; Multiattack.

Ghoul Fever (Su): Disease-bite, Fortitude DC 16, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d3 Con and 1d3 Dex. The save DC is Charisma-based. An afflicted humanoid who dies of ghoul fever rises as a ghoul at the next midnight. A humanoid who becomes a ghoul in this way retains none of the abilities it possessed in life. It is not under the control of any other ghouls, but it hungers for the flesh of the living and behaves like a normal ghoul in all respects. A humanoid of 4 Hit Dice or more rises as a ghoul, not a ghoul.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a ghoul's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 16 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Elves have immunity to this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

N257. THIRD CRYPT

Both doors leading to this crypt are locked and require a DC 40 Open Lock check to unlock.

The stench of decay is nauseating as the door to this chamber opens. Within the dark crypt is a massive coffin made from a dark brown alloy, buried in the floor. The eight-foot square coffin takes up most of the room, but stands only three-foot tall. The sound of claws scratching on stone cuts through the tense air.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Buried in the ground is a single coffin, its lid shut tight. The coffin contains twenty ghosts (hp 55 each). A DC 26 Strength check is needed to open the light but sealed lid; an action that releases the ghosts and their dreadful stench. Once the lid is opened, the prisoner ghosts can leap out and attack the PCs.

Encounter Condition: Fear 16, Stagnant Air, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: Once the coffin opens, three ghosts can climb out in a single round. They claw and fight their way out of the unholy tomb, trying to kill everything in sight. They fight like animals, clawing and biting anything that moves.

If given a chance, two ghosts use their weight and leverage to pull a single PC into the 40 ft. deep coffin, where maneuverability is nil and they can ravage helpless foes. If more than one ghost pulls a PC into the crypt, it gains a +4 circumstance bonus to the Strength check (as if bull rushing). Each additional ghost increases this bonus by +2. No more than three ghosts can pull a PC into the coffin.

If a PC falls in, assume he hits 1d6 ghosts on the way down and suffers 3d6 damage from the fall. Each ghost struck suffers 1d4 damage, unless the PC has spiked armor or something similar. They attack the PCs without hesitation, striking at random.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, replace the ghosts with eight dread wraiths. To decrease the challenge, remove eight ghosts.

✦ Ghost: CR 4; Medium undead; HD 8d12+3; hp 55; Init +3; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 13, flat-footed 14; Base Atk +4; Grp +7; Atk +7 melee (1d8+3 plus paralysis, bite); Full Atk +7 melee (1d8+3 plus paralysis, bite) and +5 melee (1d4+1 plus paralysis, 2 claws); SA Ghoul fever, paralysis, stench; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., undead traits, +2 turn resistance; AL CE; SV Fort +2, Ref +5, Will +7; Str 17, Dex 17, Con —, Int 13, Wis 14, Cha 17.

Skills and Feats: Balance +9, Climb +11, Hide +10, Jump +11, Move Silently +10, Spot +10; Multiattack, Power Attack, Toughness.

Ghoul Fever (Su): Disease-bite, Fortitude DC 15, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d3 Con and 1d3 Dex. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Paralysis (Ex): Those hit by a ghost's bite or claw attack must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or be paralyzed for 1d4+1 rounds. Even elves can be affected by this paralysis. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Stench (Ex): The stink of death and corruption surrounding these creatures is overwhelming. Living creatures within 10 ft. must succeed on a DC 15 Fortitude save or be sickened for 1d6+4 minutes. A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same ghost's stench for 24 hours. A delay poison or neutralize poison spell removes the effect from a sickened creature. Creatures with immunity to poison are unaffected, and creatures resistant to poison receive their normal bonus on their saving throws. The save DC is Charisma-based.

N258. FOURTH CRYPT

Both doors leading to this crypt are locked and require a DC 40 Open Lock check to open.

A tomb dominates this vault. Fashioned from a metallic substance of a dull brown shade, this coffin is six feet high and almost twelve square feet in diameter.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The coffin in this Room holds eight lamia zombies (hp 131 each) and is sealed with a thick layer of cement, wedging its lid tight. The PCs must succeed at a DC 26 Strength check to open the coffin's lid, which releases a puff of gray dust into the air. PCs within 10 ft. of the lid must succeed at a DC 20 Reflex save or become blinded for 1d4 rounds by the dust. The lamia zombies are hostile and attack as soon as they are freed from their centuries-old imprisonment, taking advantage of blinded PCs. Each round, two lamia zombies climb out.

Encounter Condition: Fearless, Stagnant Air, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: These mindless lamia zombies attack the closest PC as soon as the seal from their tomb is broken. They gang up on one target, concentrating their attacks on a single PC, preferring blinded ones. Once the target is dead (or out of the zombies' reach), they attack another PC.

Treasure: One of the lamia zombies wears a simple gold chain (worth 35 gp), set with a golembane scarab in the form of a closed fist. The scarab is intricately fashioned from gold and mithral. Upon the back of the tiny fist is a barely noticeable rune. Anyone reading Infernal recognizes the symbol (which means golembane).

EL: 9

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add six lamia zombies. To decrease the challenge, remove two.

✦ Lamia Zombie: CR 5; Large undead; HD 18d12+3; hp 131; Init +1; Spd 60 ft. (can't run); AC 21, touch 10, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +9; Grp +18; Atk +13 melee (1d6+5/19–20, large dagger) or +13 melee (1d8+5, slam); Space/Reach 10 ft./5 ft.; SA —; SQ single actions only, damage reduction 5/slashing, darkvision 60 ft., undead traits; AL NE; SV Fort +6, Ref +7, Will +11; Str 20, Dex 13, Con —, Int —, Wis 10, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Toughness.

Single Actions Only (Ex): Zombies have poor reflexes and can perform only a single move action or attack action each round. A zombie can move up to its speed and attack in the same round, but only if it attempts a charge.

N259. INCINERATORS

The dancing flames of two large fires burning in the wide alcoves upon the east wall bathe this hallway in an eerie blue light. The warmth of the fires would be comforting and a welcome change to the cold stone that make up the region were it not for the fact that they are so intense they burn right through unprotected flesh.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The angel creators of the dungeon made the fires that burn within the alcove of the east wall, and their magical bluish flames continue to dance and sizzle to this day. Treat each of these mighty bonfires as a permanent wall of fire cast by an 18th-level wizard. Because of the sheer intensity of the flames, any creature traveling in this corridor takes 2d4 points of damage every round.

Encounter Condition: Extreme Heat, Fear 15

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

N260. TREASURE VAULT

The door leading to this chamber is locked and a successful DC 30 Open Lock check is required to open it.

The walls, floor, and ceiling of this chamber are a deep red shade reminiscent of humanoid blood. A large stone altar lies in the middle of the room, a thin purple velvet shroud covers a large item.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is a false treasure vault. While the shroud is valuable, the armor is cursed and the rest of the accouterments in the Room are gilded.

Encounter Condition: Fear 20, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The purple velvet shroud on the stone altar is nicely made and in good shape. It was made by one of the angels who designed the dungeon and it does not suffer from the effects of time. It is large enough to wrap the body of a Medium humanoid for burial. Most clergymen and nobles planning their funerals would pay upwards of 500 gp for such an item.

Wrapped inside this shroud is a suit of silvery plate mail in perfect condition. This is a cursed armor of rage.

EL: N/A

N261. IRON GOLEMS' GUARD POST

The door leading to Room N252 is locked and trapped; the key destroyed ages ago. A success DC 35 Open Lock check is required to unlock it and the door is so massive the PCs must succeed at a DC 25 Strength check in order to pull it open.

However, the massive ring at the center of the door is smeared with contact poison that has (mysteriously) never spoiled from age. Because the door must be pulled opened using this ring, anyone attempting to open the door automatically comes in contact with the poison.

◆ Ring Covered in Black Lotus Extract: CR 12; mechanical; location trigger (attached); no reset; poison (DC 20 Fortitude save resists, 3d6 Con/0); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 30.

The crude shape of what look like two powerfully built giants in heavy iron armor of various shades stand on either side of an archway. Like a pair of forgotten guards, these statues keep a silent vigil over the large bronze door in the middle of the thick arch amidst the dull gray stone of the wall. The signs of old age are rampant upon the metal of the statues: Rust is apparent on all the joints of the colorful metallic plates making up the gigantic humanoid shaped armor; cracks can be seen on the thighs and chests of the iron figures; and several dents mark the forearms and shields of the statues. In addition to the round shield and long spear that they hold, each of the statues wears a metallic armor that scintillates when light shines upon it. The features of their faces are hidden under thick helmets that have no openings.

The bronze door between the statues has a large ring in its center and a small keyhole just above it.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Two iron golems (hp 171, 157) guard this entrance. They stand unmoving, like great statues of ancient warriors, until a creature disturbs the bronze door.

Encounter Condition: Deep Darkness, Fearless

Tactics: The iron golems attack the PCs as soon as one of them touches the door. These mindless creatures use their poisonous breath weapon against the PCs before closing into melee. They use their powerful slam attacks against the closest opponent with no particular target in mind.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two iron golems. To decrease the challenge, reduce the iron golems Hit Dice to 18.

◆ Iron Golem: CR 15; Large construct; HD 24d10+30; hp 171, 157; Init -1; Spd 20 ft.; AC 30, touch 8, flat-footed 30; Base Atk +18; Grp +36; Atk +31 melee (2d10+13, slam); Full Atk +31 melee (2d10+13, 2 slams); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon; SQ Construct traits, damage reduction 15/adamantine, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to magic, low-light vision; AL N; SV Fort +8, Ref +7, Will +8; Str 36, Dex 9, Con —, Int —, Wis 11, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: —.

Breath Weapon (Su): 10-ft. cube, cloud of poisonous gas lasting 1 round, free action once every 1d4+1 rounds; initial damage 1d4 Con, secondary damage 3d4 Con. DC 22 Fortitude save negates. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Immunity to Magic (Ex): An iron golem is immune to any spell or spell-like ability that allows spell resistance. In addition, certain spells and effects function differently against the creature, as noted below.

A magical attack that deals electricity damage slows an iron golem (as the slow spell) for 3 rounds, with no saving throw.

A magical attack that deals fire damage breaks any slow effect on the golem and heals 1 point of damage for each 3 points of damage the attack would otherwise deal. If the amount of healing would cause the golem to exceed its full normal hit points, it gains any excess as temporary hit points. For example, an iron golem hit by a fireball gains back 6 hit points if the damage total is 18 points. An iron golem gets no saving throw against fire effects.

An iron golem is affected normally by rust attacks, such as that of a rust monster or a rusting grasp spell.

N262 THROUGH N265. FALSE TOMB

Rooms N262 through N265 were designed to fool creatures into believing they had stumbled upon an important tomb. In truth, this entrance leads nowhere and Rooms are rigged with powerful traps designed to kill would-be intruders. DMs are encouraged to add whatever layers of traps he sees fit, even having the traps reset automatically if necessary.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter every hour spent in the false tomb.

1d20	Encounter
1	Wind blows from a small crack high above the PCs. The howling wind reminds the PCs of a ghostly moan, but poses no threat to them. Drafty.
2–10	Nothing, or a lethal trap.
11–12	An obvious glyph of warding (blast) is on the wall, detailing a previously triggered trap.
13–14	A trio of greater shadows has followed the PCs, ambushing them from behind. They attack mercilessly, bringing a foul taint with them everywhere they go. Unhallowed 6.
15–16	A spectre (14 HD) ventured into this Room long ago. It considers it home and attacks anyone trespassing. Desecration 4.
17–18	The PCs stumble upon a trap. ◆ Poisoned Floor Spikes Trap: CR 15; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; onset delay (1 round); Atk +22 melee (1d4 spikes per target for 1d8+4 plus poison, spike); multiple targets (all targets in a 10-ft. by 10-ft. area); poison (giant wasp, DC 18 Fortitude save resists, 1d6 Dex/1d6 Dex); Search DC 35; Disable Device DC 32.
19–20	Heaps of dead bodies. All manner of races litter the Room, killed by some lethal, unseen trap. They appear to be grave robbers and looters.

N262. TRAPPED ANTEROOM

The door leading to Room N263 is locked, but not trapped. A successful DC 30 Open Lock check is required to unlock it.

This room is devoid of light, furniture, and decoration. Aside from the doors set in the east and west wall, there are no interesting features in this place.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This Room contains a powerful magical trap, which is activated as soon as anyone steps within a 10-ft. by 10-ft. tile in the center of the Room. The only way to avoid this trap is to maneuver around it; something that can easily be done as long as the PCs move in single file on the edge of the east and west wall.

♣ Wide-Mouth Pit Trap with Poisonous Spikes: CR 16; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; DC 31 Reflex save avoids; 120-ft. deep (12d6, fall); multiple targets (all targets within a 10-ft. by 10-ft. area); pit spikes (Atk +22 melee, 1d4 spikes per target for 1d4+5 plus poison each); wyvern poison (DC 17 Fortitude save resists, 2d6 Con/2d6 Con); Search DC 24; Disable Device DC 22.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: At the bottom of the pit trap are the carcasses of several humanoids that died here long ago. Scattered among the remains are a handcrafted bone dagger with ancient tribal designs upon the blade (which functions as a masterwork dagger that causes 1d3 points of piercing damage) worth 500 gp to any gnoll but only a couple of gold coins to anyone else; a masterwork hand axe in dire need of repair; a rotted leather jerkin, now completely useless; and a total of 381 gp in assorted coins and gems.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, make the Search DC and Disable Device DC of the wide-mouth pit trap 30 each. To decrease the challenge, ignore the wyvern poison on the trap.

N263. ANCIENT FUNERAL CHAMBER

A wide dais, about three feet high, dominates the center of this funeral chamber. Upon the stone elevation is a tarnished copper sarcophagus. The surface of the item is surprisingly well polished and still reflects light when it is cast upon it, but a thin layer of dust settled over its heavy lid.

In the center of the west wall, in silvered letters, are the words: "Grave Robbers Beware" written in celestial.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The sarcophagus is a simple rectangular stone box with rounded corners. It bares no unusual features and its lid can be pushed aside with a successful DC 18 Strength check.

As soon as the lid from the sarcophagus is opened, a potent gas is released from inside it. This substance fills the entire Room in one round and affects everyone in it.

♣ Burnt Othur Fumes Trap: CR 13; mechanical; touch trigger; repair reset; gas; multiple targets (all targets within the room); never miss; onset delay (1 round); poison (burnt othur fumes, DC 18 Fortitude save avoids, 1 Con drain/3d6 Con); Search DC 30; Disable Device DC 32.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: This sarcophagus holds an ancient bronze masterwork breastplate armor, which only needs a little polishing, but unfortunately nothing else.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add incendiary cloud to the burnt othur fumes trap. To decrease the challenge, replace the trap's burnt othur fumes with ogre dust.

N264. FIRST DEMONIC CRYPT

This tiny room holds an impressive number of black and deep purple colored bones, which are neatly stacked upon one another. The loathsome skeletal remains cover the entire lengths of the walls here, and several skulls with demonic shapes can be picked out as well.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: When the dungeon was first built, a group of babaus and dretchs rebelled against the angelic armies protecting it. Some escaped, but the leaders of the rebellion were destroyed, and their remains were stacked in Rooms N264 and N265.

After the angels piled up the demon's bones, they placed magical traps upon them. This trap is activated as soon as anyone touches the bones. It cannot be reset nor bypassed.

♣ Enervating Trap: CR 17; spell; spell trigger; no reset; spell effect (waves of exhaustion, 18th-level wizard, no save); multiple spell effects (energy drain, 18th-level wizard, DC 24 Fortitude save partial); multiple targets (all targets within a 60-ft. long cone shaped burst centered upon the bones that were disturbed); Search DC 32; Disable Device DC 32.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: There is nothing of value in this Room, but 4d4 skulls and bone fragments might be sold to practitioners of the arcane for a 2d8 gp each.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add finger of death to the enervating trap. To decrease the challenge, assume that only the closest PC is targeted by the trap.

N265. SECOND DEMONIC CRYPT

Dark skulls and bones from various demons cover the walls of this small crypt.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: These are the remains of various dretch and babau demons that fight the angels ages ago.

Like the bones in Room N264, the remains in this Room are enchanted with a spell-effect that is triggered as soon as anyone touches them. This spell only affects the creature touching the bones.

♣ Power Word Blind Trap: CR 14; spell; spell trigger; no reset; spell effect (power word blind, 18th-level wizard, no save); Search DC 33; Disable Device DC 33. This trap combines the effects of eight power word blind spells, each targeting a different creature.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: 14

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add power word stun to each power word blind effect. To decrease the challenge, have only two creatures targeted by the power word blind trap.

REGION Q. HALLS OF ICE AND STONE

The furthest reaches of the complex were never intended to be part of the celestials' dungeon. Beneath the rocky foothills at the base of a mighty peak, a system of naturally occurring caves cut their way through both ice and earth. Over the years, these caverns served as homes for many and varied creatures, from packs of loathsome winter wolves to enormous frost worms. For a time, the caves were even occupied by a fringe cult of humans and humanoids who worshiped a now-forgotten god of elemental ice. Whether the celestials knew of this place when they built their dungeon in such proximity is unclear; surely even if they did, it was of no concern to them. The complexes were separated by thick walls of stone and magical wards.

Until, that is, the first of the quakes hit. The tremors shook the earth, tore the roots from the mountain, and the barriers between the dungeon and the caverns crumbled like bread crusts.

Slowly at first, but in ever increasing numbers, the prisoners and inhabitants of the dungeon awoke to the truth that a new flaw had been introduced into the celestials' grand design. If they could make their way there, they might be able to grasp their freedom at long last.

Fortunately for the outside world, something else got there first. Two good-aligned titans, brothers named Barcellus and Breysus, began receiving dreams and even waking visions of the celestials' dungeon, and of the new threat it posed to the surrounding area. Whence these portents and warnings came, the brothers never knew; perhaps they were sent by some higher power who had not forgotten the dungeon as the rest of the world had, or even by some of the celestial guards who remained within. Ultimately, it didn't matter. The titans knew that someone had to stand guard over the dungeon, lest the vile inhabitants escape. They uprooted themselves, bidding farewell to the lives they had known, and made their homes here. Barcellus made himself comfortable in the caves of ice, keeping constant watch on the new exit. Breysus chose to guard the main entrance to the dungeon, in case the quakes had weakened it as well; it was his long-dead body that the PCs may have run across so long ago.

For centuries more, the titans stood their post, ensuring that no one escaped. Few creatures made it as far as the exit from the caverns, and Barcellus ensured that no one survived to take advantage of it. It was a hard, lonely existence, but a necessary one.

Some decades ago, it all changed.

In the mountains near the complex dwelt the Red Ice tribe, a powerful clan of frost giants. Led by Jardarir, chieftain and high priest of The Aspect of Winter — the elemental power of ice and war, who may even be the same power worshiped long ago in these selfsame caverns — the Red Ice conquered many of the surrounding lands. Eventually, through powerful divinations and investigation of local legends, Jardarir learned of the celestials' dungeon, and of the titan guarding it. And Jardarir devised a plan.

The giant cleric realized that, mighty as he was, he would be more powerful still with a wealth of magical riches and an army of the vilest creatures under his command. If he could wrest control of the exit from the titan, he could bargain with potential escapees, trading them their freedom for any wealth they might have acquired from others in the dungeon, and for vows of fealty and service to his clan.

Barcellus was a mighty foe, but between the Red Ice's overwhelming numbers and the mighty magics and Jardarir's command, even he was overcome. The frost giant chieftain did not slay the titan, for fear that the guardian's death might be sensed by other celestial or outer planar beings. Instead, with the power of a miracle, he imprisoned the titan deep in a block of ice where he remains, physically trapped and mystically helpless. The Red Ice Tribe took over the catacombs, and Jardarir took on the name Barcellus, allowing others to believe the titan still stood watch.

Unfortunately for Jardarir, his plan has not worked particularly well. Few inhabitants of the dungeon have managed to reach the complex of ice, and most of those that have were unwilling to bargain and had to be destroyed. The Red Ice has gained a few magical items to add to their horde, but little else. Still, Jardarir is not about to give up; even one powerful ally gained from his efforts would make them worthwhile, and anyway the Red Ice have settled nicely into their new home.

Of course, the tribe does not control the entirety of the complex. Wild monsters, escaped slaves, and even a hideous fiend from deep in the dungeon have their own lairs, areas the Red Ice giants have not yet managed to acquire. It is through this chaotic and violent region the PCs must pass if they would regain their freedom. Their final challenge is upon them — and only the bravest and most skilled have even a slim hope of besting it.

TEMPERATURE AND ENVIRONMENT

The entirety of Region P is severely cold (below freezing). An unprotected character must make a Fortitude save once every 10 minutes (DC 15, +1 per previous check), taking 1d6 points of nonlethal damage on each failed save. A character who has the Survival skill may receive a bonus on this saving throw and may be able to apply this bonus to other characters as well (see the skill description). Characters wearing winter clothing only need check once per hour for cold and exposure damage.

A character who takes any nonlethal damage from cold or exposure is beset by frostbite or hypothermia (treat her as fatigued). These penalties end when the character recovers the nonlethal damage she took from the cold and exposure.

MAGIC AND TRANSPORTATION

Although Region P was not intended as part of the celestials' dungeon, proximity with the prison complex for so many millennia has altered the very nature of the region, as the nearby magics seeped into the very rock. As with the dungeon itself, Region P is not penetrable by teleport or any other transportation or plane-traveling magics. Individuals may use such spells to travel within the complex, but they may not use them to enter or leave the complex. This is why several individuals, such as the ice devil Ketochrensus (see SubRegion P-D) remain trapped here, rather than having fled back to their native planes.

01 THROUGH 09. FUGITIVE ENCAMPMENT

Decades ago, when the Red Ice Tribe moved into these caverns, they enslaved an enclave of bugbears. Though they have captured other slaves in the years since, both from within the dungeon and from the surface, the majority of their slaves are still members of this bugbear tribe.

Recently, however, a small band of those bugbears, led by a powerful warrior named Guruch, managed to escape from the giants. Unable to wind through to the exit, and unwilling to brave the dangers of the dungeon, they have holed up here. Though eager to find a way to defeat, or at least get past, the giants, the bugbears are too xenophobic to ally with outsiders, and do not want to cooperate with the party.

This Section has no random encounters.

01. OPEN CAVERN

Streaks of filthy ice run down the walls of this wide cavern. Frost-covered dirt crunches underfoot, sending miniscule particles up into the air. The earth here has clearly been disturbed, quite recently and by either a great many creatures, or a few very large ones. Sounds echo strangely, growing louder toward the cavern's narrower side. The chamber appears to be empty of living beings, though it is difficult to see to the far side, or into the various nooks and crannies.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cavern is empty of living creatures when the PCs first arrive. Anyone with the Track feat (with a DC 15 Survival check) interprets the disturbed earth and realizes that a number of definitively large creatures were present within the past several days. A DC 30 Survival check reveals them as giant tracks and a DC 40 Survival check reveals them as frost giant. A patrol of ten frost giants (hp 176, 164, 161, 149, 140, 135, 129, 111, 103, 99) makes occasional forays into this area, in search of small groups of slaves they can capture and take back to the tribe. When the PCs first enter this Room — and every 15 minutes thereafter, for so long as they remain in this Room — roll 1d20. On a 1–4, the patrol arrives. They have no interest in communicating with the characters and attack immediately. While they normally wish to take slaves alive, the giants recognize the PCs as dangerous, and so fight to kill.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The giants surround the party, in hopes of flanking them. They also remain at a distance of 10 ft., keeping them out of the range of most of the PCs' weapons. Because the giants have so little room to maneuver at the eastern end of the cavern, they block the PCs from moving in that direction. Several charge around behind the PCs, even if it draws attacks of opportunity.

Treasure: These giants have no treasure on them, as Jardarir insists on holding most of the wealth for the clan, and these particular giants do not have their own magical equipment.

EL: N/A or 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 levels of fighter or barbarian to each of the giants. To decrease the challenge, reduce the number of giants to 6.

✦ Frost Giant: CR 9; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+70; hp 176, 164, 161, 149, 140, 135, 129, 111, 103, 99; Init –1; Spd 40 ft.; AC 21, touch 8, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +10; Grp +23; Atk +18 melee (3d6+13/x3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, slam) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Full Atk +18/+13 melee (3d6+13/x3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, 2 slams) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rock throwing; SQ Immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 29, Dex 9, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Craft (any one) +6, Intimidate +6, Jump +17, Spot +12; Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Overrun, Improved Sunder, Power Attack.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

02. SYMBOLS AND CARVINGS

Though they are difficult to see in ambient light, numerous symbols have been carved into the wall of this niche in the cavern. In fact, it appears as though the marks have been altered numerous times.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Anyone who speaks Dwarf or Goblin recognizes these marks. They are a corruption of the Dwarven alphabet used by goblinoid races. The markings don't actually spell anything, however; they appear to be used symbolically. The alterations of the symbols follow a pattern. It appears as though a symbol was written, then altered, then re-carved back to the way it was originally, then altered again, and so forth.

In fact, these symbols are used by the bugbears to indicate to any of their brethren who might also escape that this is a safe place. When the giants come by, they alter the symbols to signal danger in hopes that the new escapees do not stay here, but instead wander back into the giants' clutches. The bugbears repair the damage when they discover it, the giants deface it again, etc., etc.

Not every carving here is entirely symbolic, however. A DC 25 Search check reveals that one small block of carvings is in fact buttons carefully fitted into the stone. Pushing all five of these buttons deactivates the trap in Room O3 for five minutes, or until the lever in Room O4 is pushed, whichever comes first.

Treasure: N/A

03. A SHARP TURN

The hall turns to the left here, where it swiftly comes to a dead end. The passage continues forward as well, but narrows dramatically as it does so, to a width of little more than 5 ft.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Although the giants are too large to squeeze through here, the bugbears have nevertheless set up a nasty blade and spear trap. It is triggered the instant anyone starts down either fork — either south or east — and affects everyone standing in the area.

♣ Blade and Spear Trap: CR 10; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; numerous blades and spears jut and launch from hidden niches throughout the chamber and surrounding halls (12d8, piercing and slashing); multiple targets (all targets from the south wall marked Room O3 to the north wall); never miss; Search DC 29; Disable Device DC 29.

Treasure: If the PCs really want to, they can take some of these spears with them when they leave. They were created for the trap and aren't balanced for use as normal weapons, so they apply a -1 circumstance penalty to attack rolls if used in combat. They are worth only 1 gp each, perhaps twice that to a collector of unusual weaponry. Up to a dozen of them are salvageable in this manner.

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the damage of the blade and spear trap to 14d8 and the Search and Disable Device DCs by +3. To decrease the challenge, reduce the damage of the trap to 10d8 and decrease the Search and Disable Device DCs by -3.

04. GUARD POST

If the PCs make a substantial racket up to this point, either by fighting the giant patrol in Room O1 or triggering the trap in Room O3, the guard posted in this room hears them coming. Otherwise, roll a Listen check for the guard to see if he detects them. Should he hear the PCs coming, he blows a horn and retreats to Room O5.

Read the following only under these circumstances.

As you proceed down the hall from the intersection with the trap, a loud blast — perhaps from a trumpet — echoes from the passages ahead of you. Even as the reverberations fade, you hear footsteps. Though difficult to tell with all the echoes, they sound as though they are moving in a direction away from you.

Once the PCs reach the end of the hall, read the following.

The hallway widens here, allowing access to a small chamber to the south, and a larger cavern ahead of you. You hear bustling sounds up ahead.

If the guard did not detect the PCs, and is still in the side corridor, read the following.

In the chamber to your left, staring at you with wide eyes is a shaggy creature clad in armor and furs. Even as you spot it, it releases a loud blast of sound from a primitive horn it holds to its lips.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A single bugbear guard (hp 63) is normally stationed here. His position is at the very southeast tip of the chamber marked O4. His duty is not to fight, though he does so if he must in order to protect himself. His job instead is to blow his horn and alert the others if he detects the arrival of newcomers, or any other sign of danger. He is not prepared to bargain or parley; the bugbears here simply have too many enemies, and have suffered too much, to trust strangers under any circumstances.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the guard detects the PCs coming, as described above, he instantly blows his horn and then retreats to Room O5 to join his companions. If he does not hear them beforehand, he blows his horn the instant they come into view (or earlier, as he sees the glow from any light source they carry at least a few seconds before the characters themselves become visible). Under these circumstances, the guard is most likely trapped in the chamber, with the PCs standing between him and escape. In this case, he attacks immediately, attempting to break through to Room O5. If he has blown his horn but is trapped here, the inhabitants of Room O5 arrive in two rounds, and the inhabitants of Rooms O8 and O9 in four. If he blows his horn and escapes, no battle occurs here.

If the full combat occurs here, the bugbears have less room to maneuver than they would have liked (which is why they prefer to wait for the PCs to come to Room O5 if at all possible). So far as space allows, they make use of the same tactics described in Room O5; otherwise, they simply overwhelm the PCs by sheer force of numbers.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 6 or 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one level of fighter to each bugbear. To decrease the challenge, remove one level of fighter from each bugbear.

♣ Bugbear Ftr 6: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+6 + 6d10+12; hp 63; Init +5; Spd 20 ft.; AC 19, touch 11, flat-footed 18; Base Atk +8; Grp +11; Atk +12 melee (1d10+6/17–20, heavy flail) or +10 ranged (1d6+3, javelin); Full Atk Atk +12/+7 melee (1d10+6/17–20, heavy flail) or +10 ranged (1d6+3, javelin); SA —; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., scent; AL CE; SV Fort +8, Ref +6, Will +3; Str 16, Dex 12, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Climb +3, Hide +4, Listen +4, Move Silently +6, Spot +4; Alertness, Cleave, Improved Critical (heavy flail), Improved Initiative, Improved Sunder, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (heavy flail), Weapon Specialization (heavy flail).

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Possessions: Breastplate, heavy furs (+1 circumstance bonus to saves against cold), heavy flail, quiver of javelins (5).

05. COMMUNAL CHAMBER

This enormous cavern, vaguely mushroom-shaped, clearly seconds as a communal camp and sleeping area. Primitive pallets and fur pelts lay strewn about the room. They may reach to the walls; it is difficult to see with the available lighting, or into the various nooks. The smell is almost enough to make your eyes water. Clearly not all the hides have been tanned or cured, and even in the extreme cold, decay has set in on more than a few of them.

If the bugbear guard in Room O4 sounded his horn, read the following.

The sleeping pallets are all empty, but the chamber is not. Large humanoid creatures, so shaggy that you cannot tell where their own fur leaves off and the furs they are wearing begin, advance on you from various points around the room. They hold weapons in hand, and their faces are twisted in snarls of rage.

If the PCs stopped the bugbear guard in Room O4 from sounding his horn, read the following.

The room is filled with activity. A great many shaggy humanoids bustle about, going this way and that, while others snore loudly atop the piles of furs. The instant you step into the chamber, however, one of the beasts raises a cry; the others cease what they are doing and turn to face you, and the sleepers stir.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Twelve bugbears are present (though the inhabitants of Rooms O4, O8 and O9 might be here as well). These include four fighters (hp 66, 63, 58, 57), three barbarians (hp 71, 68, 63), two rangers (hp 66, 62), two rogues (hp 49, 38), and a cleric (hp 55). The nature of this encounter depends on whether the bugbears knew the PCs were coming. If they did not, many of them are chatting with each other, carrying supplies to the workers in Room O9, or otherwise making themselves useful. About half of the bugbears are napping (those marked with an asterisk, above), and are thus not combat-ready.

On the other hand, if the bugbears knew the PCs were coming, they are already in combat position. The inhabitants of Rooms O8 and O9 are already present. The bugbears wait along various walls near the entrance, so that at least some of them are behind the PCs when they enter.

WORKING WITH THE BUGBEARS

The nature of the bugbears limits roleplay potential in this Region. They alone are one of the few races with the potential to negotiate, but their jaded past makes trust a nearly unreachable possibility. Therefore, the bugbears are more likely to attack the PCs, rather than wait for the inevitable betrayal.

But DMs are welcome to try.

If that PCs have seen too much fighting already (and most likely they have), then the bugbears can be Unfriendly instead of Hostile, allowing the PCs a chance to negotiate their way out of a few less brawls. And if that doesn't work, the bugbears can be so jaded, cynical, and disillusioned, that they lack the will to fight and glom onto the nearest hero-type.

In either case, they move to attack as soon as possible, convinced that any who are not of their tribe must be enemies. They offer no opportunity for negotiation.

Encounter Condition: [Ambush], [Concealment], [Cover]

Tactics: If the PCs surprise the bugbears, they are primarily concerned with getting all their companions awake swiftly, unable to fight as strategically as they otherwise might. Once combat starts, the inhabitants of Rooms O8 and O9 arrive in two rounds. The sleepers are able to start combat in one round, but fight unarmored.

If the bugbears are prepared, however, they make every effort to gain situational advantage over the PCs. Because they strike from all directions around the room, flanking is a certainty, and the bugbear rogues take full advantage of it. The bugbears concentrate their attacks on any obvious spellcasters. The cleric stays back from the melee as long as possible, casting enhancing spells on his allies and offensive spells at the PCs (alternating each round). The rangers hang back, firing arrows at the PCs. Once he's involved in combat, Guruch fights to the death. If he, the cleric, and half the bugbears are slain, the others flee to Room O1 and escape into other parts of the dungeon (where they most likely die, of course).

If they cannot execute such a retreat, they fight to the death.

Treasure: The bugbears have a collected hoard of about 1,500 gp located in various coffers in bags, tucked into corners of the Room.

EL: 13 or 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one class level to each bugbear. To decrease the challenge, remove one class level.

✦ Bugbear Brb 3: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+6 + 6d12+12; hp 71, 68, 63; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 11, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +8; Grp +11; Atk +13 melee (1d12+6/x3, greataxe); Full Atk +13/+8 melee (1d12+6/x3, greataxe); SA Rage; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., fast movement, improved uncanny dodge, scent, uncanny dodge; AL CN; SV Fort +2, Ref +4, Will +1; Str 16 [18], Dex 12, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 8, Skills and Feats: Climb +11, Hide +4, Listen +10, Move Silently +6, Spot +4, Survival +9, Swim +7; Alertness, Cleave, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (great axe).

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Rage (Ex): A bugbear barbarian can fly into a rage twice per day.

In a rage, a barbarian temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a -2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the barbarian's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) This fit of rage lasts for 7 rounds. A barbarian may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the barbarian loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (-2 penalty to Strength, -2 penalty to Dexterity, can't charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A bugbear barbarian retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. If a barbarian already has uncanny dodge from a different class, he automatically gains improved uncanny dodge (see below) instead.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A bugbear barbarian can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

Possessions: Studded leather armor, greataxe, gauntlets of ogre power.

✦ Bugbear Clr 6: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+3 + 6d8+6; hp 55; Init +1; Spd 30 ft.; AC 22, touch 11, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +6; Grp +8; Atk +8 melee (1d8+2/x3, warhammer); Full Atk +8/+3 melee (1d8+2/x3, warhammer); SA Spells; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., scent; AL CE; SV Fort +7, Ref +6, Will +9; Str 15, Dex 13, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 16, Cha 12.

Skills and Feats: Climb +3, Concentration +10, Hide +4, Knowledge (religion) +3, Listen +4, Move Silently +6, Spot +4; Alertness, Combat Casting, Dodge, Weapon Focus (warhammer).

Typical Cleric Spells Prepared (5/5/5/4; save DC 13 + spell level): 0—detect magic, guidance (2), resistance, virtue; 1st—bless, cure light wounds (2), magic weapon*, shield of faith; 2nd—bear's endurance, bull's strength, cure moderate wounds (2), spiritual weapon*; 3rd—invisibility purge, magic vestment*, prayer.

* Domain spell. Domains: Chaos (cast chaos spell at +1 level) and war (weapon proficiency and focus — warhammer).

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Possessions: +2 breastplate of minor fortification, light steel shield, masterwork warhammer, iron and bone holy symbol, scroll of align weapon, scroll of cure serious wounds, scroll of invisibility purge, scroll of spiritual weapon.

✦ Bugbear Ftr 6: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+6 + 6d10+12; hp 66, 63, 58, 57; Init +5; Spd 20 ft.; AC 19, touch 11, flat-footed 18; Base Atk +8; Grp +11; Atk +12 melee (1d10+6/17-20, heavy flail) or +10 ranged (1d6+3, javelin); Full Atk +12/+7 melee (1d10+6/17-20, heavy flail) or +10 ranged (1d6+3, javelin); SA —; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., scent; AL NE; SV Fort +8, Ref +6, Will +3; Str 16, Dex 12, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Climb +3, Hide +4, Listen +4, Move Silently +6, Spot +4; Alertness, Cleave, Improved Critical (heavy flail), Improved Initiative, Improved Sunder, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (heavy flail), Weapon Specialization (heavy flail).

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Possessions: Breastplate armor, heavy flail, quiver of 5 javelins.

🐻 Bugbear Rgr 6: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+6 + 6d8+12; hp 66, 62; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 18, touch 12, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +8; Grp +4; Atk +10 melee (1d8+2/×3, warhammer) or +11 ranged (1d8+2/×3, composite longbow (+2 Str bonus)); Full Atk +10/+5 melee (1d8+2/×3, warhammer) or +11/+6 ranged (1d8+2/×3, composite longbow (+2 Str bonus)); SA Combat style (archery); SQ Darkvision 60 ft., favored enemy, scent; AL NE; SV Fort +7, Ref +10, Will +3; Str 15, Dex 14, Con 14, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Climb +9, Craft (one bowyer, one fletcher) +6, Hide +11, Listen +10, Move Silently +12, Spot +10; Alertness, Point Blank Shot, Precise Shot, Track, Weapon Focus (composite longbow).

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Favored Enemy (Ex): The ranger gains a +2 bonus on Bluff, Listen, Sense Motive, Spot, and Survival checks when using these skills against creatures that he has trained against. Likewise, he gets a +2 bonus on weapon damage rolls against such creatures. One has giants and humans as favored enemies, the other has giants and elves.

Possessions: Studded leather armor, composite longbow (+2 Str bonus), quiver of 18 arrows (2 masterwork), warhammer.

🐻 Bugbear Rog 6: CR 8; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+3 + 6d6+6; hp 49, 38; Init +2; Spd 30 ft.; AC 17, touch 11, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +6; Grp +8; Atk +9 melee (1d6+2/19–20, short sword) or +8 ranged (1d4+2, throwing dagger); Full Atk +5 melee (1d8+2, morningstar) or +3 ranged (1d6+2, javelin); SA; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., evasion, scent, uncanny dodge; AL CE; SV Fort +4, Ref +9, Will +3; Str 15, Dex 14, Con 13, Int 10, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Climb +11, Hide +12, Listen +12, Move Silently +14, Search +8, Spot +12; Alertness, Dodge, Weapon Focus (short sword), +1

Sneak Attack (Ex): Any time a bugbear rogue's opponent is denied his Dexterity bonus to AC, or if she flanks her opponent, she deals an extra 3d6 points of damage.

Evasion (Ex): A bugbear rogue can avoid even magical and unusual attacks with great agility. If she makes a successful Reflex saving throw against an attack that normally deals half damage on a successful save, she instead takes no damage. Evasion can be used only if the rogue is wearing light armor or no armor. A helpless rogue does not gain the benefit of evasion.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): A bugbear rogue can react to danger before her senses would normally allow her to do so. She retains her Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if she is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, she still loses her Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Possessions: Leather armor, short swords, throwing daggers.

06. PORTCULLIS

A primitive but effective portcullis blocks further passage down this corridor. The crossbars on the gate are formed from the bones of some creature far larger than human. They appear to be held together with ice so thick that it has the consistency of stone. You do not see any obvious means of opening the gate. Behind the portcullis extend two passages, one to the northeast, one to the southeast. Both are blocked by curtains, so you cannot see what may lie beyond.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Guruch had this gate built both to give him privacy, and to protect the meager wealth and supplies the bugbears have managed to gather.

🔨 Gate: 2 in. thick; hardness 7, hp 25, break DC 24.

The gate requires a DC 28 Strength check to lift. Because it is built partly of ice, however, it can be weakened by magics that generate heat. Any spell that raises the temperature above freezing for more than a few moments reduces the hardness, hp, and Break DC by half. A spell that causes substantial fire damage, such as fireball, destroys it instantly.

Alternatively, the PCs might simply search for the hidden lever to open it, which is disguised as an icicle hanging from the ceiling along the north wall. It requires a DC 30 Search check to locate; pulling it raises the portcullis with a loud clanking of chains. The gate remains open until either this lever, or the other one located in Room 08, is pulled once more.

07. TREASURE CHAMBER

Pushing aside the curtain to the northeast, you see a corridor that extends less than one hundred ft. and then stops abruptly. It widens as it progresses, creating something of a chamber at the furthest end. Within that chamber are a number of crates, chests, leather pouches, and other receptacles.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is where the bugbears keep the wealth that belongs to the tribe. Anything not specifically owned or carried by an individual is found here. They don't have much, given the current circumstances.

None of the containers are trapped. Some of the chests are locked, but the locks are not of good quality, requiring only a DC 12 Open Locks check.

Treasure: The bugbears have scraped together perhaps 250 gp in various coins, half a dozen potions — barkskin +2, bull's strength, endure elements, hide from undead, remove fear, spider climb — and a rope of climbing.

08. CHIEFTAIN'S QUARTERS

Although unlikely, it is vaguely possible the PCs have reached this chamber without encountering Guruch as part of an earlier combat. If this is the case, read the first paragraph, and move to the second only when combat is over and the PCs have a moment to take in their situation. Unless the PCs have magically silenced themselves and the area around them, Guruch hears them coming, as the gate makes substantial noise as it rises (or as the PCs batter it down).

Even as you push aside the curtain blocking access to this chamber, a fierce howl comes your direction, and a blur of shaggy fur and spinning blades slams into the party.

If (as is more likely the case) Guruch has already been faced and defeated, skip the first paragraph and go straight to the second.

This side cavern has been made up as a fairly extravagant (under the circumstances, anyway) living chamber. An actual wooden bed frame supports layers of thick furs, and a number of old but thick wool cloaks have been sewn together to form a rug. Broken weapons, bits of armor, and helmets line the walls, and their various and sundry sizes and styles suggest that they come from a wide range of races. A fire pit sits in the center of the room, dug into the compacted earth, surrounded by stones, where a small but cheerful fire crackles away within it. The curtain that prevented you from seeing into this chamber from the gate is thick, good both for privacy and for keeping the warmth of the fire from leeching out of the chamber.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Guruch (hp 198) waits in his chamber, attacking intruders the instant they enter. Any surviving bugbears from the outlying Section arrive in 1d4 rounds to be of service to their chief.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Guruch is a straightforward combatant. He chops up his foes in the throes of rage, and does not cease until they are dead, or he is. Still, he is capable of thinking tactically. If at all possible, he focuses all his attacks on a single foe until that target is dropped, then moves on to another. He conducts a fighting retreat back into his chambers and fight with his back to a wall or to the fire pit, to prevent flanking.

If fighting alongside his brethren, Guruch still focuses on a single foe, but he often cooperates with one or more of the other bugbears, in hopes of dropping that opponent as quickly as possible. He particularly favors flanking an enemy alongside one of his fellow barbarians or one of the rogues. Under no circumstance does Guruch flee or surrender; he fights to the death.

Treasure: Guruch carries a +2 anarchic great club, wears masterwork studded leather, and wears an amulet of natural armor +4. He has a single potion of cure moderate wounds and a blue-green elemental gem hidden under the furs of his bed.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase Guruch's barbarian level by 2. To decrease the challenge, lower it by 2.

Greater Rage (Ex): Guruch can fly into a rage thrice per day. In a rage, Guruch temporarily gains a +6 bonus to Strength, a +6 bonus to Constitution, and a +3 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases Guruch's hit points by 48, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) This fit of rage lasts for 10 rounds. A barbarian may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage Guruch loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, can't charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Guruch retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. If a barbarian already has uncanny dodge from a different class, he automatically gains improved uncanny dodge (see below) instead.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Guruch can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Possessions: Masterwork chain shirt, +2 anarchic great club, amulet of natural armor +4.

09. EXCAVATION

This great chamber is clearly a natural cavern. The floor is uneven, and littered with columns and stalagmites. The walls are rough, jagged, and riddled with crevices.

If the PCs have not already fought the inhabitants of this room in the great battle in Room 04 or 05, read the following paragraph. Otherwise, skip it.

The sounds of hard labor, hammer blows, and cracking rock, echo from the far end of the cavern. From where you stand, you cannot see who, or what, might be the source of those sounds.

Once the PCs approach the eastern edge of the cavern, continue with the following.

This portion of the cave does not seem as natural or as random as the rest. Clearly, someone was digging here, to extend the cave east, forming a small passage or antechamber that nature did not intend.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Guruch and his bugbears have spent months tunneling here. They hope eventually to break through into Room 056, thus bypassing many of the frost giants. From there, they hope they can make a break for the exit before Barcellus (Room 059) or his servants can stop them. Even without the interference of the PCs, the bugbears are still months (if not years) away from achieving their goal, and that's assuming they don't strike a layer of rock too tough to chip through.

The bugbears present here include four fighters (hp 66, 58, 56, 53), three barbarians (hp 74, 65, 61), and five rangers (hp 61, 58, 55, 51, 44). All are working at carving away the east wall, but are also fully prepared for battle, with weapons near at hand.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The bugbears use their greater numbers to surround their foes and attack from all sides. Combat here may not draw the bugbears from elsewhere, as the cavern is large and the tribe is used to hearing sounds of exertion coming from the excavation. Allow the inhabitants of Room 05 a DC 20 Listen check to recognize the sounds of combat, rather than work. If half the bugbears here are slain, the remainder flee.

Treasure: The bugbears' equipment is non-magical, and any wealth they might have possessed was added to the tribal collection in Room 07.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter add one class level to each bugbear. To decrease the challenge, remove one class level.

O10 THROUGH O19. LAIR OF THE WORMS

Even the brave warriors of the Red Ice Tribe have learned to avoid this particular cluster of caverns. These caves second as the lair of a mated pair of tougher-than-average frost worms. Although frost worms are normally solitary creatures, these two have remained together as a mated pair; despite their animal intelligence, they recognized the danger the giants and other inhabitants of the region posed to their clutch of eggs.

The frost worms occasionally burrow to the surface in search of prey. This leaves tunnels 5 ft. in diameter to the surface. However, the magical emanations of the dungeon which prevent teleportation into or out of Region O also prevent any such openings from providing escape. Mere minutes after the creation of such a tunnel, these magics cause the ice and earth to form together, sealing the tunnels.

An extended family of ice mephits has also taken up residence in this area. Small as they are, the frost worms normally ignore them, and the mephits can easily take shelter in cracks and crevices on those occasions the worms do attack them. Because the mephits believe the worms' presence keeps other inhabitants of the region from attacking them, they actually move to aid the frost worms in combat.

This Section has no Random Encounters.

O10. ENTRYWAY

This cavern starts wide enough, and even where it narrows to the east, the corridor remains sufficiently broad to encompass creatures far larger than you. The ice and rock that make up the floor are broken and uneven; it should not cause you a great deal of trouble if you pick your way across it carefully, but you would not want to take it at a dead canter. Here and there, enormous limbs and broken bits of equipment jut through the ice. Clearly, not all the protrusions and mounds on the floor are natural.

Initial Attitude: N/A; Hostile

Encounter: Half a dozen frost giant bodies lie strewn about the entryway. Most of them are buried at least halfway in the floor, as the ice and earth the worms displace when tunneling out of here have interred them. The bodies have been here quite some time; only the freezing temperatures have prevented them from decomposing.

The giant corpses have no worthwhile equipment on them, only nonmagical weapons, armor, and tools. Of course, the PCs don't know this unless they disturb the bodies—and doing so lands them in far more trouble. Thanks to the necromantic energies emanating from Region N, three of the dead giants remain behind as powerful dread wraiths, manifesting only if their remains, or the remains of their companions, are disturbed in any way — the frost worms have learned (the hard way) to avoid the bodies.

The instant a PC or other living creature touches one of the dead giants, three enormous dread wraiths (hp 200 each) rise from the earth and attack the party. If successfully turned, the wraiths flee back into the earth whence they came, but rise once more if the bodies are again disturbed once the turning effect has worn off.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The dread wraiths take full advantage of their incorporeal natures. They frequently move into and out of the floor, walls, and ceiling in order to attack from higher ground or to flank their foes. They make frequent use of their spring attack ability as well, utilizing their great speed to strike and move swiftly out of range of any possible counterattack.

It is possible for the PCs to escape the wraiths, rather than defeat them. These dread wraiths are bound to their physical bodies until those bodies rot away—something that never happens in this frigid environment. The wraiths do not pursue anyone outside Room O10, though they wait around for an hour or so to see if the PCs return before they resume their rest. Once they are again at rest, they only manifest if a body is disturbed. If the PCs defeat the frost worms and mephits in Room O11 and are on their way out, a surviving mephit flits ahead of them, disturb a body, and then flee, in hopes that the wraiths gain their vengeance for them against the PCs. If the wraiths are destroyed, however, they are gone for good, and never manifest again.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four dread wraiths. To decrease the challenge, reduce the dread wraith's HD to 24.

❖ Dread Wraith: CR 15; Large undead (incorporeal); HD 32d12; hp 200; Init +13; Spd Fly 50 ft.; AC 25, touch 25, flat-footed 16; Base Atk +16; Grp —; Atk Incorporeal touch +25 melee touch (2d6/19-20 plus 1d8 Constitution drain, incorporeal touch); Full Atk +25 melee touch (2d6/19-20 plus 1d8 Constitution drain, incorporeal touch); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Constitution drain, create spawn; SQ darkvision 60 ft., daylight powerlessness, incorporeal traits, lifesense 60 ft., undead traits, unnatural aura; AL LE; SV Fort +10, Ref +19, Will +22; Str —, Dex 28, Con —, Int 17, Wis 18, Cha 24.

Constitution Drain (Su): Living creatures hit by a dread wraith's incorporeal touch attack must succeed on a DC 36 Fortitude save or take 1d8 points of Constitution drain. The save DC is Charisma-based. On each such successful attack, the dread wraith gains 5 temporary hit points.

Create Spawn (Su): Any humanoid slain by a dread wraith becomes a wraith in 1d4 rounds. Its body remains intact and inanimate, but its spirit is torn free from its corpse and transformed. Spawn are under the command of the wraith that created them and remain enslaved to the death. They possess none of the abilities they had in life.

Daylight Powerlessness (Ex): Wraiths are powerless in natural sunlight (not merely a daylight spell) and flee from it.

Lifesense (Su): A dread wraith notices and locates living creatures within 60 ft., just as if it possessed the blindsight ability. It also senses the strength of their life force automatically, as if it had cast deathwatch.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Animals, whether wild or domesticated, can sense the unnatural presence of a dread wraith at a distance of 30 ft. They do not willingly approach nearer than that and panic if forced to do so; they remain panicked as long as they are within that range.

In addition, once combat erupts, an entire colony of ice mephits (Room O15) and their leader swiftly rush to aid their "protectors."

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Hazardous Footing 22

Tactics: The worms normally sleep around the northern curve of the cave where the passage opens into the cavern. This gives the frost worms an element of surprise, but their sluggish state may prevent them from taking advantage of it. The worm starts with its trill, followed with its breath weapon, and only then attacks with its mandibles. The second worm is at the far end of the cavern. It takes one round to enter melee combat, but it trills the instant it hears its mate do the same, forcing the PCs to make two saves. It also uses its breath weapon as it approaches, before entering melee.

The mephits enter combat 1d4+1 rounds after the first trill. They know full well that they are themselves no match for the PCs. They remain at a distance, using their spell-like abilities and breath weapons to aid the frost worms. They engage in melee only if forced to do so. Their leader, Stelyph, uses his wand of magic missiles every round. If the frost worms and half the mephits be slain, the remaining mephits flee either to Room O16 or back to Room O1 where they use the dread wraiths to ambush the PCs as described above.

Trill (Su): A frost worm can emit a noise that forces its prey to stand motionless. This sonic mind-affecting compulsion affects all creatures other than frost worms within a 100-foot radius. Creatures must succeed on a DC 20 Will save or be stunned for as long as the worm trills and for 1d4 rounds thereafter, even if they are attacked. However, if attacked or violently shaken (a full-round action), a victim is allowed another saving throw. Once a creature has resisted or broken the effect, it cannot be affected again by that same frost worm's trill for 24 hours. The effect's caster level is 14th. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Cold (Ex): A frost worm's body generates intense cold, causing opponents to take an extra 1d8 points of cold damage every time the creature succeeds on a bite attack. Creatures attacking a frost worm unarmed or with natural weapons take this same cold damage each time one of their attacks hits.

Breath Weapon (Su): 30-foot cone, once per hour, damage 15d6 cold, Reflex DC 27 half. Opponents held motionless by the frost worm's trill get no saving throw. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Death Throes (Ex): When killed, a frost worm turns to ice and shatters in an explosion that deals 12d6 points of cold damage and 8d6 points of piercing damage to everything within 100 feet (Reflex half DC 25). The save DC is Constitution-based.

Skills: * A frost worm, due to its coloration and its affinity for burying itself in the snow, has a +10 racial bonus on Hide checks in its native environment.

011. FROST WORM CAVERN

The wide passage opens into an enormous cavern, with smooth ice as the floor. Numerous passages and sub-caverns continue in all directions, but you have little time to examine any of them. From the center of the room, an enormous worm-like creature with gaping mandibles lunges your direction, sliding across the ice with frightening speed!

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Note that the floor in this room is smooth, icy, and slick. Any PC who is struck in combat must make a DC (10 + damage suffered) Balance check or fall prone (suffering 1d3 damage). Normal movement requires no check, but moving twice in a round requires a DC 15 Balance check, and running requires a DC 25 Balance check.

The PCs have stumbled into the central cavern of the frost worms' lair. Two frost worms (hp 244, 231) laze about when the PCs arrive, but are sluggish at first. They suffer a -5 circumstance penalty to their Initiative checks as a result. However, if the PCs threaten the nest (Room O12), they go into a frenzy and gain the benefits of rage.

012. NEST AND CLUTCH

This large side cavern has a ring of broken ice and rock against the northern wall. The floor shows signs of warping, and is not as smooth as it is to the south.

Within the circle of shards are a number of strange objects. They appear to be ice formations, but their perfect oval shape suggests they may not be natural.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: These are the frost worm eggs. If the PCs enter this Room while the frost worms are alive, the worms immediately focus their energies on them until they leave. If a single PC damages or directly threatens the eggs, the worms focus their attacks on him until he is slain, even if he retreats from Room 012. The ice mephits (Room 011) do not go near the eggs, for fear of drawing the worms' wrath.

Encounter Condition: Poor Footing 6

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: The first worm eggs are worth 1,000 gp to a collector or exotic animal trainer, so long as they aren't cracked. Give the PCs 2d6 days before the frost worm eggs start to hatch.

013. MURAL

From a distance, the walls in this almost rectangular alcove look just like all those in the surrounding area—rock covered by layers of ice. Upon closer inspection, however, it becomes clear that these walls are not normal. Though it is cracked in many places, sullied with age, and hidden behind thick sheets of ice, you see that a strange mural adorns all three of these walls. Specific details are difficult to distinguish, but you are fairly certain you can make out human shapes in various poses and postures. They appear to be prostrating themselves before icons that look like snow-capped mountains. Among the mountains are shapes much larger than the humanoids depicted; these shapes represent white dragons, blue-bearded and white-skinned giants, and other such winter creatures.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: No other clue exists here as to what the mural might reveal in the end, though characters who examine the shrine in Room 014 can probably figure it out without too much conjecture. The use of fire to melt the ice also destroys the mural, which is fragile. More subtle magics used to remove the ice without the use of open flame or extreme heat might reveal more details. The mural does indeed show humans, dwarves, and other humanoids paying homage to white dragons, frost giants, and strange unfamiliar creatures that appear to be made entirely of ice. No character, no matter what skills he might possess, can recognize the style of the artwork; it comes from a culture with which nobody alive today is familiar.

Treasure: N/A

014. ABANDONED TEMPLE

After squeezing through a bottleneck in the corridor, you find yourself in a moderately sized chamber of a haphazard and jagged shape. Although they are mostly hidden beneath the ice and dirt, you can make out portions of various abstract symbols carved into the floor. They too are jagged, almost sharp, and somehow disconcerting to look at for more than a few moments at a time.

Near the south end of the chamber stands a rectangular block of stone, perhaps five ft. long by two ft. wide by four ft. high. This stone is obviously not native to the caverns, for the block is clearly made of polished white marble, which you have never come across in this region. Directly behind the marble stands an iron disk the size of a carriage wheel, upon which are carved more abstract symbols, intertwined with draconic forms, heavily bearded humanoid faces, and mountain peaks.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: A DC 10 Knowledge (religion) check identifies the marble block and iron disk as an altar of undecipherable origin and a DC 25 Knowledge (religion) check indicates the altar is for the worship of ice creatures.

In truth, this shrine was the central place of worship for the ancient cult described in the introduction to Region P, above. This cult of humans and humanoids worshiped an ancient winter and elemental ice deity. Because their god had no known physical form, the cultists used creatures of ice and cold --- frost giants, white dragons, and the like --- as symbols of their deity's potency. The cultists made a regular habit of summoning creatures of winter to do their bidding, and some of the inhabitants of the region, such as the mephits described above, may be among those who were called and then never departed. The cult itself is long gone and forgotten. Even Jardarir, whose god may or may not be the same deity they worshiped, is unaware they ever existed.

015. MEPHIT LAIR

This cavern is narrow, but high; the ceiling appears to be at least 20 ft. from the floor. Numerous ledges and holes bedeck the walls, and several columns of ice and rock rise from the floor to various heights.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This is the home of the mephit clan. They spend most of their time flitting about this cavern, lazing about on various ledges and perches, and enjoying the cold. If all twelve mephits (hp 27 each) are present, they are not happy with the PCs' intrusion into their homes. Although it may be possible for the PCs to talk their way out of combat, if they either leave immediately or succeed in intimidating the mephits, they attack.

However, it's unlikely the mephits are still here when the party arrives. Odds are that the PCs had to fight the frost worms to get here; if they did, the mephits would have moved to help, as described above. In that case, they are either all dead, or they have fled to Room 010 or Room 016.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the mephits are here, they attack from cover, using the many ledges, holes, and pillars as vantage points to launch their spell-like abilities. If Stelyph (hp 51) is present, he does the same to make most efficient use of his wand. If over half the mephits are slain, the remainder flee.

Treasure: N/A, unless Stelyph is present, in which case the party can retrieve his wand of magic missile (38 charges remaining at the starting of combat, minus whatever he uses during) and major ring of fire resistance.

EL: 11

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter advance all the mephits by 3 hit dice. To decrease the challenge, consider removing a mephit or two although this is not recommended; this is already a remarkably easy fight, as the mephits are supposed to be encountered alongside the frost worms rather than alone.

O16. MEPHIT RETREAT

The corridor leading from the high-ceiling cavern is extremely narrow, less than two ft. wide. Further, you can see that it twists and turns as it goes, and the walls are rough.

Small PCs can squeeze through the corridor with no difficulty, though it's not comfortable. Medium PCs must succeed in three separate DC 20 Escape Artist checks to do so. Large creatures cannot fit through at all.

If any of the PCs do squeeze all the way into O16 proper, continue with the following paragraph.

Compared to the other caverns you have seen in this region, this particular cave is tiny, less than 15 ft. on each side. The ceiling is only about seven ft. from the floor, making the chamber feel even more cramped. A thin corridor, just as narrow and treacherous as the one that led you here, leads off to the southwest.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This tiny cave is the ice mephits' last bastion. If they flee from combat elsewhere, some of them hide here, hoping the size of the corridor prevents anyone from following. If they must, they'll flee further into the southern passage. They fight only if pursuers leave them no other choice; they'd rather hide, despite their hostility.

The mephit clan also stores their treasure here, not counting what Stelyph carries on him.

Encounter Condition: Ambush

Tactics: By now, the mephits have few options. They use distance attacks where possible, but close to melee (and fighting to the death) if no other option presents itself.

Treasure: 200 gp in various coins, a gray bag of tricks, a robe of bones (serving as Stelyph's bed), and a figurine of wondrous power (silver raven).

O17. LAIR OF THE GREAT LIZARD

As you round a bend in the cavern wall, an earth-shaking roar rattles your eardrums. And then the earth literally does shake, as an enormous reptilian horror, eyes aglow with hate and skin black as midnight, charges toward you on two powerful legs. Running beside it as a bearded, white-skinned giant wearing furs and carrying a pair of axes.

Once the encounter is over (or if the PCs dealt with this odd pair of opponents before reaching Room O18) read the following.

The gap in the stone beside you is almost too wide to be properly called a "cavern." It's really little more than an exceptionally large bend in the wall. Still, it's clear that something's been using this area as a lair. Furs and stones are piled into an enormous circular nest, and a pallet of furs laid out beside it looks almost like a primitive bed for a giant. The entire place smells of reptilian musk; you can only imagine how much worse it would be in a warmer climate.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This broad cavern is the lair of a truly bizarre creature — a fiendish megaraptor (hp 279). The creature was captured long ago, passing from demon to devil, finally becoming a beast of burden and watchdog for Ketochrensus (Room O42). Eventually the beast escaped, and after a few attempts at recovery failed, Ketochrensus left it alone — especially since it attacked the frost giants.

Eventually the Red Ice Tribe set out to hunt down and slay the creature, but one of their number, a ranger named Korwynne (hp 212), was able to befriend the beast despite its nature. Since then, Korwynne remained with the creature, for only his presence prevents it from attacking the frost giants once again. The pair of them have become "friends," and each fights to protect the other, defending their territory vehemently.

Encounter Condition: Fear 25, [Fog]

Tactics: Korwynne positions himself to flank the PCs, or otherwise take full advantage of the megaraptor's frenzied attack. The megaraptor fights to the death, and Korwynne does not flee so long as his companion lives. If the dinosaur is slain, however, and Korwynne reduced to 25% of his hit points, he escapes, using his horn of fog to create cover.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two ranger levels to Korwynne. To decrease the challenge, remove two ranger levels.

Favored Enemy (Ex): Korwynne's Favored Enemies are humans and good outsiders. The ranger gains a +2 bonus on Bluff, Listen, Sense Motive, Spot, and Survival checks when using these skills against creatures of this type. Likewise, he gets a +2 bonus on weapon damage rolls against such creatures.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Swift Tracker (Ex): Korwynne can move at his normal speed while following tracks without taking the normal -5 penalty. He takes only -10 penalty (instead of the normal -20) when moving at up to twice normal speed while tracking.

Woodland Stride (Ex): Korwynne may move through any sort of undergrowth (such as natural thorns, briars, overgrown areas, and similar terrain) at his normal speed and without taking damage or suffering any other impairment.

However, thorns, briars, and overgrown areas that are enchanted or magically manipulated to impede motion still affect him.

Possessions: +2 leather armor, +3 battleaxe, masterwork hand axe, horn of fog, backpack, cooking utensils, furs, and tools.

018. REFUSE

The ice and earth floor here is churned and uneven, as though someone has done substantial digging here.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is where Korwynne (Room 017) buries the remains of creatures he and the megaraptor kill but cannot otherwise use. This includes the long-frozen corpse of a bone devil, a servant of Ketochrensus (Room 042) who failed to regain control over the megaraptor.

019. WINTER WOLF DEN

The ground around you is strewn with rocks. Some are the size of apples and easily avoided. Others are boulders, stalagmites, and entire columns of stone that rise to the ceiling. At every turn, rock and ice blocks your path. As you step around a rough stone column, a low growl sounds in your ears.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: A community of winter wolves makes this Room their den amongst the of rocks and columns. With the exception of Siegg (Room 020), they do not allow anyone to enter their lair unchallenged. Multiple wolves rise up from behind the stones the instant they detect the PCs, ready to attack.

A single pack of five wolves (hp 189 each) is here initially, but an additional pack of five arrives every round thereafter, until a total of 20 wolves have appeared.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The wolves make skilled use of pack tactics. They move in all directions to flank as many foes as possible, as often as possible. They start their assault with their breath weapon, catching the party in a crossfire of as many cones as possible. Further, the wolves cooperate, focusing their attacks on one or two foes until those foes are dead. If a wolf succeeds in tripping an opponent, every other wolf in range who has not yet moved focuses their assault on the downed enemy.

Because this is their home, the wolves are tenacious. Only if 15 of the 20 wolves have been slain do the rest even consider fleeing, and then only if their foes are largely uninjured.

Treasure: Half-buried in the northeast portion of this Room — and requiring a DC 30 Search check to locate — is a rod of flailing.

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a pack of five winter wolves. To decrease the challenge, remove one pack.

Trip (Ex): A winter wolf that hits with a bite attack can attempt to trip the opponent (+13 check modifier) as a free action without making a touch attack or provoking an attack of opportunity. If the attempt fails, the opponent cannot react to trip the winter wolf.

Skills: Winter wolves have a +1 racial bonus on Listen, Move Silently, and Spot checks. Winter wolves have a +2 racial bonus on Hide checks.

* Their natural coloration grants them a +7 racial bonus on Hide checks in areas of snow and ice. A winter wolf has a +4 racial bonus on Survival checks when tracking by scent.

O20 THROUGH O30. CAMPS AND LAIRS

This Section contains the largest open spaces in Region O, as well as the most extreme caverns. Numerous creatures make their lairs in this area, including both winter wolves and Red Ice frost giants. While a few of the beasts dwelling here are not under the giants' control, the Red Ice Tribe dominates this subsection.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

For each hour the PCs spend in in this Section, roll 1d20 and consult the following chart.

1d20	Encounter
1	A howl echoes through the Section.
2	A muffled conversation echoes through the Section, making it impossible to pinpoint its location.
3–11	Nothing
12–13	A pack of five winter wolves attack the party. After 8 rounds a second pack arrives to aid the first.
14–15	A patrol of ten frost giants, led by a 7th-level frost giant barbarian attack the PCs, in an attempt to enslave them. If the PCs seem too much of a threat, they kill them outright.
16–17	A patrol of ten frost giants, led by a 7th-level frost giant cleric attack the PCs, in an attempt to enslave them. If the PCs seem threatening, they kill them outright.
18–19	The PCs stumble upon a trap.
	◆ Well-Camouflaged Pit Trap: CR 12; mechanical; location trigger; repair reset; DC 20 Reflex save avoids; 160 ft. deep (16d6, fall); Search DC 40; Disable Device DC 25.
20	The fiendish megaraptor (Room O17) and Korwynne, his frost giant "keeper," attack any living beings on sight. This only occurs once.

O20. THE TRAINER

This broad cavern has a number of niches along the wall, holes and crevices in the stone. The remains of a large fire pit and a camp are left near the wall. From within the crevices, eyes gleam and glare at you.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the home of Siegg (hp 247), an unusual frost giant druid. He has dwelt here for years, attempting to befriend the local winter wolf population. He is still a loyal member of the Red Ice Tribe, and deals with his brethren regularly, but he lives here. Two packs of winter wolves (hp 189) — 10 in all — dwell with him. Siegg himself is hiding, crouched amidst the rocks at the border between rooms Room O19 and Room O20.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Concealment, Echoes 6, Hazardous Footing 25

Tactics: The winter wolves open the battle by breathing at the PCs, then charging into the fray. They use pack tactics, as described in Room O19. If the party fails to detect Siegg, he attacks from the rear as the PCs engage the wolves. As long as possible, he remains apart from melee and uses spells against the PCs. He is particularly fond of using flame strike and other fire spells (if he can do so without striking any of the wolves), as he knows most adventurers have utilized any magical protections against cold-related spells. He himself has protection from energy (fire) cast on himself, and cast resist energy (fire) on one of his wolves if he has the opportunity. He wears a greater strand of prayer beads, and does not hesitate to use it as needed. Siegg does not flee unless all the wolves are dead and he is reduced to 25% of his total hit points.

Treasure: Frozen in the ice is the body of a bugbear, with a hand of glory around his neck. The body can be found with a DC 20 Search check.

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter add two druid levels to Siegg or a two winter wolves. To decrease the challenge, remove two druid levels from Siegg and one winter wolf.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Trackless Step (Ex): Siegg leaves no trail in natural surroundings and cannot be tracked. She may choose to leave a trail if so desired.

Venom Immunity (Ex): Siegg has immunity to all poisons.

Wild Shape (Su): Siegg has the ability to turn himself into any Tiny, Small, Medium or Large animal or plant and back again four time per day. His options for new forms include all creatures of the animal or plant type. This ability functions like the polymorph spell, except as noted here. The effect lasts for 1 hour per druid level, or until he changes back. Changing form (to animal or back) is a standard action and doesn't provoke an attack of opportunity.

The form chosen must be that of an animal or plant the druid is familiar with.

A druid loses her ability to speak while in animal form because she is limited to the sounds that a normal, untrained animal makes, but she can communicate normally with other animals of the same general grouping as her new form. The new form's Hit Dice cannot exceed the character's druid level.

Woodland Stride (Ex): Siegg may move through any sort of undergrowth (such as natural thorns, briars, overgrown areas, and similar terrain) at her normal speed and without taking damage or suffering any other impairment. 023. THE LAKESHORE

The waters of the lake lap slowly but powerfully against the shore. Ripples out in the water suggest underwater life or movement, but you don't see anything. Even without actually getting in the water, you can tell the lake is frigidly cold in this area. Just being nearby, you can feel the ambient temperature plummet.

Initial Attitude: N/A; or Hostile

Encounter: The cryohydras living in Room O45 spend much of their time hunting the lake and lakeshore. This stretch of the shore is one of their favored stalking grounds. There is a 35% chance the cryohydras are in the water, and attack anyone who passes.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The cryohydras fight effectively. They lead with their breath weapons, flank where possible, and use their breath weapons again, as soon as possible. Should the PCs use enough fire magic to bring the hydras down to less than half hit points, or succeed in permanently destroying several of the hydras' heads, the hydras retreat to the water but continue to breathe at the party so long as the PCs remain within range.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A; or 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one cryohydra. To decrease the challenge, remove the cryohydras' breath weapons, but keep their cold immunity.

021. ABANDONED CAMP

Nestled in among the rocks, in a convenient bend in a massive stone formation, you notice the remains of a camp. Long-unused, it still bears traces of a stone-ringed fire pit — presumably for cooking, not for warmth, given the frigid nature of most of this region's inhabitants. Judging by the size of the pit, this was either a large camp, or a camp for large people.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This used to be a frost giant camp, much like those in Rooms O25 and O26. When Siegg began attracting winter wolves, however, the giants moved. Despite the fact that the druid was able to keep the wolves from attacking, the giants didn't feel particularly inclined to deal with them on a regular basis.

022. GONE FISHING

You have drawn near the shore of a wide underground lake — possibly the same one you encountered earlier in your expedition through this underground complex. A thick metal rod has been driven into the ground here. Strangely enough, six thick ropes are tied to it, their far ends stretching south toward the lake. On the end of each is an enormous hook, with a huge chunk of meat on it. You would think someone was fishing for sea monsters, except the hooks stop several yards short of the lake.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The frost giants set these hooks up in hopes of catching one of the cryohydras who dwell in the region and occasionally hunt the lake shore. The hydras have eaten a few frost giants over the years, and are hoping to either capture and train them, or kill them. So far, the hydras will not take the bait.

A DC 30 Strength check is required to yank the metal rod from the earth.

024. FISHING AGAIN

The waters of the underground lake lap against the frozen shore. A half-dozen iron poles are thrust into the ice and rock here, many trailing lines toward the lake. Some of the lines end in hooks bearing great chunks of aged meat. Among the poles lays the bloody corpse of a frost giant, diligently stripped of possessions. The quiet is ominous given this grotesque scene.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: As in Room O22, this is an attempt by the frost giants to hunt for a cryohydra, and bring back a mighty kill for their clan. The overall plan doesn't seem to be working, as demonstrated by the dead frost giant Jugturn. As he approached the water with bait, a cryohydra attacked and tore out a large section of his neck and left side. His brethren retreated after scavenging Jugturn's body, leaving the preserved corpse behind. A DC 25 Search check or DC 20 Survival check reveals the footprints of a group of over a half-dozen frost giants made within the past 24 hours. A character with the Track feat can easily follow the footprints north to Room O25.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If a fight breaks out here for any reason, the giants in Room O25, come to investigate.

Treasure: The frost giants left their fallen comrade bare, save for one item — a 14-in. tooth. It can be dislodged from Jugturn's chest cavity with a DC 17 Strength check. Such primitive surgery pays off, as the tooth of a cryohydra can easily be fashioned into a +1 icy burst dagger. The dagger costs half its normal base price for the purposes of deriving creation costs in gp and XP.

025. FISHING CAMP

If the giants in this Room responded to combat elsewhere, then read the following.

The vaulted walls of this cavern reflect light as the ice transforms dim illumination into thousands of colors. Remnants of a camp cover the ground, including old furs, discarded bones, sleeping rags, and rubbish.

If the PCs have not drawn attention to themselves, read the following.

The vaulted walls of this cavern reflect light as the ice scatters and transforms dim illumination into thousands of scintillating colors. At your approach, the hulking figures of frost giants stir amid sleeping rags and refuse, presenting imposing silhouettes against the colorful display.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This is a frost giant encampment, where eight frost giants (hp 133 each) and their leader Beregund (hp 180) make their home under ice and rock. The giants are tired, hungry, poorly armed, and have recently lost one of their own (Room O24). This makes them less inclined towards combat their fellows, but they assume the worst where intruders are concerned.

Beregund parleys if the PCs talk first, and demands gifts of mundane food, weapons, and armor in return for the party's safe passage. He attacks if not appeased, but he otherwise keeps his word so long as the party does not attack any other frost giant bands.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Unless the PCs make a gesture of peace within 1 round, the frost giants attack ferociously. Beregund is the only one who uses any tactics at all, attempting to flank and be on the defensive if necessary.

Sounds of battle from Room O20 or Room O24 draw out the giants, but they patiently wait behind cover for the fight to end before attacking. They respond instantly to combat heard in Room O26, however. Either way, it takes them 1d4 rounds to arrive. Conversely, the group in Room O26 will join any battle in this Room after 1d4 rounds.

Treasure: Beregund wears a symbol of his clan in the form of a carved wooden carved tab fastened with a rhin strip of leather around his neck.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two ranger levels to Beregund and add one barbarian level to each frost giant. To decrease the challenge, remove three ranger levels from Beregund or remove four frost giants.

▲ Beregund, Frost Giant Rgr 5: CR 14; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+70 + 5d8+25; hp 180; Init +1; Spd 40 ft.; AC 19, touch 10, flat-footed 19; Base Atk +15; Grp +29; Atk +28 melee (2d6+18 plus 1d6 electricity, +3 thundering shock mace) or +24 melee (1d4+10, slam) or +14 ranged (2d6+10, rock); Full Atk +28/+23/+18 melee (2d6+18 plus 1d6 electricity, +3 thundering shock mace) or +24 melee (1d4+10, 2 slams) or +14/+9/+4 ranged or +12/+12/+7/+2 with rapid shot (2d6+10, rock); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rock throwing; SQ Combat style (archery), favored enemy, immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +18, Ref +9, Will +7; Str 30, Dex 12, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Possessions: Great axe, bag of rocks (5).

026. YOUNG ADULT WARREN

Six frost giants sit around a glowing stone in this icy cavern. They are leaner than is archetypical for their kind, and they wear their beards and hair cropped. They seem jumpy and peer through the darkness for signs of intruders.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Six young adult frost giants (hp 100 each) gather at their camp, sharing what meager edibles they have around a large rock affected by a wand of light. They are on their own as part of a rite of passage, and despite their exhaustion are eager for the chance to prove themselves in battle. They are on good terms with the frost giants in Room O25, and each group comes to the other's aid in the case of danger.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: These frost giants, like others in this Section, are tired and frustrated. Unlike some others, they are too brash to negotiate. They surround groups of smaller opponents in combat and hack away until they are victorious. They rush to Room O25 if a combat begins there, and the frost giants in Room O25 join any battle here after 1d4 rounds.

Treasure: Besides their cryohydra bait, a wand of light (40 charges) is the giants' only treasure.

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two young adult frost giants. To decrease the challenge, remove two.

▼ Frost Giant: CR 9; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+70; hp 133; Init -1; Spd 40 ft.; AC 21, touch 8, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +10; Grp +23; Atk +18 melee (3d6+13/×3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, slam) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Full Atk +18/+13 melee (3d6+13/×3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, 2 slams) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rock throwing; SQ Immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 29, Dex 9, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Craft (any one) +6, Intimidate +6, Jump +17, Spot +12; Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Overrun, Improved Sunder, Power Attack.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

O27. ROKJEMPES HALL

This grandiose hall is a monument to frost giant art and culture. Ice crystals refract the light of shining globes embedded within them, illuminating 50-foot-high columns carved with runes and heroic imagery. A great wooden table as long and magnificent as a small sailing vessel dominates the center of the hall. Benches flank the table, and a huge wooden throne sits at its far end.

If the giants are meeting peacefully (see below), read the following.

Over a dozen frost giants gather around the table. A particularly grim frost giant sits on the throne, observing the proceedings and occasionally adding his voice to the mix.

If the frost giants heard the sounds of combat from other Rooms, read the following instead.

The benches are overturned, creating a 4-ft.-high defensive barricade for the dozen frost giants kneeling and gripping boulders.

And if Guent (Room O29) is present, read the following.

One frost giant, blond, scarred, and armored in magnificent chainmail, stands near the back and shouts, "In the name of Jardarir, destroy the intruders!"

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The frost giants living in this Section call this gathering place "Rokjempes Hall." There is a 25% chance that the denizens of Rooms O28, O29, and O30 are all assembling here as the PCs approach. If the PCs recently fought their way past Room O26, the frost giants heard the commotion and are prepared for battle. Otherwise, the giants are meeting to discuss community matters.

A character who reads Giant or who succeeds on a DC 25 Decipher Script check can glean some meaning from the carvings on the columns. The columns describe the history of the Red Ice frost giant clan, telling of its glorious conquests on the surface as servants of a dark god of ice and war. The story ends with two mighty brothers seeking the entrance of the dungeon. A character who succeeds on a DC 25 Knowledge (religion) check can also identify the frost giants' god as the Aspect of Winter.

Encounter Condition: Cover, Fearless

Tactics: If the frost giants are prepared for combat, they kneel and use the knocked-over benches for cover. They therefore have a +2 bonus to AC against melee attacks and a +6 bonus to AC against ranged attacks. The frost giants taking cover hurl rocks until the PCs close, while Guent and one frost giant climb onto the table and attack the PCs from high ground (+1 bonus on melee attacks).

If the frost giants are unprepared, half of them rush to meet the PCs in the 1st round. In the 2nd round, Guent (if still alive) orders the benches overturned, and the giants scramble to arrange the situation as above. It takes a full round action for a frost giant to overturn a bench.

If combat occurs here and the giants from Rooms O28, O29, and O30 arrive in 1d4+1, 1d4+2, and 1d6+1 rounds respectively.

Treasure: Most of the globes of light trapped in the ice are continual flame stones. However, embedded in 2 inches of ice behind the throne is a gem of brightness.

EL: 18 (seven frost giants, six frost giant workmen, and Guent)

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four frost giants. To decrease the challenge, take away four.

O28. FROST GIANT BARRACKS

Seven frost giants work in this crude barracks filled with beds, tables, and debris. Several of the giants are practicing their rock-throwing, while others repair suits of armor laying on the ground.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cavern houses seven unarmored frost giants (hp 133 each), successful members of the clan who are privileged compared to their fellows at the fishing camp. They embrace the chance for battle when they notice intruders.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The frost giants go all out, grabbing whatever improvised weapons they can find and hurling them at the PCs (treat beds, tables, chairs, and so on as throwing rocks with extra description). Additionally, one frost giant grapples and pins the largest PC, then uses sovereign glue to permanently bond the character to a wall. If given a chance, the frost giants hastily don their chain shirts (5 rounds; the armor check penalty and armor bonus for hastily donned armor are each 1 point worse than normal).

The frost giants in Room O30 come to the aid of this Room's giants in 2d4 rounds if battle begins here. If combat occurs in Room O27, O29, or O30, the frost giants come running, arriving in 1d4 rounds to repel invaders.

Treasure: 758 gp, kept in sacks beneath the beds, and seven Large chain shirts.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one frost giant and have the giants already wearing their chain shirts. To decrease the challenge, remove the chain shirts from the Room altogether and remove one frost giant.

❖ Frost Giant: CR 9; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+70; hp 133; Init -1; Spd 40 ft.; AC 17, touch 8, flat-footed 17; Base Atk +10; Grp +23; Atk +18 melee (3d6+13/x3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, slam) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Full Atk +18/+13 melee (3d6+13/x3, greataxe) or +18 melee (1d4+9, 2 slams) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rock throwing; SQ Immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 29, Dex 9, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Craft (any one) +6, Intimidate +6, Jump +17, Spot +12; Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Overrun, Improved Sunder, Power Attack.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Possessions: Chain shirts (off), great axe, bag of 5 rocks.

One giant carries a potion of barkskin +3, and another carries a vial of sovereign glue (3 doses).

O29. GUENT'S LAIR

Standing amid icy stalagmites is a yellow-haired frost giant in ornate armor, head tilted as he studies the scimitar in his hand. Adornments befitting a prince fill the cave: tapestries depicting tundra landscapes, pine forests, and a white dragon in battle are suspended from the walls; sheets of ice are framed with silver and polished to a sheen; and icicles in the shape of a chandelier drop from the ceiling. 6-ft.-high daisies rise from the ground here and there.

If Guent notices the PCs, read the following.

With an uncanny knowledge concerning your presence, the frost giant looks up from his weapon and intones, "We have had few visitors over the years. Even fewer who could be considered a challenge. I look forward to decorating my walls with your skulls."

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This cavern is the home of Guent (hp 240), a lieutenant of Jardarir. Guent commands the frost giants in this Section, and is pleased with his position in life. He is more interested in enjoying a battle than negotiating, so PCs wishing to avoid violence must quickly present an alternative. Bribes of magic and luxury items are most likely to appease Guent, in which case he orders the giants under his command to let the PCs pass. Guent is also loyal to his clan, however, and even a generous tribute will not prevent him from attacking if the PCs have been fighting elsewhere.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs do not attempt a peaceful solution, Guent attacks after 1 round. His fast movement should surprise the PCs, but it doesn't stop him from starting with a ranged attack of ice chunks (treat as rocks). He favors charging opponents, stopping short to strike them with his reach. He also occasionally mounts one of the raised floor sections just big enough to give him a height advantage.

The frost giants in Rooms O28 and O30 come to Guent's aid if combat begins here. The groups take 1d4 and 2d4 rounds to arrive, respectively.

Treasure: 5,500 gp worth of gems and jewelry.

EL: 16

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add 2 barbarian levels to Guent and change his weapon to +2 icy burst. To decrease the challenge, make his chain shirt nonmagical and remove 1 barbarian level from him.

❖ Guent, Frost Giant Brb 7: CR 16; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+84 + 7d12+42; hp 240; Init +4; Spd 50 ft.; AC 27, touch 9, flat-footed 27; Base Atk +17; Grp +31; Atk +30 melee (1d8+14/15–20 plus 1d6 cold, +3 icy burst scimitar) or +26 melee (1d4+10, slam) or +16 ranged (2d6+10, rock); Full Atk +30/+25/+20 melee (1d8+14/15–20 plus 1d6 cold, +3 icy burst scimitar) or +26 melee (1d4+10, 2 slams) or +16 ranged (2d6+10, rock); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rage, rock throwing; SQ Damage reduction 1/—, improved uncanny dodge, immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, uncanny dodge, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +22, Ref +8, Will +10; Str 30, Dex 10, Con 22, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Craft (any one) +6, Intimidate +6, Jump +17, Spot +12; Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Critical (scimitar), Improved Initiative, Improved Overrun, Improved Sunder, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (scimitar).

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Guent can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels. If a character already has uncanny dodge (see above) from a second class, the character automatically gains improved uncanny dodge instead, and the levels from the classes that grant uncanny dodge stack to determine the minimum level a rogue must be to flank the character.

Rage (Ex): Guent can fly into a rage 2 times per day. In a rage, Guent temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the barbarian's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 9 rounds. A barbarian may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the barbarian loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Guent retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized. If a barbarian already has uncanny dodge from a different class, he automatically gains improved uncanny dodge (see below) instead.

Possessions: +4 chain shirt, +3 icy burst scimitar, cloak of resistance +2.

O30. STORAGE CAVE

Workbenches cluttered with a variety of primitive stone tools line the walls of this cave. Six frost giants toil here, carving weapons, repairing furniture, and assembling fishing nets. They seem quite involved in their activity.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cavern is a storage cave manned by six frost giant workmen (hp 133 each) who spend their time making and repairing the clan's tools, weapons, and armor. Three work in each side cavern. Despite their ineffectiveness as combatants, they do not hesitate to fight the PCs.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: These frost giant workmen are overtaxed, unappreciated, and tired. They are fatigued when hostilities start (they can't run or charge, and they suffer a –2 penalty to their Strength and Dexterity scores; the adjustments are included in their statistics). Armed with nets, they try to entangle PCs before moving in to disable them.

If combat occurs in Room O27, O28, or O29, the frost giant workmen move as fast as they can, arriving in 2d4 rounds. The frost giants in Room O28 come to the aid of the giants here in 1d4 rounds, as well.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two giants. To decrease the challenge, take two away.

❖ Frost Giant Workmen: CR 9; Large giant (cold); HD 14d8+70; hp 133; Init –1; Spd 40 ft.; AC 21, touch 8, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +10; Grp +23; Atk +18 melee (2d6+13/×3, spear) or +18 melee (1d4+9, slam) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock) or +9 ranged (entangle, net); Full Atk +18/+13 melee (2d6+13/×3, spear) or +18 melee (1d4+9, 2 slams) or +9 ranged (2d6+9, rock) or +9 ranged (entangle, net); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Rock throwing; SQ Immunity to cold, low-light vision, rock catching, vulnerability to fire; AL CE; SV Fort +14, Ref +3, Will +6; Str 29, Dex 9, Con 21, Int 10, Wis 14, Cha 11.

Skills and Feats: Climb +13, Craft (any one) +6, Intimidate +6, Jump +17, Spot +12; Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Overrun, Improved Sunder, Power Attack.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

031 THROUGH 045. THE DEVIL'S DOMAIN

The ice devil Ketochrensus (Room 042) makes his lair here, along with his minions, servants, and prisoners. There is even a small family of frost giants who have turned against their struggling brethren and sworn allegiance to Ketochrensus. Ketochrensus feels secure in his caves, with its passages built to his specifications by slave laborers. Not only that, but as a favored champion of hell, the ice devil's mere presence corrupts the caves and brings a bit of hell to the Material Plane. The natives have adjusted to the effects, but the PCs are not so lucky. Within the Devil's Domain, it is as if some frozen kingdom of hell has merged with the dungeon.

The Devil's Domain has the following traits.

- Cold-Dominant. This Section is even colder than the rest of the Region (about -20° F), and all characters suffer 1d6 points of damage per minute (no save) from the chill. In addition, a character must make a Fortitude save (DC 15; +1 per previous check; Survival bonuses apply) each minute or take 1d4 points of nonlethal damage. Those wearing metal armor or coming into contact with very cold metal are affected as if by a chill metal spell. As always, a character who takes any nonlethal damage from cold is treated as fatigued until the nonlethal damage is healed.
- Enhanced Magic. Spells and spell-like abilities that use, manipulate, or create cold or ice effects are both empowered and extended (as if the Empower Spell and Extend Spell metamagic feats had been used on them, but the spells don't require higher-level slots). Spells and spell-like abilities that are already empowered or extended are unaffected by this benefit.
- Impeded Magic. Spells and spell-like abilities with the fire descriptor (including spells of the Fire domain) are impeded. To cast an impeded spell, the caster must make a Spellcraft check (DC 20 + the level of the spell). If the check fails, the spell does not function but is still lost as a prepared spell or spell slot. If the check succeeds, the spell functions normally.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1-3	A lone bone devil wanders on patrol.
4-8	Nothing
9-10	An ice devil leads 2d4 bone devils in a training drill. Echoes 4.
11-12	Five slaves carve and clean runes in the floor and walls.
13-14	A band of 1d4+1 frost giants, loyal to Jardarir, seeks to destroy Ketochrensus. One of the giants is a traitor, leading the group into a trap.
15-16	3d4 winter wolves search for enemies in Ketochrensus' domain, hoping to prove themselves worthy allies.
17	A Gargantuan frost worm (22 HD) bursts from the ground to attack.
18	A remorhaz battles 1d4 bone devils and 1d10 slaves digging a new corridor.
19	Three horned devils experiment with their summoning abilities, testing the dungeon's barriers.
20	2d8 ice mephits taunt the PCs with a mix of real and misleading advice on surviving the area.

031. ABANDONED OUTPOST

The endless underground lake washes up against a miniature peninsula here. There are rusted metal poles stuck fast in the ice, and thin lines leading toward the watery depths.

If a cryohydra appears, read the following.

From the water rises a draconic head with purple scales. Another head appears, and then another! Soon, a dozen serpentine necks lead to a muscular body wading toward the shore.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is another of the giants' abandoned fishing outposts. Due to the proximity of the devil's lair, the frost giants no longer come here, but that doesn't stop an occasional minion or two of Ketochrensus from being sent to check it out.

It is probable that the PCs have not yet stumbled upon one of the lake's twelve-headed cryohydras (hp 129). If this is the case, they do so now. A cryohydra has been watching the shore, waiting for something to hunt.

Encounter Condition: Ambush, Cover

Tactics: The cryohydra uses multiple heads against each target it faces, mixing breath and bite attacks. It is perfectly at home in the water and gains cover while half submerged. If combat is going poorly for the creature, it retreats into the lake to give its body time to heal, and may launch occasional breath attacks from a distance.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 13

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two eight-headed cryohydras. To decrease the challenge, make the cryohydra ten-headed.

✦ Twelve-Headed Cryohydra: CR 13; Huge magical beast; HD 12d10+63; hp 129; Init +1; Spd 20 ft., swim 20 ft.; AC 22, touch 9, flat-footed 21; Base Atk +12; Grp +26; Atk +17 melee (2d8+6, 12 bites); Full Atk +17 melee (2d8+6, 12 bites); Space/Reach 15 ft./10 ft.; SA Breath weapon; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., fast healing 22, immunity to cold, low-light vision, scent; AL N; SV Fort +13, Ref +9, Will +6; Str 23, Dex 12, Con 20, Int 2, Wis 10, Cha 9.

Skills and Feats: Listen +9, Spot +10, Swim +14; Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes*, Improved Natural Attack (bite), Iron Will, Toughness, Weapon Focus (bite).

Breath Weapon (Su): A cryohydra can breathe jets of frost 10 ft. high, 10 ft. wide, and 20 ft. long. All heads breathe once every 1d4 rounds. Each jet deals 3d6 points of cold damage per head. A successful DC 21 Reflex save halves the damage. The save DC is Constitution-based. Cold attacks cannot prevent a cryohydra's stump from growing new heads (since a cryohydra has immunity to cold), but 5 points of fire damage does.

032. THE DEAD

The ice-covered bodies of frost giants and humanoids are staked to the ground and rock walls here, trapped forever by the cold and unable to decay. The stakes mark a path to a crude series of steps that leads 10 ft. up the cavern wall to a dark opening.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The dead were those who displeased Ketochrensus or intruded on his domain. The stairs are uneven and coated in ice, requiring a DC 20 Balance check to safely navigate. Failure causes no damage, but a failing character winds up prone at the base of the stairs. A single step midway up the stairs is mostly free of ice; with their long legs, the frost giants only need to take two strides.

Characters at the bottom of the stairs can make a DC 19 Listen check to hear the sound of frost giants snoring in Room O33. The DC decreases to 17 after ascent. However, PCs who fall down the stairs, try to secure ropes, or otherwise make noise may attract the attention of Shendaera (Room O33); allow Shendaera a Listen check with a DC modifier of +7 (the base DC should reflect the PCs' activities).

Encounter Condition: Poor Footing 21

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

O33. ENTRY CHAMBER

The stairs lead to the entrance of a cavern. The far end of the cavern is closed by a large boulder pressed into the wall. To the left is a small camp of about a half-dozen frost giants, two of whom lie sleeping on fur pelts. One particularly tall frost giant stands out, her sapphire eyes glowing faintly and spines running down her arms. She paces across the cavern, a silver sword clutched in one hand and an axe worn at her side.

If Shendaera noticed the PCs while they were in Room O32, read the following instead.

The stairs lead to the entrance of a cavern. The far end of the cavern is blocked by a large boulder pressed into the wall. A giant camp fills up the area to the left. Frost giants stand at both sides of the entrance, weapons poised and grim expressions on their faces. One particularly tall frost giant stands out, her sapphire eyes glowing faintly, spines running down her arms as she crosses her sword and axe before her, and shouts a signal to attack.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cavern doubles as the entrance to the caves of Ketochrensus and as the home of the frost giants who serve (and nearly worship) him. There are six ordinary frost giants (hp 133 each), led by Ketochrensus' daughter, the half-fiendish frost giant Shendaera (hp 203). Two of the frost giants are asleep if the giants have not been alerted to the party's presence; they wake up after 1 round if the other giants call them. If the giants are aware of the party due to the PCs' activities in Room O32, they position themselves for an attack. Either way, they are uninterested in negotiations.

The boulder at the end of the cavern blocks access to Room O34. It weighs 4,000 lbs., and requires a Strength score of 25 or higher to move.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If prepared, the frost giants close to surround the PCs, trapping them in the cavern and tearing them apart in melee. If surprised, Shendaera and two of the frost giants yell a warning and charge the PCs, giving their comrades time to wake or arm themselves. The two giants rushing in with Shendaera initiate bull rush attempts against any PCs still close to the stairs, hoping to knock them out of the fray.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 17

Scaling: These giants are Ketochrensus' first line of defense, crude but effective. Gaining entrance to the caverns shouldn't be easy, and it is strongly suggested that the frost giants retain their numbers and statistics as presented here; if the PCs have to retreat and regroup, so be it. If reducing the giants' threat seems necessary, lower Shendaera's ranger level by 3. To increase the challenge, give Shendaera a twin brother with the same statistics.

Favored Enemy (Ex): Shendaera has bugbears and winter wolves as her Favored Enemies. The ranger gains a +2 bonus on Bluff, Listen, Sense Motive, Spot, and Survival checks when using these skills against creatures of this type. Likewise, she gets a +2 bonus on weapon damage rolls against such creatures.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Smite Good (Su): Once per day Shendaera can make a normal melee attack to deal an extra +19 damage against a good foe.

Spell-Like Abilities: 3/day—darkness, poison (DC 15), unholy aura. 1/day—blasphemy, contagion (DC 14), desecrate, destruction (DC 18), horrid wilting (DC 19), summon monster IX (fiends only), unhallow, unholy blight (DC 15). Caster level is 19th and the save DC is Charisma-based.

Ranger Spells Prepared (1, save DC 12 + spell level): 1st—longstrider.

Possessions: Masterwork chain shirt, +1 battle axe, silver short sword.

O34. ICE CORRIDOR

The corridor beyond the boulder gradually widens. You immediately notice the horrid glyphs and runes intricately carved into the walls, decorations which would fit better in some profane temple. It is ominously quiet, and each step crunches into the frost underfoot.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The wall carvings run from this Room through Room O44. Anyone able to read Infernal or who succeeds on a DC 20 Decipher Script or Knowledge (the planes) check recognizes them as common symbols of the denizens of hell, marking this place as unholy and foul.

While the glyphs have no supernatural effect, they help mark the borders designating this Section as part of hell itself. Should the players become obsessed with eradicating every one, let them; the noise the PCs create with weapons or tools is likely to alert the entire complex of their presence. This wastes their valuable resources on what is otherwise a trivial thing.

Encounter Condition: [Fear 20], Negative Energy, Unhallowed 4

Tactics: After the PCs spend 30 minutes in this Room, roll for a Random Encounter.

035. DOUBLE TRAPS

The hallway wraps around a warped stone pillar about 4 ft. wide, continuing on the other side. In the distance, the passage appears less natural, its floor flatter and its angles sharper.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Ketochrensus doesn't like surprises, but he makes sure that his minions are always prepared to entertain visitors. To that end, he casts two alarm spells in this passage every day. The first is a mental alarm (with the password "tenebrous") that alerts Ketochrensus himself. This spell is placed on the opposite side of the pillar from the entry chamber. The second alarm wards the exit into Room O36, and is designed to warn the area's other inhabitants of an intruder. Its password is "locksobolth." Assuming no unusual circumstances (such as loud noises elsewhere), the second alarm will rouse the residents of Rooms O38, O41, and O44.

The frost giants in the entry chamber do not yet know the alarm passwords. Ketochrensus intends to entrust them with that secret only after they have fully proven themselves.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If alerted by the alarms, at least some of the bone devils from Rooms O38 and O41 muster in Room O36. Taigra (see Room O44) joins them 1d4+3 rounds later, casting her normal array of preparatory spells in the meantime. Ketochrensus takes note of any alert, but does not leave Room O42.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: N/A

036. CORRIDOR

The hallway reaches a four-way crossroads. The northern path leads into a large cavern, while the southern path branches left and right before continuing into darkness. Similarly, there is no end in sight to the length of hallway ahead. The profane glyphs still mark the icy walls, but now spill across the floor as well.

If the PCs tripped the alarm in Room O35 read the following.

Suddenly, a cacophony of scraping sounds begins. Out of the darkness emerge skeletal figures with long tails and glowing eyes. They move with the speed and coordination of an army trained in hell.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: If the bone devils in Rooms O38 and O41 are aware of the PCs (either because the party tripped the alarm in Room O35, or because the bone devils heard them with successful Listen checks), they send eight bone devils to investigate, holding back the rest in reserve.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Assuming combat is on the agenda, the bone devils trap the PCs in the hall in order to flank the party. They use walls of ice to cut off any exits, or to separate party members from one another. Taigra (Room O44) arrives 1d4+3 rounds after the bone devils with fly, greater invisibility, and mage armor already cast, and follows her normal tactic of awaiting the battle's end before engaging.

If the bone devils are losing badly, survivors may use their greater teleport ability to retreat or gather in Room O41. In this case, later encounters with them may prove more dangerous, as they have assessed the PCs' strengths and weaknesses.

Treasure: N/A

EL: N/A

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two horned devils to the fight. To decrease the challenge, the bone devils can conveniently decide not to separate PCs with walls of ice, and Taigra can appear without her spells active.

037. PURPLE WORM LAIR

The perfectly carved passage reaches a natural cavern, with a second branch from the main hall opening a few feet away. The rough stone floor dips abruptly in the south of the chamber, creating a wide, uneven pit.

Against the far wall is a monstrous violet serpent resting on its own coils. The behemoth must be over 150 ft. long and 10 ft. wide! Its circular mouth is filled with teeth the size of swords, and you can hear it suck in a breath of cool air as it slithers forward to feed.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This gigantic cave is home to a Colossal purple worm (hp 486), raised by Ketochrensus (Room O42) since it was a larva. Through magical enhancements, Ketochrensus grew it to an unheard of size. It is too large to leave the cavern, and cannot burrow through the stone. Ketochrensus intends to eventually have Taigra (Room O44) polymorph it in order to move it into the Section controlled by Jarदारir.

In the southern portion of the chamber is a pit 20 ft. deep, but filled only with the remains of the worm's victims. Climbing down is easy enough, but there is nothing for the PCs to scavenge. DMs interested in adding flavor to this encounter can leave a holy symbol from a paladin or perhaps a brooch from a wizard order the PCs have heard of.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The Colossal purple worm may be magically enhanced, but its intelligence is still sub par. It is almost certainly aware of the PCs, given its tremorsense and high Listen modifier, giving it a round or two to prepare. As it attacks, it blocks the exits with its enormous tail. After all, it can't follow, and PCs could easily hide in the passage, picking it off with ranged attacks and spells.

To ensure that the PCs do not flee, slaves in need of rescuing can be placed in the pit. This may even be a ploy by Taigra or the bone devils to lure the PCs into battle. The "slaves" might also be illusory. If Taigra placed the slaves, she attacks after the worm is defeated.

Treasure: Whatever goods the worm collects are taken by Ketochrensus, so there is nothing here for the PCs.

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, increase the purple worm's HD to 40. To decrease the challenge, reduce the purple worm's HD to 30.

❖ Purple Worm: CR 20; Colossal magical beast; HD 36d10+324; hp 486; Init -2; Spd 20 ft., burrow 20 ft., swim 10 ft.; AC 24, touch 0, flat-footed 24; Base Atk +36; Grp +68; Atk +45 melee (4d8+16, bite); Full Atk +45 melee (4d8+16, bite) and +40 melee (4d6+8 plus poison, sting); Space/Reach 25 ft./20 ft.; SA Improved grab, swallow whole, poison; SQ Tremorsense 60 ft.; AL N; SV Fort +29, Ref +18, Will +19; Str 43, Dex 6, Con 29, Int 1, Wis 8, Cha 8.

Skills and Feats: Listen +28, Swim +30; Awesome Blow, Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Bull Rush, Improved Natural Armor (×4), Improved Natural Attack (bite), Improved Natural Attack (sting), Power Attack, Weapon Focus (bite), Weapon Focus (sting)

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a purple worm must hit with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can attempt to swallow the foe the following round.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 37, initial damage 1d6 Str, secondary damage 2d6 Str. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Swallow Whole (Ex): A purple worm can try to swallow a grabbed opponent of a smaller size than itself by making a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 4d6+16 points of crushing damage plus 8 points of acid damage per round from the worm's gizzard. A swallowed creature can cut its way out by using a light slashing or piercing weapon to deal 25 points of damage to the gizzard (AC 22). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out. A colossal worm's interior can hold 2 Huge, 8 Large, 32 Medium, 128 Small, 512 Tiny, or 2048 Diminutive or smaller opponents.

Skills and Feats: A purple worm has a +8 racial bonus on any Swim check to perform some special action or avoid a hazard. It can always choose to take 10 on a Swim check, even if distracted or endangered. It can use the run action while swimming, provided it swims in a straight line.

038. BONE DEVIL LAIR

A rough cave opens before you, jagged shards of ice and rock protruding from the walls and ceiling. In the far corner of the room, a pool of water has collected. Though it has not frozen over, small chunks of ice float across its surface. Several bleached, skeletal creatures wait here, sharpening their scorpionlike tails with their claws.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Eight bone devils (hp 95 each) make their lair here. Provided they do not confront the PCs in Room O36 after the alarm in Room O35 goes off, they stay in this Room. If the alarm did go off (or if reinforcements went to Room O41), only four remain to guard the slaves in Room O39.

The bone devils escaped from deeper in the dungeon, then were drafted into Ketochrensus' army. Though angry at their master, the bone devils serve him partly out of fear and partly because they know that if he escapes to the surface, they can accompany him and return home.

The pool of water in the southeast is deep, and leads through a narrow tunnel 300 ft. long to the center of the great lake. This back entrance is not trapped or alarmed, as the bone devils keep it a secret.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Once combat begins, the bone devils use walls of ice to block the exit to Room O36. This may actually be to their disadvantage; they are unlikely to be any match for the PCs, and the wall ensures that their allies in Room O41 do not hear battle sounds. Otherwise, four of the bone devils in Room O41 arrive to investigate after 1d4 rounds.

Treasure: The bone devils have hidden two potions of protection from energy (cold) from Ketochrensus. The potions sit underwater in a tiny niche within the pool, revealed by a DC 35 Search check.

EL: 15

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one horned devil. To decrease the challenge, assume the bone devils are likely to flee once the first of their number is downed.

A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same bone devil's aura for 24 hours. Other devils are immune to the aura. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 20, initial damage 1d6 Str, secondary damage 2d6 Str. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—greater teleport (self plus 50 pounds of objects only), dimensional anchor, fly, invisibility (self only), major image (DC 15), wall of ice. Caster level 12th. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Summon Devil (Sp): Once per day a bone devil can attempt to summon 2d10 lemures with a 50% chance of success, or another bone devil with a 35% chance of success. This ability is the equivalent of a 4th-level spell.

Possessions: One of the bone devils wears a ring of evasion.

039. SLAVE CAVE

Huddled in this cave there are about two dozen humanoids dressed in rags and furs. They have a panicked look in their eyes and discolored skin. They do not converse or interact but sit together in silence.

Initial Attitude: Hostile*

The slaves here are held under a magical influence. Once freed their attitude changes to Indifferent or Friendly based on the PC's actions.

Encounter: This dismal cave holds Ketochrensus' slaves and sacrifices (hp variable). These poor creatures were originally slaves of Jardarir's frost giants, but were later captured by devils or brought along by frost giant defectors. All the slaves are geased or charmed by Taigra (Room O44) to attack any intruders who make it this far (revealed by a DC 25 Sense Motive check). Upon spotting the PCs, they stand almost as one, and grab up icicles, clubs, and sticks to attack.

Should the PCs free the slaves from their enchantments or release them while disguised as Taigra or the devils (via illusions or polymorphs), the slaves show little gratitude and flee the complex by the easiest route possible.

The races of the slaves range from human to elf to orc to bugbear. However, only two stat blocks are provided. Rather than represent every race and waste space in this book with an encounter, the PCs will steamroll through, we opted for a streamlined encounter instead.

Encounter Condition: Fearless

Tactics: This combat isn't intended to be challenging; the slaves are not powerful enough to do much harm, and there are only six of them of noteworthy status. They also work poorly together, using only the most rudimentary tactics. Nonetheless, they show no hesitation in attacking, which ought to suggest to the players that something suspect is going on.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add one barbed devil overseer. To decrease the challenge, make the slaves' enchanted status more obvious by outfitting them with collars.

040. CREVICE

The rocky passage twists north and ends in a small cul-de-sac. Rubble litters the floor, but there is no apparent reason for such a chamber to be built off the slave quarters.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: Ketochrensus has a penchant for cruelty. Deep in this crevice is a locked chest containing a scroll explaining that the "enemies" invaders may have killed in Room O39 were, in fact, magically controlled innocents. A DC 20 Search check reveals the wooden, iron-reinforced chest beneath loose stones. It is locked, and requires a DC 25 Open Lock check to open.

Encounter Condition: Negative Energy

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: If the PCs open the chest, read the following.

Within is a simple vellum scroll. The writing appears to have been scratched with a sharp object such as a dagger... or a claw. The "ink" is dark crimson. The scroll reads in Common:

My slaves huddled under darkness and above ice,
Innocent of my crimes, wishing for freedom.
My magic compulsions made them foes of would-be heroes.
And now they are free, by way of death.
Their blood is on your hands.
Delight in your slaughter.

041. HUGE CAVE

The carved hallway opens up into a wide cavern. There are two large columns formed from natural rock that climb to the ceiling, 40 ft. above.

If the bone devils are present and not invisible read the following.

A band of skeletal monstrosities stands near the columns, a shivering mass of glowing eyes and bony tails. Two creatures are distinct from the rest. The first wields a golden sickle in each hand, and a dull chain armor covers a weak his brittle frame. The second is large and powerful, its shield and trident held close to its body.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This is the last group of creatures between the PCs and Ketochrensus, a cadre of eight bone devils (hp 95 each) and two elite bone devils named Bithkra (hp 166) and Garrhoul (hp 158). With the exception of the elites (who have proven their loyalty), the bone devils are allied with Ketochrensus only for strength and the hope of escape.

If the PCs set off the alarm in Room O35, four bone devils leave to confront the party in Room O36, leaving behind only four bone devils, Bithkra, and Garrhoul.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the party takes the bone devils here by surprise (not having set off the alarm), a fight breaks out immediately. While Bithkra and Garrhoul occupy the PCs' attention, the other bone devils flank the characters or flee to Room O38 to recruit allies. If so alerted, the bone devils from Room O38 teleport in the round after being informed. Taigra (Room O44) hears any battle here, but does not join in, waiting for the PCs to confront Ketochrensus himself.

If the devils know of the party's presence, their approach is very different. They wait around the edges of the chamber near the ceiling. The PCs must make Listen checks opposed by the devils' Move Silently checks to notice them. If the PCs do notice, the bone devils attack, as above. If not, they wait for the party to enter Room O42, then close in from behind.

Treasure: As their master's last line of defense, these bone devils have an array of potions stashed behind one of the columns. If prepared for combat, the bone devils carry the potions themselves. There are three potions of blur, a potion of levitate, and two potions of resist energy (fire) 30.

EL: 18 (eight bone devils with Bithkra and Garrhoul) or 17 (four bone devils with Bithkra and Garrhoul). This is, of course, provided that the devils are detected and defeated here before they follow the PCs into Room O42.

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two horned devils. To decrease the challenge, remove either Bithkra or Garrhoul.

Listen +23, Move Silently +24, Search +20, Sense Motive +21, Spot +23, Survival +2 (+4 following tracks); Alertness, Improved Critical (sickle), Improved Initiative, Iron Will, Multiattack, Two Weapon Fighting.

Death Attack: If Bithkra studies his victim for 3 rounds and then makes a sneak attack with a melee weapon that successfully deals damage, the sneak attack has the additional effect of possibly either paralyzing or killing the target (assassin's choice). While studying the victim, Bithkra can undertake other actions so long as his attention stays focused on the target and the target does not detect Bithkra or recognize Bithkra as an enemy. If the victim of such an attack fails a Fortitude save (DC 17) against the kill effect, she dies. If the saving throw fails against the paralysis effect, the victim is rendered helpless and unable to act for 1d6+5 rounds. If the victim's saving throw succeeds, the attack is just a normal sneak attack. Once the assassin has completed the 3 rounds of study, he must make the death attack within the next 3 rounds.

If a death attack is attempted and fails (the victim makes her save) or if Bithkra does not launch the attack within 3 rounds of completing the study, 3 new rounds of study are required before she can attempt another death attack.

Fear Aura (Su): Bone devils can radiate a 5-foot-radius fear aura as a free action. Affected creatures must succeed on a DC 17 Will save or be affected as though by a fear spell (caster level 7th). A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same bone devil's aura for 24 hours. Other devils are immune to the aura. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 23, initial damage 1d6 Str, secondary damage 2d6 Str. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Sneak Attack: Bithkra's attack deals extra damage any time her target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when the rogue flanks her target. This extra damage is 4d6. Should the rogue score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Ranged attacks can count as sneak attacks only if the target is within 30 ft.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Bithkra retains her Dexterity bonus to AC even if she is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, she still loses her Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Bithkra can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack Bithkra by flanking her, unless the attacker has at least ten rogue level.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—greater teleport (self plus 50 pounds of objects only), dimensional anchor, fly, invisibility (self only), major image (DC 15), wall of ice. Caster level 12th. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Summon Devil (Sp): Once per day a bone devil can attempt to summon 2d10 lemures with a 50% chance of success, or another bone devil with a 35% chance of success. This ability is the equivalent of a 4th-level spell.

Assassin Spells Known (4/3, Save DC 12 + Spell Level): 1st—disguise self, ghost sound, obscuring mist, true strike; 2nd—cat's grace, spider climb.

Possessions: two large +1 returning shocking throwing sickles, +1 chain shirt of sonic resistance.

▲ Garrhoul, Bone Devil (Osyluth), Blk6: CR 15; Large outsider (evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 10d8+50+6d10+30; hp 158; Init +9; Spd 40 ft.; AC 30, touch 14, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +16; Grp +25; Atk +21 melee (1d8+6, +1 axiomatic trident); Full Atk +21/+16/+11/+6 melee (1d8+6, +1 axiomatic trident) and +18 melee (1d8+5, bite) and sting +18 melee (3d4+2 plus poison); SA Sneak attack +1d6, spell-like abilities, fear aura, poison, spells, summon devil, SQ Aura of despair, damage reduction 10/good, dark blessing, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to fire and poison, resistance to acid 10 and cold 10, see in darkness, spell resistance 21, telepathy 100 ft.; AL LE; SV Fort +18, Ref +16, Will +13; Str 21, Dex 21, Con 21, Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 14.

Skills and Feats: Bluff +15, Concentration +18, Craft +11, Diplomacy +6, Disguise +2 (+4 acting), Hide +20, Intimidate +23, Knowledge (nobility and royalty) +15, Knowledge (religion) +7, Listen +15, Move Silently +18, Search +15, Sense Motive +15, Spot +15, Survival +2 (+4 following tracks); Cleave, Great Cleave, Improved Initiative, Improved Sunder, Multiattack, Power Attack.

Aura of Despair (Su): Garrhoul radiates a malign aura that causes enemies within 10 ft. of him to take a –2 penalty on all saving throws.

Detect Good (Sp): At will, Garrhoul can use detect good as a spell-like ability, duplicating the effect of the detect good spell.

Poison Use: Garrhoul is skilled in the use of poison and never risk accidentally poisoning himself when applying poison to a blade.

Dark Blessing (Su): Garrhoul applies his Charisma modifier (+2) as a bonus on all saving throws.

Fear Aura (Su): Bone devils can radiate a 5-ft.-radius fear aura as a free action. Affected creatures must succeed on a DC 17 Will save or be affected as though by a fear spell (caster level 7th). A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same bone devil's aura for 24 hours. Other devils are immune to the aura. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Poison (Ex): Injury, Fortitude DC 23, initial damage 1d6 Str, secondary damage 2d6 Str. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Smite Good (Su): Twice a day, Garrhoul may attempt to smite good with one normal melee attack.

He adds his Charisma modifier (+2) to his attack roll and deals 5 extra points of damage. If a blackguard accidentally smites a creature that is not good, the smite has no effect but it is still used up for that day.

Sneak Attack: Garrhoul's attack deals extra damage any time his target would be denied a Dexterity bonus to AC (whether the target actually has a Dexterity bonus or not), or when Garrhoul flanks his target. This extra damage is 1d6. Should the rogue score a critical hit with a sneak attack, this extra damage is not multiplied.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—greater teleport (self plus 50 pounds of objects only), dimensional anchor, fly, invisibility (self only), major image (DC 15), wall of ice. Caster level 12th. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Summon Devil (Sp): Once per day a bone devil can attempt to summon 2d10 lemures with a 50% chance of success, or another bone devil with a 35% chance of success. This ability is the equivalent of a 4th-level spell.

Blackguard Spells Prepared (2/2/1, Save DC 12 + Spell Level): 1st—corrupt weapon (x2); 2nd—bull's strength, eagle's splendor; 3rd—cure serious wounds.

Possessions: +1 axiomatic trident, +3 light fortification heavy steel shield, ring of telekinesis.

▲ Bone Devils: CR 9; Large outsider (evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 10d8+50; hp 95; Init +9; Spd 40 ft.; AC 25, touch 14, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +10; Grp +19; Atk +14 melee (1d8+5, bite) or +14 ranged (1d8+5 plus poison, javelin); Full Atk +14 melee (1d8+5, bite) and +12 melee (2d6+7, large spear) and sting +12 melee (3d4+2 plus poison) or +14 ranged (1d8+5 plus poison, javelin); SA Spell-like abilities, fear aura, poison, summon devil; SQ Damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to fire and poison, resistance to acid 10 and cold 10, see in darkness, spell resistance 21, telepathy 100 ft.; AL LE; SV Fort +12, Ref +12, Will +11; Str 21, Dex 21, Con 21, Int 14, Wis 14, Cha 14.

042. POOL ROOM

A frozen pool occupies the center of this chamber, and the entire floor is covered in a thin layer of wet ice. The chill of the room pulses like a heartbeat, and the waves of cold emanating from the pool come faster and faster.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: The ice devil Ketochrensus (hp 147) lies sleeping in the pool of ice — or at least he did, until being woken up by the alarm in Room O35, a battle in Room O41, or a telepathic warning from one of his devil servants.

Ketochrensus does not participate in any battle that occurs in Room O41, but he keeps in telepathic communication with Birkkra and Garhoul and stays abreast of occurrences throughout his domain. When he bursts through the ice 2 rounds after the PCs enter, read the following.

Darkness stains the center of the pool, and the surface splits in two. Water splashes across the floor as a hideous figure bursts forth, a spear gripped in its chitinous white claws and the tip of its tail twitching. Its eyes are unreadable, but its head turns toward you as it utters in a voice like cracking ice, "Heroes come to the den of Ketochrensus. They have fire in their souls, but all flames can be smothered in cold."

Should the PCs parley, Ketochrensus plays along. If the power level of the PCs impresses him, he convinces them that the titan guarding the dungeon's exit is evil (he is unaware of Jardarir's deception), and that they should slay "Barcellus." He may also bribe the party with his treasure. If the PCs seem dismissive of his suggestions, he initiates combat, but he lets the PCs go if they agree to take on the "titan."

The ground is covered with slippery ice. Movement is halved in this Room, as a result, and the DC of Balance and Tumble checks is increased by 5. A DC 15 Balance check is required to run or charge. Ketochrensus is protected by his ring of freedom of movement and is unaffected by the ice. In addition, the pool is supernaturally frigid from the devil's presence, and deals 2d4 points of cold damage each round to anyone immersed. It is 10 ft. deep.

Encounter Condition: Fears 18, Fearless, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 6

Tactics: During conversation with the PCs, Ketochrensus telepathically instructs any survivors from Room O41 to keep their distance, but to be prepared to close off the pool room's exit. Once combat begins, the bone devils rush in while Ketochrensus deals with the most physically dangerous PC himself. He may grapple a PC and drag or throw him into the pool. Under no circumstances does Ketochrensus flee; he knows that if he cannot win in his own sanctum with his guards at his side, he will never survive alone in the dungeon.

If the PCs have not yet encountered Taigra, they do so now. Either alerted by the bone devils or the sounds of battle, she leaves Room O44 for her master's side. In the latter case, she may not have time to cast fly, invisibility, and mage armor on herself; in the former, she joins the bone devils to wait at the exit.

Treasure: Stashed at the bottom of the pool are a staff of swarming insects, pipes of pain, 10 white opals worth 750 gp each, 12 black pearls worth 500 gp each, 16 white pearls worth 100 gp each, and 6,769 gp.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, give Ketochrensus' Great Fortitude, Lightning Reflexes, or Iron Will and add two ice devils. To decrease the challenge, have some of the bone devils from Room O41 flee instead of fight, and have Taigra hope for her master's defeat so that she can take over (thus taking longer to get there and waiting for the last moment to strike the PCs).

▲ Ketochrensus, Ice Devil (Gelugon): CR 18; Large outsider (evil, extraplanar, lawful); HD 24d8+84; hp 147; Init +9; Spd 40 ft.; AC 32, touch 14, flat-footed 27; Base Atk +24; Grp +34; Atk +30 melee (2d6+11/19–20, ×3 plus slow, +2 keen longspear) or +29 melee (1d10+6, claw); Full Atk +30/+25/+20 melee (2d6+11/19–20, ×3 plus slow, +2 keen longspear) and +24 melee (2d6+3, bite) and +24 melee (3d8+3 plus slow, tail); or +29 melee (1d10+6, 2 claws) and +24 melee (2d6+3, bite) and +24 melee (3d8+3 plus slow, tail); Space/Reach 10 ft./10 ft.; SA Fear aura, slow, spell-like abilities, summon devil; SQ Damage reduction 10/good, darkvision 60 ft., immunity to fire and poison, resistance to acid 10 and cold 10, regeneration 5, see in darkness, spell resistance 25, telepathy 100 ft.; AL LE; SV Fort +20, Ref +19, Will +20; Str 23, Dex 21, Con 23, Int 22, Wis 22, Cha 20.

Fear Aura (Su): An ice devil can radiate a 10-ft.-radius fear aura as a free action. A creature in the area must succeed on a DC 27 Will save or be affected as though by a fear spell (caster level 13th). A creature that successfully saves cannot be affected again by the same ice devil's aura for 24 hours. Other devils are immune to the aura. The save DC is Charisma-based.

Slow (Su): A hit from an ice devil's tail or spear induces numbing cold. The opponent must succeed on a DC 28 Fortitude save or be affected as though by a slow spell for 1d6 rounds. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Spell-Like Abilities: At will—cone of cold (DC 20), fly, ice storm (DC 19), greater teleport (self plus 50 lbs. of objects only), persistent image (DC 20), unholy aura (DC 23), wall of ice (DC 19). Caster level 13th. The save DCs are Charisma-based.

Summon Devil (Sp): Once per day an ice devil can attempt to summon 2d10 lemures or 1d6 bearded devils, 2d4 bone devils with a 50% chance of success, or another ice devil with a 20% chance of success. This ability is the equivalent of a 4th-level spell.

Regeneration (Ex): An ice devil takes normal damage from good-aligned weapons and from spells or effects with the good descriptor.

Possession: +2 keen long spear, ring of freedom of movement.

043. CORPSE STORAGE

A mound of corpses lurks within this subsection of the cavern. Almost 20 ft. high, the pile contains the bodies of all manner of humanoids, haphazardly thrown atop one another and frozen blue-white with cold. There are even frost giant bodies among them. The bodies have been stripped of valuables and appear otherwise intact.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The devils have been collecting corpses, both as an artistic statement and for Taigra's experiments. Following Ketochrensus' death, any attempt to cremate the corpses works supernaturally well; even a single spark brings the entire mound to a full blaze.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: N/A

044. TAIGRA'S CHAMBERS

This chamber appears to be the home of a humanoid. While the ceiling is over 30 ft. high and the floor is rough and uneven, furniture and decorations make the space feel livable. A large bed of furs and skins fills one corner, and chipped swords and axes hang beside dented steel shields on the wall. A series of unlidded wooden boxes line a stone shelf, and crimson runes are painted across the opposite wall. A dark alcove has been worked into the rock immediately to the right of the entrance.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cavern is the home of Taigra (hp 79), a cunning and talented bugbear sorcerer who made herself so useful to Ketochrensus that she became one of his prime servants. By the time the PCs reach this Room, Taigra has most likely been slain elsewhere. If the party has been sufficiently stealthy, however, or if Taigra escaped a confrontation with the PCs, she waits here. In the latter case, she has already downed her potion of invisibility and as many of her six potions of cure moderate wounds as is considered prudent.

The alcove contains nothing, and is merely a trap for the curious.

♣ Wail of the Banshee Trap: CR 10; magic device; proximity trigger (alarm); automatic reset; spell effect (wail of the banshee, 18th-level sorcerer, DC 23 Fortitude save negates); multiple targets (up to 18 creatures); Search DC 34; Disable Device DC 34.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Taigra does not actually join any combats in this Section (with the exception of the fight against Ketochrensus), but instead attacks the PCs immediately after one of their battles against bone devils or the purple worm. She prepares herself with fly, greater invisibility, and mage armor when she becomes aware of a battle, then races to the scene and casts other protective spells or drinks her potion of blur and potion of haste while the combat continues. After the PCs win, she hits them hard with area-effect spells.

Treasure: In addition to a potion of invisibility and six potions of cure moderate wounds, there are loads of spell components contained within the wooden boxes. Taigra keeps all other magic items on her person.

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four sorcerer levels to Taigra. To decrease the challenge, remove her familiar and remove two sorcerer levels.

▲ Taigra, Bugbear, Sor 18: Bugbear; CR 20; Medium humanoid (goblinoid); HD 3d8+3 + 18d4+18; hp 79; Init +7; Spd 30 ft.; AC 23, touch 15, flat-footed 20; Base Atk +11; Grp +12; Atk +13 melee (1d8+2/19–20, ×3, +1 keen spear); Full Atk +13/+8/+3 melee (1d8+2/19–20, ×3, +1 keen spear); SA Spells; SQ Darkvision 60 ft., scent; AL NE; SV Fort +8, Ref +12, Will +13; Str 13, Dex 16, Con 13, Int 12, Wis 12, Cha 17 [21].

Skills: Bugbears have a +4 racial bonus on Move Silently checks.

Sorcerer Spells Known (6/8/7/7/7/6/5/3, save DC 15 + spell level): 0—acid splash, detect magic, disrupt undead, flare, mage hand, message, read magic, resistance, touch of fatigue; 1st—color spray, mage armor, magic missile, ray of enfeeblement, shield; 2nd—glitterdust, protection from arrows, scorching ray, see invisible, web; 3rd—fly, lightning bolt, slow; 4th—confusion, black tentacles, greater invisibility, wall of fire; 5th—baneful polymorph, cloudkill, cone of cold, hold monster; 6th—acid fog, circle of death, greater dispel magic; 7th—delayed blast fireball, prismatic spray, spell turning; 8th—power word stun, greater shout; 9th—wail of the banshee.

Possessions: +1 keen spear, amulet of natural armor +2, bracers of armor +3, ring of protection +2, a cloak of charisma +4, potion of blur, potion of haste, scroll of dominate person (2), wand of maximized magic missile (9th-level caster, 17 charges), 3 small silver mirrors.

045. CRYOHYDRA LAIR

A tall rock formation juts into the air in front of a deep recess in the stone wall. Enormous scrape marks from clawed feet are visible within, but it is impossible to tell how many creatures made them. The ground slopes downward at a sharp angle, and the stone is moist in spots. The distant sound of rippling water echoes against the cave walls, along with an odd hissing sound.

The source of the hissing is soon apparent. In the back of the cave, dozens of scaly serpents writhe and rub against each other, connecting to three purple bodies. Each appears powerful and dangerous... but only one has wings.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The lake's cryohydras (hp 129 each) lair here, along with the greatest of their number, the half-dragon cryohydra Cryshnax (hp 153). There may be additional cryohydras present if the PCs did not fight any of the creatures in Room O23 or Room O31.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Upon spotting the PCs, the cryohydras use their breath weapons from a distance, then charge to the cave entrance. Fighting in the enclosed cave is not to their advantage, as they can easily be surrounded.

Treasure: The cryohydras' treasure is hoarded in the back of the cave. It includes a potion of water walk, a potion of greater magic fang +3, and a ring of x-ray vision.

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add a third twelve-headed cryohydra. To decrease the challenge, remove Cryshnax's half-dragon template.

▲ Cryshnax, Twelve-Headed Half (White) Dragon Cryohydra: CR 15; Huge dragon; HD 12d12+75; hp 153; Init +1; Spd 20 ft., swim 20 ft., fly 40 ft. Skills and Feats: Listen +16, Spot +16, Survival +16, Swim +26; Blind-Fight, Combat Reflexes*, Improved Natural Attack (bite), Iron Will, Toughness, Weapon Focus (bite).

Breath Weapon (Su): Cryshnax can breathe jets of frost 10 ft. high, 10 ft. wide, and 20 ft. long. All heads breathe once every 1d4 rounds. Each jet deals 3d6 points of cold damage per head. A successful DC 22 Reflex save halves the damage. The save DC is Constitution-based. Once a day, one of Cryshnax's heads can breathe a 30' cone of frost for 6d8 damage, a successful DC 22 Reflex save halves the damage.

Cold attacks cannot prevent a cryohydra's stump from growing new heads (since a cryohydra has immunity to cold), but 5 points of fire damage does.

046 THROUGH 060. THE INNER CAVERNS

This is the central domain of the frost giants, and the home of their chieftain Jardarir (currently masquerading as the titan Barcellus). These wide caverns provide a perfect backdrop for epic battles fought here. The chance of escape to the surface world, a frozen titan, a deal with evil forces, and a giant remorhaz await those who adventure here.

RANDOM ENCOUNTERS

Roll for a Random Encounter once per hour.

1d20	Encounter
1	The bodies of slaves lay half-buried beneath a cave-in. The hallway is half-blocked. Poor Footing 22
2	Three escaped slaves walk away from the PCs, slowly and quietly. They are escaping the frost giants' domain.
3	Shouting echoes from up ahead in the tunnels. When the PCs reach the source of the noise, the shouting comes from somewhere else.
4-9	Nothing
10-12	A patrol of five frost giants searches for escaped slaves or intruders.
13	A lone frost giant sleeps in an alcove, hiding from work.
14	A bone devil seeks an audience with "Barcellus," hoping to defect from the forces of Ketochrensus.
15-16	Five barbed devils head out of frost giant territory, bitter over "Barcellus" proclaiming their tribute was too small to permit exit.
17	A lone frost giant scout (Rgr 8) carries slain winter wolves back to camp.
18	The PCs stumble upon a trap (set by frost giants). Poisoned Spiked Pit Trap: CR 10; mechanical; location trigger; manual reset; hidden lock bypass (Search DC 25, Open Lock DC 30); DC 20 Reflex save avoids; 50 ft. deep (5d6, fall); multiple targets (first target in each of two adjacent 5-ft. squares); pit spikes (Atk +10 melee, 1d4 spikes per target for 1d4+5 plus poison each); poison (purple worm poison, DC 24 Fortitude save resists, 1d6 Str/2d6 Str); Search DC 16; Disable Device DC 25.
19	The PCs stumble upon a trap (set by frost giants). Crushing Wall Trap: CR 10; mechanical; location trigger; automatic reset; no attack roll required (18d6, crush); Search DC 20; Disable Device DC 25.
20	A weakling devil (its specific species is indeterminable), approaches the PCs beseeching them to take it with them. It cannot escape alone, but offers to do anything to prove his mettle to powerful and trustworthy PCs. A zone of truth surrounds it, so if the PCs mean to do it harm, it turns invisible and flees.

046. PIT

As the PCs approach, they can see a small barrel on the left wall, filled with coins. A magic mouth built into the wall speaks.

"Welcome to the Realm of Barcellus."

If the PCs do not offer coin, the magic mouth speaks again.

"You insufferableness will be rewarded."

This triggers a storm of vengeance trap, affecting everyone in the Room. This alerts all of the nearby frost giants (Room 067) of an intruder, bringing all the giants to investigate in 2 rounds.

The cave widens and dips, creating a shallow pit about six ft. deep. The sides are thick with ice, and it is apparent that reaching either of the two northern tunnels will require work.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The frost giants can easily navigate this pit, but smaller creatures have difficulty climbing to the exits. A character climbing out of the pit must succeed on a DC 30 Climb check or slide back toward the center.

Several wooden planks are stacked against the wall in the passage to Room 047, used by the giants to make ramps for slaves. PCs who dawdle, draw the attention of the frost giants in Room 047, who toss boulders and spear at them from above.

Encounter Condition: [Fearless]

Tactics: If a fight breaks erupts, the giants use higher ground to their advantage and fight furiously, never backing down. They have a cocky attitude and seek to kill the PCs. If there is an obvious spellcaster in the party, they subdue him to bring forth a sacrifice for Jardarir (Room 060).

Treasure: N/A

EL: 10

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, the PCs must offer a specific (but random; 2d6 × 10 sp) gift to the magic mouth. To reduce the challenge, the PCs must simply bow or offer thanks to the magic mouth.

047. SENTRY CAMP

Air whistles as it flows through the cavern, accompanied by a sad moan. It is unclear whether the moan is another product of the shape of the chamber, or if it is the sound of some creature waits inside.

Allow the PCs DC 25 Listen checks (penalty added; see below) to hear the frost giants speaking among themselves and relishing their joy in scaring their slave.

Otherwise, read the following.

Six pairs of amber eyes are lit up by the glow of a small cooking fire. The frost giants are situated all around this makeshift camp, armed with spears and standing near piles of rocks perfectly sized for their enormous fists. Lying upon a rack over the cooking fire is a young human woman in ragged furs, nearly unconscious with delirium and shock.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cave serves as a permanent sentry post for the frost giants, manned by six frost giant barbarians (hp 184 each) living under less than ideal circumstances. The unusual sounds are caused by the airflow from the lake, and bestow a -10 circumstance penalty on all Listen checks in this Room.

While the frost giants are supposed to be guarding this cave, there have been few threats to guard it from lately. The giants are therefore eager for a good fight, but they are not particularly alert; they suffer the standard -5 penalty for being distracted when making Spot and Listen checks. There is an outside chance they hear the PCs in Room 046, and send half their number to investigate.

The woman on the cooking rack is Adranni, a tough young woman who remembers the outside world despite years of captivity under the giants. She is grateful if rescued, and can confirm the presence of an exit nearby based on overheard giant conversations. She tries to show the party where the other slaves are kept, and wants to stay with the PCs for protection until they escape. She can be convinced otherwise, but is reluctant unless assured of her ongoing safety.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If they have the chance, the frost giants begin their attack by throwing rocks, only entering melee once the PCs close in. If desperate for options or the chance to drink their potions of cure serious wounds, the giants grab Adranni and threaten to kill her if the PCs do not surrender and drop their weapons. If the PCs do surrender, the giants kill Adranni anyway and attack the unarmed characters.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 17

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two barbarian levels to each frost giant. To decrease the challenge, remove two barbarian levels from each frost giant.

Rage (Ex): These barbarians can fly into a rage once per day. In a rage, they temporarily gain a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but they takes a -2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the barbarian's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) A fit of rage lasts for 9 rounds. A barbarian may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the barbarian loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (-2 penalty to Strength, -2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): These barbarians retains their Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Possessions: Chain shirt, spear, bag of rocks (3), potion of cure serious wounds, potions of invisibility.

One of the frost giants wears a minor ring of energy resistance (fire) and carries a potion of haste.

048. SLAVE PENS

This cavern stinks of unwashed bodies and refuse. Huge, irregular stone slabs are laid out to form a "fence" around the walls, and you hear faint sobs and the occasional scuffle from behind them. There are no light sources nearby.

If the PCs call out or make an obvious noise, read the following.

The scuffling behind the large slabs becomes louder, and a mix of hollow voices ask: "Who's there?" "Can you help us?" "Have you seen the giants?" Then the questions are interrupted by a sharp rebuke. "Quiet down, you! We don't know what's out there, and noise could bring more danger!" After that, the room falls silent.

Initial Attitude: Friendly

Encounter: The frost giants keep dozens of humanoid slaves (hp 5 each) here, penned in by 10-ft. high stone slabs. When the giants want to release a slave, they push aside a slab or simply reach over and lift the slave out. Each slab weighs about 5,000 lbs. and it takes a DC 25 Climb check to climb one.

≠ Slab: Hardness 8, hp 180, Break DC 100.

The unhappy slaves are divided into two main groups. The first is led by a dwarven fighter named Kalgrin (hp 71), who hopes to plan an escape and eventually return to the surface. Kalgrin was once a mercenary captain that was ambushed by the giants. In the years since, he has overheard the giants discussing the potions of invisibility possessed by the sentries in Room 047, and he knows how to reach the exit. He has assembled a team of slaves who believe that if they can get the potions, they can sneak out and find help. Kalgrin has kept his plans quiet for some time, but the appearance of the PCs leads him to think that his chance has come.

The second group is slightly larger, and is led by Camrid Helsing (hp 33), a human aristocrat. Camrid hates life under the giants, but he fears death or torture more, and thinks Kalgrin is a fool who will make matters worse for everyone. The relationship between Camrid and Kalgrin is strained, and disagreements could lead to a split among the prisoners unless the party can keep things under control. While some of Camrid's followers can be swayed to fight for their freedom, it won't be easy while Camrid is alive. He adamantly refuses to back or take part in any "heroic" actions the PCs recommend. He will not, however, actively seek to betray the PCs, either.

Adranni (see Room 047) is part of Camrid's group, but she develops great faith in the PCs if they free her. She can be instrumental in winning over other slaves.

049. REFUSE PIT

The smell in this crooked corridor becomes increasingly offensive as the ground becomes thick with stripped bones, torn rags, and other debris. Only the occasional dead-end side passage is free from the garbage. The floor slopes downward at irregular intervals, leading toward a nauseating pit.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: The frost giants and slaves toss their garbage down this corridor when they lack the inclination to travel all the way to Room 050. Though it would be unpleasant, resting in one of the side passages would be relatively safe for the party or escaped slaves.

Encounter Condition: Diseased (devil chills) 20°; Stagnant Air

Tactics: N/A

Treasure: PCs with no decorum may search the debris for up to one 1 hour. For every 15 minutes spent searching, they must succeed at a Fortitude save (DC 15, +1 per previous save) or become nauseated and unable to continue.

Every 15 minutes spent searching reveals one mundane item (with a 15% chance this item is masterwork, and another 5% chance of a superior item). No more than four items can be found by anyone PC and the sizes of the items range from Small to Huge.

050. BLACK PUDDING CAVE

Despite the cold, the piles of refuse fill this area with a nauseating stench, making breathing difficult. Some chunks have frozen together, preserving in revolting memoriam the frost giant clan's recent history. The back of the cave is unusually dark, and garbage free. Then the darkness gurgles, and pours over a pile of trash...

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This cavern collects years of frost giant waste. An elder black pudding (hp 290) lives here, feeding on the refuse, but it doesn't bother the PCs if they return the favor. It leads a decent life as the giants' garbage disposal. The giants and most of the slaves know of it as an urban legend ("the living trash").

Encounter Condition: Fear 12, Stagnant Air

Tactics: The pudding's tactics are limited to approaching and grabbing foes (and even then only if disturbed). It is old, tired, and not very ambitious. It only fights to defend itself.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 12

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add two black puddings. To decrease the challenge, remove the black pudding altogether.

✦ Gargantuan Black Pudding: CR 12; Gargantuan ooze; HD 20d10+180; hp 290; Init -5; Spd 20 ft., climb 20 ft.; AC 1, touch 1, flat-footed 1; Base Atk +15; Grp +35; Atk +19 melee (3d6+12 plus 3d6 acid, slam); Full Atk +19 melee (3d6+12 plus 3d6 acid, slam); Space/Reach 20 ft./20 ft.; SA Acid, constrict 2d8+12 plus 2d6 acid, improved grab; SQ Blindsight 60 ft., split, ooze traits; AL N; SV Fort +15, Ref +1, Will +1; Str 26, Dex 1, Con 28, Int —, Wis 1, Cha 1.

Skills and Feats: Climb +16.

Acid (Ex): The creature secretes a digestive acid that dissolves organic material and metal quickly, but does not affect stone. Any melee hit or constrict attack deals acid damage, and the opponent's armor and clothing dissolve and become useless immediately unless they succeed on DC 29 Reflex saves. A metal or wooden weapon that strikes a black pudding also dissolves immediately unless it succeeds on a DC 29 Reflex save. The save DCs are Constitution-based.

The pudding's acidic touch deals 21 points of damage per round to wooden or metal objects, but the ooze must remain in contact with the object for 1 full round to deal this damage.

Constrict (Ex): A black pudding deals automatic slam and acid damage with a successful grapple check. The opponent's clothing and armor take a -4 penalty on Reflex saves against the acid.

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a black pudding must hit with its slam attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can constrict.

Split (Ex): Slashing and piercing weapons deal no damage to a black pudding. Instead the creature splits into two identical puddings, each with half of the original's current hit points (round down). A pudding with 10 hit points or less cannot be further split and dies if reduced to 0 hit points.

Skills: A black pudding has a +8 racial bonus on Climb checks and can always choose to take 10 on a Climb check, even if rushed or threatened.

051. REST CAVE

Humanoids lie sprawled on ragged pelts circling a 30-ft.-high column, huddled close and breathing shallowly. They are clearly exhausted, and many have bruises or cuts on their hands and faces. The slaves are unguarded; their only companions are the chill and the darkness.

Initial Attitude: Indifferent

Encounter: This is a rest area for the slaves (hp 5) working in Rooms 052 and 053. When a slave collapses from exhaustion or injury, he is carried here by a frost giant and his tools taken away. There are currently ten slaves present.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The slaves know Rooms O47 through O53 well, and can describe their contents to the PCs. Convincing them that doing so is in their interest is another issue, but diplomatic PCs may be able to convert the slaves into allies. There is a 10% chance that a few of the slaves here share the views of Camrid Helsing (see Room O48) and panic upon seeing the PCs. They immediately head for Room O52, calling out to the frost giants who investigate after 1d3 rounds.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 8

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add ten slaves all infected with disease. To decrease the challenge, have four of the slaves in cages as punishment for some transgression.

052. CENTRAL MINES

Dark, smoke wafts along the outcroppings, and the sounds of metal tools striking stone and ice resound through the chamber. Carts rumble as they are pushed down worn paths by moaning slaves, and two frost giants bellow orders from between a pair of columns in the cavern's center. This chamber is much warmer than others nearby due to the heat exuded by a line of forges. Slaves labor there, as well, manufacturing weapons much too large for them to wield.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: The frost giant sentries — Boraji (hp 247) and Tyrash (hp 239) — stand guard here, while slaves haul ore out of Room O53. The giants are smoking pipes, more or less relaxed and not suspecting trouble. Their tobacco is a rare formula called stygian weed, the smoke of which doubles the time before the slaves collapse in the short run (while rotting their innards in the long run).

If the slaves see the PCs defeat the sentries, they enthusiastically offer their (admittedly limited) aid. If the sentries are defeated out of sight, the slaves react similarly to the workers in Room O51 and require convincing before they jump in to help.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: From between the columns, Boraji and Tyrash can view the entire room, and are positioned so that attackers must navigate around the many slaves to reach them. Between rock-throwing, Tyrash's dancing whip (which focuses on trip and disarm attacks), and sheer reach, this gives the sentries a significant advantage. Once approached, however, they can easily be flanked.

Due to the noise level, combat in this Room does not necessarily attract the frost giant taskmaster in Room O53. The taskmaster only comes to investigate (arriving in 1d4 rounds) if he succeeds on a DC 15 Listen check.

Treasure: A variety of tools, weapons, and even bucklers are here for the taking. However, they are all sized for giant use, and are no doubt of little value to the PCs. In addition, there is enough stygian weed to make one big cigar, or to fill 10 pipes.

EL: 18

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have the giants (at the southern end of the cave) positioned with their backs to the wall, and add two class levels to Boraji and two class levels to Tyrash. To decrease the challenge, remove two class levels from each giant.

Rage (Ex): Boraji can fly into a rage thrice per day. In a rage, Boraji temporarily gains a +4 bonus to Strength, a +4 bonus to Constitution, and a +2 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases the Boraji's hit points by 2 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) Boraji's fit of rage lasts for 10 rounds equal. Boraji may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the barbarian loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Boraji can no longer be flanked.

This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

053. DEEP MINES

The floor slopes down as the heat of the forges fades behind you. Soon, the passageway reaches another cavern. There are only a few slaves here, mining for iron and filling carts to be sent to the work area above.

If the frost giant taskmaster did not respond to combat in Room 052, read the following.

Overseeing the slaves is a towering frost giant dressed in winter wolf pelts. His right arm is badly scarred, and strapped to his back is a warhammer that looks too large even for his monstrous size.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Half a dozen slaves work here at the moment, along with a single frost giant taskmaster (hp 272). As with the slaves in Room 052, the slaves' initial reaction depends greatly on how the PCs present themselves. If the party rushes in and slays their warden, the slaves respond positively, whereas if they do not witness the party's might, they are vastly more skeptical.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: Provided the taskmaster has not joined a battle in Room 052, he is more than ready to charge into melee. He is more concerned about the PCs than the slaves, and he ignores his charges so long as they stay out of his way.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 19

054. REMORHAZ LAIR

This gigantic cave is composed more of rock than ice, and extends for some distance. Near the center is a fallen, petrified tree, half-frozen and covered in countless deep gouges.

Unless Jardarir is performing a ceremony in Room 056, Horthwrau and the remorhaz are here. In which case, read the following.

Not far behind the tree is a wormlike creature with blue-white skin and a crimson aura. The air around it blurs with heat, and even at a distance you can feel its warmth. To the creature's right is an enormous bear with a thick white coat, its head tilted as if listening.

If Jardarir is leading a ceremony, add the following instead.

Not far behind the tree is an enormous bear with a thick white coat, its head tilted as if listening. Far to the northwest, a series of wide stairs leads to a platform saturated in green, blue, and white lights. The dull sound of indecipherable chanting rides a steady breeze, accompanied by a sense of something evil.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: This cave is home to the clan remorhaz (hp 418) and its trainer Horthwrau (hp 353), a natural lycanthrope part frost giant and part polar bear. The remorhaz has been trained since infancy to serve as Jardarir's guard, and Horthwrau feels more comfortable with the beast than he does his giant kin. The remorhaz obeys no one but Jardarir and Horthwrau, but knows to resist attacking frost giants or those who accompany them.

When Jardarir conducts religious ceremonies, he sends the remorhaz to Room 055. Horthwrau remains here, guarding his territory.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: The remorhaz and Horthwrau attack any intruders they spot, and are experienced at working together. While the remorhaz attacks powerful melee opponents, Horthwrau charges forward to deal with archers and spellcasters (overrunning front line fighters, if necessary), but is protective of the remorhaz, turning his attention to anyone likely to kill the beast. He usually stays in animal form, but switches to hybrid form if the circumstances warrant.

Horthwrau is less formidable alone, but also less easily distracted. If he fights alone, he stays mobile and draws PCs to him, instead of being lured into their "traps."

Treasure: The petrified tree has unique properties from years of melting and freezing up again. Its exceptionally strong wood is equivalent to darkwood, and wands created from it have their base prices reduced by one-fifth for the purposes of deriving creation costs in gp and XP.

The remorhaz also occasionally receives tributes from Jardarir and the other frost giants — usually items they disregard as worthless, 1,500 cp and about 300 sp are piled in the chamber's corners.

EL: 19

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, add four ranger levels to Horthwrau and tailor his favored enemies to match the PCs. To decrease the challenge, remove Horthwrau's ranger levels and reduce the remorhaz' Hit Dice by 5.

Skills and Feats: Listen +20, Spot +20; Awesome Blow, Cleave, Improved Bull Rush, Improved Natural Armor (x4), Improved Natural Attack (bite), Iron Will, Power Attack, Weapon Focus (bite).

Improved Grab (Ex): To use this ability, a remorhaz must hit an opponent least one size category smaller than itself with its bite attack. It can then attempt to start a grapple as a free action without provoking an attack of opportunity. If it wins the grapple check, it establishes a hold and can attempt to swallow the opponent the following round.

Swallow Whole (Ex): When a remorhaz begins its turn with a grappled opponent in its mouth, it can swallow that opponent with a successful grapple check. Once inside, the opponent takes 4d6+18 points of bludgeoning damage plus 8d6 points of fire damage per round from the remorhaz's gizzard. A swallowed creature can cut its way out by using a light slashing or piercing weapon to deal 25 points of damage to the gizzard (AC 18). Once the creature exits, muscular action closes the hole; another swallowed opponent must cut its own way out. A Gargantuan remorhaz's interior can hold 4 Large, 8 Medium, 32 Small, 128 Tiny, 512 Diminutive, or 1,024 Fine or smaller opponents.

Heat (Ex): An enraged remorhaz generates heat so intense that anything touching its body takes 8d6 points of fire damage. Creatures striking a remorhaz with natural attacks or unarmed attacks are subject to this damage, but creatures striking with melee weapons do not take damage from the remorhaz's heat. This heat can melt or char weapons; any weapon that strikes a remorhaz is allowed a DC 33 Fortitude save to avoid destruction. The save DC is Constitution-based.

Skills and Feats: Remorhazes have a +4 racial bonus on Listen checks.

055. SIDE WAITING CHAMBER

Deep scratches mark the floor of this chamber, centered around a hole in the ground near the western wall. Loose rocks and rubble litter the entire cave suggesting that an enormous beast is responsible for the digging. The stone of the walls is wavy and polished intermittently, as if it began to melt and then re-solidified.

If the remorhaz is here, read the following.

Coiled in one corner is a long, wormlike creature with lavender skin and a crimson aura. The air around it blurs from heat, and even at a distance you can feel its warmth.

Initial Attitude: Hostile

Encounter: Whenever Jardarir leads a ceremony in Room O56, he sends his pet remorhaz (see Room O54) to wait in this side chamber to keep it out of the way. If Jardarir is not performing a ceremony, this cave is abandoned, and the PCs find nothing of value.

The hole dug by the remorhaz leads to a long, unfinished tunnel. If magically extended to its natural end, the tunnel leads into Room O13.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the remorhaz is present, it attempts to grab and swallow its most dangerous melee opponents first. If badly injured, it may flee, heading for allies in Room O54 or Room O56.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 16*

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, have two remorhaz here at all times. To decrease the challenge, remove the remorhaz.

056. SHRINE TO THE ASPECT OF WINTER

There is an evil nestled in the cold here, a power hidden beneath the ice and frost. The walls are carved to display demonic faces, frost giant heroes, and battle scenes. Wide, uneven stone stairs lead to a huge dais, several steps marked with stains. Upon the dais are rows of stone benches facing an altar, and pedestals line the sides and display axes and swords made from ice. Behind the altar, an ice wall traps a silhouette the size and shape of a giant.

If a ceremony is taking place, read the following.

Frost giants sit on the benches, closely observing the priest standing over the altar. The priest is dressed in opulent armor and a black headdress, and he is assisted by two acolytes. As he chants an unholy prayer, green and blue lights dance off the wall behind him, illuminating the entire area.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: This raised area is a shrine to the Aspect of Winter, the god of ice and war worshiped by the Red Ice frost giant clan. It is likely empty when the PCs arrive, but 35% of the time Jardarir (Room O60) is present and performing a sacrificial ceremony instead. In this case, he is accompanied by two frost giant clerics (hp 218 each) and up to eight frost giants (hp 133) in the pews. The giants from Rooms O52 and O53 may be present as well (in which case the slaves from those Rooms and Room O51 are confined with the others in Room O48), but there is only a 25% chance of that. The ceremony is barbaric and unseemly involving violence best left to the imagination.

Since having the entire frost giant clan here presents an overpowering encounter, it may be best to play down the ceremony for the players' benefit. If they feel obligated to intervene, the PCs face an immensely dangerous battle. If the ceremony is this large, however, observing safely from a place of hiding is a better alternative to a frontal assault. The ceremony last one hour, at which time Jardarir is blessed with an additional casting of storm of vengeance (for one week).

If Jardarir spots the PCs, he addresses them out of respect for "those who have managed to come so far," and proclaims himself "Barcellus, guardian of the dungeon." He may even parley after 1 or 2 rounds of combat. He offers to let the PCs leave the dungeon in exchange for any powerful magic items they own and an oath of fealty. If the PCs refuse, he fights them, proclaiming it "sacred duty" to do so.

If the PCs spend time examining the wall carvings (a mix of images, Giant, and Abyssal), read the following.

The carvings mix writing with scenes and pictographs, sketching a history of the relationship between the frost giant clan and its god. In a particularly prominent scene, an enormous figure is surrounded by dozens of frost giant corpses on a great battlefield. Two surviving frost giants lead their followers in a ceremony at the opposite side of the picture. One of them gestures toward the sky, his lower body encased in ice. The earth is depicted as shaking, the heavens trembling, and what seems to be an icy claw is erupting beneath the figure's feet. The claw grasps the figure's legs, freezing the giant's enemy.

This scene depicts the end of the conflict between Barcellus and the frost giants. After a drawn-out battle, Jardarir's brother Talucyss called for a miracle from the Aspect of Winter to "fight divinity with divinity." While it cost Talucyss his life, it imprisoned the titan in a tomb of ice.

If the PCs examine the frozen figure behind the altar.

The silhouette is a frost giant, encased in ice from head to toe. His body is covered in gaping wounds, and his limbs are twisted and crushed. He squints as if in response to great pain, but his frozen lips are curled into a wicked grin.

This is Jardarir's brother, the clan's once-great shaman Talucyss. It took the brothers' combined might to defeat Barcellus, and now Talucyss is preserved forever in the shrine of the god he served. It is Talucyss' body that produces the unhallow effect that fills the area. If the PCs touch the ice, they note that, while cool, it is not as cold as ice ought to be.

If the ice around Talucyss is removed and the body treated with a consecrate or hallow spell, the PCs have a much easier time freeing the true titan in Room O59. The ice is impervious to most harm; only magic weapons and spells with the fire descriptor do any damage to it at all. It has hardness 15 and 150 hit points.

It is not necessary to emphasize the relationship between Talucyss and Barcellus. The PCs must put the puzzle together themselves, discovering that the two are mystically joined, one imprisoning the other.

Encounter Condition: Desecration 2, Negative Energy, Unhallowed 10

Tactics: If the PCs engages Jardarir and the giants here, they face an incredibly difficult battle (one of the worst in the dungeon). Jardarir and the frost giants march forward to fight the PCs, while the clerics provide support. See Room O60 for more information on Jardarir's tactics.

Treasure: N/A

EL: 27

Scaling: To increase the challenge of this encounter, make sure the giants from Rooms O52 and O53 are present. To decrease the challenge, remove the frost giant clerics. To ensure that the PCs are not slaughtered, is to not have a ceremony taking place at all.

O57. THE EXIT!

As the rocky ground digs into the soles of your feet and the weight of the world above you takes its toll, a breeze of fresh air reawakens your senses. From around the corner ahead comes the glow of natural sunlight! The idea of seeing the surface world again is almost enough to keep you from noticing a pair of frost giant voices, angry but subdued.

If the PCs continue ahead read the following.

Rounding the corner, you see two of the largest, best-equipped frost giants you have ever faced. They watch one another, weapons held casually as they argue. Behind them is an opening in the cave, and the light of the sun casts their shadows down the length of the tunnel.

Initial Attitude: Unfriendly

Encounter: At last, the goal of so many creatures... the exit to the World's Largest Dungeon! But the frost giant sentries Jurg (hp 333) and Oliik (hp 321) are here at all times. Despite their bickering, they are two of Jardarir's most skilled combatants.

The sentries are currently debating Jardarir's attitude toward trespassers. They both feel the clan should be out exploring the tunnels, gathering allies and taking over choice portions, but they disagree as to the exact steps which need to be taken. However, neither of them truly wants Jardarir to change strategy; the argument is simply a way to pass the time. PCs who speak Giant can make a DC 20 Sense Motive check to understand the situation. Those who fail may mistake the sentries' banter as treasonous, and view the giants as potential allies. If the PCs have not realized that "Barcellus" is actually Jardarir, the references to Jardarir by the sentries is another clue.

As soon as the sentries become aware of the PCs, they turn their full attention to the newcomers. Provided the PCs don't attack immediately, the sentries inform them that "Only Barcellus may decide who leaves the dungeon." They direct the party to "Barcellus" (really Jardarir) in Room O60. They adamantly refuse to make any deals with the PCs themselves.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs fight or try to push past the frost giants, the sentries push the PCs back into the tunnel mouth. If the bowl of commanding water elementals is used (see Scaling), one giant charges forward to hold off the PCs while the other completes the incantation to summon an ally.

Greater Rage (Ex): Jurg can fly into a rage thrice per day. In a rage, Jurg temporarily gains a +6 bonus to Strength, a +6 bonus to Constitution, and a +3 morale bonus on Will saves, but he takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class. The increase in Constitution increases Jurg's hit points by 3 points per level, but these hit points go away at the end of the rage when his Constitution score drops back to normal. (These extra hit points are not lost first the way temporary hit points are.) Jurg's fit of rage lasts for 11 rounds. Jurg may prematurely end his rage. At the end of the rage, the barbarian loses the rage modifiers and restrictions and becomes fatigued (–2 penalty to Strength, –2 penalty to Dexterity, cannot charge or run) for the duration of the current encounter.

Improved Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Jurg can no longer be flanked. This defense denies a rogue the ability to sneak attack the barbarian by flanking him, unless the attacker has at least four more rogue levels than the target has barbarian levels.

Rock Throwing (Ex): The range increment is 120 ft. for a frost giant's thrown rocks.

Uncanny Dodge (Ex): Jurg retains his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) even if he is caught flat-footed or struck by an invisible attacker. However, he still loses his Dexterity bonus to AC if immobilized.

Possessions: +4 breastplate, ring of natural armor +2, +4 greatsword, +1 large heavy wooden shield, gauntlets of ogre power +2.

058. ASSEMBLY AREA

Stone benches surround a dais in this section of the gigantic cavern. The floor is worn flat, apparently from years of activity by frost giants. 6-ft.-long icicles hang from the cavern ceiling 50 ft. above — save for around the dais, where they have fallen and shattered upon the ground. Far to the south, an immense shadow appears locked in the icy wall.

Initial Attitude: N/A

Encounter: This is the assembly area. When Jardarir wishes to address his clan, the frost giants gather here. The broken icicles are the result of Jardarir's booming voice; a character who makes a DC 30 Perform (percussion instruments or sing) check identifies the cause of their fall.

As the "calm before the storm," this Room is deliberately empty of creatures and clues for curious PCs to find. This is also a perfect spot for the PCs to rest and prepare for inevitable.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: If the PCs stay hidden, they might not attract Jardarir's (Room O60) attention. Every 10 minutes they spend here, allow him another Listen or Spot check, modified by distance and so on.

If the Jardarir hears or sees the PCs, he prepares for battle as well (see Room O60).

059. BARCELLUS' LEGACY

Before you stands a wall of ice, shining with a blue light born of the frost. A figure tall enough to dwarf the frost giants stands within, its features hidden by the translucent surface of the wall. Yet there is a strange energy here, and you find that studying the ice reveals the regal but determined features of a titan's face.

Initial Attitude: Helpful

Encounter: The real Barcellus (hp 487) is frozen here, a victim of Jardarir and his brother Talucyss (see Room O56). To free the titan, the PCs must first deal 250 points of fire damage to the wall or use a wish or miracle. Before then, no weapon, spell, or effect damages it. Even after the wall is weakened, it has hardness 15 and 100 hit points.

Sadly, the tomb is also in site of Room O60, and Jardarir isn't likely to sit back and let the PCs batter at the ice. He has no problem bringing the fight to the PCs.

Unless Talucyss' body is under the effect of a consecrate or hallow spell, his spirit attempts to stop the PCs from freeing the titan. Once the wall is weakened, the PCs are attacked by a cold version of black tentacles (caster level 20th). New black tentacles appears after every 25 points of damage is inflicted.

If this occurs, read the following.

As the ice shards encasing the titan give way and shatter, the cavern begins to quake! Ice and snow cascades down, enveloping you in an underground snowstorm. One of the last large ice chunks to fall twists and divides into three implike figures, and each forms a pair of red eyes in its crystalline head.

Once Barcellus is free, read the following.

The last sheet of ice falls from the titan's body and shatters upon the ground. For a long moment, it's quiet. Then there is a low rumble, like a single drumbeat. Soon there is another, and another, and it becomes a steady pounding. The titan's skin gains color, and you realize you are hearing his heartbeat.

Frost cracks as the titan blinks and unsteadily emerges from his cage. His head turns, then he looks to you. "I... am Barcellus," he says. "Guardian of the dungeon, brother to Breysus. I am grateful to you for my freedom."

As he converses with the PCs, Barcellus tells them the full story of who he is, who the giants are, how he got here—even the tale of the dungeon itself, if the PCs have not learned it already. He asks for the party's story, as well. When all is revealed, he declares his intention to descend into the dungeon and destroy any evil that remains within, and to locate the body of his dead brother.

There may be one task remaining, however. If the PCs have not battled Jardarir, Barcellus asks to do so by their side.

060. JARDARIR'S THRONE ROOM

A mammoth throne sits like a miniature mountain holding dominion over the entire cavern, inscribed with symbols of the frost giant god of ice and war. Upon it sits a frost giant decorated in opulent furs and armor. His hair runs wild down his shoulders and back, and his expression is unreadable. His hands grip the throne's arms as he leans forward.

If Barcellus (Room O59) is not with the PCs, add the following in a booming and haughty voice.

"Greetings. I am Barcellus, master of this domain and lord of the exit. My eternal watch is ordained by the gods, but I shall allow you to pass unharmed in exchange for tributes of magic and an oath of fealty to me. This is no threat; it is what I expect, and what shall be done."

If Barcellus accompanies the PCs, read the following instead, using the same voice dripping with rage.

When his eyes fall upon Barcellus, he launches himself out of his seat and grips the maul at his side.

"Defilers and usurpers! How dare you toy with Winter's will! Blood was paid for blood to entomb this demon, and you dare interfere? I could have offered you a chance for freedom and the gift of your life. Instead, I shall smite you into oblivion in the name of family, clan, and the god of ice!"

Initial Attitude: Indifferent or Hostile (if Barcellus accompanies the PCs)

Encounter: Unless already defeated in Room O56, Jardarir (hp 317) waits here. If the PCs freed Barcellus, Jardarir attacks in a rage. Otherwise, he takes a moment to size up any potential threat, and with that knowledge attempts to bargain. He knows the PCs must be powerful to have come this far, and offers to let them through the exit in exchange for their most powerful magic items and an oath of fealty. If his offer is turned down, he declares that it is his "sacred duty" to destroy the party.

Jardarir is so captivated by his own propaganda that he believes he cannot fail in battle, even against the real Barcellus. He believes himself favored by the Aspect of Winter, and expects to one day rule the dungeon.

Once combat begins, if the PCs freed Talucyss in Room O56 but did not consecrate or hallow his body, his spirit manifests here. Read:

Behind the throne, a shadowy form arises. Its features are similar to those of the frost giant chieftain, and it grins maniacally at you. Its spectral body is like a gap in space, past which you see a world of sleet and snow.

If the PCs did not free Talucyss, the shaman cannot aid his brother. His body and his soul are both trapped by the ice.

Encounter Condition: N/A

Tactics: There is no chance that Jardarir is caught by surprise. In fact, unless the PCs mask all sounds of their coming and their past few battles (along with the sounds of destroying Barcellus' cage), Jardarir has plenty of time to cast preparatory spells such as entropic shield, magic vestment, owl's wisdom, and true seeing. During combat, he tries to disable or impede dangerous spellcasters before dealing with more straightforward warriors. He mixes melee attacks with spells, favoring blade barrier, cone of cold, and destruction.

If Talucyss manifests in spirit form, he aids his brother with the following spells, in this order (all at caster level 17th) == spell resistance, bull's strength, divine strength, cat's grace. He then stands by, ready to cast break enchantment if needed. Talucyss acts on his brother's initiative, and vanishes when Jardarir falls. He is not a real ghost, and cannot be affected by weapons or spells.

If Barcellus is involved in the fight, he holds back and alternates between targeting Jardarir with chain lightning and fire storm and aiding the PCs with cure critical wounds and greater dispel magic. Despite all his power, he is at a disadvantage in battle without equipment. Besides, this is a moment the players should cherish. Don't let a titan outshine them.

CONGRATULATIONS!

If you're reading this as the conclusion of a campaign, it's probably 2006 or later. If not, you cheated. Either way, you've complete your journey through the World's Largest Dungeon™. If you travelled through every single map in this dungeon, chances are you're like 30th level now. If you didn't, then go back and try again.

So, you rock and onward and upward. Take your characters on whatever epic vacation you think you might have energy for. You deserve a break.

If you're itching for more adventure, try out of the World's Largest City™, due out in 2005.

Game on.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST APPENDIX

ATTITUDE AND INFLUENCE

Use the table below to determine the effectiveness of Diplomacy checks (or Charisma checks) made to influence the attitude of a nonplayer character, or wild empathy checks made to influence the attitude of an animal or magical beast.

Initial Attitude	New Attitude (DC to achieve)
	Hostile	Unfriendly	Indifferent	Friendly	Helpful
Hostile	0–19	20	25	35	50
Unfriendly	0–5	5	15	25	40
Indifferent	—	0	1	15	30
Friendly	—	—	0	1	20
Helpful	—	—	—	0	1

Attitude	Definition	Possible Actions
Hostile	Will take risks to hurt you	Attack, interfere, berate, flee
Unfriendly	Wishes you ill	Mislead, gossip, avoid, watch suspiciously, insult
Indifferent	Doesn't much care	Socially expected interaction
Friendly	Wishes you well	Chat, advise, offer limited help, advocate
Helpful	Will take risks to help you	Protect, back up, heal, aid

CONDITIONS

If more than one condition affects a character, apply them all. If certain effects can't combine, apply the most severe effect.

Ability Damaged: The character has temporarily lost 1 or more ability score points. Lost points return at a rate of 1 per day unless noted otherwise by the condition dealing the damage. A character with Strength 0 falls to the ground and is helpless. A character with Dexterity 0 is paralyzed. A character with Constitution 0 is dead. A character with Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma 0 is unconscious. Ability damage is different from penalties to ability scores, which go away when the conditions causing them go away.

Ability Drained: The character has permanently lost 1 or more ability score points. The character can regain these points only through magical means. A character with Strength 0 falls to the ground and is helpless. A character with Dexterity 0 is paralyzed. A character with Constitution 0 is dead. A character with Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma 0 is unconscious.

Blinded: The character cannot see. He takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class, loses his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any), moves at half speed, and takes a –4 penalty on Search checks and on most Strength- and Dexterity-based skill checks. All checks and activities that rely on vision (such as reading and Spot checks) automatically fail. All opponents are considered to have total concealment (50% miss chance) to the blinded character. Characters who remain blinded for a long time grow accustomed to these drawbacks and can overcome some of them.

Blown Away: Depending on its size, a creature can be blown away by winds of high velocity. A creature on the ground that is blown away is knocked down and rolls 1d4 × 10 feet, taking 1d4 points of nonlethal damage per 10 feet. A flying creature that is blown away is blown back 2d6 × 10 feet and takes 2d6 points of nonlethal damage due to battering and buffering.

Checked: Prevented from achieving forward motion by an applied force, such as wind. Checked creatures on the ground merely stop. Checked flying creatures move back a distance specified in the description of the effect.

Confused: A confused character's actions are determined by rolling d% at the beginning of his turn: 01–10, attack caster with melee or ranged weapons (or close with caster if attacking is not possible); 11–20, act normally; 21–50, do nothing but babble incoherently; 51–70, flee away from caster at top possible speed; 71–100, attack nearest creature (for this purpose, a familiar counts as part of the subject's self). A confused character who can't carry out the indicated action does nothing but babble incoherently. Attackers are not at any special advantage when attacking a confused character. Any confused character who is attacked automatically attacks its attackers on its next turn, as long as it is still confused when its turn comes. A confused character does not make attacks of opportunity against any creature that it is not already devoted to attacking (either because of its most recent action or because it has just been attacked).

Cowering: The character is frozen in fear and can take no actions. A cowering character takes a –2 penalty to Armor Class and loses her Dexterity bonus (if any).

Dazed: The creature is unable to act normally. A dazed creature can take no actions, but has no penalty to AC. A dazed condition typically lasts 1 round.

Dazzled: The creature is unable to see well because of overstimulation of the eyes. A dazzled creature takes a –1 penalty on attack rolls, Search checks, and Spot checks.

Dead: The character's hit points are reduced to –10, his Constitution drops to 0, or he is killed outright by a spell or effect. The character's soul leaves his body. Dead characters cannot benefit from normal or magical healing, but they can be restored to life via magic. A dead body decays normally unless magically preserved, but magic that restores a dead character to life also restores the body either to full health or to its condition at the time of death (depending on the spell or device). Either way, resurrected characters need not worry about rigor mortis, decomposition, and other conditions that affect dead bodies.

Deafened: A deafened character cannot hear. She takes a –4 penalty on initiative checks, automatically fails Listen checks, and has a 20% chance of spell failure when casting spells with verbal components. Characters who remain deafened for a long time grow accustomed to these drawbacks and can overcome some of them.

Disabled: A character with 0 hit points, or one who has negative hit points but has become stable and conscious, is disabled. A disabled character may take a single move action or standard action each round (but not both, nor can she take full-round actions). She moves at half speed. Taking move actions doesn't risk further injury, but performing any standard action (or any other action the DM deems strenuous, including some free actions such as casting a quickened spell) deals 1 point of damage after the completion of the act. Unless the action increased the disabled character's hit points, she is now in negative hit points and dying. A disabled character with negative hit points recovers hit points naturally if she is being helped. Otherwise, each day she has a 10% chance to start recovering hit points naturally (starting with that day); otherwise, she loses 1 hit point. Once an unaided character starts recovering hit points naturally, she is no longer in danger of losing hit points (even if her current hit points are negative).

Dying: A dying character is unconscious and near death. She has –1 to –9 current hit points. A dying character can take no actions and is unconscious. At the end of each round (starting with the round in which the character dropped below 0 hit points), the character rolls d% to see whether she becomes stable. She has a 10% chance to become stable. If she does not, she loses 1 hit point. If a dying character reaches –10 hit points, she is dead.

Energy Drained: The character gains one or more negative levels, which might permanently drain the character's levels. If the subject has at least as many negative levels as Hit Dice, he dies. Each negative level gives a creature the following penalties: -1 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, ability checks; loss of 5 hit points; and -1 to effective level (for determining the power, duration, DC, and other details of spells or special abilities). In addition, a spellcaster loses one spell or spell slot from the highest spell level castable.

Entangled: The character is ensnared. Being entangled impedes movement, but does not entirely prevent it unless the bonds are anchored to an immobile object or tethered by an opposing force. An entangled creature moves at half speed, cannot run or charge, and takes a -2 penalty on all attack rolls and a -4 penalty to Dexterity. An entangled character who attempts to cast a spell must make a Concentration check (DC 15 + the spell's level) or lose the spell.

Exhausted: An exhausted character moves at half speed and takes a -6 penalty to Strength and Dexterity. After 1 hour of complete rest, an exhausted character becomes fatigued. A fatigued character becomes exhausted by doing something else that would normally cause fatigue.

Fascinated: A fascinated creature is entranced by a supernatural or spell effect. The creature stands or sits quietly, taking no actions other than to pay attention to the fascinating effect, for as long as the effect lasts. It takes a -4 penalty on skill checks made as reactions, such as Listen and Spot checks. Any potential threat, such as a hostile creature approaching, allows the fascinated creature a new saving throw against the fascinating effect. Any obvious threat, such as someone drawing a weapon, casting a spell, or aiming a ranged weapon at the fascinated creature, automatically breaks the effect. A fascinated creature's ally may shake it free of the spell as a standard action.

Fatigued: A fatigued character can neither run nor charge and takes a -2 penalty to Strength and Dexterity. Doing anything that would normally cause fatigue causes the fatigued character to become exhausted. After 8 hours of complete rest, fatigued characters are no longer fatigued.

Flat-Footed: A character who has not yet acted during a combat is flat-footed, not yet reacting normally to the situation. A flat-footed character loses his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) and cannot make attacks of opportunity.

Frightened: A frightened creature flees from the source of its fear as best it can. If unable to flee, it may fight. A frightened creature takes a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. A frightened creature can use special abilities, including spells, to flee; indeed, the creature must use such means if they are the only way to escape.

Frightened is like shaken, except that the creature must flee if possible. Panicked is a more extreme state of fear.

Grappling: Engaged in wrestling or some other form of hand-to-hand struggle with one or more attackers. A grappling character can undertake only a limited number of actions. He does not threaten any squares, and loses his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any) against opponents he is not grappling.

Helpless: A helpless character is paralyzed, held, bound, sleeping, unconscious, or otherwise completely at an opponent's mercy. A helpless target is treated as having a Dexterity of 0 (-5 modifier). Melee attacks against a helpless target get a +4 bonus (equivalent to attacking a prone target). Ranged attacks get no special bonus against helpless targets. Rogues can sneak attack helpless targets.

As a full-round action, an enemy can use a melee weapon to deliver a coup de grace to a helpless foe. An enemy can also use a bow or crossbow, provided he is adjacent to the target. The attacker automatically hits and scores a critical hit. (A rogue also gets her sneak attack damage bonus against a helpless foe when delivering a coup de grace.) If the defender survives, he must make a Fortitude save (DC 10 + damage dealt) or die.

Delivering a coup de grace provokes attacks of opportunity.

Creatures that are immune to critical hits do not take critical damage, nor do they need to make Fortitude saves to avoid being killed by a coup de grace.

Incorporeal: Having no physical body. Incorporeal creatures are immune to all nonmagical attack forms. They can be harmed only by other incorporeal creatures, +1 or better magic weapons, spells, spell-like effects, or supernatural effects.

Invisible: Visually undetectable. An invisible creature gains a +2 bonus on attack rolls against sighted opponents, and ignores its opponents' Dexterity bonuses to AC (if any). (See Invisibility, under Special Abilities.)

Knocked Down: Depending on their size, creatures can be knocked down by winds of high velocity. Creatures on the ground are knocked prone by the force of the wind. Flying creatures are instead blown back 1d6 × 10 feet.

Nauseated: Experiencing stomach distress. Nauseated creatures are unable to attack, cast spells, concentrate on spells, or do anything else requiring attention. The only action such a character can take is a single move action per turn.

Panicked: A panicked creature must drop anything it holds and flee at top speed from the source of its fear, as well as any other dangers it encounters, along a random path. It can't take any other actions. In addition, the creature takes a -2 penalty on all saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks. If cornered, a panicked creature cowers and does not attack, typically using the total defense action in combat. A panicked creature can use special abilities, including spells, to flee; indeed, the creature must use such means if they are the only way to escape.

Panicked is a more extreme state of fear than shaken or frightened.

Paralyzed: A paralyzed character is frozen in place and unable to move or act. A paralyzed character has effective Dexterity and Strength scores of 0 and is helpless, but can take purely mental actions. A winged creature flying in the air at the time that it becomes paralyzed cannot flap its wings and falls. A paralyzed swimmer can't swim and may drown. A creature can move through a space occupied by a paralyzed creature—ally or not. Each square occupied by a paralyzed creature, however, counts as 2 squares.

Petrified: A petrified character has been turned to stone and is considered unconscious. If a petrified character cracks or breaks, but the broken pieces are joined with the body as he returns to flesh, he is unharmed. If the character's petrified body is incomplete when it returns to flesh, the body is likewise incomplete and there is some amount of permanent hit point loss and/or debilitation.

Pinned: Held immobile (but not helpless) in a grapple.

Prone: The character is on the ground. An attacker who is prone has a -4 penalty on melee attack rolls and cannot use a ranged weapon (except for a crossbow). A defender who is prone gains a +4 bonus to Armor Class against ranged attacks, but takes a -4 penalty to AC against melee attacks.

Standing up is a move-equivalent action that provokes an attack of opportunity.

Shaken: A shaken character takes a -2 penalty on attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.

Shaken is a less severe state of fear than frightened or panicked.

Sickened: The character takes a -2 penalty on all attack rolls, weapon damage rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.

Stable: A character who was dying but who has stopped losing hit points and still has negative hit points is stable. The character is no longer dying, but is still unconscious. If the character has become stable because of aid from another character (such as a Heal check or magical healing), then the character no longer loses hit points. He has a 10% chance each hour of becoming conscious and disabled (even though his hit points are still negative).

If the character became stable on his own and hasn't had help, he is still at risk of losing hit points. Each hour, he has a 10% chance of becoming conscious and disabled. Otherwise he loses 1 hit point.

Staggered: A character whose nonlethal damage exactly equals his current hit points is staggered. A staggered character may take a single move action or standard action each round (but not both, nor can she take full-round actions).

A character whose current hit points exceed his nonlethal damage is no longer staggered; a character whose nonlethal damage exceeds his hit points becomes unconscious.

Stunned: A stunned creature drops everything held, can't take actions, takes a -2 penalty to AC, and loses his Dexterity bonus to AC (if any).

Turned: Affected by a turn undead attempt. Turned undead flee for 10 rounds (1 minute) by the best and fastest means available to them. If they cannot flee, they cower.

Unconscious: Knocked out and helpless. Unconsciousness can result from having current hit points between -1 and -9, or from nonlethal damage in excess of current hit points.

DISEASES

♣ Blinding Sickness—Ingested, Fortitude DC 16, incubation period 1d3 days, damage 1d4 Str [Each time victim takes 2 or more damage from the disease, he must make another Fortitude save or be permanently blinded.]

♣ Cackle Fever—Inhaled, Fortitude DC 16, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d6 Wis

♣ Demon Fever—Injury, Fortitude DC 18, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d6 Con [When damaged, character must succeed on another saving throw or 1 point of damage is permanent drain instead.]

♣ Devil Chills—Injury, Fortitude DC 14, incubation period 1d4 days, damage 1d4 Str [The victim must make three successful Fortitude saving throws in a row to recover from devil chills.]

♣ Filth Fever—Injury, Fortitude DC 12, incubation period 1d3 days, damage 1d3 Dex, 1d3 Con

♣ Mind Fire—Inhaled, Fortitude DC 12, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d4 Int

♣ Mummy Rot—Contact, Fortitude DC 20, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d6 Con [Successful saves do not allow the character to recover. Only magical healing can save the character.]

♣ Red Ache—Injury, Fortitude DC 15, incubation period 1d3 days, damage 1d6 Str

♣ Shakes—Contact, Fortitude DC 13, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d8 Dex

♣ Slimy Doom—Contact, Fortitude DC 14, incubation period 1 day, damage 1d4 Con [When damaged, the character must succeed on another saving throw or 1 point of damage is permanent drain instead.]

ENCOUNTER CONDITIONS

Some encounters have special conditions or rules that make it harder for the PCs to defeat the monsters. Bear in mind that the monsters don't want to die; they will do everything in their power to stay alive. They fight from vantage points; they ambush the PCs when they aren't looking; they use numbers to their advantage; and they flee or surrender when death is imminent.

None of the monsters in this dungeon are stupid. Be prepared to kick the PCs around a little until they learn this. And if that doesn't work, add a few Encounter Conditions of your own.

Encounter Conditions listed in [brackets] are not automatic. Some are optional, while others are contingent upon something in the encounter. Read the Encounter thoroughly to note the difference.

Ambush: The monsters gain a +4 circumstance bonus to all Hide and Move Silently skill checks prior to Initiative.

Ambush (darkness): In addition to Ambush, the monsters attack all light sources at first from a distance and then attack the PCs from darkness, taking advantage of their darkvision. Darkness is explained fully in the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Bog: Like Flooded (see below), a bog prohibits movement and makes a creature's high Dexterity useless. Strength, not speed, saves you in these situations. Every creature's Dexterity modifier is reduced by -3. If this reduces the Dexterity bonus to 0 or less, the creature is considered flat-footed. In addition, movement is halved (minimum 5 ft.) and no one can take a free 5-foot step. Torches have a 50% chance of guttering out in the damp air. If a PC falls into the bog, his torch automatically goes out.

Concealment: The monsters in the Room gain the benefits of concealment (hiding in shadows, etc.), unless they are adjacent to a PC. Concealment confers a miss chance of 20% on any successful attack against the monster or NPC.

Concealment (total): The monsters in the Room gain the benefits of total concealment (hiding in shadows, etc.), unless they are adjacent to a PC. Total concealment confers a miss chance of 50% on any successful attack against the monster or NPC.

Cover: The monsters in this Room maintain cover (they push over a table, stand behind barrels, etc.), unless they are adjacent to a PC. Cover grants a number of benefits per the Player's Handbook, including bonuses on Reflex saves, Hide checks, and AC.

Cover (soft): As Cover, but soft cover provides no bonus to Reflex saves.

Cover (total): As Cover, but the benefits are total.

Cursed X: Something isn't right about this Room. Its inhabitants are slightly unhinged or its walls seem to sag with an undefinable sadness. The longer PCs spend in this Room, the harder it is for them to leave. Increase the DC of all Willpower saves by X while in this Room. Monsters or PCs already suffering from madness do not suffer this penalty.

Deep Darkness: This Room is cast in perpetual magical darkness that cannot be dispelled. Torches and lanterns give off ½ their normal light and magical light requires a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) or it is extinguished.

Deep Silence: This Room is cast in perpetual magical silence that cannot be dispelled. Listen checks are altogether impossible, and spellcasters cannot cast spells requiring a Verbal component.

Desecration X: This encounter takes place in a desecrated Room. X is the turn resistance all undead gain against turn attempts.

Diseased (Name) X: For every minute the PCs spend in this Room, they must succeed at a DC X Fortitude save or contract the named disease. Even diseases that normally are only contracted through ingestion or injury can be contracted in this Room.

Distracting Noises X: There are noises in the darkness that cannot be explained. Nonetheless, they can affect the wandering minds of PCs. Similar to Echoes, this Room also affects Willpower and Reflex saves, by imposing a penalty equal to X. In addition, Concentration and Listen checks suffer a penalty equal to X. Like Haunted (see below), rest is nearly impossible here.

Distracting Visions X: Something is waiting in the darkness, or the shadows play strangely on the walls. While in this Room, the PCs suffer a penalty to their Initiative checks equal to X. In addition, all Attacks of Opportunity suffer a penalty to the attack roll equal to X. Like Haunted (see below), rest is nearly impossible here.

Drafty: Lanterns (other than hooded lanterns), and torches have a 50% of being extinguished, casting the PCs into darkness. Darkness is explained fully in the Dungeon Master's Guide™.

Echoes X: A great deal of noise and distraction increases the DC of all Listen checks by X.

Extreme Cold: Anyone remaining in this Room for more than 1 minute begins to suffer the effects of cold, per the Dungeon Master's Guide™. Casting spells in the cold is difficult: teeth chatter and fingers shake. For every spell cast in this Room, the caster must succeed at a Concentration check (DC 10 + spell level) or the spell is lost. The cold can be magical or natural. DMs can increase or decrease the severity of the cold by requiring Fortitude saves more or less often.

Extreme Heat: Anyone remaining in this Room for more than 1 minute, begins to suffer the effects of heat, per the Dungeon Master's Guide™. PCs in medium or heavy armor cannot take a charge action in extreme heat. The heat can be magical or otherwise.

Fear X: An inexplicable pallor of evil permeates this Room. PCs that fail at a Willpower save (DC equal to X) are shaken until they leave the Room, plus Xd6 minutes afterwards. Shaken PCs suffer a -2 morale penalty to all attack rolls, saving throws, skill checks, and ability checks.

Fearless: The monsters and NPCs here cannot be intimidated or cajoled, and do not back down from any fights. Undead cannot be turned. Instead, they suffer damage equal to the character level of the cleric on a successful turn attempt.

Flooded: These Rooms have become flooded by a high water table or some magical effect. Every creature's Dexterity bonus is reduced by -2. If this reduces the Dexterity bonus to 0 or less, the creature is considered flat-footed. In addition, movement is halved (minimum 5 ft.) and no one can take a free 5-foot step. Torches have a 50% chance of guttering out in the damp air. If a PC falls into the water, his torch automatically goes out.

Fog X: Fog reduces visibility in the Room (except darkvision) to X ft. Creatures up to X ft. away have concealment (20%). Beyond that, creatures have total concealment (50%).

Hallowed X: This Room is holy. Clerics (and paladins) gain a bonus to all Charisma-based skill checks (including turn attempts), equal to X, but suffer a penalty of -X on rebuke attempts.

Haunted: Rest is impossible. Spells cannot be memorized, meditation doesn't work, and the benefits of natural healing are cut in half.

Hazardous Footing X: The floor is covered in debris, rocks, glass, or sharp objects, or otherwise impedes movement. PCs moving faster than $\frac{1}{2}$ speed across Hazardous Footing must succeed at a DC X Reflex save or fall to the ground suffering 1d4+1 points of damage from the debris. No one can take a free 5-foot step on Hazardous Footing. Tiny or smaller creatures gain a +6 competence bonus on this save.

Invisible: For some magical reason, the monsters in the Room gain the benefits of invisibility, until they perform an action (attacking, casting a spell, etc.) that removes this benefit. In addition to its other benefits, invisibility works as Total Concealment, conferring a miss chance of 50% on any successful attack against the monster or NPC.

Negative Energy: Undead heal 1 hit point per hour in this Room. PCs suffer 1 hit point per minute in this Room.

Poor Footing X: All monsters and PCs suffer a penalty to their base attack equal to X unless they succeed at a Reflex save (DC 10 + X).

Positive Energy: PCs heal 1 hit point per hour in this Room. Undead suffer 1 hit point of damage per minute in this Room.

Safe: This Room is generally safe and might be a good place to rest. Reduce the chance of an encounter here to $\frac{1}{10}$ the normal rate of Random Encounters for the Section (e.g. if Random Encounters are rolled every hour, they are rolled every 6 hours in this Room).

Smoke: The air in this Room is thick with an unbreathable smoke, either from magic use or a recent fire. A character who breathes smoke must make a Fortitude save each round (DC 15, +1 per previous check) or spend that round choking and coughing. A character who chokes for 2 consecutive rounds takes 1d6 points of nonlethal damage. Many creatures that do not breathe (demons, outsiders, etc.) use Smoke to their advantage.

Spell Resistance X: This Room is guarded by wards and spells that dispel all magic cast within it. Treat all occupants as having Spell Resistance equal to X. This does not stack with a creature's inherent Spell Resistance, but instead replaces it, if X is greater. In many cases, the creature living in the Room is unaffected by the Spell Resistance when casting at the PCs.

Stagnant Air: The air in this Room is nearly unbreathable, either from rot, decay, or the stench of a rank beast. A character who breathes stagnant air must make a Fortitude save each round (DC 15, +1 per previous check) or spend that round choking and coughing. A character who chokes for 2 consecutive rounds becomes nauseated. Many creatures that do not breathe (demons, outsiders, etc.) use Stagnant Air to their advantage.

Submerged: The Room is completely underwater and the PCs must swim across it. The PCs must have some way to breathe water to remain in this Room, or they will begin to drown.

Tremors X: A tremor shakes the Dungeon, dropping stones on the PCs. PCs must succeed at a DC X Reflex save or suffer 2d6 points of damage at a random point in the Encounter.

Unhallowed X: This Room is unholy. Clerics (and paladins) suffer a penalty to all Charisma-based skill checks (including turn attempts) equal to X, but gain a +X bonus to rebuke attempts.

NEW MONSTER TYPES

HORDE

A horde (like a swarm) is a collection of Small or Medium creatures that acts as a single creature. A horde has the characteristics of its type, except as noted here. A horde has a single pool of Hit Dice and hit points, a single initiative modifier, a single speed, and a single Armor Class. A horde makes saving throws as a single creature. A single horde occupies a square (if it is made up of nonflying creatures) or a cube (of flying creatures) 20 feet on a side, but its reach is 5 feet, like that of its component creatures. In order to attack, it moves adjacent to an opponent's space. A horde can move through squares occupied by enemies and vice versa without impediment, although the horde provokes an attack of opportunity if it does so. A horde can move through spaces large enough for its component creatures.

A horde of creatures consists of 30 nonflying creatures or 90 flying creatures. Larger hordes are represented by multiples of single hordes. The area occupied by a large horde is completely shapable, though the horde usually remains in contiguous squares.

Horde Traits: A horde has no clear front or back and no discernable anatomy, so it is not subject to critical hits or flanking. Reducing a horde to 0 hit points or lower destroys it. Hordes are never staggered or reduced to a dying state by damage. Also, they cannot be tripped, grappled, or bull rushed, and they cannot grapple an opponent.

A horde is immune to any spell or effect that targets a specific number of creatures (including single-target spells such as disintegrate), with the exception of mind-affecting effects (charms, compulsions, phantasms, patterns, and morale effects) if the horde has an Intelligence score and a hive mind. A horde takes twice as much damage from spells or effects that affect an area, such as thrown weapons with a splash effect and many evocation spells.

Hordes cannot be grappled but have a +4 bonus for grappling others.

Hordes use the saves of their component creatures.

A horde rendered unconscious by means of nonlethal damage becomes disorganized and dispersed, and does not reform until its hit points exceed its nonlethal damage.

Horde Attack: Creatures with the horde subtype do not make standard melee attacks. Instead, they receive a single attack roll for all of the component creatures, based on the HD of the component type of creature, such that a horde of 30 dretch, would have a BAB of +60 (2HD × 30). If they hit the target, they deal damage according to the table below. Horde attacks are not subject to a miss chance for concealment or cover. The amount of damage a horde deals is based on its Hit Dice, as shown below.

HORDE ATTACK DAMAGE

Horde HD	Base Damage
1–10	1× base damage of creature type
11–20	2× base damage of creature type
21–40	3× base damage of creature type
41–80	4× base damage of creature type
81 or more	5× base damage of creature type

A horde's attacks are nonmagical, unless the horde's description states otherwise. Damage reduction sufficient to reduce a horde attack's damage to 0, being incorporeal, and other special abilities usually give a creature immunity (or at least resistance) to damage from a horde. Some hordes also have acid, poison, blood drain, or other special attacks in addition to normal damage.

Special attacks that inflict damage use the multiple for the attack damage –1 (to a minimum of 1) to determine the additional damage. Special attacks that require saves, such as poison, require only one save per attack but have the DC increased by 4.

Undead Hordes and Turning: The focus of negative energy that is an undead horde makes it difficult to turn. Any attempts to do so suffer a –4 circumstance penalty to the turning check. A cleric who would successfully turn the undead that compose a horde, instead causes 2 points of damage per HD of undead turned. A cleric who is powerful enough to destroy the undead that compose the horde instead inflicts 1d6 points of damage on the horde for every HD of undead she would have destroyed.

DESIGNER'S NOTES

BY JIM PINTO

In August 2003, John Zinser presented the idea that would become The World's Largest Dungeon. By the end of September 2003, 14 different writers and one line developer (me) started work on the 900,000+ word tome that you are reading now. Nine months later, the book was completed and at the printer.

Simple, huh?

No. Not really.

A lot of work went into this project before a single word was typed and long after all the text was in. We first had to work with John Zinser's mission statement — enough maps to fill a wall, and every monster from the Monster Manual™. Since that was impossible, we went for the next-best thing: every monster from the SRD. After careful deliberation (i.e. Kevin Millard and me talking over lunchtime martinis), we decided one dinosaur satisfied the dinosaur category. It isn't lying, and it certainly won't ruin the book in the way a map full of dinosaurs would have. We made creative decisions that marketing would have to answer to.

After that, we went creature by creature through the SRD and assigned each to one of the 24 maps (back then, we thought 24 would be perfect). While we were allocating the monsters to specific Regions, a story developed. Details emerged about how the treant and elves got there, and a war between demons and angels. We didn't yet know why the dungeon was there, but we knew the celestials, devils, drow, derro, and undead would be major players. Two days later I came up with the idea for the prison and the 4,000 year old dungeon.

John Zinser added the titans, Kevin and I came up with the derro and the lake, and the story behind the undead prison pretty much wrote itself — once we decided that a ghost, a lich, and a mummy lord would be sharing rent space with a nightcrawler. And I have to laugh about the goblin shrine in Region B, because that's some funny stuff.

Then came the hard part. I had to design the maps before the writers could start writing. We had to make sure there were enough Rooms in each Region and that they all "meshed" at the end points. This meant a lot of long hours in Photoshop. Six weekends and 100 hours later, we had basic designs for the floor plans that Cris Dornaus would later turn into poster maps, with pretty colors and smooth textures. They're the ones you're looking at now.

Go ahead, look at them. I'll wait.

So then came the process of choosing writers for the book and allocating "story" and "monsters." For three months we designed and wrote and wrote and designed. Four writers dropped out of the process, all eventually replaced by Richard Farrese. By January 8th, 75% of the text was done and I was ready to start editing.

Then it happened.

On January 14 — less than a week into editing — I broke my hand. This set me back four weeks while I had screws drilled into my 4th and 5th metacarpals and waited for healing to begin.

By late February I was back in and the project started moving faster than I care to recall. Working 12- to 14-hour days for 12 weeks straight I edited, wrote, rewrote, and constructed the Dungeon you now hold. Themes were changed, moved around, or deleted because they didn't fit, and some encounters took hours to sculpt into great finales or puzzles. (I'm particularly proud of Room C93.) In the end, about 300,000 words were added or changed from their original intent.

Sean Holland made all the NPC and advanced monster stat blocks and Nate Barnes pointed out when something was missing. They are the backbone of this book. Richard Farrese wrote when no one else could and Katie Yates made it sound intelligible.

During all of this, I art directed this book, three Warlord CCG™ cardsets, three LSR CCG™ card sets, eight RPG books, and about 20 marketing images. That reminds me: I should say something nice about William O'Connor.

A lot of people get to be icons at what they do. Brom, Parkinson, Elmore, Pollack, and Giancolla are all masters of what they do. But I don't work with them. I work with my dear friend William O'Connor. Bill is amazing. I wouldn't trade my working relationship with him for anything. And if you think his art is his best trait, you're wrong. He's one of the most sincere, noble, true human beings I know and it's a pleasure to call him my friend. I can't imagine doing this project with anyone else.

So... Bill. Thank you for being in my book.

I've read the majority of the text at least twice, and this book is about as good anything I ever do is going to get. This is my magnum opus. If you're waiting for me to write the World's Largest Diwarven Beach Party™, you'd better pack a lunch.

While the concept behind the book was always to make a complete dungeon that PCs could adventure in from beginning to end, it was more important that an individual encounter be as good as it could be. I hope the quality of the writing shows. If it doesn't, blame Justin Lawler.

That being said, I guess this is the point where I start thanking a lot of people. So, if you'll indulge me, I'd like to take a few minutes to discuss some of the people I get to work with and why this is the best industry in the world.

#1. John Zinser. I'm serious. He's not standing over me with a S&W Model 10 watching me type. He's not. Honest. Ouch.

The last word I would use to describe John Zinser would be "enigmatic." But John has this intangible quality that makes him impossible to stay mad at. He inspires all of us on levels I can't express. So I won't.

Anyway, thank you for being there, John. Here's your World's Largest Dungeon™. Use it wisely.

Maureen Yates. I met Maureen one year before I started working at AEG, at a job interview four doors down from Shadis™. I remember liking her immediately. She's the foundation upon which all our successes are built and I can't imagine working here without her.

Sean Holland and Richard Farrese. Go-getters are a dime a dozen, but these guys are gems. I wouldn't have finished this book without them.

Sean is the main reason this book is done on time. He's the most diligent playtester in gaming today. If you see him, buy him a tall drink. Unless you're underage or in a dry county; then buy him two sodas and a candy bar. If you're in Canada, get him a bag of ketchup chips instead. Void in Puerto Rico.

And without Richard, you'd be reading a book half this size. He stepped in and did the job that no one else could. Namaste.

All the writers and their tireless efforts to make this book what it is. I intend to thank you all personally when I see you.

Kevin "Snack Pack" Millard. Kevin and I spent many hours on the prep work and I don't know what I would have done without him.

Patrick Kapera. I met Patrick eight years ago when I ran a Cthulhu LARP at a local con. He blew me away with his "acting" skills and we've been friends ever since. He helped on this book when we needed it the most and 10 years from now when this thing is in the great RPG hall of records, he will be enshrined as the Sam to my Frodo.

Erik Yaple. Erik works for Sabertooth now, but he's still a dear friend and I would be remiss if I didn't include him here. For 5 years we worked together here and his big smile and hearty laugh are missed.

DJ Trindle. I've known DJ for over 10 years now. We go way back and I really enjoy working with his cynical mug. If you see him at Gen Con™, buy him a beer. He likes those.

Ray Lau, Jeff Alexander, Rich Wulf, and Shawn Carman. The LSR™ team is the strongest it's ever been, and I love every time we work on a new card set together. Ray is the sardonic brand manager, Jeff plays rhythm guitar, Rich Wulf knows exactly what page number Isawa Monkey appears on, and Shawn Carman is our drawl-slingin' roadie. Together, they fight crime. Will you guys sign my Pokémon™ cards?

Ken Carpenter and Dave Williams were busy making a CCG when I was working on this book. I appreciated their help when they could spare me a minute to give it. They appear here courtesy of BMI and ASCAP.

D-Luxx, Mike Cochran, Brendon Goodyear, Mike Leader, Dave Lepore, Kristy Mack, and Boyd Kleen. Thanks for reading when you could. Thanks for your ideas and insight. Thanks for the long walks on the beach. But mostly, thanks for doing the most thankless job in the company.

Leticia. Congrats on #2.

Laura Heilman. For letting Sean stay out on a school night.

Mary Valles. Our Production Manager Mary is so the Yin to our Yang.

Nate Barnes. I bust his chops a lot, but Nate is a great employee and he exceeded everyone's expectations. There, I said it. Now give me my five bucks.

Justin Lawler. Nope. Nevermind. Strike that.

Steve "Buzz Lightyear™" Hough. Enough said.

Ken Hite. The kindest words that were ever said.

Scott Haring. And the second kindest.

Jay from Kansas City. I told you I'd get your name in print.

Dave Arneson and Gary Gyax for bringing us our first taste of dungeon crawling. This is our anniversary gift to you.

DaveMage, Thundershot, and the ENWorld™ crew.

Alicia Duarte. Thanks for driving me to the hospital when I broke my hand.

Lis A. Zin Stark, M.D. Thanks for fixing my hand.

Debra, Mandy, Maria, and the rest of the West Covina Hand Center. Thanks for rehabbing my hand back to health.

Okay. Enough about the hand.

Laura. On every level. Thank you. "That's my purse."

Every artist I've ever had the pleasure to work with. There are too many to adequately thank, so I'll drop a few names and be on my way — Drew Baker, April Lee, Michael Phillippi, Jim Pavelec, Veronica V. Jones, Thomas Manning, Ed Cox, Jeremy Jarvis, Michael Kaluta, Heather Bruton, Hugh Jamieson, beet, Matthew S. Armstrong, Chris Seaman, Llyn Hunter, Jonathan Hunt, Lisa Hunt, Jon Hodgson, Steve Ellis, Christopher Appel, Jason Engle, Franz Vohwinkel, and more names than I can type.

Dan F., Dave M., Erik Y., Jeff S., Lenny F. III, Mike L., and the S.E. Crew. "Make rocket go now."

Finally. Special thanks to our fathers and mothers, for making us creative geniuses, instead of rich, successful athletes.

If I forgot to thank someone, that's because it's 2 A.M. and this book goes to press tomorrow. Thank you all for this amazing ride.

YOU'VE SLAIN ALL THE MONSTERS, TAKEN ALL THE GOLD, AND DEFEATED
ALL THE EVIL...

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO NOW?

“WE’RE GOING TO...
THE WORLD’S LARGEST CITY!”

WHAT HAPPENS IN THE WORLD’S LARGEST CITY, STAYS IN THE WORLD’S LARGEST CITY.
COMING SOON.
